The Working Class Press In Revolutionary History

By HARRISON GEORGE.

Some day a history will be written of the part played in all the revolutionary upheavals of history by the newspapers of the rebellious movements. It is certain that newspapers and the weapon of the press in general, by last acts, placards and proclamations have been and will be the means whereby great masses are won to revolutionary ideas and actions, the means whereby in years that precede action, the ground-work of class feeling is laid down and fixed; and in the days of crisis, a great trumpet calling the masses to arms, a signal tower directing an economic class striving for power by revolution.

The bourgeoisie itself needed the newspapers as a means of overthrowing the feudal powers and freeing itself from the limitations of monarchial governments. Protests was made in the colonial Declaration of Independence against repression of the press, and the Constitution had to be amended to include the "right of free press," because of the fear of monarchy by the colonial bourgeoisie as a whole, although the men who wrote the Constitution itself did not want a free press, because they, more wisely than their fellows, knew that history would bring a working class which would want revolutionary newspapers. Thus we have a formal and legal right of free press in America, but without the workers cherish and but without the workers to cherish and have neither newspapers nor right to have them, because, in fact, the ruling class has largely nullified that right by all sorts of arbitrary postal regulations and direct illegal suppression as by the Espionage Act during the war.

Even more typical is the French Revolution of 1789, where the bourgeoisie forced the king to sign the famous "Declaration of the Rights of Man and of Citizens," wherein it was guaranteed, "every citizens may write and publish freely." To show how necessary it is for a revolutionary class to assume the right and the obligation of establishing and supporting newspapers regardless of legal rights, it must be cited that the "Declaration" was signed in October, 1789, while three months earlier, in July, bourgeois newspapers were already in the field. Loustallot, an orator of the middle class, started a paper called "Revolutions of Paris," which quickly reached a circulation of 200,000, an amazing figure for that illiterate age. Even more influential was "The Friend of the People," edited by Marat, in which he called people to arms against the conspiracy of foreign monarchies and the plotting royalists. On July 26th, 1790, he wrote, "Five or six hundred executions would have assured your repose, liberty and happiness; a false humanity has restrained your hands and stopped your breath; this will cost the lives of your brothers: if your enemies triumph, a minute blood will flow in scenes . . . Then, among other famous newspapers were "Pere Duchesne" and "The Old Cordelier," the last edited by Camille Desmoulins, who had called the people together at the fall of the Bastille

The Chartist Movement in England.

Of more definite and also confused proletarian voice were the newspapers of the Chartist movement which grew out of the English working class in the period from 1832 to 1854. The following is a call for a strike for the eight-hour day published in "The Herald of the Rights of Industry," on April 5th, 1834: "We say solemnly and emphatically, STRIKE! not against one handful of greedy and wretched employers, as we have heretofore done, but STRIKE at once against the whole tribe of idlers of every grade, class or condition. If is your labor which enriches them and enables them first to despise and then to oppress you!" Other papers of that day were "The Pioneer," "The Crisis," "The National Reformer," and the "London Democrat."

Thousands of Workers Slaughtered.

The continental revolutions of 1848 were straight, classic class wars in France and Germany where the confused mixture of middle class and proletarian rule did have newspapers, however feable. In Paris, Bonaparte claimed to be a socialist and issued a small military paper, "The Organization of Labor"; Proudhon issued his "Representative of the People," and the Fourierists their "The Peaceful Democrat." Shall we not conclude that the lack of any scientific direction of the fight of the workers made them weaker and opened the way for the slaughter by General Cavaignac of thousands upon thousands of workers.

With the Paris Commune of 1871, the last great proletarian revolt swung clean and clear above the heads of all sections of the bourgeoisie. In the twenty days between March 18th and May 28th, which marked the duration of that noble effort destined by entire social conditions to sublime failure, revolutionary newspapers sprang up on all sides. Most famous is the "Official Jurnal" of the Commune itself. Le Cri du Peuple, La Commune, La Revolution Politique et Sociale and others played their part in that heroic struggle. With it they were blotted out after printing on May 22nd the last proclamation of Delescluze, Civil Delegate for War, calling upon the people itself to rise to the aid of the defense. National Guard—"Enough of militarism! No more staff officers with gold lace all over their uniforms! Room for the people, the fighters, the bare arms! The hour of revolutionary war has, sounded! The people knows nothing of clever manoeuvres but with a rifle in its hands and the pavement beneath its feet it fears none of the strategy of the Royalleur schools! To arms!"

The Fall of the Commune.

In vain! And with the fall of the last outpost and the last issue of the revolutionary newspapers fell the Commune—the first definite attempt at proletarian rule—and its valiant supporters by tens of thousands, before the machine guns of Galliffet. For days a streak of red ran down the middle of the Seine.

The Russo-Japanese war brought in its wake the Russian Revolution of 1905, in which fought many of the present rulers of Soviet Russia. More clearly than ever before sounds the cry of proletarian revolution. On October 27th the St. Petersburg (Petrograd) Soviet came formed, whose second and last president was Leon Trotsky. The Bolsheviki had their newspaper Iskra, "The Spark," to rally the workers around the Soviet, which started as a strike committee. Another paper, Zarya, "The Dawn"—was started by the Bolsheviks. The Social Democrat Party had two papers in Petrograd, Nevsky Zhizn and Nachale; the Social Revolutionary Party the Syn Otechestvo.

On January 22, the day after the Bloody Sunday, the printing presses filled the workers' districts with manifestos calling for revolution: "Yesterday you saw the savagery of the monarchy. You saw blood running in the streets. You saw hundreds slain. . . . Who directed the soldiers rifles against the breasts of the workers? It was the Czar . . . the gang-leads, the assassins of peaceful men. May they meet death. To arms, comrades! Seize the arsenals! destroy the prisons! Long live the peasantry government!"

On December 13th the first colossal manifesto of all socialists parties was published, calling upon the people to refuse to pay taxes, to insist on gold payment in all transactions, breathing defiance to Czarism. But the revolution was crumbling, and every paper which published this manifesto was suppressed and forty printing presses in Petrograd were seized. . .

The Press in Russia.

A volume could and should be written on the part of the newspapers in the triumphal revolution of the Bolshevikx in November, 1917. More than a mere sketch cannot be given here. Pravda had existed since 1912, though at tremendous sacrifices. Issues were confiscated, its editors arrested and exiled, its lists destroyed, yet the workers upported it enthusiastically. It was a Bolshevik paper—It was a fearless paper. The daily lived on persecution.

Came the October days and, says John Reed, "The Bolshevik press suddenly expanded."

Rabotchi Put carried Lenin's "Letter to Party Comrades," saying that either the slogan, "All power to the Soviets must be abandoned, or we must make an insurrection." Says Reed, "On one side the Monarchist press, inciting to bloody repression—on the other Lenin's great voice crying, 'Insurrection! . . . We cannot wait any longer!'"

Rabotchi Put, Soldiers' Section of the Petrograd Soviet declared a boycott on all bourgeois newspapers. In a few days more the Military Revolutionary Committee was the striking arm of the Soviet and events which are history followed.

Six years! And today in commemoration of the birth of the Soviet American workers are gathered in meetings all over the continent. And the Workers Party of America aspires to the same goal as does the Communist Party of Russia, is to have a daily newspaper, a newspaper which will be the first and only true revolutionary daily newspaper ever to be published in this country. And today let every worker realize that we, who are the rich inheritors of revolutionary experience of the past will not fail in our duty to the workers' newspaper—THE DAILY WORKER.

What They Say About "The Daily"

"By all means work for the new daily in Chicago."—UPTON SINCLAIR.

"All efforts must be made by the entire Party to establish the DAILY WORKER which will take the leading part in the political and economic problems of the United States."—KARL RADEK.

"It is a most deplorable fact that against some ten foreign language Communist dailies there is not a Single English Communist daily in America."—GREGORY ZINOVIEV.

"The DAILY WORKER is a long step in the right direction. Every worker who understands his true interests will give the campaign the heartiest support."—WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.

"The most important Communist duty under the present situation is to form a great English daily for the Party."—C. E. RUTHENBERG.

What They Did We Can Do

For twenty years the workers of Russia have supported the militant newspapers published by the Communists. They made the most extreme sacrifices to keep a workers' paper in the field. They, the workers, are today the rulers of Russia.

In America the fight must be waged for the most immediate needs of the workers. But it must be waged militantly and without compromise. THE DAILY WORKER will fight for the organization of the unorganized; for an independent political party of labor; for release of class war prisoners; for amalgamation of the craft unions; for recognition of Soviet Russia and for a workers' and farmers' government in the United States.

To establish a daily newspaper, which will carry on the struggle for the workers of this country, $100,000 is needed to assure publication. $50,000 has already been raised. What will you do to raise the balance?

At the foot of this page are two blanks, one is an application for shares, at $5 each, in the DAILY WORKER, the other a blank for donation. Be a share-holder or a supporter by donation of THE DAILY WORKER!

The Daily Worker Committee Issues November 7th Poster

Wherever meetings are to be held on this Nov. 7th to celebrate the sixth anniversary of the Soviet Revolution—the DAILY WORKER CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE, under whose auspices all Nov. 7th affairs are to be held, is furnished for the use of local campaign committees, a supply of one of the most beautiful posters the Party has ever gotten out.

On white glazed cards and also on paper, 14 x 22 inches a Russian workman stands facing the crimson curtain of the new year that opens with this anniversary.

The curtain is yet closed and the worker stands expectant—and prepared—waiting the new year's developments. His sleeves are rolled up for any action needed, and his hands hold a hammer, symbol of peaceful construction, but at his feet and by his side is the sword—symbolic of the watchful Red Army.

Above the worker's back is the past, black—representing the past so full of memories of czarism, war, crimes and suffering, while on the crimson curtain before him is the [illegible] red star of Communism, the hope and goal of the future.

Decorative lettering at the top and base tell the purposes of the November 7th meetings—with a space left for the loot for local committees to be printed in the date, hour and speakers. These posters have been shipped to places billed for November 7 meetings, but if more are wanted there must reach the central campaign committee before October 20th.

Soviet RUSSIA: A Triumph of Marxism

The Russian Revolution—The Inspiring Force in the American Labor Movement

By JAMES P. CANNON.

The beginning of the renaissance of American labor began with the Russian Revolution. It is six years now since that great red day in November 1917, when the workers and peasants of Russia raised their banner and put themselves at the head of the greatest forward march the human race has ever made. For six years we have been telling that inspiring story, and on this sixth anniversary we will tell it to larger crowds at more meetings than ever before. The story of the Great Upheaval grows old and never will. From the beginning the Russian Revolution has been one of the most powerful forces making for the regeneration of the American labor movement, and its influence today is greater than ever. The faith that held unwavering during the black days of civil war, intervention and famine is justified now a thousand times, for the great hope has become the great victory. While the capitalist countries of Central Europe sink into ruin and defeat, Soviet Russia of the workers rises up in happiness and triumph; and with it rise the hopes and aspirations of all those who follow it wherever they may be.

The first American followers of the Russian Revolution march today with quicker step behind its banner, and new recruits swell the ranks. The Russian Revolution is going forward to victory in America as in every other country.

The influence of the Russian Revolution on the American working class was two-fold. It stirred the whole mass deeply, arousing in the breasts of the rank and file workers aspirations and hopes they had never known before. At the same time it drew the class conscious workers toward it as toward a magnet, and shaped them into a communist party. It is the inspiring and driving force in all phases of the up-ward striving movement.

Great masses of American workers felt the Russian Revolution, if they did not clearly understand it; and so deep has been that feeling that the avalanche of calumny and misrepresentation directed at the Workers' Russia could not overcome it. The campaign of slander and lies has succeeded in "reaching" some elements in the labor movement. The Gompers machine was a part of it from the start. The officials of the Socialist Party, and a part of the I. W. W., even, were drawn into the dirty game and threw their little share of mud at the embattled workers of Russia. But the friendship of the common workers held strong thru it all. It is one of the miracles of American labor history that the whole process of systematic lying, misrepresentation and treachery was unable to shake the rank and file workers and turn them against the Russian Revolution.

Soviet Russia Had Magic Appeal.

This feeling of the workers of America was manifested very clearly in the famine relief campaign. In the face of official opposition of the A. F. of L., the Socialist Party and the I. W. W. the rank and file of all these organizations, as well as many thousands of unorganized workers, responded to the appeal in a manner that startled even the most enthusiastic of those who organized the work. The appeal, "Soviet Russia is in danger!"—was sufficiently to open doors that had never before been opened to us. When we first organized the Friends of Soviet Russia we calculated that fifty thousand dollars might be raised. But we soon learned how far we had underestimated the tremendous hold of the Russian Revolution on the working masses as well as on the van-guard. The party comrades and close sympathizers of the party were limited in the work. There was no limit to their zeal, no task was too heavy when the magic appeal was made "For Russia." A million dollars in round figures, was raised for the Russian Famine Relief, a tangible and visible proof of the friendship and love of the American workers for Soviet Russia.

Reasons for Soviet Recognition.

The great influence of the Russian Revolution upon the rank and file of the American labor movement is symbolized in the ever increasing growing fight for recognition of the Soviet Government by the United States Government. All the forces that are at work for the success of this fight. There is an element in the population who sympathize on humanitarian grounds, and there is a section of capitalists who look with longing eyes at the Russian market and want to sell their products there. But the broad masses who support the fight are animated by a different impulse. To them it is not primarily a question of politics or business. They instinctively sense the kinship of their Government and the Russian Revolution. It is all the same thing to them—as it is in reality—and their support of the fight for Recognition represents a desire to recognize the Russian Revolution and all that goes along with it.

The best hope for America is the growing influence of the Workers Party and its organization. For the first time in history, of the left wing in the trade unions. The work of the Workers Party and the Trade Union Educational League represents the beginning of a great new development in the working class movement. The systematic organization of the left wing forces in the trade unions, the realistic fight for the overthrow of the Gompers machine and the crystallization of all the revolutionary elements into one disciplined, Marxist party—these developments, which have all taken shape in recent years, draw their main inspiration from the Russian Revolution. The experiences of the Russian Revolution have shown us the way and the heroic example of the Russian workers has inspired us with the will to fight. By their daring struggles against the greatest odds in the dark days they gave us courage and hope and their manifest triumph now will transmute the hopes of other years into a certain confidence that the workers of America will follow their example.

French militarism is demanding $93,750,000 to carry on the war in Morocco, with additional sums needed to handle the troublesome Syrians. These are only two zones of unrest making their demands upon the French treasury at Paris. And the end is nowhere to be seen. Yet there are still those who believe the bunk.

Gone Forever!

That the trust busting days are gone forever is seen in the great tobacco merger affected by the American Tobacco Co. This tobacco trust was dissolved by the U. S. Supreme Court decision, in 1911, to divest itself of its most important subsidiaries. But those days are gone forever. The era of great trusts is here.

Disunity Threatens Labor in Ireland with Big Disaster

By Member C. E. C. Communist Party of Ireland.

DUBLIN, Ireland.—The recent elections in Ireland could only be dealt with by someone with an inveterate hatred of politicians and the political machine. It is generally believed that the huge majorities given to the heads of the Free State were filled out beforehand, and dumped in the boxes before the ninth common fools got near the voting booths. Independent candidates (the defeated ones) are petitioning Tim Healy to call a new election charging all kinds of corruption against the successful ones. The most drastic denture of the whole show was the wiping out of the Labor fakirs. The intervening trouble had a lot to do with their defeat but the main cause was their cowardly attitude to the murder campaign against the Republicans and their failure to speak at any time in the interest of the working class.

This is especially noticeable in Cork where there are about 8,000 Transport Union men alone and about 5,000 of other unions. Under proportional representation, the quota necessary to elect a candidate was only 5,500 yet no labor man was elected, even tho at the time there were 7,000 workers locked-out in the employers campaign to starve them.

Big Bis sure has a hold on the political machine for the next four years, and social legislation of any ameliorative character will have a chance at all. But the lesson to the workers now worths a little and if a definite working class political party emerges in the next year, the catastrophe will not be so bad as it appears.

Fine Opportunity Muddled.

If the political situation is black the industrial outlook is still blacker. Larkin on his arrival here had one of the greatest opportunities in history. Even Wilfred Scawen Blunt would have been glad of the sentiment in his favor that was Larkin's. Public opinion was solidly behind the rank and file. Both political parties were bankrupt of any constructive policy and every decent collar element "The petit-bourgeois" hoped great things from the return of "Our Jim."

It is however his tragedy that he is always surrounded by a bunch of yes-dogs and sycophants who distract the clear air from him. He succeeded in his attempt to smash political action by the Labor Party, but he also succeeded in leaving the industrial front open before a united boss-class front.

If he had made his appeal direct to the rank and file, he could easily have succeeded in clearing up the mess that was. But he precipitated the conflict as a personal fight with the consequences that O'Brien was able to hold control by capitalist court action, and the new members who knew not the Larkin of the old days thoroly misunderstood the methods used. Debs' words on one man leadership are coming home to most of us, bringing their own justification to those of us who had hoped much.

This winter is going to be plain hell in Ireland. Unemployment was never so bad. Capitalism (the industrial forces) is making desperate efforts to establish itself in face of overflooded markets and the wages of the few with a job must suffer in consequence. If the split in the transport is healed it will be a big factor in the situation, and progress along these lines is expected. Larkin is re-issuing his paper "The Irish Worker" but as yet it isn't the paper of the old days. The Communist organ has quite a big sale but it is badly hampered for lack of funds and the fact that there are no paid officials, all the work of the paper being done in the spare moments of a few wage-slaves hardly gives the little "Workers Republic" a chance. Yet in the experience of this writer no paper ever had such a loyal crowd of readers and such an influence. It is always somehere for the workers of Ireland that this should be so, is our one hope for the future.

Browder to Speak on Fascism.

Earl R. Browder, managing editor of the Labor Herald, will speak on "International Fascism," in Room 210, Capitol Building, 179 N. State St., Sunday evening, Nov. 4th, at 8 p. m.

Manley Sees Big Drive for Farmer-Labor Action in All Agricultural States of West

By JOSEPH MANLEY,
Secretary Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

MITCHELL, So. Dak.—Many of the farmers of South Dakota act like Bolsheviks, talk like Bolsheviks and in their high boots, fur collared coats and winter whiskers, look like Bolsheviks.

South Dakota is a great western agricultural state with a population of 700,000. It is divided by the Missouri River. "West of the river" are the great cattle and sheep ranges and the mining region of the Black Hills. "East of the river" lies the great general farming section that raises enormous crops of wheat, oats, barley and alfalfa. These farms also produce some of the finest corn fed hogs and steers in the country.

Passing through this country on a train one would be apt to draw the conclusion that the farmers all blanket-ass he found a happy, contended, prosperous population, producing tremendous crops, living in modern homes, owning automobiles and electric washing machines. The fact is that disthe whole show was the wiping out state than any other in the union. On the trains from the business men and commercial agents explanations for this discontent, explanations ranging from the "pure cussedness" of the farmer, to his "unreasonable desire for education."

Wanted Something Strong.

"Refusing to accept these gilt edge ones, I spent several days investigating the situation. The most cursory investigation brings out the fact that basic economic conditions underlie the widespread discontent. One of the many farmers I spoke to said: "I'm not a political farmer. I'm not a 'reuler,' I raised them from calves. In ten weeks I fed them milk which I kept from selling at a price that cost me $22.00 a piece to raise. Just now I was forced to sell both of 'em for $17.00. Conditions underlie the Farmer-Labor Party, I belong to both! What have you got that's different?" "Well," I replied, "nothing that big discontent was so great he wanted something more radical."

Thousands of these prosperous looking farms are the most heavily mortgaged. Forty per cent of the farmers here formed the core of the big smash every little while due to inability of the farmers to meet their payments. Shortly before I arrived in Mitchell the First National Bank, the oldest in the town, went crash in the smash. The Republican Party has been in complete control of the political machinery of this state. South Dakota, with this old gang in control, has the highest per capita debt and the highest per capita tax. They have little respect for the popular will. The legislature has been repudiated four different times when they tried to have the people repeal the primary laws. The farmers are in real rebellion against this old well-oiled machine.

N. P. L. Still a Factor in So. Dakota.

This rebellion is as yet more or less confused. The Non-Partisan League at one time had almost fifty organizers in this state. The Non-Partisan League in South Dakota became a real political party and now when the League has collapsed in every other state in the union, headquarters closed in South Dakota it still has a tremendous grip. A substantial majority of the farmers in the little town of Mitchell, the headquarters of the South Dakota branch of the official organization of the Non-Partisan League. The second reason is Alice Lorraine Daly, who is known nationally as the first woman who ever ran for Governor, she not alone ran but conducted a most strenuous campaign, travelling under the most trying difficulties, night and day in a Ford all over the state. She polled almost fifty thousand votes as the candidates of the Non-Partisan League Party, the winner, a Republican, getting a little over seventy thousand.

Tells Where the Shoe Pinches.

Then Davis as the editor of the South Dakota Leader has done much to give intelligent direction to the more or less unconscious movement amongst the farmers. The columns of this paper have been filled with the basic economic grievances. From it we first learned of the attempts of the old Republican machine to militarize the state. This paper has been the most militant voice of the oppressed farmers against their many enemies. Alice Lorraine Daly, graduate of the Boston Emerson School of Oratory, with many letters after her name and a former South Dakota teacher, understands the causes of the condition of the farmers in her state. She speaks to gatherings of farmers and their wives in the farm houses, halls and school houses of the state. This continual campaign of education under the most meagre financial conditions carried on by these two people and their many faithful supporters, has resulted in at least the foundation of a substantial movement in South Dakota.

Recently the South Dakota Non-Partisan League Party changed its name to the Farmer-Labor Party, with Tom Ayres as Chairman, it is now recognized as a legal party. It will hold a convention at Pierre on December 4th, and as the law provides that the state shall furnish mileage to the convention of a recognized party, a goodly delegation is expected. According to law the two old parties will also hold their convention simultaneously.

The Ford Factor.

The farmer labor movement in South Dakota is probably the most radical in the country. I found here wide spread propagation of the de-

Soviet Russia First.

Moscow, — (Rosta.) — Interviewed "The Manchester Guardian" correspondent upon his return to London from Russia, Mr. Mann, the Canadian railway expert, voiced his opinion that Russia would be the best country in Europe to restore her whole economy. He stated he was greatly impressed by the large natural resources of Russia and by the results of co-operation between all classes of population and the Soviet Government in the intense work of reconstruction. The favorable results of the current year's crops would do much in way of giving a still further impetus to the economic recovery of the country.

U. S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge says Cal Coolidge is the man to fight for the presidency. Lodge talks for the Millionaire's Club. Lodge's declaration ought to persuade labor that Coolidge is the worst man for the workers.

Collapse of Capitalism, The. Cahn. Traces the connection between the profit system, the gold standard, and our chronic financial crisis.

Communist Manifesto, The. Marx and Engels. Written in 1848, the book is a key to recent history and forthcoming events.

Debs: Us Good and Plenty. Charles Edward Russell. What leaders of the United States have done for the working class.

Dictatorship Bromides of Louis Boudeyn, The. An unbiased historical study of the relative merits of the two systems of government, showing that democracy is the natural forum that will ultimately destroy all life on the earth. Illustrated.

Evolution of Man, The. Boelsche. The best short popular handbook of Darwinism, including many recently discovered proofs. Illustrated.

Evolution of Property, The. Lafargue. A vivid colorful history showing that capitalist property is very new and very unstable.

Evolution, Social and Organic. Lewis. Traces the growth of the theory of evolution from the early Greek philosophers to Darwin.

Fundamentals of The State of the Socialist Philosophy, Engels. A critical essay by the founder of modern Socialism and one of the best writers in the country and editor of the South Dakota Leader, official organ of the Non-Partisan League. The second reason is Alice Lorraine Daly, who is known nationally as the first woman who ever ran for Governor, she not alone ran but conducted a most strenuous campaign, travelling under the most trying difficulties, night and day in a Ford all over the state. She polled almost fifty thousand votes as the candidates of the Non-Partisan League Party, the winner, a Republican, getting a little over seventy thousand.

Tells Where the Shoe Pinches.

Then Davis as the editor of the South Dakota Leader has done much to give intelligent direction to the more or less unconscious movement amongst the farmers. The columns of this paper have been filled with the basic economic grievances. From it we first learned of the attempts of the old Republican machine to militarize the state. This paper has been the most militant voice of the oppressed farmers against their many enemies. Alice Lorraine Daly, graduate of the Boston Emerson School of Oratory, with many letters after her name and a former South Dakota teacher, understands the causes of the condition of the farmers in her state. She speaks to gatherings of farmers and their wives in the farm houses, halls and school houses of the state. This continual campaign of education under the most meagre financial conditions carried on by these two people and their many faithful supporters, has resulted in at least the foundation of a substantial movement in South Dakota.

Recently the South Dakota Non-Partisan League Party changed its name to the Farmer-Labor Party, with Tom Ayres as Chairman, it is now recognized as a legal party. It will hold a convention at Pierre on December 4th, and as the law provides that the state shall furnish mileage to the convention of a recognized party, a goodly delegation is expected. According to law the two old parties will also hold their convention simultaneously.

Gospel of Evil Wealth, The. Howell. A brilliant study of human behavior, showing the real motives of "free will."

Life and Death. Metchnikoff. Sums up what science has discovered regarding the cause and end of life in plant, animal and man.

Making of the Fittest, The. Meyer. Tells how new species originate, and explains why they take the place of those that have died.

The Communist Party of Germany Issues Proclamation to the German Working Population

Challenge Citizenship of Communist Candidate in Cleveland Election

(Special to "The Worker")

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—An interesting commentary on democratic institutions in the United States is being made in the effort of the United States District Attorney Bernstein to revoke the citizenship papers of Angelo V. Severino, a candidate for the City Council in this November's election, because he is a member of the Workers' Party.

Cleveland is electing a City Council under a proportional representation law. The Workers' Party has nominated three candidates, among them Severino. Under the working of the proportional representation law, a minority group has an excellent opportunity of electing its candidate and it is evidently fear of this result which has brought the action of the part of the district attorney. The basis of the effort to reject Severino's citizenship papers in the charge that Severino swore falsely when the Bronx Supreme Court of New York that he did not oppose organized government while securing his second papers.

In 1915, when Severino secured these second papers, there was no communist party in existence. Severino joined the Socialist Party in Cleveland, in 1917, and became a member of the Communist Party when it was organized in 1919. It seems, therefore, that because Severino became a Communist four years after he secured his second papers, he is charged with having sworn falsely.

In answer to the charge Severino has issued a statement which reads in part as follows:

"I want to ask the United States District Attorney to acquaint himself a little more with what the Communists have to say for themselves and to find out whether they are opposed to organized government or not. He and I might have our opinions of who should be in control of organized governmental power and what form it should take, but to accuse myself and other Communists of being against the organized government is indeed laughable. That which will bring about the kind of society which I believe in, where everything will be owned, produced, and distributed co-operatively, in other words, a Communist society, will be a workers' and farmers' government. That is what I believe in. That is what the party I belong to believes in."

During the war and after, Socialists were expelled from public offices, notably in the New York state legislature and in the Cleveland City Council, because of their principles. It seems now that this proceeding is to be carried further by revoking citizenship papers of any one who disagrees with the existing political and industrial system.

It might well be asked what remains of democracy in the United States if all effort of a minority to express itself by having its candidates on the ballot and elected is denied by those who control the governmental power today.

MOSCOW.—(Rosta.)—In view of the current year's good harvest, the prospects of the Russian grain export very promising. A series of contracts with foreign business groups have already been signed, and further negotiations are now being conducted with French, Polish and other concerns, while there is also a large demand for Russian wheat on the best quality from Italy. It is also proposed to export grain to Anatolia (Turkey).

Foster, Stokes and Bittelman to Speak at Chicago's Sixth Anniversary Celebration

Nov. 7, 1923, finds Soviet Russia firmly established with an astounding record of achievements. This day is the day of inspiration to the workers of all the world. With the establishment of a Workers' Govern ment in Germany imminent, "Hands off Workers' Germany" becomes a fitting slogan for the celebration of the Sixth Birthday of Soviet Russia.

Chicago is unusually fortunate in having William Z. Foster, Ross Pastor Stokes and Alexander Bittelman to deliver the messages of the hour.

The Ashland Auditorium, W. Van Buren St. and Ashland Boulevard, will be jammed as never before and will ring with enthusiasm for Soviet Russia, a Soviet Germany and "The Daily Worker" in America.

Revolutionary and folk songs with the Young Proletarian Singers, under direction of Rudolph Liebich, will complete the program.

The date—November 7, 1923, at 8:15 p. m.

The place—Ashland Auditorium.

The day the militant workers will show their colors.

Frisco Gathering of American Legion Shows Big Influence Exerted Over It by Ku Klux

By JAMES H. DOLSEN.
Editor, San Francisco Labor Unity.
(Written Especially for "The Worker")

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.—For a week this city was in the possession of the American Legion—the native brand of the Fascisti. Despite the spiritual excitement released by the landing of a rum runner's cargo, the Legionnaires did not wipe their feet in 'Frisco as they did in Kansas City and New Orleans, possibly owing the presence of a strong representation from the Imperial Isle on whose police force of the Golden Gate City has never had no great love for swivel chair heroes of the world war, and like no better pastime than causing a tickling sensation on the ivory heads of swashbuckling Legionnaires with their bits of hickory whenever a convenient excuse presents itself.

The fact that the Legion is strongly the better part of valor in they had any intention of encroaching on the preserves of the San Francisco limbs of the law.

It was a peaceful convention outside of sundry squabbles in committee where valiant defenders of democracy smote each other with word and fist. The Legion publicity man did not feature this part of the proceedings as "force and violence" is reserved for the "reds."

The high spots in the convention were the address of Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, himself a Welshman, in a vicious attack on the alleged "Hangman" of Ireland, the Polish murderer of the revolutionary workers of that country; Commander Owsley, of the Legion, and Samuel Gompers, "Monarch" of the American Federation of Labor. The presence of Hall, the organizer of Italian labor, would have put the finishing touch to this red-baiting, anti-labor convention. But he was not in evidence.

Secretary of Labor Davis, in addressing the convention, declared for the deportation of all aliens, but proposed to "meet this unusual situation by deporting all those now here who had not taken out their naturalization papers. He gave as casual remedy for the alien "menace," including the plan to enroll the 8,000,000 aliens in this country in the ranks of the annual census for five years, at the end of which period any alien not amenable to the enlisting and intellectual fodder of 100 per cent Americanism should be deported. With one hand over his heart, in true Gaelson, the Welshman, at the end of an emotional perporation, declared "An American must be for America and against all the world." The German version before the war was "Deutchland Uber Alles."

National Commander Owsley's address pledged the Legion to a continued upholding of the Federal Constitution, the supreme law of the land "which will, and must be defended" and to "law and order, which will be preserved." Owsley declared that the Legion "must carry its message to the business men and women of the country so that all might hear its story and understand the position it has taken and the place that will necessarily be accorded it in the future." He was evidently referring to the small business people for Gary understands perfectly well its place in this country's future.

Among others who addressed the convention was General Josef Haller, head of the Polish General Staff, whom the most reactionary newspaper in the city termed the "saviour of Western Europe from the Russian peril."

Not to be forgotten, either, was Samuel Gompers' fraternal greeting and welcome, for he came down from Portland to greet his "comrades" of the Legion, as he affectionately termed them in a talk at the local Labor Council. His good comrades went out of their way to manifest their most bitter enemies of the unions here—the Yellow Taxicab Company. Their cabs were lined up in front of the convention hall, each with a large inscription "Endorsed by the American Legion."

The Chauffeurs carried on a long fight against this scabby outfit and succeeded in signing up with a number of other taxi companies. Apparently it made no difference to the Legionnaires of American labor, for a paper here designated him, whether the Legion patronised scabs or union men. Perhaps from his palatial home of rooms at the aristocratic Palace Hotel, where most of the millionaires visiting this city put up, yellow looks all the same to the union color.

By the way, Gompers' ability as a labor leader was aptly summed up in the declaration of the delegates of the organized labor movement in this country. "There has never been a time in the history of the labor movement when it has been so thoroly stabilized as it has been by the past administration. Stabilized, we should comment—like a man stuck in the mud which threatens speedily to engulf him.

Present also was Samuel's trusted counselor, "Major" George Berry, international President of the Pressmen's Union. Berry was more on the inside than Gompers, for had he not been a national recommendation and was he not a delegate to the convention? Fresh from his exploit in breaking the New York printers' strike with union "scabs," Berry was signally honored by the gathering. He also, as a labor leader, has had rooms in one of the most expensive hotels.

Former National Vice-Commander Kendrick, of San Francisco, stirred things up considerably early in the week by coming out in the open with the statement that the Legion was fast losing membership and influence and would swiftly pass away unless it carried out a much more progressive program. "Something is radically wrong with the Legion," he declared. "We are losing members and rapidly sinking to a dismal defeat for the great purposes for which we were organized. The Legionnaires who have been with the organization from its beginning recognize that its power and popularity are far behind that it possessed in 1920." He pointed out that 84,000 members had dropped out last year and that it had a membership now of only 625,000, or but one-eighth of the ex-service men of the country, eligible.

Of the 500 resolutions introduced, the most heated debate centered about the one which declared Lenin should take upon the Ku Klux Klan. It was known that some of the delegates were Kluxers. The resolutions committee had a heated time reaching any agreement on the subject. Charges were headlined in a labor paper that a fist fight had occurred, with uproarious scenes. It was admitted by the chairman that the discussion had been hot, but as to adopting such unsentimentality testing to fisting as opposed to oratory. That was quite unthinkable. So a committee called on the offending editor, the story was retracted, but the talk among the reporters is that the half was not told.

The resolution brought in by the committee characterized as "un-American, a menace to our liberties, and destructive of our fundamental law" any individual, group of individuals, or organizations, which creates or tends to create, radical, religious or class strife among our people; or which takes into their own hands the enforcement of the law, determination of guilt, or infliction of punishment" and that such actions were "inconsistent with the ideals and purposes of the American Legion."

A bitter fight broke forth immediately. Kendrick, of California, bumped to the stage and, declaring that it was time "busyfooting" stopped, stated that his being a Catholic had been used against him in a previous election. He proposed a resolution specifically condemning the Ku Klux Klan. This was badly defeated upon roll call. A delegate from Oklahoma evidently a Klansman, moved that the committee's resolution be tabled. This also was defeated. The original motion was then carried, placing the Legion on record against the Klan, the not naming it.

United Against Radicalism.

That the Legion proposes not to abate a particle in its struggles with the "Reds" was apparent from its acceptance of the committee's report on Americanization. This pledged undying opposition to "Sovietism, Communism," and all other isms not in harmony with the organization's concept of Americanism.

The clergymen on the financial leaders who control behind the scenes was shown in an innocently worded resolution for "informing the people of the Latin-American countries of the real feeling of America towards them." The Legion will press for the passage of state laws requiring the display of American flags in all public places and gatherings. It defied against allowing citizenship to anyone who claimed exemption from the draft, and ordered the American ization essay contests introduced into the schools. It was stated that in the last affair of this kind, 400,000 papers had been sent in by the children.

The immigration policy of Secretary of Labor Davis was endorsed, with the addition of barring all immigration for five years. Even when the gates were again opened, persons should be allowed only from nations "bearing racials similar to those of the American people." It is hard to determine just what the committee means, inasmuch as there is every probability that revolutions will sweep Western Europe in the next few years, and the convention went on record for absolute exclusion of all Orientals. Immigrants even then would have to be investigated as to any of those who had been honorably discharged in the war or of persons who had become citizens here.

Must Pass Mental Test.

Naturalization would be possible only of those who showed that they "understood the true principles" of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. This reminds one of the clause in the constitutions of the southern states which requires all would-be voters to prove to a court that they "understand" these documents. Of course, a negro never passes this test.

The Oriental committee made a report after two years of work. Its recommendations were adopted and bind the organization as "unalterably opposed to the Communist International and to any person or organization which aids or approves the purposes of the same." The report highly commended the American Federation of Labor for its fight against the Red Flag of the Soviet Convention. The same condemnation was accorded the I. W. W. and the Soviet government.

The report of the national legislative committee included approval to an amendment to the national constitution prohibiting child labor under 8 years, for a universal military service law which would provide for the "conscription of all resources in time of war and for "taking the profit out of war as far as possible."

Female Battalion of Death.

While the male members of the Legion were vociferating in behalf of rejecting the Ladies' Auxiliary application for a charter, because of its record against "radicalism, sovietism, communism and dope."

There is sardine in a name, central of the Legion for the next year passed out of the hands of the Ku Klux Klan. Commander Quinn, of California, succeeds Owsley. This does not mean any change in the policy of the Legion towards progressive labor, which is directed by the Catholic church or the Protestant wing of the Christian religion. That organization will be the backbone of the real Fascisti movement when the American capitalists decide to throw aside the veil of camouflage that now conceals the iron fist in the velvet glove. All the anti-radical resolutions were passed without a dissenting vote.

A. F. of L. and I. W. W.

No reply has been received up to date from the A. F. of L. following the "official and very cordial invitation" issued by the I. W. W. to the federation chief to come and investigate the industrial organization's finances.

The A. F. of L. convention at Portland, Ore., early in October ordered the executive council to look thoroly into the source of I. W. W. funds.

The November Labor Herald

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

A series of spectacular events took place last month within the ranks of organized labor thruout the country. Of these the Decatur convention of the Illinois Federation of Labor, the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor, the provocative maneuvers of the Miners' officials and the desperate attempts of the Ladies' Garment Workers' officials to smash their union have attracted nation-wide attention.

What happened at Decatur? How can one, for example, explain the fact that John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, formerly National Chairman of the Farmer-Labor Party, at Decatur, turned against even the idea of independent political action by the workers? How is it that John Fitzpatrick during the Decatur convention suddenly "discovered" his back on every progressive policy which he had long supported and advocated? What was the apparent sudden weakness of the rank-and-file and of the Communists at the historic Decatur convention where the reactionary Milk Drivers' Union had no less than 43 delegates at $25 per day per man, and where not less than 300 out of the 970 delegates present were paid officials of the Federation? Answers to these and many other burning questions are found in the November issue of the "Labor Herald" in the splendid article, "The Decatur Battle, by William Z. Foster, who, together with his "minority" stood his ground thruout the convention. No worker who takes an interest in the labor movement can afford to miss this splendid account given by Comrade Foster.

"Labor's Chamber of Commerce," by Comrade William F. Dunne, is another splendid feature of the November issue of the "Labor Herald." It was the first time in the history of the labor movement that such a treasonable document as Gompers' speech to attend an A. F. of L. convention as a delegate. Every worker was breathlessly waiting to see what action Gompers would take in such a situation.

The two articles by Dunne and Foster are sufficient reasons why every thinking worker must read the November "Labor Herald," but there are not the only reasons. The article on the Needle Trades' situation, by Max Shachtman is an illuminating article on the new betrayals of John L. Lewis, and "The Two-Score Victims of the Law," by Comrade J. G. Johnstone, each contains a volume of valuable and interesting facts about the labor movement in the American Federation of Labor.

In addition the November issue contains a number of articles dealing with the international labor movement, which can be found in no other periodical in America.

The outer appearance of the magazine is in tune with its contents, making it a pleasant reading even for the worker who is tired out after a hard day's slaving in the factory or in the mine. The Trade Union Educational League surely deserves to be congratulated on the splendid issue of the November Labor Herald.

The November "Liberator."

"The Liberator" for November is packed fuller than ever with good things, as isn't it the case with Comrade Barnes appears again with one of those human and heart-touching stories that have made him famous among American artists. His editorials supply concentrated food for thought, guaranteed indigestible to reactionaries. William F. Foster writes on the A. F. of L. Convention in a way that will take the wind out of those who take a pessimistic view of what happened there. John Pepper has a story on the new upsurging of revolution. Pepper draws some startling conclusions.

The Labor Party is given an entertaining historical sketch by Joseph Manly, national secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. This is very informative. For instance, who knew that away back in 1920 Robert La Follow, Sr., was committed to the very same political action that Gompers then published and in 1923? Form the backbone of the real Fascisti movement when the American capitalists decide to throw aside the veil of camouflage that now conceals the iron fist in the velvet glove. All the anti-radical resolutions were passed without a dissenting vote.

Considering the Progressive tendency of the Needle Trades Workers in general and the strength of the League with its thousands of members this latest addition to the militant trade-union press of this country promises to outdo easily all the other journals in point of circulation and influence.

KARL MARX TO DISCUSS THE IRISH QUESTION.

That the Irish question is a live issue cannot be denied but that it is sufficiently dynamic to make the dead speak is what Comrade Michael T. Murray proves in the November issue of the Workers' Monthly in an article entitled "Marx on the Irish Question."

This should be enough to make our Workers' Monthly a success, for what the great founder of Modern Socialism says about the Irish struggle against England.

One dollar sent to The Irish People, 1615 Addison St., Chicago, Ill., will bring you Marx's article and eleven other issues of the magazine.

Many Meetings Held by Party Big Successes

The first speaking tour arranged by the National Office of the Workers' Party during the Fall term is now coming to a close. The three greatest, Comrades H. M. Wicks, Thomas O'Flaherty and Max Bedacht, who have covered the country from coast to coast, have already returned to Chicago. The results of the tour are very encouraging. Most of the meetings were successful. Many new members have joined the Party as a result of those meetings and the Party organization was strengthened in places seldom covered by National speakers. More than one hundred meetings were addressed thruout the country during the five weeks the speakers toured from the National Office of the Party. These do not include the meetings arranged directly by the District Offices and by the Language Federations of the Party.

The first tour is now being followed up by Comrade J. O Bentall, of Duluth, Minn., former Editor of "Truth," and recently released from Leavenworth prison. His meetings in New York, according to reports, met with great success. He will spend the first half of November in District One. (New England), and will then speak in the following dates in the Rockford section; 17, Wilkes Barre; 18, Bethlehem; 19, Trenton, (N. J.); 24, Washington, D. C.; 25, Baltimore; 26, Richmond; 27, Washington, D. C. From District Three Comrade Bentall will go to District Four where he will spend several days.

A series of meetings have been arranged for Comrade Carl Reeve-berg, National Executive Secretary of the Workers Party to begin with the first week in November. Why Congress Should Investigate Communism" at the following cities:

Nov. 2, Rochester, N. Y.; 30, Detroit, Mich.; Dec. 1, Toledo, O.; 2, Cleveland, O.; 2, (evening), Erie, Pa.; 3, Buffalo, N. Y.; 4, Worcester, Mass.; 5, Boston, Mass.; 6, Worcester, Mass.; 7, Philadelphia, Pa.; 9, Cincinnati, O.

Comrade Engdahl will cover the territory East of Chicago, Comrade J. Louis Engdahl, Editor of "The Worker," will address a number of meetings, speaking on the same subject, in the Middle West. The Comrade Engdahl will be announced in the next week's Worker.

Sixth Soviet Russia Anniversary meetings have been arranged in various parts of the country to be held between November 8-10. A list of these meetings is published elsewhere in this issue of "The Worker."

A series of propaganda meetings have been arranged by the Chicago branches of the Workers Party in various parts of the city, which will be addressed by speakers selected by the National Office of the Party. Open Forums are now being held in Chicago. We will speak on "Labor's Struggles in America."

All Opposition Fades.

MOSCOW.—(Rosta.)—The Central Committee of the Georgian National Democratic Party has issued a manifesto appealing to all parties to take up a loyal position towards the Soviet power. The manifesto is signed by all the leaders of the party and the representatives of the Social-Democratic Party have also signed it.

The issuance of this document means the end of all opposition to the Soviet power on the part of so-called democratic elements of Georgia. The object of the manifesto openly declared therein is that there is no longer any justification for the existence of these parties since their aim, which is stated to be the establishment of Soviet power in Georgia (Caucasus), has actually been realized thru the sound foundation of the Soviet system.

MOSCOW.— (Rosta.) — A Russo-Persian Bank has been founded at Teheran, Persia, the new step is intended to result in the strengthening of economic bonds between Russia and Persia. A street in the business of Persian trade relations has been given by the active participation of Persian merchants at the Nijni-Novgorod Fair.

Workers Party Plans Educational Work In and Out of Party

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party some time ago elected a committee to draw up a plan for systematic educational work among the party members as well as similar work among non-party members. The committee considered that the growth of the party made it necessary to establish some medium of instructing new members in the fundamentals of Communist science. The committee has submitted the report which follows, which was unanimously adopted. The national organization will proceed to put the plan outlined in practice immediately.

REPORT OF EDUCATIONAL COMMITTEE.

The systematic theoretical training of the party members cannot longer be neglected without danger to the party. The campaigns and struggles led by the party are having the inevitable result of drawing a considerable stream of proletarian elements into our ranks. The trade union militants are being attracted to the party in large numbers because it appeals to them as the best practical leader in the daily fight. As a rule, these workers are without a clear understanding of the theory of Communism and the revolutionary goal of the labor movement.

This is true also of many of the older members of the party who came over from the Socialist Party and the I. W. W., and who still carry with them harmful prejudices. Systematic educational work is vitally necessary to bind them all more closely to the party, raise the general level of the political knowledge in the ranks and assist them to gain that firm grasp on Communist principles which will enable them to stand unwavering thru the difficulties and vicissitudes of the movement.

Such an important task cannot be left to sporadic and haphazard efforts in the various districts of the party. The Central Executive Committee must take direct control and responsibility of educational activities, and duck them according to a varigated but unified plan, and provide a special fund for their maintenance. The work must be organized according to a comprehensive scheme which will embrace the following three features: (1) Instruction of party functionaries and leaders in the trade unions. (2) Instruction of rank and file party workers. (3) General popular education in theoretical subjects.

A special fund must be provided for this work. We have estimated that a minimum of $10,000 per year will be necessary to put the whole program into effect. But the work should be started at once and, as it develops, the funds can be raised to support it. The party comrades are thirsty for knowledge, and we believe it is possible to arouse great enthusiasm amongst them for this project. We can go ahead with full confidence that the necessary funds will be forthcoming.

After a thoro consideration of the entire question, the committee recommends the immediate adoption of the following concrete proposals:

1. The selection of a National Educational Director who shall have administrative direction of the entire educational program.

2. The founding of "LENIN COLLEGE"—a central school for party functionaries and leaders, to be located in Chicago.

3. Establishment of classes in local, to be conducted by professional teachers on a travelling circuit.

4. Educational Lyceum course; extensive tours to be organized for lectures on theoretical subjects.

5. Publication of a number of popular theoretical pamphlets.

Detailed Explanation of Program.

Lenin College.—The purpose of this school is to train party leaders. Twice a year 25 to 30 of the best party workers from the districts shall be brought to Chicago for six weeks and given a course of instruction and they shall devote the entire time to study.

Their expense shall be provided as follows: (a) The party organization shall provide free tuition, return railroad fare to their homes from Chicago, a week in advance of revolutionary days if necessary for their studies, free board and room in Chicago and five dollars per week incidentals. (b) Locals from which the students come shall pay their railroad fare to Chicago and five dollars per week expenses.

Party members and sympathizers in Chicago, who are in a position to do so, shall be called upon to donate free board and lodging to the students for the six weeks' period.

A campaign for the registration of those willing and able to do this shall be started under the direct charge of a student of the Lenin College of America.

METHODS OF INSTRUCTION

1. Lectures.
2. Reading.
3. Discussion.
4. Examinations and Grading.
5. Blackboard Illustrations—Outlines covered in the course.

Recommended Features: Sunday Night Forum lectures, open to the public.

SUBJECTS OF INSTRUCTION.

1. Marxian Economics.
2. Historical Materialism.
3. History of the United States.
4. History of the American labor movement.
5. Socialism and the First International.
6. Theory of Revolution and the Communist Manifesto.
7. History of the International Labor Movement.
8. Communist Tactics in the Trade Unions.
9. History of Revolutions.

Local Classes.

Ten circuits of five cities each shall be organized in ten different districts within a radius of 500 miles, following centers: Seattle, San Francisco, Minneapolis, Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York and Boston. Classes shall be conducted one night a week in each city on the circuit for ten weeks by professional teachers assigned to the work. For example, a class will be conducted in Seattle on Monday on the subject of the class struggle. On Tuesday night the teacher gives the same lecture in Tacoma, on Wednesday in Portland, on Thursday in Astoria, and on Friday in Everett. He commences the circuit again at Seattle on the following Monday with another lecture, and continues year the same route as the preceding week. Seattle will have a class every Monday night, Tacoma every Tuesday, etc., until the whole course of ten lectures is completed in each city on the circuit. The time not occupied with class work can be utilized by the teacher to assist the party by speaking at occasional mass meetings, attending conferences, etc.

It is not possible to conduct these circuits in all of the ten districts at the same time; the cost would be prohibitive and not enough teachers are available. But two men shall be released from other party duties and assigned to this work at once. When they finish their ten weeks' course in one district they can start in another, and in this way, in the course of a year, every district in the party will be covered.

The estimated maximum cost of the services of each lecturer, including wages, expenses and railroad fare is $125 per week. The national office shall pay one-half of this expense and the districts one-half.

Educational Lyceum Course.

This lecture course will be different from others arranged by the party in that it will be devoted exclusively to popular lectures on theoretical subjects. The lectures will be open to the general working class public, the locals shall pay a flat rate for the services of the lecturer and admission tickets should be sold. The entire evening of the lecture should be devoted exclusively to the subject, and the general campaigns and political work of the party should not intrude.

One capable lecturer shall be assigned to this work at once and an extended tour arranged for him. It should be calculated to conduct this tour on the basis of a small deficit which will be born by the National Office.

U. S. Senator Wheeler Reviews the Red Army

"The army of Soviet Russia impressed me as an exceptionally well-trained and thoroly equipped force," said United States Senator Wheeler, of Montana, upon his recent return from Europe on the "President Harding." In the course of his trip he had occasion to visit almost every country in Europe.

The army review that so impressed Senator Wheeler forms part of the Russian historical news pictures to be shown again in Chicago in a few weeks from now. While some of the weekly news reels have carried fragmentary views of the Soviet forces from time to time this picture gives a comprehensive review of that army in all its branches. Actual war scenes showing infantry, artillery and tanks in action, great parades, cavalry charges, aerial forces, armored cars, all are included.

The use of great army tanks to clear fields is exceptionally fine piece of photography.

The army section of the film is only a small part of the film, other portions showing industrial and agricultural reconstruction, sports, and the successful salvage of thousands of famine orphans in the beautiful natural setting of the Black Sea beaches.

We see Russia being reconstructed, feverish activity going on everywhere. The building boom there, if not temporary like in our own capitalist America, but it has come to stay until proletarian Russia outstrips all the capitalist countries of the world.

We see the clothing factory in Moscow, established by American methods, but employing hundreds of Russian workers. The workers of America must help Russia to introduce more extensively American methods of efficiency in industry and production.

This is the record of a series of films put out by the Friends of Soviet Russia as a means of raising funds for the Russian orphan homes, for reconstruction of Soviet Russia, for educating Russia's children, and for the upkeep of the Russian orphan homes.

Chicago YWL "Daily Worker" Drive.

After pledging $1,000 at the "Daily Worker" mass meeting, the Chicago League, within two weeks raised one hundred and fifty dollars in cash.

Comrade Eugene Bechtold, general organizer of the Chicago league and league representative on the "Daily Worker" committee reports that raising 15 per cent of its pledge within two weeks assures him that the Chicago league members are giving their wholehearted support to this drive, and that the membership is showing far greater accomplishments than any other league units in the United States, although this campaign followed close upon the heels of the National Daily Worker Campaign, of which the Chicago League raised over one third of the amount turned in to the national office.

The Hallowe'en masquerade ball, given by the league, was a tremendous success, and proved very profitable for the "Daily Worker" drives, since ten per cent of the proceeds has been turned over to the "Daily Worker" committee.

American Workers Not in Sympathy with Acts of Portland A. F. of L. Circus

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

The "Red-baiting" carnival recently held in Portland, Oregon, by the Pacific Section of the American Federation of Labor has drawn heavily on the resources of every capitalist scribbler in this country. In the words of William F. Dunne these journalistic bats saw the final smash at capitalism—a smash that would send it toppling into the abyss of oblivion. Startled headlines shrieked the glad news—to the capitalists—that industrial unionism, independent working class political action and the recognition of Soviet Russia were decisively defeated by the 100 per cent patriots who gathered to speak in the name of American labor.

And the bats would not be very far wrong, granting that the American workers, or any appreciable fraction of them were represented at the Portland convention. We cannot grant any such assumption.

During my recent trip thru the central states I had the opportunity of learning the feelings of the rank and file of the American workers toward the issues that were turned down by the Gompers machine at Portland. It is safe to say that 90 per cent of the organized workers are in favor of these very vital issues. And if Gompers only realized how he is strengthening the radicals by making them candidates and defenders of such practical measures it is quite likely that he would not be so anxious to slaughter everybody who rises to suggest that this is not the Neolithic age but the Twentieth Century.

The expulsion of Comrade Dunne has more effectively helped to throw the searchlight of publicity on the dirty scenes that threaten to destroy the American labor movement than ten years of propaganda. And the eloquent and scathing indictment delivered against the bureaucrats by Comrade Dunne has enthused the rank and file of the workers who had the opportunity to read it. Instead of dealing a crushing blow to radicalism Gompers has given it a big forward push. An increasing number of those listed as "progressives" in the labor directory are making decisions. Some of them are deciding to put in their pink horns and snuggle closer to the Gompersian pap, while a greater number are deciding to put in their manhood and definitely declaring themselves with the revolutionary elements in the Workers Party. There is no other revolutionary political party in America that can be seen with the naked eye or even with the aid of a microscope.

Not alone is the rank and file of the American workers in revolt against the Stone Age leadership of Gompers but many of these, who, to a certain extent, represent the "aristocracy of labor" feel that a few more years of such leadership will make per capita as scarce as hen's teeth. Not that all officials of the A. F. of L. believe that per capita is the only thing worth living for, but in the present circumstances life without it would be colorless indeed.

I listened to a high officer of a certain International union metaphorically tear the hide off the presidents of the American Federation of Labor. He stated, that some of so-called organizers do nothing else but travel around their districts lifting charters of locals and expelling radicals from the unions. They find as much savage joy in doing this, he declared as an intoxicated Irishman at Donnybrook fair in the days when it was the custom to put a good sized stone on the end of a long stocking and hit every head within reach. And when the man-hunting organizer returns to the wigwam of his superior officer he is received with as much joy as that experienced by an Indian chief on the return of a young warrior from battle with the scalps of a dozen enemies dangling from his belt.

"I have no particular love for radicals as such," declared the officer referred to here, "but I know from experience that without the radicals the unions would be as dead as the shinbone of Saint Anne. The average member pays his dues. The radical is always on the job trying to improve things. All this talk about radicals disrupting the unions is hokum. The real disrupting is done by the organizers (?) who are paid by international presidents for making the union safe for their jobs. The lifting of charters and the expulsion of progressives is in fact reducing once powerful unions to ghosts of their former greatness."

There is still enough money left from the good old days in the union coffers to pay the salaries of international presidents and even tho the famous Mooney treasury may not be at their disposal there are plenty of fat treasuries at the beck and call of the American plunderbund whose interests the labor fakirs serve so well. Furthermore, we will soon see all our international presidents in the banking business and, of course, it will be a crime to lay all our troubles at the black feet of the "international bankers."

The labor fakirs are worming themselves into a warm spot in the affections of the American plutocrats but they are fast losing the confidence of the workers who pay them their salaries. John L. Lewis, for instance, would be no popular guy in the mining regions as a Grand Klokard of the Ku Klux Klan at a convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. "Whom the Gods wish to destroy they first make mad." Which was rather cute of the Gods. It is much easier to get rid of a madman than one who has his mental night cap firmly set on his skull. The famous Lewis broadside against the "Reds" has resulted in a great march of miners into the Workers Party. "Go to it, Nhn" is the war cry of the rebel miners.

Competition for Burns

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

There is a new Labor Aristocracy springing up in the American Labor Movement, of which Major George L. Berry, head of the Printing Pressmen's Union, is the official spokesman. Fresh from breaking the New York pressmen's strike, he was hailed as a conquering hero by the American Federation of Labor convention, and immediately proceeded to lay down four new basic principles upon which the A. F. of L. according to him, now stands. These are: "The ownership of property, an adequate return on investments, an adequate sum allowed industry for the matter of deterioration, and that all workers, including managers, get proper compensation for what they put into industry."

This program, which could have been written by the Chamber of Commerce, was hailed with joy by the capitalist press of the whole country. In the last mentioned so-called basic principle are slyly identified labor, but to keep the stigma of being too pro-labor, he hedges their reward by stating the rights of the managers of industry, and a modernized version of the old wage cut slogan, "A fair day pay for a fair day's work."

Strikebreaking Pressmen Are Their Own Worst Enemies.

Berry and the National officials, in calling their strike. They had lived through an agreement known as the Manton Award, which had been condemned by every trade union in the country, and lauded by the employers in much the same way as the notorious Landis Award.

They broke the discipline of Berry's dictatorship, this was the excuse needed to smash the union. They knew Berry, and were afraid of his trickery, and when they supplied him with the needed, if rather flimsy, excuse to ...e his master, the publishers, ...ill on strike, but Berry ...combing the country for strike breakers, using members of the union to whip their brother members into line in the interest of the publishers association.

This is the new Labor Aristocracy. This is the most dangerous enemy that labor has to confront.

John L. Lewis brought joy to the hearts of every "Open Shopper" when he smashed the strike of the miners in District 26, and when he betrayed the striking miners, of Fayette and Somerset County, to the tender mercy of the unscrupulous coal barons. He was openly accused by Frank Farrington, himself a rank conservative with a record that would not stand close scrutiny, of receiving hundreds of thousands of dollars from coal operators, for allowing them to run their mines upon a non-union basis.

Now Berry, with a record that is a stench in the nostrils of every honest trade unionist, finally qualifies to ...

STOCKHOLM.—Finland's white-fascist demand destruction of all trade unions in that country. They are attacking even the conservative social-democratic party. The rights of the only representative of the Communist party in the parliament, Pulkkinen, have been annulled and the party forbidden to take part in the next elections. Ville Harinen, editor-in-chief of the newspaper, Sluaten Tjomines, has been arrested.

A Square Deal, if—

By the Federated Press.

CICERO, Ill.—"I will see that the defendants get a square deal if they really represents American labor," declares the special prosecutor in the Cicero free speech cases. Three members of the Workers' Party, including J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the principal party organ, The Worker, are facing trial after arrest on disorderly conduct charges. Demand for a jury trial caused postponement of the hearing after their arrest Oct. 12. Their disorderly conduct consisted of speaking at an Anti-Fascist mass meeting in this industrial suburb of Chicago.

The special prosecutor appointed by the police judge is John Christenson of Christenson & Lyon, a Chicago law firm which maintains an office in Cicero. "I am not opposed to any legitimate efforts of labor to better conditions," Christenson declares. "What I want to know is if the speakers are against the government. If they really represent American labor and not something else, the case will probably be settled without any trouble."

Cicero has a large Italian population in which the Citizens' Club has been spreading propaganda for the Fascist movement. The Anti-Fascist alliance has stirred up opposition to this movement. The three speakers who were arrested all oppose fascism.

Ohio Reactionaries Fight Labor Party at State Convention

Why the Industrial Registration?

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, as it was announced in The Worker last week, decided to get an Industrial Registration of the membership regularly twice a year. This decision is of utmost importance. It will surely be met with the heartiest support of the entire party not so much because of the discipline as because of conviction that this step is a vital necessity for the future success of our work.

The shaping and the adoption of correct policies depends greatly, if not exclusively, upon the correct knowledges of our strength in the labor movement generally or even within a certain industry, trade or territory. One cannot estimate the strength of the organization without knowing certain facts about its membership in addition to its numbers. Mere members do not indicate the real strength of the branches of Michigan State contains 19 names. Of these only seven of the Party has been immensely hampered because of lack of such correct information of our strength. This is one of the most important reasons why the registration must be made a success at any cost.

But there are many other reasons that prompted the C. E. C. to make the industrial registration a regular and permanent institution of the Party. The Party is at present organized on a geographical basis only. We have not a single "house trial" or "Shop" branch of the Party. In this respect our party is really an exception among the Communist Parties of the entire world. It is a remnant of the old Socialist Party. The time is now overripe for us to make at least a study of the question. It is absolutely essential to determine the possibilities for the organization of Party branches based on shop and industrial lines. There is a splendid opportunity for this in a number of industries, as in the needle trades, or among the coal miners for instance. The C. E. C. up to now was unable even to make a study of the question because of lack of proper information. The Industrial Registration will help the party to analyze the situation with facts in its hands and thus avoid possible organization.

The Party has for the last year played an important part in the labor movement of the country. Its influence is growing from day to day. For it would be a great mistake to assume that the Communist movement of this country has capitalism by the throat, and that we can now afford to have an easy sailing. Quite the contrary. The growth of the Party and its influence has already succeeded in arousing the fury of the reactionaries. A united front is being formed by the reactionary officialdom of the American Federation of Labor not only within its own ranks. The Gompers machine has openly joined hands with the employing class and its governmental agencies. The reaction is concentrating all its energies against every thing honest and progressive in the labor movement. The communists, however, are far from taking full advantage of the possibilities and of their potential forces.

While no definite information is available at this moment, it is certain that even now about 40 or 50 per cent of our membership is not connected with the Trade Union movement. We have made considerable progress during the last year in connecting up our membership with the Trade Unions, but much is left to be done in this field. In this respect the Industrial Registration can hardly be overestimated. A few concrete examples will readily bear this out. An Industrial Registration blank returned to the National Office by one of the branches of Michigan State contains 19 names. Of these only seven are union men. Of the remaining twelve at least seven could join a union with a little effort and assistance on the part of the National District, or even the Local office of the Party. It is needless to say that these seven comrades, if joined to the Trade Unions, would be of greater value to the labor movement of that city. The registration blank of a language branch of a comparatively small city in New England is another illuminating example of the importance of the Industrial Registration. Out of 65 members of that branch, the Registration blank shows, five are machinists who could easily join a local union. Yet no steps have been taken to have this done despite the fact that in that particular city there are at present no communists in the Machinists' Union. Such a situation would not exist with the Industrial Registration completed and in the hands of responsible Party units.

At a meeting of Branch Industrial Organizers of a large industrial city an organizer of a Ukrainian branch pointed out that the Industrial Registration will result in his branch becoming one hundred per cent "unionized." Only some assistance of the City Industrial Organizer in the form of advice was needed to have this achieved. This, perhaps, is an exceptional case, but it nevertheless shows how advantageously the Industrial Registration may be used by the Party.

The above are but a few of the reasons that prompted the C. E. C. to make the Industrial Registration a regular and an important institution of the party. It was necessary to take this step in order to make the Party more efficient and not because of a desire for mere "formalism" as some have it. It is essential that every member of the Party bears this in mind and assists the National Office to get results with unnecessary waste of time and energy.

Union Elects Tom Mooney.

SAN QUENTIN, Calif.—Tom Mooney has been informed here by delegates from the International Moulders' Union that the convention of the union in Cleveland has elected him by representatives at all A. F. of L. conventions for the next three years. The convention also passed a resolution which will be presented to Governor Richardson in person, asking for unconditional pardon for Mooney and Billings; and donated $1,000 toward defense. Mooney expressed himself as gratified with the action of the union, of which he has been a member for 21 years.

Bakery Workers For a Labor Party

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—While the American Federation of Labor convention was in session at Portland, the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' Union held its national convention here.

The resolution, adopted is in direct contradiction to the actions of the American Federation of Labor convention.

The American Federation of Labor sends fear against anything smacking of progress and vocal against amalgamation, a Labor Party, and recognition of Soviet Russia.

The Bakery Workers' International endorsed the formation of a Labor Party, voted in favor of recognition of Soviet Russia, and decided upon a more friendly attitude toward the independent movement in the trade in the hope of bringing about immediate co-operation and further unity.

Competition for Burns

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

There is a new Labor Aristocracy springing up in the American Labor Movement, of which Major George L. Berry, head of the Printing Pressmen's Union, is the official spokesman. Fresh from breaking the New York pressmen's strike, he was hailed as a conquering hero by the American Federation of Labor convention, and immediately proceeded to lay down four new basic principles upon which the A. F. of L., according to him, now stands. These are: "The ownership of property, an adequate sum allowed industry for the matter of deterioration, and that all workers, including managers, get proper compensation for what they put into industry."

This program, which could have been written by the Chamber of Commerce, was hailed with joy by the capitalist press of the whole country. In the last mentioned so-called basic principle is the timidity mentions labor, but to keep the stigma of being too pro-labor, he hedges their reward between the rights of the managers of industry, and a modernized version of the old worn out slogan, "A fair day's pay for a fair day's work."

Strike breaking is passing out of the hands of the private strike breaking agencies. Their method was too crude and out of date. It can be more effectively handled by the Lees, the Lewises and the Berrys, and when they cannot serve their masters any longer in this capacity, they can start announce openly their business connections.

Lee was acclaimed an ideal labor leader by the employers of labor when he broke the outlaw switchmen's strike. His other betrayals during the railroad upheaval, made him unfit to serve the railroad interest any longer in that capacity, so he was made President of a ten million dollar railroad equipment corporation, at the modest little salary of $25,000 per year.

John L. Lewis brought joy to the hearts of every "Open Shopper" when he smashed the strike of the miners in District 26, and when he betrayed the striking miners, of Fayette and Somerset County, to the tender mercy of the unscrupulous coal barons. He was openly accused by Frank Farrington, himself a rank conservative with a record that would not stand close scrutiny, of receiving hundreds of thousands of dollars from coal operators, for allowing them to run their mines upon a non-union basis.

Now Berry, with a record that is a stench in the nostrils of every honest trade unionist, finally qualifies to lead this new strike breaking aristocracy. He draws a salary as head of the pressman's union and represents the publishers. This is the new method, of the up-to-date employers, of smashing strikes of their employees.

The pressmen's union of New York did not violate any agreement with their employers, this agreement had expired September 1st. They broke a union rule, by not getting the consent of Berry and the National officials, before calling their strike. They had lived through an agreement known as the Manton Award, which had been condemned by every pressman in the country, and lauded by the employers in much the same way as the notorious Landis Award.

They broke the discipline of Berry's dictatorship, this was the excuse needed to smash the union. They knew Berry, and were afraid of his trickery, nevertheless they supplied him with the needed, if rather flimsy, excuse to serve his master, the publishers. They are still on strike, but Berry is combing the country for strike breakers, using members of the union to whip their brother members into line in the interest of the publishers association.

This is the new Labor Aristocracy. This is the most dangerous enemy that labor has to confront.

CICERO, Ill.—"I will see that the defendants get a square deal if they really represent American labor," declares the special prosecutor in the Cicero free speech case. Three members of the Workers' Party, including J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the principal party organ, The Worker, are facing trial after arrest on disorderly conduct charges. Demand for a jury trial caused postponement of the hearing after their arrest Oct. 12. Their disorderly conduct consisted of speaking at an Anti-Fascisti mass meeting in this industrial suburb of Chicago.

The special prosecutor appointed by the police judge is John Christenson of Christenson & Lyon, a Chicago law firm which maintains an office in Cicero. "I am not opposed to any legitimate efforts of labor to better conditions," Christenson declares. "What I want to know is if the speakers are against the government. If they really represent American labor and not something else, the case will probably be settled without any trouble."

Cicero has a large Italian population in which the Citizens' Club has been spreading propaganda for the Fascist movement. The Anti-Fascist alliance has striven up opposition to this movement. The three speakers who were arrested all oppose fascism.

Why the Industrial Registration?

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, as it was announced in The Worker last week, decided to put an Industrial Registration of the membership regularly twice a year. This decision is of utmost importance. It will surely be met with the heartiest support of the entire party not so much because of the discipline as because of conviction that this step is a vital necessity for the future success of our work.

The shaping and the adoption of correct policies depends greatly, if not exclusively, upon the correct knowledge of our strength in the labor movement generally or even within a certain industry, trade or territory. One cannot estimate the strength of the organization without knowing the facts about its membership in addition to its numbers. Mere numbers do not indicate the real strength of the organization. The work of the Party has been immensely hampered because of lack of such correct information of our strength. This is one of the most important reasons why the registration must be made a success at any cost.

But there are many other reasons that prompted the C. E. C. to make the industrial registration a regular and permanent institution of the Party. The Party is at present organized on a geographical basis only. We have not a single "industrial" or "Shop" branch of the Party. In this respect our party is really an exception among the Communist Parties of the entire world. It is a remnant of the old Socialist Party. The time is now overripe for us to make at least a study of this question. It is absolutely essential to determine the possibilities for the organization of Party branches based on shop and industrial lines. There is a splendid opportunity for this in a number of industries, as in the needle trades, or among the coal miners for instance. The C. E. C. up to now was unable even to make a study of the question because of lack of proper information. The Industrial Registration will help the party to analyze the situation with regard to its hands and thus avoid possible mistakes.

The Party has for the last few years an important part in the labor movement of this country. Its influence is growing from day to day. But it would be a great mistake to assume that the Communist movement of this country has capitalism by the throat, and that we can now afford to have an easy sailing. Quite the contrary. The growth of the Party and its influence has steadily succeeded in arousing the fury of the reactionaries. A united front against the communists has been formed by the reactionary officialdom of the American Federation of Labor and by all the open enemies. The Gompers machine has openly joined hands with the employing class and its government agencies. The reaction is concentrating all its energies against every thing honest and progressive in the labor movement. The communists, however, are far from taking full advantage of the possibilities and of their potential forces.

While no definite information is available at this moment, it is certain that even now about 40 or 50 per cent of our membership is not connected with the Trade Union movement. We have made considerable progress during the last year in connecting up our membership with the Trade Unions, but much is left to be done in this field. In this respect the Industrial Registration can hardly be overestimated. A few concrete examples will readily bear this out. An Industrial Registration blank returned to the National Office by one of the branches of Michigan State contains 19 names. Of these only seven are union men. Of the remaining twelve at least seven could join a union with a little effort and assistance on the part of the National District, or even the Local office of the Party. It is needless to say that these seven comrades, if joined to the Trade Unions, would be of greater value to the labor movement of that city. The registration blank of a language branch of a comparatively small city in New England is another illuminating example of the importance of the Industrial Registration. Out of 66 members of that branch, the Registration-blank shows, five are machinists who could easily join a local union. Yet no steps have been taken to have this done despite the fact that in that particular city there are at present no communists in the Machinists' Union. Such a situation would not exist with the Industrial Registration completed and in the hands of responsible Party units.

At a meeting of Branch Industrial Organizers of a large industrial city an organizer of a Ukrainian branch pointed out that the Industrial Registration will result in his branch becoming one hundred per cent "unionized." Only some assistance of the Industrial Organizer in the form of advice was needed to have this achieved. This, perhaps, is an exceptional case, but it nevertheless shows how advantageously the Industrial Registration may be used by the Party.

The above are but a few of the reasons that prompted the C. E. C. to make the Industrial Registration a regular and an important institution of the party. It was necessary to take this step in order to make the Party more efficient and not because of a desire for mere "formalities" and "red tape." It is essential that every member of the Party bears this in mind and assists the National Office to get results with unnecessary waste of time and energy.

Make It More Than a Greeting!

An increased number of workers in the United States will rise to greet Nov. 7th, the Sixth Anniversary of the establishment of Workers' Rule in Russia. Nov. 7, 1917, the greatest day of emancipation in this country, who understand the real significance of the great upheaval that swept czarism away forever, have grown steadily. American labor is also more conscious, this year, of its identity of interest with the Russian revolution. It feels more than ever the cause linked with the world struggle of labor for emancipation.

In the words of Albert F. Coyle, editor of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, in an article in the October issue, giving impressions during a recent trip abroad with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Co-operative National Bank party:

"Out of personal contact and intimate conversations with the leaders of the international labor movement, the conviction was forced upon us that we are near brethren in thought and deeds; that their problems are family problems whether we know it or not; and that in the great task of making the world fit to live in, we ought to carry our share of the load and lend a helping hand."

That comes from the spokesman of one of America's most conservative labor unions. More can be expected from the rank and file of labor. More must be expected. On page one of this issue we show how the Coolidge administration is engineering a new conspiracy against Soviet Russia, thru an immediate attack on Workers' Germany. But American labor must know that during all of the past six years, today more than ever, the United States is an ally of French imperialism in its military ambitions to dominate Europe, involving, if possible, the overthrow of the Russian Soviet Republic. This becomes quickly apparent as one studies the uses to which the Paris statesmen are putting the funds of the French republic, the money that France really owes in war debts and interest to the United States.

The American Funding Commission will report to the next Congress that seven billion dollars are owing to the United States, exclusive of Great Britain's huge debt to this country. Nearly half of this sum, or $3,340,606,376.97 with accrued interest of $576,719,597.87, is due from France. France makes no effort to pay the interest, not to mention the principle.

Imperialist France is not using that half billion of unpaid interest to ease the burden on the backs of her workers. Not one penny of it is spent to better the conditions of labor at home. It is going to bolster up her military machine thruout Europe.

This is shown in the items demanded by the French Budget Commission. A total of $170,000,000 is asked, five years after the ending of the war, $93,500,000 to go to Austria, $50,000,000 to the Little Entente, including such puppets of Paris as Poland, Czechoslovakia, Roumania and Jugoslavia, while $27,500,000 goes to Horthy's white terror in Hungary.

The Chicago Tribune correspondent at Paris cables his paper what this money will be used for. He says that:

"The loan to Hungary will enable that country to improve and enlarge the mammoth Skoda munition works, . . . making the plant bigger than the Krupp's during the war."

This correspondent continues:

"The Schneider syndicate, which controls the Creusot works near Lyon, supplying most of France's armaments, secured the Skoda plant after the armistice and under a new management the Hungarian government recognizes the transfer of the property and agrees to facilitate manufacture and exploitation.

"Consummation of the scheme will give France control over all the munitions industries among its little allies, as the Little Entente will be able to obtain arms and ammunition of every kind, from revolvers and rifles to tanks from the Skoda plant.

"This will make the Eastern allies of France independent of France in the event of trouble with Germany."

Let American labor remember that France is preparing and plotting new war against the workers of Soviet Russia and Germany with money belonging in fact to the workers of the United States who bought the Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps. Frank A. Vanderlip, the Wall Street financier, in his book, "What Next In Europe?" speaks of Europe's debts to the United States:

"When the United States government loaned these sums of money to the Allies, our government expected repayment. At the time the loans were made there was never a suggestion that they should be regarded as part of our contribution to America's war effort. To provide the sums so loaned we sold Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps. The Treasury Department instructed those responsible for the sale of these securities to emphasize the fact that part of the money the Treasury got from American investors was being reloaned to European governments; that those loans would be repaid, and that the interest burden upon our taxpayers would be lightened by interest payments we were to receive from the European debtors."

But no interest has been paid, except that received from Great Britain. The total interest due on $6,970,117,427.33 of loans is now the colossal sum of $1,088,457,478.15. Europe doesn't pay. The American workers, therefore, pay the interest on the Liberty Bonds, bought up by the big capitalists at low figures. They pay in the still existing war taxes, even when they go to "the movies." Every cent that the workers of this country pay means that much more in the treasure chests of France and her continental allies, to prepare for "The Next War!"—the war against the workers of Russia and Germany.

It is too late to recall the vast loans that have been sent to Europe. Bankrupt France cannot be forced to pay. But the workers of the United States can back up their greetings to Soviet Russia, on its Sixth Anniversary, by rallying to the call, "Hands Off Workers' Germany!" A blow struck in aid of Workers' Germany is a blow in defense of Soviet Russia.

Against the efforts of American Wall Street, Capitalism and the Coolidge administration at Washington, to safeguard capitalism in Europe, let America's workers proclaim:

No intervention in Germany!
No loans for war against the German workers!
No munitions for use against the German workers!

Thus will America's workers safeguard the interests of all labor thruout the entire world.

The Sixth Birthday—The Anniversary of Triumph

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL

What better arguments to prove the stability, the irresistible power of workers' rule in the Russian Soviet Republic, on its Sixth Anniversary, Nov. 7, 1923, than the words taken out of the mouths of the enemy!

How sublime is the living, all-conquering truth in the vast morass, a veritable Sargossa Sea of malicious manufactured falsehoods!

Last year Soviet Russia was in the grip of famine and plague; this year she is planning to feed Europe, while the death rate of children in Moscow is lower than at any time in all the days of the Czars!

They have blamed that the power of Communism was weakening, yet, no one instance, they now fear that the whole of the Norwegian labor movement will be won for the Communist Internationals!

They have charged the Russian workers and peasants with being ignorant, illiterate, yet Richard Strauss is invited to Moscow to give symphony concerts! How the truth overlasts! Even in the midst of lies!

For these truths come from the mages of one issue, picked at random, Monday, Oct. 22nd, of the Chicago Tribune, which has shown itself the most bitter of the yellow sheets of the international bankers in capitalism's propaganda war against the young Workers' Republic.

Even on this triumphant Sixth Anniversary of the successful Bolshevik Revolution, when even the emigre counter-revolutionaries have practically given up all hope of the restoration of czarism, the Tribune keeps its editorial guns in action against Russian Soviet Rule. And the ink used is as black as the lies it spreads over its printed pages.

Yet the pages of this publication help furnish the milestones by which to judge the progress made by the workers' and peasants' power in Russia.

On the eve of the Sixth Birthday of the Soviets, let us scan this issue of Oct. 22nd. We will pass by the first few pages, with their news of the developing struggle for power of the German workers, until we come to page five. Here in the first column there flashes upon the headline, "French Put up Millions to Get Russian Grains; Soviet Envoy Wins Aid of Paris Bankers."

From the story tells how the haughty French capitalists are forced to put up 100,000,000 precious francs ($4,500,000) "with the Moscow government as credit for wheat and flax for the coming year." Director Scheinmann, of the Soviet Republic State Bank, tells the Tribune correspondent at Paris, Henry Wales, that "we (the Russians) expect soon to open our own branch" in the United States.

The editorial page always carries some mention of Soviet Russia and this issue is no exception. This editorial deals with the formation of the Russo-British Grain Export Company, organized for the purpose of marketing Russian wheat in England. The Tribune laments as follows:

"It seems that Canada's wheat, Canada's prosperity, and Canada's political relationship with England have been rudely thrust aside by the group of business men composing the new organization. That is because they are business men. They will go into the market where they can make the best deal and the greatest profits. If, as in this case, it happens to be Russia, so much the worse for Canada. So much for the Smuts theory of making the British political commonwealth an economic common wealth."

The Tribune mourns that capitalist greed for profits should force it to aid in developing Soviet Rule for the abolition of all profits. It is this greed that will persist to the end of the days of the capitalist social order.

Yet on page sixteen of the same issue The Tribune seeks to wipe away its tears with a copyright story from John Steele, its correspondent at Christiania, Norway, predicting that the Communists will be unable to hold the Norwegian labor party for the Communist International. The Tribune pins its hopes on Magnussen, "the Socialist leader," the Norwegian Gompers. While The Tribune speculates on Magnussen's aspirations as a white hope of the Norwegians, are buying 900,000 tons of Russian wheat.

And on page seventeen there is a "Tribune Radio" from Vienna, Austria, to the effect that: "The Soviet government has sent an official invitation to Richard Strauss, famous composer and director of the Austrian state opera, to come to Moscow to direct a series of symphony concerts."

Thus the confession is written down. The Tribune, like the rest of the press of those who prey upon mankind, admits in its own columns that it has lied. Six years of lies! And there will be more lies. But the piercing sunlight of truth is breaking thru! But what a struggle it has been! Read what has happened thru these six years:

The Day of Birth.

Nov. 7, 1917.—The Kerensky government fell. The Communists came into power. Soviet Rule was established. Workers not only in Europe, in blood and tears, but thruout the world, hailed "The New Day." The capitalists, true into their Socialist allies, said, "It can't last."

Peace With Germany.

Nov. 7, 1918.—The First Birthday! The treaty of Brest-Litovsk has been signed with the Kaiser; but the Kaiser's end is near, as is the end of "the war to end war." Samuel Gompers is received by the King of England, while John Reed is arrested for making a speech exposing intervention against the First Workers' Republic, an intervention that involved the United States and halted the first efforts at reconstruction under Soviet Rule.

Intervention Is Defeated.

Nov. 7, 1919.—The Second Birthday! All attempts of the Wilson administration, in alliance with European imperialism, to stab the Soviet Republic in the back have failed, also the Soviet Republics in Bavaria and Hungary have been overthrown, and the Spartacist uprisings in Germany have been drowned in blood, the blood of the workers, with the Social-Democrats among the hangmen, with Liebknecht and Luxemburg dead. The Treaty of Versailles is signed—the Death Knell of Capitalism.

The Drive for Trade Relations.

Nov. 7, 1920.—The Third Birthday! Negotiations for trade relations between Soviet Russia and Great Britain are being held by O'Grady and Krassin at Copenhagen. Other nations refuse to recognize Soviet Russia in any way. But the imperialists' iron ring, the cordon sanitaire, about Free Russia is breaking.

Poland's Last Futile Attack.

Nov. 7, 1921.—The Fourth Birthday! The wars of intervention have been fought out victoriously against the allied white hopes—Kolchak, Yudenitch, Denikin, Wrangel and the rest, while American labor is demanding trade relations with the Soviet Republic. American troops mutiny at Murmansk and in Siberia, and are brought home, the Polish White Terror makes a last futile attack and the Kronstadt revolt is quelled. The United States continues to spread Anti-Soviet propaganda, however, while England, Italy, Germany and other European powers maneuver for Soviet trade.

Fighting the Famine.

Nov. 7, 1922.—The Fifth Birthday! Soviet Russia meets with world interplerialism at the Genoa and the Hague conferences, while famine sweeps the Volga Valley, and labor thruout the world rallies to the relief of the starving workers and peasants. Anniversary celebration marked by Fourth World Congress of the Communist International and the first Congress of the Red Internationale of Labor Unions at Moscow. The trial of the social revolutionaries exposes alliance of "Socialists" with the monarchist reaction.

The Final Triumph.

Nov. 7, 1923.—The Sixth Birthday! The famine has been liquidated. The harvest is good. Great exhibition in Moscow shows tremendous progress made in rehabilitation of Russian agriculture. Red Army of 600,000 growing air fleet is protection against invasion and promise of help to revolutionary workers of Western Europe. The First Workers' Republic is far on the road toward economic recovery.

The broad highway is cleared for the march of the workers and peasants under Soviet Rule forward to pure Communism.

History will record this quick recovery of the Russian people, this victory over famine, from the European civil wars, foreign intervention, famine and plague, as the greatest achievement anywhere of mankind in its long struggle upward from slavery to freedom.

This fact should be brought home to the American people, on this 6th Anniversary of the Russian Soviet Republic, that it took the American revolutionists, of 1776, eleven years before they finally adopted their federal Constitution and established a stable government.

Soviet Rule in Russia has had a constitution since the day it was instituted. The Russian Socialist Federated Soviet Republic has stood against the capitalist world, and its fifth anniversary is its Anniversary of Triumph.

What Soviet Rule has accomplished during the past six years is a glorious promise of what it can and will achieve in the brighter days ahead.

Morgan Acts for the U.S.

By JOHN PEPPER

President Coolidge's world conspiracy assumes ever more definite shape. It started as a proposition to achieve world peace, a scheme to make Europe safe for democracy, a plan for saving Germany from starvation.

The Worker" was the first to see thru these phrases and to unmask them as the greatest imperialist plan for restoring capitalism on a world scale, to make Europe safe for a military dictatorship, and to perpetuate wage slavery and starvation in Germany.

American imperialism is now beginning to bring its secrets into the open. The dark, insignificant figure of Coolidge disappeared all of a sudden, and in its place as the swaggering hero on the stage, J. Pierpont Morgan. The greatest capitalist conspiracy began with a bundle of diplomatic notes of Coolidge-Hughes; but the continuation of it is now publicly and openly the checkbook of J. Pierpont Morgan. Coolidge spoke about the good old golden heart of American imperialism which, is breaking at the sight of the terrible situation in Europe. But J. Pierpont Morgan appeared, and tore away the veil of phrases, when lo and behold it became evident that the good old golden heart is nothing but the good old golden vaults of the international banking house of J. Pierpont Morgan.

The people of the United tates thought that the political actor before them is Coolidge, the president of the United States, but they see now with astonishment and fright that he is ransformed into Morgan, the master of Wall Street. In Goethe's drama there is a scene where an humble, whining black poodle joins Faust. Faust pities him and takes him to his study. But the poodle begins to growl. He begins to swell. He becomes as large as a hippopotamus, with fiery eye, terrific tooth, becomes ever more horrible and ever bigger, and fills the whole room, melts suddenly away into a red mist, and then ... appears Mephistopheles, the devil personified. ... ...ter out in fright. This time the Kaiser of ... ...ings of Coolidge over starving Germany, but now it goes with increasing fear that Coolidge has turned into Morgan, that international finance is the kernal of the humble, humanitarian poodle.

Congress or Bankers' Convention?

The United States is a great democracy. Everybody knows, and everybody should be deported or stoned who dares to doubt it—that we have a government of the people, by the people and for the people. Everybody knows, and only criminals and the scum of mankind, such as Bolsheviks question it—that the will of the people of the United States decides the policy of the United States.

But what about this new world conspiracy and entrance into a European entanglement? In 1920 the people of the United States elected a president with seven million majority, and gave him the strictest instructions to keep out of Europe. The elected Congress of the United States voted against entangling alliances.

We do not say that presidential elections are a true expression of the will of the people, or that elected presidents and Congresses tpily represent the people of the United States; but today we have no other forms of expression of the will of the people, and it is sure, if anything is sure, that the overwhelming majority of the people is against the foreign policy of Coolidge and Hughes. Of course, naive persons will say that this is a slap in the face of American democracy.

But these persons are truly naive, for they understand only the written constitution, but not the real, unwritten constitution of our country. These helpless ignoramuses are wondering why, in such a critical period, Congress does not convene in Washington despite the demand of the workers and farmers for a special session of Congress. But they do not perceive that the Congress of the unwritten constitution, the annual convention of the Investment Bankers' Association is just now having its sessions in Washington. If it is true that the people of the United States have declared by a seven million majority against United States imperialism in Europe. Wolves Against Wolves.

It is indeed fortunate for the working class of the whole world and for the future development of mankind that the wolves of the various imperialisms cannot agree.

British and United States imperialisms strive to maintain a unified Germany as a great market for their industrial products. The interest of imperialist France is to dismember Germany, to rob her of the Ruhr region, and to form the greatest steel and coal trust under French rule, dominating all of Europe.

Anglo-American imperialism is whining for help for Germany, in order to save itself from industrial crisis. French imperialism wants to destroy Germany in order to add its industrial hegemony to its own military hegemony in Europe, and to save itself from the ever more threatening financial crisis.

British imperialism wants to restore the German market, for it has one and a half million unemployed, and it fears that the Labor Party will attain to power. United States imperialism wants to keep the German market intact, to give Germany an international loan, because it means thereby to buy off the discontent of the farmers and to postpone the industrial crisis. Imperialist France cannot give in, because France will have general elections in the spring of 1924, and Poincare knows that if he gives in he will be wiped out by the farmer and small business man voting masses.

The ruling big industrialists and big landowners in Great Britain must make every effort to save capitalism in Germany because the cry for a new election is becoming ever mightier, and as the municipal elections show, the Labor Party is constantly advancing, and is menacing conservatives and liberals alike. In the United States the Republican Party, the party of Wall Street, and the Steel Trust view with chattering teeth the elections of 1924, with the growing despair of the farmers and with the inevitable industrial depression.

No World Conference of Imperialist Powers.

The most positive of the New York Leader [illegible] American workers and for the workers of the entire world, if they could unite. If Soviet Russia still living now, it is thanks to the fact that different imperialisms of the big powers could not form a real united front against Soviet Russia. And the only hope now for saving the working class of Germany from destruction and preventing the preparation of a new invasion of Soviet Russia, that the wolves of British, American and French imperialisms will not be able to unite now in a real, strong, united front with common policies.

The New York Leader is proud that it is the newspaper of 500,000 workers; but the New York Leader misleads the workers when it says that a world conference of the various imperialisms of the big powers is in the interest of sanity and peace in the world, and in the interest of the working class. Such a world conference can do nothing else than execute the Treaty of Versailles. But even Lloyd George, one of the authors of the Treaty of Versailles, is forced to admit that the Treaty of Versailles is the basis of the ruin of Germany, and of all of Europe.

The workers and farmers of the United States must understand that our program must be, not the execution of the Treaty of Versailles, but to demand the cancellation of that treaty.

The workers and farmers of America must understand that the cancellation of the Allied debts to the United States at the present moment would mean the greatest help to French and Italian imperialism for maintaining the biggest armies of the world, and that an international loan to Germany at the present moment is nothing but an attempt to save capitalism in Germany and to help the German ruling class to crush the German workers.

The only class-conscious foreign policy of the farmers and workers of the United States is:

Down with the world conference of the wolves of the stock exchange of New York, London, Paris and Rome!

No execution, but cancellation of the Treaty of Versailles!

No new invasion of Soviet Russia, but recognition of the first workers' and farmers' republic!

No help, not a single American dollar for the German military dictatorship in Germany, but help to rob the German proletarians of the eight-hour law!

"RAIC" Venture of "Amalgamated" Is Shown Big Success

(Special to "The Worker")

NEW YORK CITY.—That one important branch of Russian industry is operating very profitably was brought to light this week when the Russian-American Industrial Corporation of 103 E. 14th Street, New York, announced its first dividend of 7 per cent payable to five and a half thousand shareholders.

This corporation, known in the American needle trades as the "RAIC," was launched by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America at the convention in 1922 for the purpose of co-operating with Russia by investing in Russian industry. Last February the corporation advanced several hundred thousand dollars to the All-Russian Clothing Syndicate, Inc., a Russian government syndicate operating 25 clothing factories of all sorts (employing 15,000 workers) and 25 retail stores. The syndicate is able, six months after the first investment by the American corporation, to pay a dividend to the "RAIC" at the rate of 10 per cent per annum, thus demonstrating unusual vigor during that period of operation. On the strength of these profits the "RAIC" has in turn declared its own initial dividend of 3 per cent.

Status of "RAIC."

The RAIC is duly incorporated as an American company under the laws of the state of Delaware, its charter providing for an authorized capital stock of $1,000,000.00, divided into 100,000 shares of par value of $10. These shares have been subscribed in part by Russian sympathizers in almost every state in the Union and in several foreign countries. Most of the stock is held by small subscribers, chiefly labor unionists.

The RAIC agreement with the highest Russian authorities secures its capital investment in Russian in-

Daily Worker Fund Is $42,388

To All Members of the Party and Friends of the Daily Worker:

The fund for the establishment of the "Daily Worker" has reached the total of $42,388. This is the figure on November 6th, with returns from many units of the organization still to be received and the returns from the November 7th celebrations unaccounted for.

It is the decision of the Central Executive Committee of the Party that the "Daily Worker" will be established when $100,000 has been raised.

It would be a hazardous proposition for the Party to undertake to publish the Daily paper with less money than the total of $100,000.

When the campaign for the "Daily Worker" was begun it was announced that if the $100,000 was reached by November 7th, the first edition of the paper would appear on that date. We were, however, unable to mobilize the Party organization quickly enough to secure the necessary funds in time to make the preparations and issue the first paper on November 7th.

Daily To Appear Not Later Than January First.

The funds already collected and in addition the amounts known to be in the hands of the various Party units make it certain that the Communist movement in this country will have a daily paper not later than January 1st. If the whole Party mobilizes its strength and quickly raises the balance of the fund it may be possible to anticipate that date and establish the Daily by December 1st.

Forward to Victory.

The whole strength of the Party must be mobilized during the next month to complete the "Daily Worker" fund. There is no greater task before our Party organization than that of establishing a daily Communist paper in the United States.

Comrades! You have shown by your work during the last two months that you are willing to sacrifice in order to enable the Party to reach its goal of establishing a daily paper for the Communist movement of this country. Now you must put your loins, you must mobilize your strength and you must complete your task. Let us make the total $100.000 by the end of November.

What we have already done shows that we can do it.

We must go forward with new courage, with new strength, to complete our task and achieve this greatest step forward for our movement.

Six Years of Trade Unionism in Russia and U.S.

By EARL R. BROWDER.

One glance at the Russian trade unions gives us a measure of the world-shaking significance of the Proletarian Revolution.

Six years ago unions were outlawed, and but a few thousands of members, in underground organizations, kept the movement alive. Since the Bolsheviks took power, the Russian trade unions have grown to 4,500,000 membership, have built up the greatest educational system in the world, which has liquidated the ignorance of centuries of Csarism, have established the Unions as directors of industry, thru the government trusts and workers' control, have participated in establishing the strongest government in Europe, the first workers' and farmers' government in the world. During this time the wreckage of the world war, worse in Russia than anywhere else, has been cleared away, and the Russian workers are now back to a living standard higher than before the war, the only country in Europe in which this is true. Truly this is a marvelous forward stride, and the Russian trade unions are but beginning their great work.

In the United States, in spite of the great material wealth of the country, and in spite of the industrial revival, the trade unions have been losing ground. More than a million members have left the ranks in the past two years. The official trade union press, is given over to "red hunts," dress patterns, and financial reports. The power of the unions has been broken in the steel, packing, railroad shops, and other industries. Everywhere the unions are fighting for their lives. The workers are completely shut out from the government, except thru sycophantic "old-party hacks who carry union cards in order the better to fool the union members. The American Federation of Labor has gone on record against amalgamation and the labor party. Truly this is a miserable showing. Soviet Republic, the stronger than ever and continually going forward to new conquests. In Soviet Russia and its power lies the guarantee of the near success of the revolutionary movement of the rest of the world.

All militant spirits in the American labor movement who want to see Labor in this country assume its right-ful place of power and dignity, as the master of society, join together in rejoicing that the Russian Workers, starting the seventh year of the Soviet Republic, are stronger than and the Gompers bureaucracy is still in power.

All militant spirits in the American labor movement who want to see Labor in this country assume its right-

Develop Alliance of City and Farm Labor in Michigan

By STANLEY BOONE.

(Federated Staff Correspondent.)

DETROIT.—The growth of a close alliance between farm organizations and labor unions in Michigan has been shown in two instances at the meeting of the farmers' Michigan State Grange at Muskegon.

The grange is planning a conference to be held soon to lay plans for a campaign for state-wide socialized electric power development, with both water power and steam. The plan will call for new power plants and for the acquisition by the public of those now operating, the plants to be co-ordinated along the lines proposed by the Public Ownership League of America. Invitations to attend the conference will be issued to all the farmers' organizations, municipalities and labor unions in the state, a special committee announced.

The conference is expected to propose a state-wide survey under state supervision and at state expense, to resort to condemnation proceedings wherever necessary in the acquisition of private power plants; this in connection of existing municipally owned power plants and the extension of power lines to rural sections, the co-ordination of the state movement with the movement of the Public Ownership League of America.

Frank Wade, president Michigan Federation of Labor, invited the Michigan State Grange to join the state federation in an effort "to put desirable candidates in public office and back farmer-labor legislation." As a result, according to A. B. Cook, Grange master, a committee may represent the grange at a coming convention of the Progressive Voters' League, a nonpartisan political organization.

OTTAWA.—Employment in Canada showed a slight falling off at the opening of October, according to returns made to the dominion bureau of statistics.

...r of Seventh Year in Soviet Russia Sees Growing Sentiment for U. S. Recognition in 68th Congress

By JAY LOVESTONE.

...ne of the most important issues to be made by the Sixty-Eighth Congress, ...ened on Dec. 5th, will be the question of resuming trade relations with ...ussia. There are already ...

...There are all sorts of rumors afloat in Washington as to what the Administration is planning to do regarding Russia. Here and there it is whispered ...at that the old Hughes-Gompers policy of dangling Russia in ...

...ront of the Sixty-Seventh Congress much weight has been given to the ...ews of Russian-American relations. The fact that England has ...ranted a grain-trading corporation ...ade with Russia, the intended ...ivity of France in trade relations ...h the Soviet Republic, as shown by ...great impression made by the ...an trip of Herriot and the advo...y of recognition by M. Desmenzie, ...of the leaders of the Chamber of ...ce, and the increasing interest ...American business men in Russian ...elopments, are hastening the for...ation of a definite American policy ...ards Soviet Russia.

Fall for Soviet Recognition.

Last summer saw many American ...ressmen and senators visit the ...iet Republic in order to get a ...st hand view of the actual condi...ons. One of the most prominent ...the visitors was ex-Secretary of the In...rior Albert B. Fall. Mr. Fall is ...ely influential in the innermost ...cles of the Republican Administra...n. Ex-Secretary Fall was a per...nally close friend of the late Pres...dent Harding and many looked upon ...s visit to Soviet Russia as a sort ...f semi-official attempt by President ...arding to get a line on the basis for ...new policy towards the Workers' ...d Peasants' Government.

Amongst close students of governmental affairs at the Capital the consensus of opinion is that since Hughes has addressed his last note, denouncing Soviet Russia, there has been no event of greater importance and effect tending for the resumption of friendly normal relations between the United States and the Soviet Government than the fact that Mr. Fall, upon his return from Russia, has definitely declared himself for an immediate de facto political pact between America and Russia.

Mr. Fall's position has been particularly helpful to the advocates of recognition in that, his close connections with the Administration not only to counterbalance the harmful influence of Secretary of State Hughes, but also to check the ...ve of the attack persistently waged against the Workers' Republic by Mr. Gompers.

Look for Strong Fight in Congress.

Unless unforseen circumstances intervene, there is every likelihood for a strong fight being made on the floor of Congress for a renewal of the trade treaty with and recognition of the Russian government.

With the exception of Congressman Britten, all the legislators who openly are for the resumption of trade relations with or for the complete recognition of the Soviet Government. Amongst the ardent advocates of Russian recognition in this country are Senator Robert La Follette, who is in a very influential position in the Senate, Senator Wheeler of Montana, Senator Shipstead of North Dakota, Congressman Frear of Wisconsin and Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York.

Senator King of Utah, Senator McKellar of Tennessee, and Congressman Beedy of Maine, who have all been in Soviet Russia last summer, have come out four-square for the resumption of trade relations between the two countries.

But there are other senators and congressmen who have not had the opportunity to see the Soviet Government at work and who are very sympathetic to a resumption of friendly dealings between the United States and Russia. In this group are found such powerful figures in the Senate as William E. Borah of Idaho, and Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania. The recent winning fight of Senator Pepper to Russian recognition is especially significant and helpful because the high standing the Pennsylvania Senator has in conservative circles. It is even believed by many who are in intimate touch with the Administration that Senator Pepper will be the one to introduce a resolution for Russian recognition at the coming sessions of Congress.

What Will Congress Do?

More and more is becoming evident to many of our legislative solons that the only way to prevent a complete collapse of the American market, that the only possible relief for the farmers, and that the most effective way of preventing a new and more serious depression in this country is by recognition of the Russian Republic.

There are three distinct proposals for Russian-American relations that the Sixty-Eighth Congress will be confronted with. One group will stand for the complete recognition of the Soviet Government; a second group will fight for a resumption of trade relations. The Administration group will be one of signing the terms of this question and will very likely take the form of an attempt to send a governmental commission to look over the situation in Russia and present a report, which should serve as a basis of American policy. It is not likely that the arguments of the first two groups will fall for this year. Whether they will succeed or even in getting any recognition or trade relations one cannot say at this date. But it is certain that the enemies of Russian recognition in the Sixty-Eighth Congress will have a hard job ahead of them in December, Gompers Anitas Not Talented Any.

In Washington the actions of the American Federation of Labor on the question of Soviet Russia are not taken seriously. As a rule the Senators and Congressmen are expert in reading across recognition and trade relations one cannot say at this date. But it is certain that the enemies of Russian recognition in the Sixty-Eighth Congress will have a hard job ahead of them in December.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party Sends Open Letter to All Chicago's Labor Unions

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party has issued the following statement in reply to the misrepresentations circulated concerning what took place at the convention held July 3rd, at which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was organized:

"To All Labor Unions In Chicago:
Dear Sirs and Brothers:

Since the convention on July 3rd, 4th and 5th at which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was organized, continuous attacks have been made on the delegates who participated in the organization of our party at this convention, and particularly upon the delegates of the Workers Party of America.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party has remained silent under these attacks up to this time, hoping that the breach in the united front of labor could be healed and not wishing to put further difficulties in the way of achieving this aim.

In spite of this the misrepresentation in regard to this convention, and of the policy of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has continued, and therefore the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has determined to make this statement in regard to the convention and the present policy to organized labor in the City of Chicago.

Since the actions of the delegates of the Workers Party have been particularly under attack the Federated Farmer-Labor Party has requested a statement of the facts which will be furnished with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party's request to make a statement of its history of the convention. It has received the following reply:

Statement of the Workers Party of America.

The charge that the Workers Party broke faith with the Conference for the Farmer-Labor Party at the July 3rd convention is a misrepresentation of the facts in connection with the Progressive Political Action Conference. The truth is that the Farmer-Labor Party representatives, after making an agreement with the Workers Party left the Workers Party in the lurch and betrayed the convention.

When the Farmer-Labor Party, early in the spring of 1922, proposed to withdraw from the Conference for Progressive Political Action the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party sent a strong recommendation urging that this action be not taken. In spite of the recommendation of the Workers Party, the Farmer-Labor Party withdrew from the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action, and upon motion of John Fitzpatrick, issued a call for the July 3rd convention to unify all labor political forces.

The Workers Party received an invitation from the Farmer-Labor Party to send delegates to this convention and accepted this invitation. It did not only accept the invitation but in three all its energy into the work. Toward this end it also contributed a considerable amount of money to the Farmer-Labor Party to help it in the work of enabling it to print and mail invitations to this convention.

At the time the call for the convention was issued until the convention itself there was the closest cooperation between the Workers Party and the Farmer-Labor Party. Numerous conferences were held at the request of the Farmer-Labor Party. At a conference just prior to the convention was arranged for the purpose of arranging the plan of action in the convention.

In compliance with a request of the Farmer-Labor Party the Workers Party sent an official delegation to Chicago which met with representatives of the Farmer-Labor Party and discussed the work of the convention in detail.

At this conference it was agreed that if the convention was large enough (and delegates representing a half-million workers was agreed upon as being large enough) a Federated Farmer-Labor Party should be organized and an Executive Committee elected at the convention and certain resolutions containing the principles of the party should be adopted.

The Workers Party did not desire to assume a position of leadership in the convention. It was willing and urged that the representatives of the Farmer-Labor Party take the leadership of the new organization and that the Workers Party would give its support to make the work a success.

The Workers Party received no suggestion that any agreement arrived at in the conference referred to above was not to be carried out until the time of the convention. Later, however, it found that John Fitzpatrick had gotten cold feet. It seemed that John Fitzpatrick feared the same machine Company machine would take against him in the trade union movement if he went through with the program which had been agreed to.

In relation to the convention itself it had been agreed between the C. C. of the Workers Party and the National Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party that only bona fide Farmer-Labor delegates should be seated in the preliminary convention of that Party. This agreement was in the form of a letter to the National Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, which was agreed to by the Farmer-Labor Party.

In spite of this agreement the credentials committee of the Farmer-Labor Party convention brought in a report to seat all delegates and during the discussion an effort was made by the machine which had split the Workers Party that only bona fide Farmer-Labor Party delegates should be seated in this preliminary convention.

In spite of the other agreements and arrangements in spite of all the efforts of the Workers Party to secure the democratic functioning of the convention, Fitzpatrick and his group effected control of the convention.

The Workers Party, realizing that it could build a united front of labor politically and then get cold feet and wanted to back out, decided to go home with out anything being done. They were ready to sacrifice the labor party before they would betray the convention.

The Workers Party could not be a part of such a betrayal. It was compelled therefore, to withdraw its representatives leaving it in the lurch and repudiating their agreement to offer a program for the convention and this program was adopted.

If there was any split at this convention it was not a split caused by the Workers Party. If there was a betrayal, it was not a betrayal by the Workers Party. The split and betrayal were the work of Fitzpatrick and the Farmer-Labor group.

Fraternally,

Central Executive Committee
Workers Party of America
C. E. Ruthenberg, Exec. Sec'y.

While conveying this statement of facts about the July 3rd convention the Federated Farmer-Labor Party at the same time desires to present to the organized workers of this city a program to build a united front of labor politically in the city of Chicago.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party would have the right to demand support for itself on the greatest possible expression of the solidarity of labor politically in the city of Chicago. It is, however, willing to sacrifice any selfish aims for the purpose of forming a united political action of labor and it proposes that the labor organizations of Chicago send delegates on receipt of this statement to a conference for the formation of a united labor political party in Chicago to which there shall be united the Trade Unions, Farmer-Labor Party, Workers Party, the Socialist Party, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the Proletarian Party, the Socialist Labor Party.

It urges upon the labor organizations of Chicago a campaign of education to win the support of all existing groups for the formation of such a united political party.

Every labor union in Chicago should pass resolutions in favor of such action and send them to the Chicago Federation of Labor.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party stands as the exponent of such a united front.

Fraternally yours,
Federated Farmer-Labor Party
Joseph Manley, Nat. Sec'y.

Add to Big List of Sixth Soviet Birthday Meetings

Such tremendous response has greeted The Daily Worker Campaign Committee's plans for celebration of the Sixth Birthday of the Russian Revolution, that additions are still being made to the list of scores of mass meetings at which workers all over the country are gathering this year, hailing the triumph of the Workers' and Farmers' government, voicing its counter-revolution, intervention, famine, pestilence and the economic crisis.

Just as the Russian workers have turned from the more spectacular struggle of warfare to the tasks of the construction of industry and cultural life, so do America's workers on the sixth anniversary of the assumption of power by the Russian Communists, turn their best efforts to the most important task of the working class in carrying on the struggle for the same ends sought by their comrades of Russia.

The most important task before America's workers today is the establishment of a great Communist daily paper of national circulation which will speak the message of the Communist International. Recognizing that the working class of America which, on this November, hails the triumph of the Soviet Republic, will dedicate its best efforts to the accomplish the task of establishing THE DAILY WORKER, the Daily Worker Campaign Committee has arranged scores of meetings all over America in celebration of the anniversary of the Russian Revolution.

Later meetings in the larger cities are listed below. Every worker in whose locality a meeting is to be held is urged to attend and to bring other workers. Make the occasion memorable! Come out in thousands! Long live Soviet Russia! Hail to THE DAILY WORKER!

Organize Italian Workers.

J. Louis Engdahl, Antonio Presti and Mario Giordano recently addressed the members of the Northwestern Terra Cotta Club, consisting mostly of Italian workers employed by the Northwestern Terra Cotta Company, and the prospects are good for a strong Italian Branch of the Workers Party in this section of Chicago.

Greeting the Seventh Year!

There are 5,500 workers in this country, greeting the Seventh Year of Russian Soviet Rule, who have real proof of the growing productivity of industry under the First Workers' Republic.

These are the 5,500 workers who put their dollars into the Russian American Industrial Corporation, organized by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union to help reconstruct the Russian clothing industry.

The "RAIC" announces that the first annual three per cent dividend will be paid to these 5,500 shareholders, proof "to doubting Americans not only that one branch of industry in Soviet Russia is on a sound basis, but that Russian industries generally can 'deliver the goods.'"

It is safe to state that few of those 5,500 believers in Soviet Russia expected, or cared for the three per cent dividend. They looked upon their purchase of stock as a contribution to the strengthening and extending of Workers' Rule. We are sure that these working class investors will use their dividends as part of new purchases of shares in the "RAIC," so that the first million dollars' worth of stock will soon be disposed of, thus materially extending the laudable efforts of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union in aid of their Russian comrades in the needle trades.

One way to help Soviet Russia greet its Seventh Year is to support the "RAIC" of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Communist Children Demand Hands Off Workers' Germany

By NAT KAPLAN.

For the first time in the history of the Communist Movement in America, we can count on the support of a closely knit Communist Children's Organization in our major political campaign.

The Young Workers League Junior (Children's) Section is now organized in 15 cities and has 1,000 children in its ranks.

Because the organization is based on the principle of a combination of Communist Educational Activity, with the immediate participation of the child in the class struggle, this organization was in a position to immediately respond to the slogan of "Hands Off Workers' Germany," issued jointly by the Workers Party, the Trade Union Educational League and the Young Workers League of America.

The program of action to be carried out by these young rebels is:

(a) Discussion in the Children's Groups. Explanation of "Hands Off Workers' Germany" campaign.

(2) Mass meetings to be arranged (invitations to all working class parents—the children and group leaders will act as speakers.

(3) Street Systematic agitation within the "Capitalist Public School," which will assume the following character:

(a) Interrupting invited speakers at assembly meetings if they touch on the German situation and advancing the slogan: "Sending munitions to Germany means the murdering of the German workers' children."

(b) Mass exits at assembly meetings will follow the issuance of the slogan.

(c) The Public Schools will be flooded with the "Young Comrade," the children's magazine. Each issue will deal specifically with this campaign.

(d) At occasions when teachers call for the cheering of "certain honorable gentlemen," this will be counteracted with the cry of "Three cheers for the German Revolution."

(e) Leaflets to be issued soon by the party will be tacked on all bulletin boards, etc., in the school.

(f) The children upon their own initiative will chalk the sidewalks in front of school buildings with such slogans as: "American children, the bosses of this country are sure to send munitions and guns to help shoot down the workers' children of that country. Will you stand for it?"

(g) Noon time meetings will be arranged by the children in front of the schools and the children themselves will act as speakers at these meetings.

(h) All the Communist children will wear a "Hands Off Workers' Germany" tag to be printed soon by the Young Workers League.

(i) If large masses of the children within the Public Schools will be rallied round these issues the question of school strikes will be considered. All such cases will be worked out in close co-operation with the National Junior Department of the Young Workers League.

(4) Junior Groups exist in eight ports in this country. In such towns special days will be set aside for the distribution of party leaflets among the longshoremen, sailors, etc.

(5) House to house leaflet distribution will also be an order of the campaign.

Working Class Parents! Rally round and support the Communist Children in their defiance of the Capitalist Educational System and Capitalist intervention in the German Revolution!

T. U. E. L. Supports "Daily" Drive

The following letter of instructions to the membership of the Trade Union Educational League has been issued over the signature of the T. U. E. L. National Committee and printed in the League organ—"The Labor Herald:

Join the "Daily Worker" Boosters.

The Daily Worker in Chicago, pledged to fight for the program of the Trade Union Educational League, was greeted by a resolution at the Second General Conference, Sept. 1-2, which pledged our wholehearted support to raise a $100,000.00 fund to establish The Daily Worker."

It is now the task of all members and sympathizers of "The League" to put this resolution into effect. This can best be done thru the following methods:

1. Each member of the League should subscribe to at least one share of stock.

2. Each local general group and industrial group of the League should send delegates to the City Committee in each center which has charge of the campaign.

3. League delegates to Daily Worker City Committee should assist in forming a trade union sub-committee, the duty of which shall be to make a survey of the trade unions in their locality, to organize an intensive campaign to sell stock to all sympathizers, and to prepare a general campaign to sell stock to the unions themselves.

We issue this statement in the full confidence that every member of the League will work with unceasing energy and determination to make The Daily Worker campaign a complete success and, especially, to develop the full support of friendly trade unions.

Signed: National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League, S. T. Hammersmark, J. W. Johnstone, Earl R. Browder, Benjamin Gitlow, Tim Buck, M. Obermeier, and William Z. Foster, secretary.

Local No. 39 of Amalgamated Has Own Open Forum

The reactionaries and masters have been wise in trying to assure the masses that they will do the thinking for the masses and that they need not trouble themselves. There is a good reason for their doing so. It has been found that when one has learned to think about any subject they do not stop with that. Their brains get used to action, and on one can tell where it will allow itself to creep into for exercise.

Until recently the leaders of the Labor Movement had a hard time in coaxing the masses to take advantage of whatever education was afforded them, although same was meagre, and every effort was made by the reactionaries to palm it off on hoodlum colors. However, after a little start was made plans and fields had to be extended more and more, and today we find that the masses are not satisfied with just that which the leaders of the movement are providing for them, they want more, and go about it themselves to get it, and better than all they even have their own plans and ideas.

It has also been proven that one thought fosters another, and many thinkers are sometimes left in dismay for lack of proper and full information. The people want to know the fables and machines in the Chicago factories have found in their thinking that things are not as they should be, and different ideas and incident in their minds regarding the various topics and problems of the day.

In order that these questions should be answered so that things will adjust themselves in their proper places and order in the minds of the workers, which will permit them to have a clear mind, Local No. 39 Local 89 has arranged to conduct an open forum for the season where people are active in and authorities on the movements and topics in question will be invited to talk, after which the people from the floor will be permitted to talk and discuss the questions of the evening.

Meetings have been arranged for every second and fourth Friday of the month for ten meetings. At the first meeting which will take place Nov. 9th, 1923, John Collins will talk on the Socialist Party. The other speakers who have already consented to talk are Chas. Ruthenberg, on the Workers' Party; Emmet Flood on the American Federation of Labor; Vernon Smith on the I. W. W.; and William Z. Foster on the Trade Union Educational League.

Other speakers that we are desirous of having during this season, and whom we feel sure will help us out if it all possible are Leo Wehrle of the Side Issues of the Labor Movement; Wm. M. Leiserson, is there Justice in the Labor Machinery; Irvin St. John Tucker on Religion and Labor; Joseph Schlossberg on a General Survey of the Labor Movement, and our President Sidney Hillman on the Amalgamated.

All members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America regardless of what local they belong to are invited to attend these meetings. We wish the members that are interested would remember the dates: Every second and fourth Friday of the month, at the Ashland Auditorium Room 237.

Garment Workers Disregard Orders To Oust Militants

While the tactics of the leaders of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union are becoming more despicable in the eyes of the rank and file they will not succeed unless they look upon them with envy and an irrepressible desire for emulation. In this battle against the New York Local 350, the kleaglies (or is it klowns) who make up the executive board of the workers' union of New York, the seven members who are said to belong to the League. These seven have practically nothing to do and must appear before the executive board and give an account of themselves, with the possibility of being ousted unless they prove to the complete satisfaction of the executive board morons that they have not the slightest independence thought from the time they were chromosomes until today.

If these misguided bureaucrats think that they can stop the wave of progressivism by terrorization and an endless series of suspensions and fines, they will find out when it is too late to take another bite from the pie—counter that a disciplined membership cannot be ridden in a high manner forever. The end of their regime is coming—and sooner than they imagine.

In New York, a meeting of Local 350 was held to take up the question of the expulsions was a broken up by the reactionaries with Bernard Shane, chairman of the local, at the head of the gang. M. Rubin, a well-known progressive, was refused entrance into the hall by a group of police stationed at the door in advance. It is interesting to note that Shane was elected to office with the direct aid of the progressives, but has now been roped into line by the machine and is traveling the same filthy rut. Shane is an anarchist and does not recognize the State except when police are needed to hinder the "immigration of enemy aliens" into a meeting hall. Shane is a brother anarchist to Yanofsky, the editor of the official organ of the International, "Justice," whose weekly page of venom against the progressives is the disgrace of the progressive movement.

In Philadelphia, a number of bootlickers on the executive committee of the present local were prevailed upon to expel nine of the most active union members without trial by the membership. All of the nine were among the most energetic in union affairs, having given the best that was in them, some of them for 15 and 20 years, to organize the needle workers. Their sole crime consisted in membership in the Trade Union Educational League.

Open Forum in Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Wis., is having open forum meetings every Sunday night, 3 p. m., at Miller's Hall (second floor), 8th and State Streets. Admission free. Next Sunday, Nov. 11, the Open Forum will be addressed by Comrade J. Louis Engdahl, Editor of "The Worker," the official organ of the Workers Party. He will speak on the subject "What Does Communism Offer to the Workers."

Our Literature Department

Nicholas Dozenberg, Director.

It is contemplated, for establishing closer connections with the literature agents of the party organizations, Labor unions and individual readers, to discuss, through the columns of "The Worker," the problems of literature sales, announcements of new literature published or anything that would promote literature sales and distribution.

This column will not be open only for the literature director. Far from it. Our D. O.'s, secretaries, speakers, organizers, literature agents and committees and readers of this paper are invited to send in contributions for publication. Let us tell each other what brings success in literature sales and why the many failures and discouragements. It is expected of course that all those interested in this most important question, particularly literature agents, will follow this column from week to week. We are certain the benefit will be mutual. There will be announcements of special sales, new books or pamphlets, reduction in prices, etc. To clip this column from the paper and to file it for future reference, is not a bad idea.

Hereafter Literature Department will be very stringent about extending credit. There is $35,000 outstanding on account for literature due the Literature Department. This condition cannot be allowed to continue, and obvious reasons. All concerned must at once square up old accounts and make arrangements To Remit With order.

How About This?

According to the announcements in the Labor Press, there are a large number of meetings being held weekly, addressed by the different D. O's, organizers and special speakers, but hardly any coming to the current literature has come in. Who knows why not?

J. Louis Engdahl will speak on "The Class Struggles in America," Nov. 18, 3 P. M. at Middle Hall, 3142 S. Halsted St., Chicago, Ill.

Robert Minor, Editor of Liberator, will speak on "Why Every Worker Should be a Communist and Join the Party," Monday November 19, 8:30 P. M. at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted St., Chicago, Ill.

Jay Lovestone will speak on "Who Owns the Congress," on Wednesday, Nov. 21, 8:30 P. M., at Emmet Memorial Hall, Taylor St. & Ogden Ave., Chicago, Ill.

...cking Murders of Japanese Labor Leaders by Army Officers Are Revealed in Military Trial

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Rumors of revolts on the part of Koreans and socialists trickled out of Japan following the earthquake. Next came reports of the wholesale murder of "rebels" by the military. The excuse for this murderous policy was the disturbed state of affairs. The real reason that the radicals had designed for a Soviet Republic ten minutes after the first shocks from the earthquake were felt. They were not blamed for the seriously disturbance, which is somewhat remarkable, however, there was a method in this shocking lying.

Owing to the strict censorship and the willingness of most of the capitalist correspondents to assist the Japanese authorities in maintaining a news blackout, the outside world, the true nature of the revolting murders did not reach us until the military trial of Captain Amakasu took place on Oct. 8. The mantle of silence could no longer hide the tragic story and a tale rivalling in horror the blackest deeds of the most notorious murderers in history was revealed when the army captain's confession of how he strangled two distinguished radicals and a young boy was made public.

CAPTAIN AMAKASU,
The militarist monster who murdered Japanese radicals.

The victims of this fiend's wrath were Osugi Sakae, a radical writer, his wife, Ito Noe, and the man's nephew, Sosaburo Tachibana, who was born in Portland, Oregon, in April, 1917. The triple murder was participated in by the police, who helped the captain wrap the bodies in matting and hurl them into an earthquake-wrecked well.

The Japanese military authorities suppressed newspapers for the first mention of the case. Besides this gruesome atrocity, great numbers of Koreans, socialists and new-thought democrats were slaughtered.

Only when the trial began were some of the restrictions raised. It is obvious that Amakasu's confession is an attempt to save the face of the Japanese General Staff, under whose direction the killings were carried out.

Japan is shocked over the revelations contained in the strangler's confession. Amakasu was aided by Sergeant Major Mori, who held the victims' legs while the other brute gripped the throat, his two legs astride the victims at the waist. That a tempered sentence and eventual freedom for the criminals is indicated by the official version of the confession is the opinion in Tokyo. Amakasu is given credit for worthy motives with her, but he did not assist me with the strangulation.

"The boy had become familiar with me in the course of my visits. The motor car end took to me, even after my arrival at the government police station. He's joke-mated my companions if any one of them would like to adopt him. Shortly before the arrangements of the affair had come up to me and I shut him up in the next room, telling him to wait there a little time.

"When Ito Noe uttered her groans and struggled, the boy heard the noise and began to make an outcry. After Ito Noe was dead I entered the next room and strangled him to death, also winding a piece of cord about his neck. The boy uttered no sound, and no one was standing by when I killed him.

"The killing of Osugi and the two others was not committed on my authority as head of the gendarmerie branch office, but was carried out by me as an individual, as I thought it necessary for the safety of the Empire. It is my hope that I alone may be punished for the killing."

and the belief that the death of the radicals would be good for the Empire. How silent our capitalist newspapers have been on this atrocity! How they would have gloated over such a juicy morsel had it come from out the confines of Soviet Russia!

The Confession.

After relating how the victims were apprehended with the aid of police spies and then taken to the police station, the murderer's confession continues:

"There they were led upstairs to two rooms that were not in use and taken into the room formerly used by the head of the gendarmerie. Here I gave them supper. At 8 p. m. Sergt. Maj. Mori took Osugi alone to another unused room and began his examining Osugi. I indicated as I entered the door behind Osugi, who was seated in a chair, answering the questions being propounded.

Describes His Crime.

"I immediately grasped his neck with my right forearm, seized his right wrist with my left hand, and pulled him backward. Osugi fell on the floor. Putting my right knee on his back, I strangled him by a jujitsu hold. Osugi, raising both hands, was in great agony, but expired in some ten minutes. Then I wound a piece of cord about his neck and laid him there. While being strangled Osugi uttered no cry whatever.

"The Sergt. Maj. Mori, while he was examining Osugi, I indicated as I entered my purpose to kill Osugi. While I was doing so Mori sat quietly in the chair, but before expiring Osugi moved his legs in the last struggle to overcome death. Mori, at my request, came over and held his legs until the muscles relaxed and the end had come.

"About 9.30 p. m. I entered the room where Ita Noe was, and found her seated on a chair, her right elbow resting on a desk near the wall and with her back toward the entrance. This made it difficult to strangle her immediately. Walking about the room, I said to her: 'Martial law has been proclaimed. You think it is a foolish step, do you not?' She smiled, but did not answer. 'To you soldiers may appear fools.' She replied: 'People say all sorts of things, Mr. Soldier, do they not?'

Strangles Woman.

"While thus conversing I approached and strangled her to death in the same manner as Osugi. Owing to the disadvantageous position in which she was sitting, I had some difficulty in choking her. She groaned a few times, struggled, and scratched my left wrist, but she, too, expired in about ten minutes. After winding a piece of cord about her neck, I left the corpse in the room. While I was talking with her Mori also entered the room and, I believe, exchanged a few

Fitzpatrick Has Hard Time Straddling Labor Party Issue

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

Two significant events have taken place during the past few days that have thrown a flood of light on the role of Fitzpatrick and Nockels. After a careful study of developments that have taken place within the Farmer-Labor Party and its sponsor, the Chicago Federation of Labor, we are convinced that

FITZPATRICK

The national committee of the Farmer-Labor Party has refused to oust National Secretary J. G. Brown charged with being too friendly to the Communists, if not actually under their domination.

SECOND—The Illinois Federation of Labor, elected by the Nov. 4th meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, went along with the Olander-Nelson group in upholding the Gompers slate of Democratic and Republican candidates in the judicial election, Nov. 6th, thus definitely repudiating their stand for independent political action.

The peculiar situation in which John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, is placed, is shown by the fact that he voted for retaining Secretary Brown in the Farmer-Labor Party, thus breaking with the Rodrigues-Earnest anti-Communist group, while in the federation meeting he repudiated the Farmer-Labor Party policies altogether. It was a straddle that Fitzpatrick failed to defend. In the federation he did not even defend his espousal of the cause of old party judicial candidates. His chief contention was that William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, who led the fight for the "Labor Party," had gone wrong at the Chicago Conference that organized the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

It was this Fitzpatrick who withdrew from the Johnston-Keating-Stone Conference for Progressive Political Action, claiming it was "scab and dual." Fitzpatrick now charges that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is "scab and dual." But Fitzpatrick has endorsed the candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties, repudiating his own Farmer-Labor Party. So that Fitzpatrick, who scabs on his own party and splits the Farmer-Labor Party—would have the workers believe that in the judicial elections in Chicago, Nov. 6th, the Labor Party forces are "scab and dual" to the two old Wall Street parties. This is a position, born of hysteria, that cannot find a considerable response among intelligent workers, who want their own—an anti-capitalist party.

The situation within the Farmer-Labor Party has been forced by the most reactionary elements, both the attack on Secretary Brown and the espousal of the candidacies of the old party selection, the latter move being headed by the Gompers' Labor Committee on Injunctions, of which Fitzpatrick is chairman.

Thru a long trickle, directed mostly against Foster, the Trade Union Educational League and the Communists, Secretary Victor Olander, of the Illinois Federation of Labor, told the Chicago Federation delegates that the Gompers' committee was trying to defeat the injunction judges, Dennis E. Sullivan and Jesse Holdom. But he failed to show that any of the other Democratic and Republican candidates were any better than Sullivan and Holdom. In fact, admitting that he didn't know a single one among them all.

It is peculiar that the capitalist press endorsed the Gompers-Fitzpatrick-Olander slate. The Hearst American is for 11 of the Gompers slate, the "open shop" Daily News is for 12 of them, while the labor baiting Tribune also supports 11 of them.

It is after having formed this black alliance, after having joined this united front against independent working class political action, that Secretary Olander viciously and deliberately tried to becloud the issue by a far-fetched effort to tie Foster's attack on the Gompers' slate, with the attack on the labor movement by Charles G. Dawes, the organizer of the Illinois "Fascisti," known as the "Minute Men of the Constitution," also head of the Central Trust Company, one of Chicago's biggest financial institutions. Foster ably replied, when he said:

"If Mr. Dawes agrees with me one per cent, he agrees with Mr. Olander 100 per cent."

Foster and Dawes both want all power, but Foster wants it for the working class; Dawes for the capitalist class. Olander fights every step to win workers' rule, thus proving the best ally of Mr. Dawes.

But Olander's red smoke screen, that hypnotized the labor officialdom at Decatur, has been powerless before the rank and file delegates of the Chicago Federation, one of whom declared that Olander's speech had persuaded him to join with the Communists.

In their frantic efforts to bolster up their shaky position, in support of the bosses' candidates, the Olanders and Nelsons tried to claim that their position was no attack on independent political action. That is what Olander declared at Decatur, but Olander wired the story of the reactionary victory in the Illinois Federation's Convention to the American Federation of Labor Convention at Portland, and it was used to defeat the "Labor Party" there. This is a double-cross argument that is also losing its power, along with attempted character assassination and cheap personalities.

We cite one example—Judge William E. Gemmill—of the type of judges that is sponsored by the Gompers-Olander-Fitzpatrick policy. During the struggle of the Stockyards' Workers, in Chicago, the Stockyards' Labor Council secured the removal of Judge Gemmill, charged with being a packers' judge, from the municipal court at 48th Place and S. Halsted St. The others are no better, no worse—all sworn to uphold the anti-labor bosses' rule.

The Workers Party, against the old party candidates, urged support of the candidates of the Socialist Party, the only anti-capitalist candidates in the field, neither the Farmer-Labor Party nor the Workers Party having put up candidates.

Yet it was the Socialist elements that played an even more pitiable role in the federation meeting, than even Fitzpatrick or Olander. Delegate Barney Berlyn, instead of speaking for the Socialist ticket, used his time attacking the Communists, as did Anton Johannson, sometimes known as an anarchist, philosophical or otherwise. This completed the united front against Independent working class action.

Barney Berlyn said the Chicago Federation had no power to direct workers how to vote, and Olander agreed with him. The anti-Communist front united in proclaiming that only Moscow wanted the old party Socialist judicial candidates defeated.

John C. Flore, of the Carpenters' Union, returned Socialist and also Socialist candidate, said not a word for Farmer-Labor Party. "The New Majority," official organ of the Farmer-Labor Party, as well as of the Chicago Federation of Labor, did not get excited over the Gompers-Olander-Fitzpatrick slate. It vilified the Labor Party—would these endorsements to a news story on an inside page. Its pre-election issue featured the fight in favor of taxes for more school buildings as against increasing taxes for "a zoo in the woods."

Thus the official organ of the Farmer-Labor Party takes this method of disgracing Fitzpatrick's complete desertion of the Farmer-Labor Party. At the same time it takes its stand with Secretary Brown, the "friend of the Communists."

The vote of confidence received by Brown was overwhelming, 19 to 6. The attack on Brown was engineered by William Kohn, of New York, and Mrs. Ruby H. Ernest, wife of Clifford Ernest, Illinois State Secretary, most outspoken with the Chicago lawyer, William E. Rodrigues, against the Communists. Only four others, representing little in the Farmer-Labor Party, voted with these, as follows: William V. Mahoney and Mrs. H. J. Hays, both of the District of Columbia, and J. E. Spurr and W. R. Wilson, of Oklahoma.

All the really substantial elements in the Farmer-Labor Party expressed their confidence in Brown. They are the following: William C. Rempfer and Alice Lorraine Daly, South Dakota; Edith Houghton Hooker, Maryland; Richard Potts and Dr. Paul Gallagher, Texas; C. T. Bennett and Josephine Bennett, Connecticut; D. C. Stephens, North Carolina; C. J. Lehman, Kentucky; C. E. Alston and Alice Snell Moyer, Utah; W. J. Adames and Mary Adames, Missouri; Ernest D. Barber, Washington; W. Richmond, Kansas; E. L. Hitchers and Edna C. Ohnstein, Ohio; Carl Mullen, Indiana, and John Fitzpatrick, Illinois.

The big question now is: What will this overwhelming majority of the national committee of the Farmer-Labor Party, that supported Secretary Brown, do now that the July 31 Convention that has taken its stand between the Communists, on the one hand, and the Gompers-Olander-Fitzpatrick combination, on the other, will this majority think enough of its own existence as a class to organize in the form of a militant working class political action and openly surrender to the Wall Street parties, the Democratic and Republican parties?

dustry and guarantees also a dividend to the corporation of 8 per cent per annum.

This is considered to be one of the most favorable concessions granted by the Soviet government to any foreign corporation. The reason for this, it is reported, is the fact that the "RAIC" is a workers' corporation made up of many small shareholders.

Russian Factories Reorganized.

The profits of the Russian Clothing Syndicate, Inc., have exceeded all expectations, the officers of the American corporation stated in announcing the dividend.

The exceptional volume of business has been due chiefly to the expansion of the Russian civilian trade, as no clothing was manufactured for export, and the satisfactory sales at the big Russian fairs at Nizhni-Novgorod, Irbit (Siberia) and the business stimulated by the All-Russian Agricultural Exhibition in Moscow. The syndicate sold goods during this year, up to October 1st, amounting to $4,000,000.00.

B. Bograchev, the chairman of the syndicate, is a former member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and a man thoroly trained in the technique of the clothing industry.

Vindication of Faith in Russia.

In announcing the dividend, the directors of the "RAIC" stated that this act would serve to prove to doubting Americans not only that one branch of industry in Soviet Russia is on a sound and businesslike basis, but that Russian industries generally can "deliver the goods," some of them having reached a productivity higher than that prevailing before the war and the revolutionary struggles.

Referring to the dividend, the president of the corporation, Sidney Hillman, who is also president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, stated that he and his associates in the "RAIC" had never doubted the substantial prevailing before their investment in the efficiently managed Russian syndicate.

"The success of our investment in Russia's rehabilitation," stated Mr. Hillman, "is now fully demonstrated. When we organized our corporation to help Russia industrially some folks laughed at us, some called us visionaries, but others stepped forward to help us with good will—and dollars. It is this last group that believed in Russia's power of regenerating her economic life who are now being rewarded thru the profits of the first branch of Russian industry to pay a dividend to a foreign corporation composed of a large number of working class investors."

The late Chas. P. Steinmetz, electrical wizard, one of the officers of the "RAIC" pointed out, was a heavy supporter of Russia and of the Russian-American enterprise, having twice made subscriptions to the stock of the corporation amounting to several hundred dollars.

Subscriptions for the remainder of the first million dollars' worth of stock, stipulated in the agreement between the corporation and the Soviet authorities, are being received by President Hillman at the offices of the corporation, sales having been greatly stimulated since the announcement of the first dividend.

Greetings from Canada.

Greetings from far away Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, have been received by the National Office, Workers Party, pledging support to the three comrades, J. Louis Engdahl, Maria Giordano and Angelo Cammarata, arrested at the Anti-Fascisti mass meeting at Cicero, Ill. The telegraphic greetings come from District Executive Committee, of District Five, Workers Party of Canada, and read as follows:

"The District Executive Committee, of District Five, Workers Party of Canada, views with admiration the magnificent fight you are putting up against the black reaction exemplified in the arrest of the three comrades at Cicero, Ill., Anti-Fascisti meeting. Extend to our comrades our moral and financial support if need be, to see that this reaction does not succeed in obliterating the ordinary rights of the workers."

The jury trial in the Cicero free speech case has been set for Saturday, Nov. 10.

An American Communist Daily

By JACK SAMPOLESKY.

Industrial Organizer, New York City.

For five years the slogan of a Communist daily was the proposal read-initiated which were always carried unanimously, demanding that the Central Executive Committee launch at least a drive for a Communist Daily in the English language.

City, District and National Conventions of the party came, were held, and adjourned, and so were our resolutions.

Indeed, to launch a Daily Paper is a difficult task, and what is mainly needed is DETERMINATION not only on the part of the rank and file, but also on the part of the generals.

Today we are confronted to greet the decision of the C. E. C. to launch an "American Communist Daily and what is necessary right now to put this decision into effect is the DETERMINATION of the rank and file to see the thing through.

The need for an American Communist Daily is felt more so by the active militants in the Labor Movement. The foreign language papers help a great deal, yet none of them can very well serve as a leading organ of our movement.

The Trade Union Militants felt this lack of a unifying force that can be supplied only by a daily in the English language. Having been in close touch with a great number of the trade union militants, I have witnessed the joy that greeted the announcement of the campaign to launch an English Daily, I can feel the new spirit manifested by this hope of assistance and it is gratifying to note the confidence of all true rebels as to the success of this drive.

The New York Trade Union Militants are for an American Communist Daily and every one of them will line up, in fact, they are already forming the line.

Getting Ready for the Miners' Convention

Under the above title the Illinois Industrial Review, of Springfield, Illinois, edited by Duncan McDonald, former secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Mine Workers, publishes in its current issue a review of the problems likely to come before the January convention of the United Mine Workers of America. This is the biennial convention of the miners' union, to be attended by from 1,500 to 2,000 delegates. The article is as follows:

(From the Illinois Industrial Review, Oct. 25, 1923.)

The next big thing of importance in the affairs of the miners is the question of what will be the program at the coming convention in January. Of only will the question of wages be given consideration but the question of policy in their internal affairs will be mapped out.

For several years now they have declared for the nationalization of the mines but after the convention is over the matter seems to be forgotten except that a committee was appointed to consider the matter. Since the appointment was made, however, two of the three members of the committee resigned and thus far there seems to be no tangible program mapped out along this line. It would appear from the outside indications that the sentiment for nationalizing the mines is stronger among the rank and file of the membership than among the officials.

Gradually the American public seems to be coming to the conclusion that there must be some other method of dealing with the coal problem than by permitting a few owners to fix the price they must pay or freeze. In casting about for a solution many of them have come to the conclusion that some sort of public ownership must be brought about. They do not take this position in the interest or the welfare of the miner but because they get pinched every time the price of coal is raised and the operator raises the price every time there is a slight increase in the mining rate and in between if the getting is good.

At the conclusion of the strike one year ago when the miners struck for the same summer in order to maintain the wages they had, the coal companies raised the price on the public from one to two dollars a ton. Some of them were frank in saying that the public would have to pay for the cost of the strike. In other words the strike was a wonderful success from the standpoint of the coal companies' earnings, they made money out of it and there was no one clothed with the power to say to them, "you cannot do this." This is the view of the consumer and many of them have been heard to remark "I don't care so much for a raise in the price of coal if I knew that increase was going direct to the miner but to think of it being added to the profits of the coal companies is what I don't like." From that viewpoint the American people want some different arrangement and it is for this personal reason they talk of public ownership.

Thus far in America no commission has gone so far towards a solution of the coal problem as did the Sankey commission in England. There a royal commission recommended in a report to the Crown that the coal properties be taken over by purchase and operated as a public utility. The coal commission appointed by President Harding after spending some $600,000 in alleged investigations, salaries and expenses arrived at no tangible solution of the problem and so far as results are concerned they might just as well have taken the money to the top of the Washington Monument and scattered it to the winds. In that way some person or persons would have benefitted besides the members of the commission.

The shorter work-day will no doubt be up for consideration, again it is to be hoped that the hours will be reduced to six, for in that way there is some possibility of dividing the work up more evenly than at present. It is doubtful that the four hours work for each miner now engaged in the mining industry the year around. Increased production by reason of machinery and more up-to-date methods of mining make a shorter work day essential to a more equitable distribution of the work to be performed. The increase in the anthracite district while small, paves the way for the bituminous miners to also demand an increase.

So far as internal matters are concerned there is no doubt the recent "red" scare that the editor of the Mine Workers' Journal has discovered in Herrin and elsewhere will be used to the utmost by the reactionary element in the organization to discredit the present administration. Whether they will succeed or not remains to be seen. The Journal has been the official organ of the organization for many years and has been used by the administration in power to further its own ends. Whether the rank and file will be able to wrest it from the control of the machine remains to be seen. The Journal has been the official organ of the organization for many years and has been used by the administration in power to further its own ends. Whether the rank and file will be able to wrest it from the control of the machine remains to be seen.

Memorial Meeting for John Reed, the Lover of Freedom

By PAUL CLYNE.

"His was the spirit of love and hatred; love of freedom and justice, and hatred of oppression and wrong!"

These words, used characteristically by Bob Minor, Editor of "The Liberator," at the memorial meeting held in Chicago.

In a heartfelt, intimate way, Comrade Minor sketched the life of the American Communist who, more than any other, personifies our solidarity with the Russian proletariat. He told how Jack, one of the most brilliant students at Harvard University, the object of pedagogic and bourgeois adulation, disdained the pomps and allurements of capitalist culture. He was too sincere, too great an artist to commercialize his talent, or to pander to popular dictums. Even those high arbiters of capitalist artistry, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson, were attracted to Jack Reed by his extraordinary talent and personal charm. Both endeavored to bring him to conformity, but failed. Jack was not a whit dazzled by the glowing personality of Roosevelt, or the mellifluous phrases of Wilson, apprehending the egotistic demogogy of the former (actually refusing to associate with him) and the sophistic idealism of the latter.

Altho attaining a pre-eminent place in the journalistic profession, Jack Reed remained unperverted by the Brass Check atmosphere. His was quick to perceive the class struggle seething below the refined superstructure of society, and to devote himself unstintingly to the cause of the oppressed.

"Wherever the fight was fiercest, wherever the right of speech and assemblage was prohibited, wherever the forces of capitalism beat most strongly upon the workers, there would John Reed involve himself, like a storm bird rushing toward the storm."

And when he came to Russia to report to the world the turbulent events that were transpiring there, he did not do so "with a certain amount of impartiality and journalistic honesty." Instead he sent out the truth, the epochal, significant truth just as it presented itself to his passionate, sympathetic nature. But it was not for John Reed to remain a mere passive observer or recorder of events. The transcendent human drama that was being enacted in Russia set every fibre of his being into throbbing unison and support. With flaming ardor he threw himself into the struggle, forgetful of self, of nationality, of everything but the high purpose to be achieved. Side by side with the Bolsheviks, sharing their every hardship and danger, he took part in the daily fighting. "And he found the time besides, to write the story of the ten decisive days of the struggle—the greatest and most important piece of reporting of all time." The half starved and undernourished he worked incessantly—as much as 18 and 20 hours a day. And finally, when the dread typhus came to still his great spirit, he was mourned by all of Russia and buried with highest Communist honors under the historic walls of the Kremlin.

"And even now, scarce a day goes by but some one in Moscow reverentially lays flowers on his tomb!"

Thus did Robert Minor tell us of John Reed. And hearing, I could not but feel that artist-Communist that Jack Reed was, he was but the precursor of many artist-Communists, men who gladly place and place their talents and lives at the disposal of the revolutionary cause. And it seemed to me that even then, I was listening to one such.

IDA MAY KLEIN.

Chicago's workers mourn the death of Mrs. Ida May Klein, who had long been active with her husband, Comrade Edward K. Klein, in labor's cause on the northwest side. Mrs. Klein was instantly killed in an automobile accident near Paris, Ill., while Comrade Klein was severely injured and is now in the Paris Hospital. They were returning from a visit to the home of their daughter, Mrs. J. T. Crandall, at Evansville, Ind. J. Louis Engdahl, Editor of "The Worker," delivered the address at the funeral. Interment was at Ridgewood Cemetery.

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER: KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION.

Salvaging Humanity

What could be accomplished in a society, where the present dog-eat-dog mode of existence did not prevail, was indicated in speeches delivered at the Thirteenth Annual Convention of the College of Surgeons just held in Chicago.

Speaking of cripples, Dr. Fred H. Albee, head of the commission on rehabilitation in New Jersey, declared that the salvaging of cripples by means of bone surgery and bone grafting is one of the big tasks of the day. Lack of proper nourishment and the consequent disease of rickets in children, he said, is the commonest cause of deformities.

Under capitalism the grafting of money from victims of disease is much more popular among the medical fraternity than the grafting of bones. A common experience for a sufferer is to have some unoffending portion of his anatomy detached by some quack surgeon, whose knowledge of the profession is confined to his ability to charge a fee. A dose of lemonade might have been just as effective.

On the other hand we have cases of deformities where the sufferers endure agony because fortune has not favored them with sufficient money to secure the service of competent medical assistance. The medical profession, like any other line of endeavour in capitalist society, is primarily concerned with making profit. That is a few eminent doctors rise above this environment is the exception that proves the rule.

So long as the present system of production for profit rather than use prevails, people will starve in the midst of plenty, and disease-ridden victims will suffer because they have not the means to secure proper medical attendance. Only when society will be organized on the basis of production for use will the genius of mankind be released for the conquest of disease.

Room for All in Unions

(From the Minneapolis, Minn., Labor Review.)

The Labor Review cannot quite reconcile two statements made by William H. Johnston, international president of the International Association of Machinists, during his stay in Minneapolis recently.

At a meeting held under the auspices of the local Machinists' Union, Mr. Johnston gave a voice to a clarion call for tolerance, stating that the labor movement was not concerned with a man's religion, color, or political belief. This statement was, we thought, a clear statement of the position the labor movement takes on those questions. Mr. Johnson in attacking intolerance movement takes on those questions. Mr. Johnson in attacking intolerance was so emphatic that it makes it hard for us to quite figure out Mr. Johnson's attitude on admitting believers in certain economic and radical movements to membership in the Machinists' Union.

In an interview given to a local daily paper, Mr. Johnston is quoted as saying that no Communist will be permitted to hold membership in the International Association of Machinists. One who heard the Machinists' Union chief pleading for tolerance the night before, finds it hard to believe that the same man made both statements. However, as Mr. Johnston has not asked for any correction of the interview, we assume that he was quoted correctly.

The Labor Review does not subscribe to the ridiculous program of baiting the Communists and other radicals and is always willing to back up any sound plans for the betterment of the labor movement, regardless of whether the plan was proposed by a Communist or a Seventh Day Adventist.

What Mr. Johnston proposes to do with the machinists who may believe in the principles of Communism, is not made clear in the interview in which he is quoted. We believe that expelling them from the recognized labor movement would be a blunder that would result in much dissension among union members, and would probably mean the starting of another of the deplorable dual organizations.

The wholesale grouping of the subscribers to any particular belief, as being undesirable union members, is, in our opinion a mistake. The labor movement is entirely too powerful to become panic stricken and forbid membership to believe in any economic scheme, however, visionary.

FASCISM

Has conquered Italy, and is now the ruling class of Germany and all Central Europe. It is raising its head in America in its various forms, and is making a bid for power by conspiracy and violence. It is brazenly waving itself into trade unions of America. How to combat this menace, Fascism must be understood. The explanation of Fascism in America is contained in the new pamphlet.

STRUGGLE OF THE TRADE UNIONS AGAINST FASCISM.

By Andreas Nin,

With an Introduction by Earl R. Browder.

This pamphlet is necessary for every militant trade unionist who wants to combat Fascism, the latest concerted (but attempts) to divide the workers against one another and destroy their class organizations. At the same time it is easy to read and intensely interesting. A timely and fascinating booklet that will sell readily in every labor union and gatherings of workers. Militants and party units get busy now and at once. 40 pages, heavy paper cover. Rates, single copies, 15c per copy; 10 to 100 copies, 10c per copy.

Steinmetz, the Worker

Charles Proteus Steinmetz, alive, was a challenge and a reply to all the professions of the capitalist order. Steinmetz, even dead, will be an inspiration for the ending of this social system.

Steinmetz said the world's work could even now be accomplished thru the establishment of the four-hour workday. Yet he was an indefatigable worker. They say he died from overwork.

The capitalist apologist argues that the four-hour workday would produce a nation of idlers. Yet no capitalist editor or pulpiteer has dared claim that Steinmetz was an idler. Steinmetz's great mind was released for creative labor. No one will deny that there is many a Steinmetz, in American industry, chained to a job by the long workday, unable to create. They are the unknowns, kept in obscurity by the "machine age" that levels all to its lowest standard.

Steinmetz made a mockery of the first declaration of the boss's ten commandments to his slaves—"Save and have." Steinmetz cared nothing about money. All he asked of the General Electric Company, at Schenectady, New York, his boss, was a place in which to live, a shelter, clothes to wear and food to eat, and a place to work, his laboratory. He didn't want to hear about the money that is supposed to be the great incentive for all striving under the capitalist social order. He wanted to be free, as free as he could be, to do his work. And during his life he worked as no billionaire, or millionaire capitalist has ever worked in hoarding his gold. Steinmetz wanted no gold. He sought no wealth.

If we had the funds, we would write the story of the life of "Steinmetz—The Worker" and place it in the hands of every American worker. We believe that story would help knock away the strongest pillars that support the capitalist structure of rob and rule. We know that story would show the workers and farmers of Soviet Russia to be on the right track in building their Communist social order, under which the ideals of Charles Proteus Steinmetz will be possible of realization for the first time in human history.

Meeting Up with Gary

Elbert H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, got very much excited the other day when a girl worker tried to hand him a leaflet as he was entering the steel trust's offices on lower Broadway, New York City. He pushed the girl aside and fled.

The girl was one of many carrying on the campaign to organize the white collar slaves in New York's financial district. The distribution of organization literature had to be done on the only place left the workers—on the streets.

Gary, in extending his apologies to newspapers reporters, said he didn't know what the girl wanted. And he didn't stop to find out. When Gary wants to distribute propaganda for the 12-hour day and the seven-day week, he does it more differently. He has his highly paid publicity expert get up excellent-appearing letters, leaflets and pamphlets. Then lists of millions of names and addresses are secured, and the literature is sent out thru the mails. Nothing so vulgar as passing it out on the streets. Gary has money, and he spends his money to make more money. He is struggling to maintain his supremacy. It is hoped that the organization drive of the bookkeepers, stenographers and office clerks, which is taking on nation-wide proportions, will bear rich fruit, so that these white collar workers will soon be able to give battle to Gary in his own office, rather than merely brushing up against him on the open street.

McLachlan and Lewis

[illegible] has been sent to prison for [illegible] years. The [illegible] has [illegible] John Lewis is a free man, [illegible] the [illegible] wherever he goes. [illegible] love him.

But McLachlan was only the secretary of the Nova Scotia, Canada, coal miners, seeking united action of the miners and the steel workers in this big Canadian industrial center. He was fighting against the established capitalistic order, and they called it "sedition." He was tried, convicted, and McLachlan is now in the Canadian penitentiary at Dorchester.

Lewis is the international president of the United Mine Workers of America. Lewis is for things as they are. In the United States the Burns-Daugherty department of justice helps Lewis, as in the raid on the Progressive Miners' Committee, at Pittsburgh, and the propaganda barrage recently laid down in the boosters' press against the Workers Party, the Federated Press, the Civil Liberties Union and other labor organizations. In Canada, where the United Mine Workers also has a large membership, the King's government helps Lewis wage war on the thinking elements in his own union, especially when the progressives get control of the union. The bosses' governments at Washington, D. C., and Ottawa, Canada, help Lewis because Lewis is doing the dirty work of the bosses in weakening and destroying, as far as he can, the miners' union from the inside.

McLachlan may serve all or part of the two years' prison sentence imposed upon him. When he comes out, however, he will be held in higher esteem than ever by the great rank and file of all labor. He will have the confidence of new masses of workers because he has suffered in their cause. They will have faith in him.

We predict, on the other hand, that Lewis will be out of the labor movement entirely, discredited in the eyes of the workers. He will no doubt go the way of his predecessor and namesake, Tom L. Lewis, who became an agent for the non-union mine owners of West Virginia's New River district, when he was defeated for re-election. Tom Lewis, the stool pigeon of the bosses, is successful in fighting the miners' union from the outside, in West Virginia, because John Lewis, the friend of the mine owners, is doing the same job for the mine owners on the inside of the union. We are sure that every mine worker, who understands the situation, would rather be McLachlan in prison, than Lewis out of prison. McLachlan is much the freer of the two. He, at least, does not wear the shackles of the oppressors of humanity.

They Fear "The Daily"

The "open shoppers," thru their National Civic Federation, have confessed to a great fear of the proposed English-Language Communist Daily. These allies of Gompers and Lewis, in their war upon the progressives in the labor movement, have put their fear to writing—an open letter to Senator King, Ladd, Brookhart and Wheeler and former Senator Fall, Congressman Frear, Bishop Blake, Bishop Nuelson and other recent visitors to Soviet Russia. It is urged that these returned visitors, all of whom have had a good word for the struggle of the Russian workers and farmers, should ask the Government to stop all Communist propaganda in this country.

The Civic Federationists, who have been attacking the Soviet Republic since its birth, hypocritically proclaim that they are not concerned as to the form of government "which has established its power over the Russian people." All that they are concerned with now is the fact that European Communists have sent messages of greeting to workers in this country urging the necessity of raising "$100,000 to start an English daily for the Communist movement here."

In other words, Gary, Belmont, Rockefeller, Gompers and Lewis believe it is pro-Russian for America's workers to have a daily paper of their own, to counteract the thousands of big business dailies thruout the land. That is surely a compliment to the power of one workers' daily. To be sure, no charge of pro-Stinnes or pro-Mussolini is brought against The New York Times or The Chicago Tribune, and all their kind, for propagandizing the return of the Kaiser to Germany, or upholding Fascist rule in Italy.

But the workers of the United States are going to establish their daily, not so much because the Communists of Europe want it, but because they must have it in their daily struggles. They need it to support their strikes, to push their wage demands, to carry on their fight for the shorter workday, to expose the barbarous conditions under which they are forced to toil. Tear the anti-Communist mask off the National Civic Federation and its backers and you will find that this aggregation is opposed to the most elemental demands of the workers. "The Daily" will expose these hypocrites. The hypocrites, from Gary to Gompers, fear exposure and therefore oppose "The Daily."

Hillquit and the United Front

Morris Hillquit, whom Winthrop D. Lane, in the New Yo Leader, refers to as a "student of International Socialism," h spoken with some favor of the United Front of the Communi and Socialists in Saxony. That was when the Communi Socialist government was still in power, before it had been ov thrown by the military, under orders signed by Gustav Ebe Germany's Socialist president.

It is Hillquit, bitter opponent of the United Front with t Communists in the United States, who sees, against the growi German reaction a greater likelihood of Communist-Soci alliances in the future.

This is the Hillquit who joined the Johnston-Keating-Sto outfit at Cleveland, to keep the Workers Party delegates on t outside of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, beca they believed in the proletarian dictatorship. This is the Hillq who united with the Tammany Hall railroad brotherhood chi at Albany, in refusing admittance to the Communists, and th was himself thrown out with his Socialist followers. Hillquit for the United Front in Saxony, but he is against it in New Y City. He says the United Front is being forced in Germany fascisti and monarchist attacks. But he fails to realize the gro ing offensive of the open shop interests against labor on this s of the Atlantic. The big question then becomes,—how sev must the bosses' attacks become before Hillquit feels it is ti to establish the United Front of all American labor? The Co munists answer that question by declaring that the United Fr must be established NOW!

It Is the Duty of Every Honest Worker in the Socialist Party to Fight for the United Fron

A Reply to Scott Nearing.
By JOHN PEPPER.

Scott Nearing has written an interesting article in the New York Leader. The article deals with the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor, the Communist issue there, and the future of the Communist movement in the United States.

Scott Nearing represents a fine culture and belongs to the few leaders of the Socialist Party who, altho they lack the courage to break with the Socialist Party, still have not become betrayers of the working class. He is an advocate of a united front with the Communists. Officially he has not sold out to the Gompers bureaucracy. His latest article is again a very decent manifestation of his good intentions, but it is none the less a manifestation of a complete lack of Marxian analysis.

What Does Scott Nearing Say?

Scott Nearing asserts the following:

1. The American Federation of Labor Convention represented "the opinion of the rank and file of the American Federation of Labor."

2. The Communists have been driven out from the American Federation of Labor.

3. The Communists and radical workers, forced out of the official labor movement, "will be forced out into a community where there is no official opposition."

4. The radicals must get out of the American Federation of Labor—into a dual organization.

5. "There is but one outcome of this situation: Men deprived of an opportunity to express themselves form an organization and bounded by the police, always resort to secrecy and usually to terrorist methods. That is no reason to suppose that this will not be the outcome in the United States."

These statements—five errors. We take one statement after another and try to give the correct analysis of them.

1. Portland and the Rank and File.

It is not true that the American Federation of Labor convention was a faithful mirror of the opinions or will of the rank and file of organized labor. On the contrary, the entire American Federation of Labor machine is simply a gigantic apparatus for suppressing the opinions and will of the rank and file. The whole convention is composed in such a way, that it is absolutely impossible for the will or opinion of the rank and file to be represented or manifested there.

At the convention only the international and national unions have power. The State Federations and City Central bodies have only one vote each. On the other hand, the biggest union, the United Mine Workers has no less than 4,329 votes. The United Mine Workers of America has 400,000 members, but it is represented in the American Federation of Labor by eight high officials. Of these eight men, Lewis and his gang, have four times as many votes as all the one thousand State Federations of Labor and city central bodies in the whole of the United States. It is a matter of common knowledge that Lewis and his henchmen are hated by the rank and file even more than are the capitalists. Everyone knows that Lewis and his gang maintain their power only by the same means as the state maintains its power—with armed sluggers, with paid organizers against the radicals, and with the system of check-off. The check-off system today has the two facets: the one assures a greater power for the union against the capitalists; but the other takes the power away from the rank and file, and gives it to the officials of the union. The miners are not only employes of capitalists, but also employes of the union. If the worker is radical he is expelled from the union by the officials, and when he is expelled from the union he loses his job and is even driven out of his home. (And yet, the Communist Parties need not against the check-off which assures great power to the union; but we are against the absolute power of the officials which makes the workers doubly slaves, slaves of the coal barons, and slaves of the union barons.) To claim that the officials of the United Mine Workers, who represented the Gompers Portland can express the opinion and will of the rank and file of the miners is equivalent to saying that the Duma of the Czar before the revolution represented the opinion and sentiment of the Russian people.

Every move of organized labor in the United States shows that the rank and file has opinions and interests absolutely different from those of the ruling bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor.

In Portland three great issues which in the last year were represented in the labor movement thru the Workers Party and the Trade Union Educational League: Labor Party, Amalgamation, recognition of Soviet Russia, were defeated with an overwhelming majority. The officials assassinated all three measures. But the rank and file are for these measures.

Amalgamation was adopted by no less than sixteen State Federations of Labor, six international unions, and scores of central labor bodies.

The recognition of Soviet Russia was demanded lately again by two State Federations of Labor, three international unions, and numerous central labor bodies.

The Labor Party idea was adopted by 29 State Federations of Labor, four State Federations of Labor, and eight large central labor bodies.

Recently there has been a mighty Labor Parties in West Virginia and Montana, backed by the trade unions of those states. In Minnesota a mighty Farmer-Labor Federation has been formed, supported by the whole labor movement there. In Los Angeles, Buffalo, New York, Washington County, Pa., city and county Labor Parties have been lately organized. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party was created as the first organized attempt to form a real Labor Party on a national scale. (Over the latest progress of these three great issues, see J. W. Johnstone's excellent article in the November issue of the Labor Herald, "Two-Score Victories for the Left Wing.")

Scott Nearing is basically wrong in asserting that the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor represents the opinion of the rank and file of the American Federation of Labor. His assertion is in contradiction with the facts. It is a social impossibility because the Portland gathering represents a different social stratum from the rank and file of the working class. The "fat boys" in Portland are part of the capitalist class and have no more in common with the workers than have the other agents of capitalism: sheriffs, judges, army officers, ministers, or kept journalists. The "fat boys" rule the labor movement with the help of the labor aristocracy, with the direct help of government power, with the help of the old bureaucratic machine, but against the will and opinion of the rank and file.

Can the Communists Be Driven Out?

The second statement of Scott Nearing is that with the expulsion of William Dunne from the Portland convention, the Communists are outside of the ranks of organized labor. Scott Nearing is mistaken. The Communists have never been inside of the organized labor movement as much as they are at present. The burning at the stake of Communists at Portland has more smoke than flames. William Dunne was ousted from the Portland Federation of Labor convention; but he is still the leader of the "Silver Bow" Labor Council. And it was after Portland that the Farmer-Labor Party was formed in Montana, with participation of Dunne and the other Communists. Dunne was ousted from the Portland convention of the labor officials, but thru his speech against the "fat boys" he penetrated into the hearts of hundreds of thousands of workers. All efforts of the reactionary bureaucrats of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union have resulted only in the expulsion of seven members of the Trade Union Educational League from the union. The Communists have learned from experience. Despite Gompers, Lewis, Sigman, and Major Berry, not more than a dozen have been expelled from the trade unions in the fights of the last year in the whole country.

Scott Nearing is mistaken. The Communists are not out of the trade unions. On the contrary, they have never been inside the trade unions more than they are at present. The Communist regiments in the trade unions are fighting regiments. The value of a troop is measured by military experts according to how much loss this troop can stand under fire. The more we can assure Scott Nearing that the Communist troop in the trade unions has enough capacity for resistance and enough discipline to stand not only the loss of twelve, but of ten times and a hundred times twelve, without deserting the battlefield, without leaving the trade union movement.

There is no danger. The Communists cannot be thrown out of the labor movement. They have entrenched themselves too well there. We are not getting out. On the contrary. We are only just beginning to march all our forces into the trade union movement. The Workers Party has just now begun the industrial registration of its members, as the first step towards carrying out the decision of the Communist International, that every Communist must be a member of a trade union.

The Communists will not form any dual organization. We will not commit the idiocy of separating the militants from the half-militant, not fully class-conscious great masses.

Of course, if the Gompers-Lewis-Berry machine does not stop at expulsion of single Communists or Communist groups, but goes still further in its criminal, destructive work and expels the oppositional masses themselves from the unions, the Communists will take the fight, and will organize these masses. If such an organization comes into being, it will no longer be the old trade union. The old dual unionism was the separation of militants from the masses of the labor movement. This new organization, if it comes at all, will come only when the American Federation of Labor itself drives out the hundreds of thousands of workers opposed to the machine.

Not the Communists, but the Capitalists, Are Isolated.

Scott Nearing states that if the Communists are driven out of the ranks of organized labor, they come into a community, where there no longer is no official opposition and therefore they will be forced to change their tactics and to employ the tactics of terror. Scott Nearing is mistaken in both—in the analysis of the political situation and in the characterization of the Communist movement.

The history of every revolutionary movement shows that individual terror arises only when the mass movement recedes, or when there is no immediate hope for a mass movement. The classical example of the Russian Nihilists shows this historical law most clearly. Assassinations and bomb-throwing were the form of struggle against Czarism so long as there was no labor movement in Russia, and as long as the peasants, despite starvation and oppression were indifferent or even hostile to the revolutionists. In the very moment, however, that an organized labor movement arose, and when the peasants were seized by a revolutionary dissatisfaction, revolutionary terror was replaced by revolutionary mass action.

In the present situation in the United States, in the mass movement of the workers and farmers of downward or upward trend?

Every concrete analysis of the concrete facts shows that the main tendency of the development inclines, first toward isolation of the Communists, but on the contrary, towards isolation of the capitalists.

The bankrupt farmers no longer see the capitalists as their natural leaders. The workers are emancipating themselves more and more from the influence of capitalist politicians. Even the smaller capitalists of the finishing industry are in revolt against the Steel Trust. Politically, the ever growing isolation of the big trusts and railroad corporations is expressed thru the ever more violent factional fights of the capitalist parties; thru the ever growing Third Party movement of the population of the Labor Party movement. The victory of Harding in 1920, with his seven million majority, meant the absolute isolation of the revolutionary forces in the United States, and the desperate efforts of capitalist leadership to get out of society. The elections in 1924 will show an opposite picture. Wall Street will be isolated, and the whole working class will be forced to make a choice between the left, and next after the capitalist machine of the old parties.

We stand today not at the beginning of an abatement of the mass movement, but rather at the beginning of a mass movement of all non-capitalist classes, which will shake up the entire fabric of American society. Scott Nearing is wrong. The united Communists do not come into a community where there is no official opposition. On the contrary, into a community which is saturated with opposition as never before.

Scott Nearing speaks then of the "terror" of the Communist Party. It is believed that a real Communist Party even in the period of the ebb of the mass movement, replaces mass action by individual terror. Scott Nearing forgets that the representatives of individual terror, at the really heroic, were not representatives of the working class, mainly intellectuals, or not of proletariat of big industry, but the backward elements of the working class. A Communist Party is real Communist Party if it does understand how to adapt its tactics conditions. We attack or retreat the objective situation demands. in offensive or defensive, we remain always the party of the masses, party of mass action.

How About the Socialist Party?

We dispute the statements Nearing when they are wrong. we wish to approve entirely of his statements which are ri He says that "in the United St the official labor movement has m itself an essential part of the p ent order." And he says further t the Workers Party is oppressed cause it agitates "in favor of a Soviet Government."

Scott Nearing is right. The offi bureaucracy of the American Fe ation of Labor is nothing else t an unofficial agency of capitalism the ranks of labor.

Scott Nearing is right. The Wo ers Party is persecuted because fights for a new social order.

But—what is the Socialist Party ing? Where is the Socialist Par What is the position of the Socia Party to the fight? Does Scott Ne ing know—and if he knows why do he write it—that the Socia Party delegates in the Portland c vention voted with Gompers, that they made themselves an essent part of the present order? D Scott Nearing know—and if he kn why doesn't he inform every hon worker who is still in the Socia Party—that the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party, a petty Tammany Hall of Hillquit a Berger, did not utter a single w in defense of the Communists w are persecuted because they fight a new social order?

We hold it to be the duty of Sc Nearing and every honest work within the Socialist Party to fi against the policy of silence wh makes the Socialist Party "an ess tial part of the present order," and fight for a united front with the Co munists who struggle for a new cial order."

"Anti-Red" Plot Is Unmasked!

MINE OWNERS' AGENT WROTE THE PROPAGANDA USED BY SAM GOMPERS AND JOHN L. LEWIS AGAINST THE RADICALS

St. Paul, Minn., Labor Takes Lead in Campaign Demanding "Hands Off Workers' Germany"

The organized workers of St. Paul, Minn., are the first to place themselves on record for the "Hands Off Workers' Germany!" Campaign.

The St. Paul, Minn., Trades and Labor Assembly, with but two dissenting votes, has called upon "all the working people and farmers of this country to unite under the slogan 'Hands Off Workers' Germany' to prevent this country from again becoming involved in a European war."

Labor in St. Paul and in Minneapolis, the Twin Cities of the northwest, has not only taken an aggressive and advance stand on a multitude of issues confronting the workers, but now the workers in St. Paul again take the lead in this country, in the most important struggle confronting the world's workers. This resolution should be adopted by every local labor union, and by every city and state central labor body. The resolution adopted by the St. Paul workers, in full, is as follows:

"HANDS OFF GERMANY!" SAY MINNESOTA WORKERS

WHEREAS, the workers of Germany, who during four years of imperialist war served as cannon fodder for the autocrats who ruled them, after five more years of unheard of suffering and hardship are revolting against those who have so mercilessly oppressed and exploited them.

WHEREAS, the struggle which is now being waged in Germany with the working people on one side and the capitalists and the autocratic generals, the Ludendorffs and Hindenbergs on the other, is a struggle for the life of the trade union movement of Germany, for should the capitalists and their autocratic leaders triumph they would exterminate every vestige of organization among the workers.

WHEREAS, when the war in Europe first broke out in 1914 the capitalists of the United States first sold munitions and made loans to the warring nations and then later demanded that the United States enter the war to protect their loans and accounts, calling it "a war for democracy" and "the war to end war" which everyone now knows were slogans which were lies.

WHEREAS, we are opposed to the capitalists of the United States again following the same course, first loaning money and selling munitions to Europe in order to put down the effort of the German workers to free themselves, and then sending American soldiers to fight their battles, therefore, be it

RESOLVED: that the St. Paul, Minn., Trades and Labor Assembly declares its unalterable opposition to the United States interfering in any way in the struggle now going on in Germany, and that we are opposed to any loans to European countries or the sale of any munitions to these countries for the purpose of fighting the effort of the German workers to establish their own government and free themselves for the oppression and exploitation under which they suffer, and be it further

RESOLVED: That we will call upon the working people and farmers of this country to unite under the slogan "Hands Off Workers' Germany" to prevent this country from again becoming involved in a European war.

"He (John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America) has even waged merciless warfare against such mild progressivism as the Nationalization Program brought forward by the Committee headed by John Brophy and authorized by the last convention."—From the declaration of the Second General Conference of the Trade Union Educational League on the situation in the Miners' Union.

An "Expose" Is Exposed

A publicity agent of the "open shop" mine owners wrote the series of six articles attacking the American Communist movement and sponsored by President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers of America, and by President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor.

This is what "The Worker" has all along contended. We have supported this contention with the facts we could get. A clinching exposure of the alliance between Lewis and Gompers and the "open shoppers" is made in the Saturday, Nov. 10th, issue of The New York Leader. Here the indisputable facts are presented.

It will be interesting to await the explanation that Gompers and Lewis will have to make of their alliance with the worst enemies of the organized workers. It was largely upon the basis of this anti-union propaganda of the bosses that the reactionaries of the Portland Convention of the A. F. of L. unseated William F. Dunne, delegate of the Butte, Mont., workers.

It was on the basis of this propaganda that Lewis and Gompers had hoped to launch an anti-Communist drive, not only in the miners' union, but in every international union. This diabolical plot now stands completely unmasked.

It will also be interesting to see how many labor publications will republish the exposure as it appeared in the New York Leader. The story in full is as follows:

(Special to "The Leader")

WILMINGTON, Nov. 10.—A publicity agent for non-union coal operators wrote the articles on "reds in the miners' union" recently sponsored by Ellis Searles of the United Mine Workers.

The agent's name is Bert Clarke. He had peddled the articles to various open-shoppers without succeeding in selling them. When Searles took the articles, Clarke's former employers did a lot of chuckling.

Now, some of these open-shoppers profess righteous indignation. "Clarke," they say, "used to write good articles attacking the miners' union. Now he puts it all on the Reds, using a lot of old stuff out of our files and the Department of Justice, and putting a whitewashing slant in it."

According to the office of the National Coal Association, Clarke was employed last year by the West Virginia non-union operators, whose men no longer in their employ. Last Monday, Clarke returned from West Virginia and left immediately for Indianapolis. During last year's period of employment he spent considerable time in Logan County and talked freely in Washington about his experiences with the Logan operators.

Given Wide Publicity

The Searles articles were given the widest front page publicity throughout the country. Searles insisted the "expose" was the result of an independent investigation conducted by the United Mine Workers of America. He refused to give out the name of the author of the articles. The material was immediately recognized by various anti-labor publishers as having been offered to them and refused, largely because "it was old stuff, the sort we had published before."

Besides the Logan operators, Clarke's work had been paid for by "Industrial Progress," the open-shop organ run by Henry Harrison Lewis in Washington. Lewis formerly called his paper Industry and great quantities of its issues used to be distributed throughout the country to support open shop drives by the steel trust, the National Association of Manufacturers and the like.

When the Interchurch World Movement published the Report on the Steel Trust of 1919, Industry had articles "proving" that the report was the work of reds, boring within the churches." The editions of Industry, discussing Clarke, says they have no use for men who play a double game," that when Clarke tried to sell the stuff to them, they showed him their files with the same "revelations" published long before; and that Clarke admitted he was now working for Searles.

How About America's Students?

PEKING, China.—The Extraordinary Plenipotentiary Envoy of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics gave a reception to the Peking Students' Union. A most cordial spirit prevailed thruout the tea party.

Searles Expose Ranked With "May Day Plots"

(By the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Red Peril, Red Peril! who's the discoverer of the Red Peril?"

That's the question indignantly asked, with an implied answer of "me; I did it!" among stalwart anti-labor crusaders who occupy well-upholstered jobs in the capital. And they have begun to try to prove that Ellis Searles, of the Mine Workers' Journal, is a natural successor to Mr. Sisson, of Sisson documents fame, in his willingness to accept a gold brick at a high price.

Searles issued his series of articles—"the result of an independent searching investigation on the part of the United Mine Workers of America which led directly to original sources"—on September 10, during the making of anthracite peace in Pennsylvania.

Yet, Cushing's Survey, a confidential bulletin sold to employers by George Cushing, former managing director of the American Wholesale Coal Association, said this in its September 6 issue:

"The newspapers on next Monday will tell a long story of the fight which the miners' union is making to preserve the American constitutional government from the plots of the Communist organization, with headquarters in Moscow. The Searles story will paint John L. Lewis as the stone wall against which this wave of radicalism is breaking. It will say that the red movement in America has more than 6,000 active leaders and more than 1,000,000 members. It will attribute the uprising in Nova Scotia, the rioting in western Pennsylvania, and the Herrin massacre to the activities of the Communists.

"Mr. Searles did not write this series of stories. The miners' union had nothing whatever to do with the investigation which produced them. It was purely a commercial job by a Washington newspaperman. The miners' union bought his story and edited it to fit its present needs. The same story has sought but failed to find a market elsewhere."

The Echo, a weekly Catholic publication, commenting upon this statement by one of the most energetic anti-miners' union men in America, says: "In view of these disclosures the action of the officials of the United Mine Workers may be placed in the same category as the fake Red Day plots that used to be manufactured by the Department of Justice and the Bolshevik plots uncovered by the Security Leagues and other reactionary organizations."

Inquiry in Washington discloses that one Bert Clarke, formerly connected with the Chicago Tribune and Casey's American Coal Journal, is later a free-lance publicity man who compiled the Searles material and has recently stated that he is and has been

Total in Drive for "Daily Worker" Is Now $49,970

With the decision of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party that THE DAILY WORKER is to be published when the total of $100,000.00 has been reached, every comrade and sympathizer and every militant will put forth the extra energy to push the drive to its final goal.

As announced in "The Worker" last week the total reached then was $42,388.00. From November 1st to November 8th the sum of $7,582.45 was received for shares and donations, making a grand total of $49,970.45.

Wall Street Wants to Save Wilson's Face

The gross frauds and vicious corruption uncovered in the investigation of the Veterans' Bureau and Mr. Forbes has brought up the whole question of the War Department and its contracts once more.

Barron's Weekly, one of the leading financial journals in the country, is panic stricken over the prospects of a thoro-going examination of the records of the war sales made in 1917 and 1918. This paper takes the position that, in order to save the faces of many people who are in high standing politically and financially, it would be best to drop all this talk about further investigations.

In a recent issue Barron's Weekly put the whole case in these words: "Is there any considerable party in this country which really wants to uncover the financial scandals of the war? It might well be that, in the interest of public decency, a wet sponge were drawn over the slate and the billions lost in sites and supplies for training camps, worthless wooden ships, construction at 'cost plus', payment for munitions never delivered, were written off, charged to a great nation's experience . . . Not for the first time a devious trail is uncovered and it is immediately submitted that further research in that direction would imply an imputation on the honor of Woodrow Wilson."

The American workers and farmers have suffered many similar great "experiences" at the hands of the employing class. But we submit that the last one was the most costly.

Manufacturers Rally to Support Supreme Court

The open shoppers are showing signs of considerable worry over the various proposals to limit the power of the Supreme Court to declare the acts of Congress unconstitutional.

The fate which the various child labor laws, and the minimum wage act of the District of Columbia have met at the hands of the Supreme Court has caused various shades of progressivism and near progressivism to propose scores of bills to remedy the situation.

But the manufacturing interests are not asleep. They are on the job and have already served notice that they will fight to the bitter end to protect their Supreme Court from any and all popular encroachments. In an address before the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, at the eighth annual meeting of the open shop organization, Mr. James A. Emery, general counsel for the National Industrial Council, has thrown down the gauntlet to all the would be liberators of the working masses from Supreme Court tyranny.

Speaking of one of these remedial proposals, Mr. Emery declared: "Startling as this proposal may sound, 54 members of Congress have publicly approved it, and thruout the country, a considerable body of opinion rallies to its support."

Mr. Emery who is a well known apostle of the open shop movement had reference to the resolution adopted at the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor aiming at securing a constitutional amendment prohibiting the Supreme Court from declaring unconstitutional any law enacted by two-third majority of Congress.

New York Leader Suspends

The announcement that the New York Leader, formerly the New York Call, will cease publication, Tuesday, Nov. 13, comes just as "The Worker" goes to press. The New York Leader has been in existence but six weeks and it has stated that $100,000 has been used up in that time. It is understood that the immediate cause of its failure were internal dissension and the failure to win the support of the workers for the milk-and-water policy adopted since its establishment.

The New York Call was taken over and reorganized by a group of trade unions in New York City. The Reverend Norman Thomas was appointed editor and a policy of conciliation and class collaboration adopted. The class character of the labor struggle was suppressed and so far as the paper could be judged in the short period of its life it represented a mild, liberal, pacifist, bourgeois-democratic point of view. The failure of the New York Leader demonstrates anew that in these days of bitter class conflict no middle of the road policy can be successful.

ndpat Republicans Oil Up the Old Steam Roller for Big Drive Against the "Insurgents"

By JAY LOVESTONE.

The machinations of the Republican Party are now in full swing for a big fight at the coming Republican convention in Cleveland. The reactionary leaders of the Republican Party, its bosses, its [illegible], while Magnus Johnson, the Farmer-Labor Senator, is speaking at the Cleveland Auditorium, primarily in 1924; while Senator Borah is to fall in line with Judge Kenyon, who was elevated to a Federal judgeship, [illegible], because of his services in opposing Congress to accept the Soldiers' Bonus; Borah is head over heels with [illegible] his own record as champion of Idaho, the reactionary Republican leaders, at the throttle of the Republican machine, are working hard to insure their riding roughshod over all insurgent forces at the coming national convention.

Big Business Sees Coolidge.

This week a group of select representatives of the biggest business interests of the country called at Coolidge's office and had a long session with him over the 1924 campaign. These leaders of finance and industry came to assure the President that they would be there to back him next year and that they would go the limit financially in backing him for the 1925 presidential campaign.

Among these "insiders" were the following big capitalists: Edward T. Stotesbury, of the firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., 23 Wall Street, New York, and Drexel & Co., bankers, Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Stotesbury is one of the most hidebound reactionaries and is an officer of at least one railway, power, banking, insurance and public utility corporations that have been in the forefront of the attack against organized labor. One need but mention the Reading Valley Railroad Co., the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Co., the Temple Iron Co., Coxey Iron & Co, coal magnates and the Philadelphia Coal Co.

James H. Stanley, a Denver capitalist and power king, William Wrigley, Jr., Chicago chewing gum king and multi-millionaire, and Fred W. Upham, party treasurer, who have each given $10,000 to the 1922 Republican campaign fund, and Frank Stearns, Coolidge's "Colonel House," a New England terrible baron and banker, kept Mr. Stotesbury company.

C. H. Huston, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and Ex-Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania, to whose time the notorious Cossacks of the State Constabulary perpetrated the indescribable criminal outrages against striking steel workers, were also present at this little confab to assure the Coolidge brand of stalwartism the coming four years.

Getting Ready for the Convention.

In anticipation of difficulties at the coming national convention, the Republican leaders have not also been supportioning the delegations allotted to each state in such a manner as to give unwarrantable strength to the states which will send vest-pocket delegations for Coolidge and thereby bring representation of stealing where the "insurgent" has more strength or where there is a "native son" to contend with.

On the basis of the Republican National Committee's plans for 1924 Coolidge is, at this date, assured of 691 delegates for the nomination. That this number of delegates has been obtained by the most overt acts of gerrymander is glaringly seen from an analysis of the allotted state delegations to the Republican National Convention, to be held in a few months.

"Sure" States Get Big Delegations.

In apportioning the state delegations these reactionary elements controlling the Republican party machinery have made it their business, without leaders, to give undue representation to those states which will unquestionably line up for Coolidge. Thus the southern states are to be over-represented in the coming convention. Alabama, for instance, on the basis of actual Republican strength, is entitled only to five delegates. Yet it will be given fourteen delegates to the National Convention. Applying the same principle Arizona, which is entitled to two delegates, will be given eight, Arkansas, entitled to four, will be given thirteen, Florida, entitled to three, will be given ten, Georgia, entitled to two, will be given nineteen, Louisiana, entitled to two, will be given nine, Mississippi's delegation will be raised from one to four, New Mexico will be given eight instead of two, North Carolina twenty-two instead of fifteen, the name for Oklahoma, South Carolina will be allotted nine delegates instead of one, Tennessee will be raised from eighteen to twenty-seven instead of seven, and Virginia seven instead of five.

The reason for this heavy padding of the Southern delegation are known to all students of politics. The Southern states are the by-products of patronage and fake prohibition enforcement and are in the main virtual appendages of the big fellows on top. All in all, the South will thus be given 112 delegates in excess of what it deserves on the basis of the real strength of the Republican Party.

Pursuing the same tactics for other "sure" regions, the reactionary group controlling the Republican machine is giving Connecticut 16 instead of 8, Maine 14 instead of 9, New Hampshire 10 instead of 6, Rhode Island 12 instead of 7 and Vermont 10 instead of 7. Here we have an additional 23 delegates automatically registered for Coolidge although they really don't represent any Republican voters.

On other "safe" states the multi-millionaire owners of the Republican party are also out for the same kind of [illegible]. Thus Colorado will be given [illegible] ten raised from 10 to 16, Nevada from 2 to 8, Utah from 6 to 12, and Wyoming from 2 to 8. In this way no matter what the sentiment of the rank and file Republican voters may be, no matter how they may desire to express themselves, the Coolidge-Stearns-Mellon-Wrigley-Stotesbury-Morgan-Dawes-Upham-Huston-Sproul-Stanley-Borah-Kenyon-Hoover-Hughes-Hilles-Hays-Hadley-Hamilton Lee-Work-Fall-Daugherty-Weeks-Wadsworth-Lodge-Watson-Curtis-Harding-Harry New-Penrose-Reed-Moses-Crane-Butler-Smoot-Sutherland-Willis-Fess-Pepper-Capper-Ernst-Frelinghuysen-Edge-Pinchot-Pepper-Vare-Mellon-Andrews-Slemp-Davis-Dawson-Mondell-Lenroot-Nicholas Longworth-Fordney-McCumber-Tilson-Wood-Watres-Hamilton Fish-Wainwright-Lowden-Sinclair-Harvey-Daugherty-Miller-Stearns-Weeks-Wadsworth-Lodge-Watson-Curtis-Harding-Harry New-Penrose-Reed-Moses-Crane-Butler-Smoot-Sutherland-Willis-Fess-Pepper-Capper-Ernst-Frelinghuysen-Edge-Pinchot-Pepper-Vare-Mellon-Andrews-Slemp-Davis-Dawson-Mondell-Lenroot-Nicholas Longworth-Fordney-McCumber-Tilson-Wood-Watres-Hamilton Fish-Wainwright-Lowden-Sinclair-Harvey-Daugherty-Miller-Stearns machine has thru this manoeuvre secured for Coolidge 782 delegates who do not represent any existing voters of the Republican party.

"Doubtful" States Hard Hit.

The engineers of the weekly Republican fiasco also sometimes in their stealing of the delegations allotted to the states that can likely to make trouble for his Old Guard at the coming convention. For instance, California, which is entitled to 29 delegates is given only 26. The only reason for this slash lies in the fact that Hiram Johnson will most likely head the California delegation and Hiram Johnson as a potential opponent of Coolidge must be stripped as close to his skeleton as possible.

Illinois which will very likely stand for Lowden at the Republican convention is given only 58 delegates, though it is entitled to 60. Michigan entitled to 48 delegates is given only 32. Because of the unseating of Truman Newberry, who bought his seat in the Senate and because of the weird possibilities of a Ford boom in this state, Michigan is being hard hit. Minnesota, which has revolted against the Old Guard and elected two Farmer-Labor Party Senators, will be given 26 instead of 32 to which it is entitled. New York, which always has its own fat to fry in the political pan, will be given only 92 votes instead of the 117 it should have. Ohio a state noted for breeding dark horses in presidential races, is to be permitted to have only 50 delegates instead of the 74 to which it is entitled. Kentucky, a doubtful state, is to be given 26 instead of 28 votes at the national convention.

In this fashion the possible opposition of Coolidge is deprived of 181 delegates that should be seated in their ranks in a representative Republican Party Convention. Similarly the numbers added to the reactionary strength thru padding and the votes stolen from the opponents of Coolidge, thru the fiats that are or that equivalent have thus been chalked up on the asset's side in the political ledger of the big business interests dominating the Republican machine and standing behind Coolidge.

Pity the Poor "Progressives."

Here we have the game in a nutshell. The reactionaries have the plan and the courage. The so-called progressives in the rank and file of the Republican party, the so-called insurgents that have been making all the late noise have neither the manner nor the courage to carry them thru in the coming fight. They are accepting this high handed manoeuvre on the part of their reactionary opponents lying down. They are not doing a thing about it and what is more they are not even talking about doing anything regarding this gross gerrymandering.

The workers and working farmers can learn one very significant lesson from this. The progressives and kid-hearted reformers living in the dens of the Democratic and Republican party business interests are not to be trusted, and not be followed. These progressives are devoid of political spine and don't have at this late date, even the slightest semblance of a program of action for the 1924 campaign.

The road to salvation for the workers and working farmers of America lies only in their own united and political economic strength.

The Foster-Sigman Letter

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.

In their propaganda to create an atmosphere favorable for the expulsion of the left-wing elements out of the union, the officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union have stopped at nothing to stigmatize the Trade Union Educational League as a disruptive organization. The folly of this charge is completely demonstrated by recent developments.

Some weeks ago I wrote a letter to Eugene V. Debs complaining about the lying statements that had been given out relative to our interview in Terre Haute, Ind. He replied proposing that a conference be arranged outside the difficulty in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. In consequence I wrote a letter to President Sigman to that effect.

The latter has made absolutely no acknowledgement to me of the receipt of this letter, in spite of the fact that it has been in his hands for almost two weeks. On the contrary, an effort has been made to underhandedly use the letter to discredit the League by making it appear that the League has been defeated and is now begging for mercy. This forces the publication of my letter to Sigman:-

Foster's Letter to Sigman.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 25, 1923.

Mr. Morris Sigman, President,
Int. Ladies' Garment Workers' Union,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sir and Brother:

Some weeks ago I had occasion to write to Eugene V. Debs relative to certain statements appearing in the press and dealing with the present controversy in the I. L. G. W. U. over the Trade Union Educational League. In reply, Comrade Debs, at the conclusion of his letter, made the following self-explanatory proposition for the solution of the difficulty, which I quote verbatim:

"Now, in closing let me say that I would like to have this matter adjusted before greater harm is done and before further disaster follows, as much as any one possibly can, and to this end I think you and your associates, represented by a proper committee, of which you should certainly be a member, should meet a committee of the officials of the union, face each other, and in a decent spirit try to arrive at an understanding. I would like very much to be present at such a conference to know the truth and the situation concerning which only the most conflicting reports have come to me."

Realizing that Comrade Debs' proposition was a practical one, I, upon instructions of our National Committee, wrote him as follows:

"First, let me deal with the closing paragraph of your letter, in which you propose the formation of a conference at which the matter in dispute in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union can be threshed out by representatives of the union and of the League, and at which conference you should be present. I think this is a very practical proposal. Our National Committee accepts it wholeheartedly and will be glad to participate in such a meeting at the earliest date. Like yourself, we believe that a stop should be put to this matter before further harm is done. It is very probable that a round-table talk would be productive of good results. We await your further pleasure in this matter. So far as we are concerned, you have the authority to go ahead with the arrangement of the proposed conference. May we hope, however, that it will take place in Chicago, so that there will not be too much expense involved."

In that part of his reply dealing with the matter of the proposed conference, Comrade Debs wrote to me as follows:

"In my previous letter, I called your attention to the statements of the respective sides engaged in the unfortunate controversy involving the expulsions of your members from the International Ladies' Garment Workers, and the utterly conflicting nature of such statements, and I informed you that I had suggested to the representatives of the Garment Workers that the proper way to arrive at the truth and to a possible understanding would be to have the representatives of both sides meet and go over the situation in detail in presence of one another so that at least the essential facts of the situation might be brought out clearly as a basis for the possible adjustment of the difficulty which menaced the interests of the organized workers. To this proposition you have readily assented and you now invite me to participate in such a conference, preferably in Chicago, if it can be arranged, but unfortunately I cannot see my way clear to do so in my present situation. The work in which I am engaged on the road and the further work laid out for me during the coming weeks will tax my strength to the limit and beyond it, and I can see no immediate prospect of being able to render service in the capacity suggested by you, and which I appreciate fully implying as it does the confidence you have in me, except as I would do so under other circumstances. If it were in my power to do anything to further peace and unity and to bring about an understanding and a better feeling, of course, I should regard it a privilege as well as a pleasure to do so, but I have already so much pressing upon me wherever I go that I find it impossible to make you any definite promise of assistance at this time. I am not at all my normal self nor have I been since I left prison, but I am doing the best I can with such strength as I have, hoping that if I can keep within the bounds of moderation, I may be able to recover myself more fully in time and be able to render more satisfactory service to the cause. I am sure you, at least, will understand that if I cannot comply with your wishes in this instance, it is not due to any lack of sympathy and good will.

"In closing, I venture to suggest that you make your proposition for a joint hearing direct to the officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, and if they agree to a conference, and it is possible for me to be in attendance, health and other conditions permitting, I shall, if desired, gladly render any service in reaching the desired end in my power."

In conformity with the suggestion of Comrade Debs, I am, therefore, on behalf of the Trade Union Educational League, proposing to you that there be a conference arranged between representatives of your organization and ours, at which the general question of the controversy over the left-wing shall be considered. We make this proposition in all good faith, hoping that a way will be found to end the present deplorable situation. We trust that you will accept. Please advise us at your earliest opportunity.

Fraternally yours,

WM. Z. FOSTER, Sec'y-Treas.

Now Up To Sigman

Now what is Sigman going to do about it? This conference was proposed by Eugene V. Debs, not by us. We recognize that it is the proper step to take and we are willing to take it. If Sigman will not grant this request for a conference, it will demonstrate beyond all question of a doubt that his charges against the League are fallacious and that he does not want a settlement except by the destruction of the left-wing.

It will prove that the real basis of the attack against the League is not that it is a dual union, but that it carries on a militant campaign for amalgamation, a labor party, and other progressive measures that are obnoxious to the Gompers' bureaucracy, of which Mr. Sigman is a part.

We resent the assertion that the League is weakening under the bureaucrats' attack. If the officials of the I. L. G. W. U. are correct in their open that theory they are doomed to a bad disappointment. Therefore, as Mr. Sigman has failed to agree to our letter when it was sent privately, we will publish it and see if that will do.

We are perfectly willing to let the rank and file judge who is right in this fight. The outcome of this affair will demonstrate conclusively the real destructive attitude of the right-wing officials.

Facts Show Smashing of Unions Continues

As a result of a visit by Abe Cahan's pie-plopotentiary extraordinaire, Meyer Perlstein, to Cleveland, the Joint Board of the International, which had at a previous meeting declared a "truce" with the order from the G. E. B. to expel T. U. E. L. members, was confronted with an ultimatum that this action must be carried out immediately. In spite of the threat that all those voting against the order of the International officials would be summarily expelled, 9 delegates voted against the ultimatum, 16 voted for it and 3 Group Leaders from Local 26, who had been objected to at a former meeting, was refused a seat by the Joint Board because of his membership in the Trade Union Educational League by a vote of 11 to 10. Chevalier members expect the actual reign of terror to begin in a short time.

After a farcical meeting in Hotel Brewster, Boston, it was decided to expel Shapiro for having distributed leaflets, and for having the inexcusable audacity of belonging to the League. This was done over the protest of Local 49 delegates, which refused to browbeaten into submission. In the Waist Makers' Union local, a skunk named Bernstein was elected over the protest of the officialdom threatened expulsion unless the decision to donate $10 to the Chevalier Committee for the "Free Freiheit," was reconsidered. In order not to give the union saviors an excuse for breaking the union, the action was withdrawn. Individual waist makers will make up five times the $10 and send it to "Free Freiheit" they know the excellent work done for them by that paper in their last strike.

In Chicago, also, Local 100 has been put into receivership by Feristein. A charter was appointed by the Joint Board. The sentiment of the membership can be seen by the fact that three officials had to be chosen in Local 100, only the chairman being an outsider, to take the dictatorship, and three officials had to be chosen in Local 100, only the chairman being an outsider, to take the dictatorship, and three officials had to be chosen. No meetings will be held for the local until Feristein feels sure that no proportional votes will be heard. This pinhead Musaolini has also been instrumental in having members fined anywhere from $25 to $50 for distributing leaflets and signing petitions, not at meetings or in the shops, but on the street. Among those who have been thus fined were Comrades Gaber and Kreingold. Minnie Belofsky, Anita Whitney and Philip Houser were not fined but disfranchised for a period of two years.

At two meetings all over the country are rebelling against this back-stabbing policy of the reactionaries. At a meeting of Local 9, in New York, a local which contains over 10,000 members, it was decided by a majority of 2 to 1 not to accept the orders of the G. E. B. to expel all League members. This was done in spite of the fervent pleas and tear-shedding of two of the vice-presidents who were imported to present their side of the case—Jake Halpern and Ike Feinberg.

In Boston Local 56, voted not to recognize the union-smashing order to expel the progressives despite the hoarse threats of the upholders of the machine.

Labor Poet Speaks for Amnesty.

Ralph Chaplin, late of Leavenworth Penitentiary, will be the principal speaker in a series of amnesty meetings along the Atlantic coast, under the auspices of the General Defense Committee.

At the first large gathering, scheduled for November 19th, at Cooper Union, New York, the other speakers will be Frank P. Walsh, Harriet Cooper and Scott Nearing.

Chaplin is well known for his book of poems "Bars and Shadows" written chiefly in prison.

Sunday, Nov. 18, H. M. Wicks, well known lecturer on economics and kindred matters will speak upon the timely subject "The Coming Industrial Depression," in Hall No. 210, Capitol Building, 159 N. State St. 8 P. M.

TEN WORKERS SHOULD READ THIS COPY OF THE WORKER; KEEP IT IN CIRCULATION.

"Should Congress Probe Communism?" Is to Be Answered

The high salaried officials of the United Mine Workers of America following the example of the Scotts Transcripts and the New York Herald Tribune of the blackest of the capitalist papers—recently introduced a series of fantastic articles about the Communist and their activities in the labor movement of this country. The articles were based on "documents" taken by Searles and Lewis of the United Mines Workers of America, from the files of the department of justice. The capitalist press has seized the opportunity and gave the articles a prominent display.

The New York Times in an editorial, "A Case for Investigation," states: "It is at least a case that ought to be investigated. The articles mention names and cite times and places. The evidence assembled may not be wholly drustworthy, and may prove on examination to be inconclusive, but at any rate calls for an examination." The Workers Party has accepted the challenge of the capitalist press and Lewis who, pretending to speak for the miners of America, plays the part of an agent of the government. The Workers Party is ready and only glad to tell the broad masses of the American workers "Why Congress Should Investigate Communism."

Twenty-one huge mass meetings have been arranged for this purpose in various parts of the country. These meetings will be addressed by comrades C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of the Workers Party; Louis Engdahl, Editor of the "Worker", the official organ of the Workers Party and by Jay Lovestone, author of "Government Strikebreaker," "Steel and Coal," and "What Is What About Coolidge."

Communism is now and will be an important issue in the coming movement, whether the reactionary officials of the U. M. W. of A. and the capitalist class want it or not. Communism must come and hear the communists must be allowed to tell "Why Congress Should Investigate Communism."

The meetings will be held on the following dates:

C. E. Ruthenberg as speaker, Nov. 28, Emmet Memorial Hall, Ogden and Taylor Ave., Chicago, Ill.; 30, House of the Masses, 361 Main St., Worcester, Mass.; 6 Horticultural Hall, Front St., Worcester, Mass.; 7, Eagles Temple, corner Broad and Spring Garden sts., Philadelphia, Pa.; 20, Cincinnati, O.

J. Louis Engdahl as speaker, Dec. 4, Springfield, Ill.; 5, St. Louis, Mo.; 7, Kansas City, Mo.; 8, Omaha, Nebr.

Jay Lovestone as speaker, Dec. 1, Milwaukee, Wisc.; 2, Minneapolis, Minn.; 2, (Evening), St. Paul, Minn.; 3, Duluth, Minn.; 4, Superior, Wisc.

The hall will be announced in the next week's "Worker".

Keep Up Fight for Howat.

Resolutions still continue to pour in to "The Worker" demanding the reinstatement of Alex Howat and his associates in the Kansas district of the United Mine Workers of America. It is expected that this flood will grow in volume until the January convention in the Miners' Union, when it is hoped this fight will be carried to victory. Resolutions have just been received from Pittsburg, Kans., as follows:

WHEREAS, We the members of I. U. No. 1114, Pittsburg, Kans., believe a great deal of injustice has been done Brother Alexander Howat and his associate officers of Dist. No. 14, and

WHEREAS, Our National Constitution plainly states any and all members are entitled to fair and impartial trial, and

WHEREAS, Brother Howat and associate officers were expelled without said trial, and

WHEREAS, Brother Howat has been persecuted and, according to the daily press, charges have been preferred him, that he will be absolutely false, be it

RESOLVED, By daily observations we know Brother Howat and associates in office had all but the full confidence of the rank and file of Dist. No. 14 notwithstanding report to the contrary made by National Board member Jos. Harvey, therefore be it

RESOLVED, We, members of I. U. No. 1114, by unanimous vote demand that Brother Howat and associate officers shall stay in office with him be reinstated in the U. M. W. of A.

JOHN STRAH, RUDY POLLAR and JOS. BLANCHARD, Committee.
JOHN STRAH, Recording Secretary.

Centralia, Ill. Protests.

Similar resolutions have been adopted by the coal miners of Centralia, Ill., and vicinity, at a mass meeting held at the Opera House, at Centralia. They were signed by the officials of Local Unions, No. 58 and 1897.

Two factors in the immediate impulse at the White House may be the returns from publication of Hoehl's challenge to the recent Citizenship Conference here to "enforce the first amendment by releasing these political prisoners," and the work done by the Joint Amnesty Committee recently in Massachusetts. The president has begun to hear from home.

Call for Workers Party Convention

The Central Executive Committee of the Party has called a National Convention to be held on December 30th, 31st and January 1st.

There will be fifty delegates to this convention apportioned to the districts on the basis of dues stamps purchased for the months of July, August, September and October.

The expenses of the convention will be defrayed thru an assessment of 50c to be paid by each member at the time of voting for delegates from the branch to the city or district convention. This payment is obligatory upon all members, whether they vote or not. 25c of the 50c is to be turned into the district treasury for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the district convention and the other 25c is to be brought to the national convention by the delegates elected at the district convention. Each district will be expected to pay to the national convention an amount equal to 25c for each of the average membership of the district for the four months mentioned above.

Immediate arrangements are being made for district conventions. Elections may be held after November 30th and the district convention should be held not later than December 23rd.

The agenda of the convention will be published in the next issue of "The Worker."

Fraternally yours, C. E. Ruthenburg, Executive Secretary.

Call to Action for Progressives!

Now Is The Time To Select Honest, Fighting Delegates!

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

The miners of the North American continent will soon receive their official call to elect delegates for the coming convention. It behooves the membership to be careful in making their selection. You will have the chance to say whom you want in the coming convention, and have a greater chance of getting it, if you take that chance. To take that chance it is necessary that you elect a delegate who not only says he believes in the rights of the workers, but one who is willing to battle all the way to see that they get their rights. "Progress versus Reaction" will be the program during the convention sessions, with the wide awake, class conscious and determined miners fighting for progress against the rank reaction of Lewis and his army of pie-carders. Elect men who will support such propositions: "The Reinstatement of Alex Howat," "The Election of Organizers," "Nationalization of the Mines," "The Labor Party" and all of the issues raised by the Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America" and which are contained in their program. Remove the Bureaucracy and return the power of the United Mine Workers of America to the Rank and File.

Detroit Defense Council Announces Concert

The Labor Defense Council of Detroit announces an International Concert and Dance for Saturday evening, December 1st, in the Hoque of the Masses, 2101 Gratiot Ave., corner St. Aubin. This will be a truly international affair, participated in by every Language Section of the Workers Party in Detroit, Mich.

The Lithuanian Chorus will sing, as well also the Ukrainian Chorus. The German Singing Society has promised to contribute some worth while numbers. The always pleasing Russian String Orchestra will play. George Simenson, Finnish violin concertist, will give cornet solos. Hilma Simenson, Finnish soprano, will sing. Arvid Owens will contribute some piano numbers. The committee is in touch with other musicans to be announced later. The concert promises to be an event that will be long remembered among the workers of Detroit.

Following the concert, the evening will be spent in dancing. An admission fee of 50c for advance sales, and 60c at the box office, will be charged.

Carmen to Vote On Amalgamation

The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America will soon have a referendum on amalgamation.

Lodge No. 299, Minnehaha Lodge of Minneapolis, Minn., has initiated the referendum for amendments to the Grand Lodge constitution which will place the national organization on record for amalgamation of the existing railroad organizations. The proposal of Lodge 299 also embodies a plan for choosing a committee to enter into negotiations with all other railroad organizations taking similar action.

Industrial Registration Progressing.

The partial returns now in the hands of the National Office of the Workers Party indicate that the Industrial Registration of the membership is in full swing. During the first ten days of the month 100 branches sent in the records of their Industrial Registration. The Finnish, English, Finnish, South Slavic and Italian Branches are leading. Many of the branches have even succeeded to complete the entire registration and returned the blanks to the National Office.

Branches that have not yet acted upon the registration are urged to do so without delay, so that all the returns may be in the hands of the National Office by the end of this month.

To Complete Textile Amalgamation.

McMahon, president United Textile Workers. Thru this merger the several independent organizations now affiliated with the Federated Textile unions will become members of the A. F. of L.

An effort to organize the textile workers in the south is also announced by the United Textile Workers thru its emergency board which meets here Nov. 16.

FASCISM!

Has conquered Italy, and threatens the working class of Germany and all Central Europe. It is raising its head in America and, in its various forms, is boldly making a bid for power thru conspiracy and violence. It is insidiously weaving itself into the trade unions of America. In order to combat this menace, Fascism must be understood. The first complete explanation published, in America is contained in the news pamphlet,

Chicago Demonstrates for Soviet Russia and "The Daily"

Chicago gloriously lived up to its reputation as a militant working class center when on Nov. 7, the Sixth Anniversary of the Russian revolution, more than 4,000 workers packed and jammed their way into the great Ashland Auditorium for the Daily Worker mass meeting ever held under Workers Party auspices in Chicago. The party in Chicago has shown itself willing and able to take the great responsibility which it must shoulder when "The Daily Worker" is suppressed.

The meeting itself was one long demonstration of solidarity with the Russian Revolution and with revolutionary workers everywhere, and also a demonstration by the militant workers of Chicago of their determination to put "The Daily Worker" across.

It was indeed a dramatic moment when Robert Minor, during his speech, pointed upward and said, "Do you see that hole in the ceiling, and that one and that third one? They are bullet marks made by bullets which were meant for Foster. They want to kill Foster because it is to the interest of the capitalists and their agents in the labor movement to silence Foster. They may kill Foster, they may kill others of us, but they cannot kill the Communist movement."

"We are here to celebrate more than a Russian revolution," said Foster. "We are here to celebrate the world revolution, for even now the German proletariat is preparing to strike for freedom from the decayed capitalist system." There was prolonger applause when Foster said this.

Rose Pastor Stokes told how we had been celebrating the Russian revolution here in America every year by some revolutionary action. In this anniversary we will celebrate by launching a Communist daily." Indeed, the whole meeting, in addition to being a celebration, became a celebration seemed to be inspired by the project of launching the Communist daily.

Eight hundred dollars were collected. Three hundred red anniversary pennants were sold at a dollar each. And these pennants made a fine sight as they were being waved all over the hall.

Demonstration. No more fitting characterization can be found. From the opening Bach-Liszt anniversary fugue, the red adornment of the choruses but most of all from the spirit of the meeting, Nov. 7, has branded the Chicago movement with the deep red color of militant revolutionists.

"Bill" Dunne to Tell Chicago Workers Real Story of A. F. of L. Convention

The religious atmosphere so consistent with the heresy-hunting proclivities of the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor, created at the Portland convention prior to the expulsion of William F. Dunne, delegates from Silver Bow (Butte, Mont.) Trades and Labor Council, the frenzy of the "Fat Boys" at the defiance of a rank and file delegate in a blue shirt, the utter incompetence of this gathering of per capita sharks with a sprinkling of real workingmen, shall be described at "The Daily Worker" banquet to be given Nov. 17th, 7:30 p. m., at Douglas Park Auditorium, by William F. Dunne himself in his usual forceful sarcastic tayle.

Comrade Dunne has already given newspaper men a chance to present this picture from an angle which will fit the occasion. No "cut and dry staff," says Dunne. "It is too funny to be taken seriously."

The committee in charge of this banquet has cognizance of the fact that as yet our comrades and many sympathisers in Chicago have not had an opportunity to extend the welcome to the National Office on its arrival in Chicago which they have been carrying deep in the bottom of their hearts these many weeks, and this whole National Office staff has therefore been invited. This will be the welcome to Chicago.

Bob Minor has been selected toastmaster and it is rumored that there is not one in the country, proletaire, capitalist or intellectual, that can measure up to him in this capacity. J. P. Cannon will speak, and incidentally tell the story of how he defended "Spike" Moore against the ravine Chamber of Commerce and its judicial hangings in Peoria, Ill. Other prominent speakers will appear and be announced as soon as definite arrangement can be made.

All readers of this paper should take advantage of this opportunity. Admission tickets are $1.25, which is cheap for a very elaborate 7 course dinner. Tickets may be had at the office of this paper, 1009 N. State St., the Workers Party city office, 166 W. Washington St., Room 307, the various Proletarian Book Stores and from many comrades in charge of this affair.

Don't miss this opportunity. Remember the date, Nov. 17th, 7:30 p. m. Douglas Park Auditorium, Ogden and Kedzie Aves.

Other Chicago Activities.

During the month of October, four new branches have been organized in the Chicago district, the Bridgeport English in Chicago, a Greek branch in Pullman, a Lithuanian branch in Beloit, Wis., and a South Slavic branch in East Chicago, Ind. In addition a total of about 75 new members have been taken into the party in this district.

The party membership drive is well under way. Regular monthly propaganda meetings are being conducted in Chicago in nine different sections of the city with new members being taken in at every meeting and with more sections to be added. In Lake County, Ind., our comrades are arranging such meetings systematically in each of the cities, one after another. The field organizers two weeks visit in the Tri-Cities, Ill., resulted in several new members. He has now been on the job for three weeks in Chicago and begun work in doing organization work in Milwaukee for two or three weeks.

Nearly 25,000 leaflets "Why Every Worker Should Be a Communist and Join the Workers Party" have so far been disposed of in the district.

Local Chicago took quite effective part in the judicial election just held, by issuing a manifesto exposing the so-called labor progressives with their reactionaries and calling upon the workers to form a united front in the election. This resulted in a very healthy discussion in a number of unions.

I. W. W. in Annual Convention.

Fascisti Foes Win Free Speech Fight at Cicero, Illinois

One of the signal victories of the Anti-Fascist Alliance was won when Mayor Henry J. Sandulay, of Cicero, Ill. dismissed the charges brought by the police against the Anti-Fascist speakers, Alex Bail, Leon Lewis, editor of "The Worker", Nardo Giordino, business manager of the Italian weekly, and Ignacio Camarda, of the amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The charges against the three speakers grew out of the breaking up of an Anti-Fascist meeting in Cicero, Oct. 12.

The police officers making the arrests charged the speakers with "exhibiting the flag" and charged that the workers "overthrow the government," but when a jury trial was demanded, Oct. 14, and finally came up for trial, the case was postponed to Oct. 21. On the latter date it was again postponed until Nov. 10 for further investigation.

In the preliminary hearing, England, speaking for the Anti-Fascist Alliance, explained the purposes of the Anti-Fascist Alliance, showed it had been created by the organized labor movement, not only that, but that the Anti-Fascist movement had been endorsed by the recent Portland Convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Prosecutor John Christenson asked time to investigate these statements. When the case came up in court the third time the prosecutor Christenson stated that the facts as presented by Engdahl were found to be correct and recommended that the charges be dismissed.

One meeting has been held since the arrests. It was unmolested. The Italians, the Lithuanians and Czechoslovaks, who make up a large part of Cicero's great industrial population, are joining the Anti-Fascisti movement. It is felt that this big Chicago suburb will soon be made safe for the working class.

Not only the Anti-Fascisti Alliance, but the Civil Liberties Union stood back of this struggle for free speech, with the pledge of legal and financial aid. The cases were carried forward with the advice of Attorney Samuel H. Holland, of Chicago, who Engdahl is speaking for the defendants in court. This resulted in no expense with the exception of $6.00 demanded as a fee in making out the bail bonds.

"The dismissal of these charges is a direct rebuke to the overzealous Fascisti elements to be found in Cicero and other industrial suburbs of Chicago," said Engdahl. "There is no doubt that they were a factor in instigating the arrests during a perfectly peaceful meeting, to which workers of all nationalities had been invited. The police officers, a Lithuanian in uniform, and an Italian plainclothesman, who had been charged with disorderly conduct instead of the speakers, in that they were the ones to break up a peaceful meeting.

He will then speak in Buffalo, Jamestown, Rochester and Binghamton—all of New York State. He is also scheduled to spend a few days in Ohio and will then address the open forum at the House of the Masses, 2101 Gratiot Ave., Detroit, Mich, Sunday, 2 p. m., Dec. 9.

[illegible] to be the [illegible] of our [illegible] as far as [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] workers. Buy them in lots of five or more at the wholesale price as listed, or at retail. Thus, you will get a copy for yourself free, or you will have one to give away to some worker who could not be at first induced to buy, free of charge. This has been done, it is being done, and successfully, too, every day in the year. As stated before, it can be done. Just try and you will be convinced. If John Smith, Sam Snyder, Alex Morgan and Peter Zeltransky can do it—you surely can do the same. You would be doing good work.

Mark the following down in your note book, not to forget it, that a THIRD EDITION of John Pepper's "THE LABOR PARTY" is just off the press and the literature department is in a position to fill orders. Twenty-four pages were added to the second edition which makes the pamphlet up to date and complete. The price is 20 cents a copy or 13 cents in lots of 5 or more. WHY EVERY WORKER SHOULD BE A COMMUNIST AND JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY, at 1c a copy, 50c a hundred, were the best sellers last week. Pretty near 200,000 have been sold thus far. It is a peach of a pamphlet and you should help distribute not less than 500,000 by new year. A new pamphlet: STRATEGY OF THE COMMUNISTS, is off the press this Thursday. This pamphlet will be the A B C of Communist tactics. 10c per copy. In lots of 10 or more 6c. Another new pamphlet: THE EXPLOITATION OF LABOR, by H. M. Wicks, is being proof read and will be ready soon. In the meantime everybody should concentrate on such as we have on hand. Particular attention should be given to the pamphlet: THE STRUGGLE OF THE LABOR UNIONS AGAINST FASCISM, by Andreas Nin.

Sam Gompers the Parrot---The Same Screech for Forty Years

The old boring parrot of the American labor movement, Samuel Gompers, has for forty years been the cause of much disgust. For forty years emitted the same screech at every convention of the American Federation of Labor: Hands off government and legislation, and no independent political action! Parrots are long-lived, and once they have learned one or two human words, they never forget them, and repeat them constantly, whether it is in place or not. Gompers is similar to a parrot not only in the respect that he is long-lived, but also in the extremely rigid state of his mind, which has made it possible for him to utter the same rasping cry for forty years: No Labor Party, no independence from the capitalist parties!

The Government and the Workers.

That has been for four decades the sum total of the political wisdom of Gompers and the A. F. of L.? Of course, the few class conscious elements of the American labor movement know even forty years ago that these policies meant the selling of the birth-right of the working class for a mess of lentils. But it would be naive to believe that Gompers and the American Federation of Labor could have dictated this policy for so long, if important material conditions had not made that possible.

What were these material conditions?

Gompers could preach the doctrine that the workers should keep away from politics, and that the government should confine itself to laissez faire in the affairs of capitalist enterprise as long as the United States did not have a real central government. In forcing through Labor's first Compulsory Service Act, the capitalist state power was compelled all its forces against the trade unions, which interfered extensively in the daily life of the workers. During the Civil War, which enormously increased the power of the Federal government in the United States as well. The world war has produced a new & centralized government to a degree hitherto unknown. The presidential dictatorship has unlimited power. All the overthrown Czars and Kaisers could well envy him. The entire industrial life, from munitions building, manufacture of munitions, production of all kinds of raw materials, were placed under the control of the government. The railroads, telephone and telegraph were placed under the control of the government. In the war industries compulsory labor was created under direct government control. The espionage law struggled all adverse criticism directed against the government. All rights of the individual states were subjected to the rule of the national government. Thru conscription, an army of millions was created.

The land of the free and the home of the brave became a land of compulsory labor and conscripted soldiers. The country of individualism was turned into a country with immense bureaucracy. The number of government employes in the civil service in 1884 was 18,780, and in 1918 it was no less than 917,760. The world war did not start this unheard of development. This process took place during the world war. The world war only accelerated it. This process is the result of the growth of the productive forces and the concentration of capital. The development of the trusts, the growth of the power of finance capital, the concentration of capitalist production in steadily enlarging units.

Then the government has returned the railroads to private interests, but the capitalist class threw thru the Esch-Cold Labor Board. The famous old American rights exist today just as little as they did during the war. The government is the dictator in the question of coal. In every great battle between capital and labor, the Federal government assumes the role of arbitrary judge. The government mobilized troops in fifteen states against the last coal and railroad strikes. The Daugherty injunction placed the whole might of the government in the service of capital. The number of government employes in 1921 was 597,482. The United States has today a standing army of 280,000 men and 17,000 officers and a national guard of 435,000 men.

Wherever the workers turn, they face the might of the government and the courts. Against strikes, troops! Against agitation, courts! Against social legislation, courts! For raising the cost of living, tariff legislation! The daily life of every worker is most profoundly affected in every respect by administration, control and power of the government.

The great revolutionary crisis of Germany has put the question of power before the entire working class of the world. It has shown that the capitalist class is the dictatorship of capitalism, and that the dictatorship of capitalism is the dictatorship of the capitalist class. Other than the facts themselves, Gompers' cry, the great revolutionary cry, "Keep away from politics!" is the cry of the servants of capitalism, the cry of the capitalist class itself. The capitalist party against the bosses and the government---the Labor Party.

Capitalism---that dangerous and three, revolutionist---has beaten the senile policy of Gompers' all along the line. Capitalism has created the greatest division of labor, has amalgamated the workers regardless of trades, nationality and skill; and thereby created the amalgamation movement. Capitalism has created the centralized state power or the slightest weapon of capital, and thereby has forced organized labor to political thinking. Finally, capitalism has accumulated the class differences to an unheard of degree, thereby putting an end to the policy of "punishing the enemies" and rewarding the friends" within the old capitalist parties. The idea of a Labor Party was born. The Labor Party movement has been created by history itself. In spite of all skepticism, all opposition by the mighty and treacherous officialdom of the American Federation of Labor, the non-partisan policy will break on the hard steel of facts.

The Labor Party movement is today on the march. Whether Gompers can prevent the Labor Party movement from being organized in the year 1924 or 1925 or later, is only a question of time. The Labor Party movement between the capitalists and the workers, between the capitalist class and the working class, is the only way out of the present crisis. The Labor Party movement is the only way to the dictatorship of the proletariat.

The Non-Partisan Policy.

The non-partisan policy has always been a shameful betrayal of the historical interests of the working class. But even the most shameless betrayal cannot be continued for years if the material conditions do not make it possible. The two old parties---the Republican and the Democratic parties---developed in a period when the class conflicts were not as yet acute. Even the class differences were not as great as at the present time. This situation explains why capitalists, farmers, and workers could find room in one and the same party. The gigantic accumulation and concentration of capital, the ever-growing might of big industry, banks, and railroads, has ruined the lower middle class, has driven the farmers into bankruptcy, and has welded the workers more and more distinctly into a separate class.

Fight Made for Independent Political Action at the Conference of Trade Union Women

By JEANNETTE D. PEARL

The Eastern Conference of trade union women in the vicinity of New York met at Echo Hill Farm, Yorktown Heights, N. Y., Oct. 20-21. The conference was conducted by the Women's Trade Union League of New York. There were present some 75 delegates, representing twenty different trade unions with representatives of the W. T. U. L. and the Industrial League of Housewives. A few delegates were men.

Rose Schneiderman, of the W. T. U. L., presided. The program consisted of the four following subjects: Legislation for Women Standards, Trade Union Organization, Workers' Education, Permanent Peace, for which committees were elected.

John O'Hanlon, the secretary of the Legislative Committee of the New York State Federation of Labor, in outlining the political policy of the A. F. of L., spoke of its non-partisan stand.

Leonard Bright, of the Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' Union, supporting the A. F. of L. policy, said that for the present we must content ourselves with it until such time when we hope to place labor candidates in the field. Rose Rosen, of the same local, arose and made a recommendation that instead of hoping for independent political action, the conference put itself on record endorsing it, since so-called friends of labor from the old capitalist parties are proving so untrustworthy. She made a spirited fight for her recommendation, but it was of no avail, for the recommendation was ruled out by the chair on the pretext that the subject was not on the agenda. Rose Schneiderman also voiced her objection to independent political action of labor.

The conference endorsed the 48-hour Bill, Minimum Wage, Constitutional Amendment for Child Labor, a State Fund for Workers' Compensation, Old Age Pension (over 65), Mothers' Compensation.

The conference approved a campaign to organize the 200,000 office workers, accepted the recommendation that the W. T. U. L. take the initiative in forming a Joint Organizing Council for the purpose of launching an intensive campaign among unorganized women. The council is to be composed of delegates from cooperating local unions. The organization of a state committee by the New York League to co-operate with representatives of labor organizations was also accepted.

The Educational Committee made an appeal to the delegates to study the labor movement, to attend classes and support workers' educational undertakings. A comprehensive educational program was worked out with special emphasis for educating foreign-born workers.

On permanent peace, the Box contest was approved. The U. S. government was urged to set up a permanent court of industrial justice representing all peoples. Maude Malone, of the Library Employees' Union, suggested that instead of making an appeal to the government against war, all workers should be called upon to refuse to fight. But even this mild suggestion was not accepted by the staid body of delegates bent upon dotting the proverbial "i's" confronting female labor and labor in general, but not really seeking a solution.

Talking of "unknown" soldiers, we notice that Bonar Law was buried by the side of an "unknown" soldier. And it is safe to predict that Bonar will be as unknown to fame as any "unknown" soldier, before many generations.

Young Workers Show Progress at Chicago Membership Drive

The recent membership meeting of the Young Workers League of Chicago was another mark of the progress of the revolutionary youth movement.

The Chicago League outlined a very exhaustive program of activities and from all symptoms it will reap good results.

Three weeks after rendering their pledge for $1,000.00 for The Daily Worker Campaign the Young Workers League of Chicago has now raised more than one-quarter of its quota.

After all the members of the Chicago League have been solicited, the house to house campaign will begin.

J. Louis Engdahl, who addressed the membership meeting of the Chicago League, pointed out the real significance of a "Daily" for the Youth Movement.

He pointed out how the capitalist press dopes the minds of the young workers who get their current events in the form of anti-"red" propaganda.

Thruout the whole meeting the new slogan adopted by the City League, "EVERY MEMBER—A NEW MEMBER," seems to have grasped every member present. From the attitude displayed at the meeting Chicago will double its membership by the next convention.

The Sports Director brought in a report which showed fair progress. A gym class has been opened at 1902 W. Division St., and all members, boys and girls, can register. The class meets every Tuesday evening, from 7 to 9 p. m., and participants should bring, if possible, regulation gym outfits.

A general meeting of all young workers employed in the Needles trades will be held on the evening of Nov. 14th, at 1902 W. Division St., at which William Z. Foster will speak.

All Y. W. L. members whether they are union members or not must be present at this meeting, which is called by the Industrial Department of the Y. W. L.

The Young Workers League has not forgotten that William Z. Foster will be retried and therefore will participate in the entertainment which will be given by the Labor Defense Council, Dec. 9th, Sunday Afternoon, at North and Western Ave., at North-Western Hall. For this occasion the Young Workers League has been entrusted to arrange the program and those who are familiar with Young Workers League entertainments will not hesitate to be present.

Russian Workers Call For Unity

The all Russian Textile Workers' Union, The Central Committee of the all Russian Metal Workers' Union, and the All-Russian Leather Workers' Union have issued an appeal to life at Amsterdam for a united front against the big business interests now strangling the German workers.

The address points out that the Russian workers have repeatedly sought unity of the workingmen of all countries in order to prevent the spread of Fascism and to save the working class of Germany from the restoration of military rule.

It is especially encouraging to note that the well known labor leader Edo Fimmen is 100 per cent for accepting the unity proposal of the Russian workingmen. At an enthusiastic meeting of railroad workers in Prague, Fimmen declared himself in complete harmony with the Russian trade unions and pledged himself to do all in his power to have the Amsterdam International accept the unity offer of the unions of Soviet Russia.

Who Are the Real Union Wreckers?

Progressives Match Records With Lewis

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH,
Secretary, Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America.

The oft-repeated charge of the Lewis machine, that the Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America is a dual union, and is engaged in the task of wrecking the Miners' Union is so ridiculous, that even a large portion of the elements who formerly supported the reactionary tactics employed and are throwing their weight on the side of the Progressives. The facts are that the machine would like the Progressives to do some wrecking work, so as to provide an excuse for the deplorable and "provisional" condition of our union today.

Knowing the game, we do not intend to allow ourselves to shoulder the burden of other Lewis gang or any of his gang's guilty actions by stepping into the many chasms created for us. Let us answer them by a presentation of facts. Lewis revoked the charter of District No. 14 while the Kansas miners were engaged in a life and death struggle, and used Van Bittner to do the inside dirty work, and by this act won the everlasting gratitude of the South Western Coal Operators Association. Van Bittner was probably selected for the job because of his previous record in District No. 5, where he was so rotten that he was forced to resign, and because of the "good job" he did in Alabama.

The Alabama miners went long hours and get short pay. Lewis revoked the charter of the Tennessee district and up a "Provisional" district. Lewis permitted the Kentucky district to work during the 1922 strike. Lewis signed the Cleveland agreement and left the Fayette, Somerset and Westmoreland miners in a contract, and later when he considered the time opportune, he called off the strike, an act in itself a betrayal to win the condemnation of any thinking member of the miners' union. Later when a demand for a charter was made by the Coks Region Miners, he created a Provisional District No. 4 with Billy Feeney as "Provisional" Pres.---but that means nothing but a place on the "payroll" for Feeney and his son, and a couple of men from the region who were taught how to "pad" their expense accounts while the strike was in progress. Lewis revoked the charter of District No. 26 and created another Provisional District, with Silby Barrett as Provisional President, and the Directors of the British Empire Steel Co. are very happy. If "Besco" had been asked to do the job, it could not have been done any better.

Added to these big jobs, is a small job, though just as contemptible, of revoking the charter of Local Union No. 1446 at Arden, Pa., because the members of that local refused to scab. This charter was revoked by President Fagan of District No. 5, acting on instructions from Lewis because the men who were striking, after being advised to do so by District Vice-President Patton, refused to return to work until the company declared their willingness to abide by the contract which of course they would not. The company ordered all the miners to remove their tools, paid them off and then began the process of hiring the Conservatives, and, to use the words of the superintendent, "Run the D---- Reds down the road." For nearly two weeks, the miners who were rehired worked without a charter; the company hired a gunman, and everything was working nine hours per day except the tipple and still is (District No. 5 officials please notice). Then came the district officials and held meetings to reorganize the conservatives and despite the fact that the miners of Arden own their own hall, the meetings were held on company property, but that was probably done so as to have the protection of the gunmen if they needed it, or perhaps so as to keep the Reds out of the meetings. Altogether about forty active workers were blacklisted, among whom is one Richard Cox, secretary of the old local who lost his arm a few years ago at this mine and is unable to get work elsewhere. Another one who lost out is William Hardie, who committed the crime of hoarding the local President James McCurry.

Against this record the Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America can show that they prevented the formation of a dual union in the region when the strike was called off, they prevented another one in the anthracite field, and they prevented the secession movement from taking root in District No. 26, Nova Scotia, and are now engaged in putting a stop to another attempt in that district. These and numerous other instances, where we have nipped in the bud attempts to launch dual movements put us in a position to ask "who are the Real Union Wreckers" and also to answer "Lewis and Company."

The Capitalists Give Thanks

When the "fat boys" at the American Federation of Labor Convention showed the Communist William F. Dunne the way out, there was much rejoicing among the per capita sharks, who pose as trade union leaders. They had removed a man who talked about fighting the capitalists. This would never do in a convention which officially stood for the theory that capital and labor are brothers. The family tranquility must not be disturbed by an apostle of class war. "Friend capital" must not get the impression that his bulwark against radicalism is breaking down.

The labor lieutenants of capitalism have given encouragement to the plunderbund. Even such a hard-boiled sheet as the Chicago Journal of Commerce gloats over the prospects for labor-capital harmony, indicated by the red baiting policy of the labor leaders.

Giving thanks that the labor shortage no longer exists, it states "there is another and far more important reason why the labor situation is highly encouraging, both to employer and employee. That is the tangible and almost measurable change in the policies and practices of organized labor. The one big union idea and the theory of industrial unity has fewer supporters than at any previous time in the past five years. Conservative and intelligent, (?) (question mark ours) leaders are regaining their prestige and may almost be said to dominate organized labor today."

This is the development that the capitalists are thankful for. With reactionary leaders in control they can go ahead with their robbing of the workers without let or hindrance. But it is a serious mistake to think that the conservatives are regaining their prestige. On the contrary they are losing whatever they had. While the rank and file of organized labor go on record for amalgamation, a labor party and the recognition of Soviet Russia, the reactionary officials fight these issues, thereby placing a barrier between themselves and the rank and file.

The gifted writer then goes on to say that the regeneration of labor is marked in many ways, principally in eschewing politics and "minding its own business." This is an endorsement of the Gompers "No Labor Party" policy. After saddling the death of the scabs in Herrin, the murder of the railroad worker in Arkansas and other deeds, evil and otherwise, on organized labor, the capitalist hack boasts of a scheme evolved by Armour and Company in taking 40,000 of its 50,000 employes into "partnership." This he asserts shows a way out of the dilemma in which trade unions are placed in having to pay dues to "distant labor bosses."

If union labor follows the lead or trails behind men of the Gompers type, American unionism may be saved, but if not the "unorganized will be compelled in self defence to join with the employers in a death grapple with the trade union movement." This is the opinion of the writer in the Journal of Commerce.

But does he not know that the unorganized, thru the very fact that they are not in a trade union, are fighting the organized workers? And what is the present leadership of the American Federation of Labor doing to get them organized? The capitalists slap Gompers approvingly on the back for making war on the radicals in the trade unions, and then to show their contempt for him, they set about organizing company unions, so that the workers will not be obliged to pay dues to labor bosses. In return for his servility he receives the usual fate of a lickspittle.

Russia Shows Marked Advance

A thorogoing investigation has led the United States Department of Agriculture to find that "the most significant fact pointing to Russian recovery is an increase of from 15 to 20 per cent in the acreage sown to crops this season." The report goes on to say that "increases as high as 30 to 35 per cent in some of the famine regions have been reported to the Department."

In its explanation of the improved conditions The Bulletin points out that "the fact that rye has more nearly approached the pre-war acreage is explained by the department by the fact that most of the wheat was formerly grown on large estates and that since these estates have been broken up among the peasants there has been an increase in rye acreage at the expense of wheat."

In the light of these findings it is easy to understand the why and the wherefore of the proposed plan of President Coolidge to send a commission to Russia in order to negotiate an agreement for resumption of trade relations.

The great advance made by France, England, Denmark and other countries in the Russian market is causing every section of the American people to wake up to the fact that it is in the interests of the United States as well as Russia to have normal relations between the two countries resumed without delay.

The Greek king has fled. He does not want to be turned into a grease spot. When Greek meets Greek nowadays somebody gets his goose cooked.

A headline tells us that Coolidge mourns the ... And the unknown have good reasons to mourn. Coolidge has helped to place them among the unknown.

Lessons of the Election

The most notorious of the injunction judges, who ran for re-election in the recent judicial elections in Chicago, were victorious. Dennis E. Sullivan, the king of them all, winning with 216,000 votes in spite of the opposition of the Labor Committee on Injunction which was led by John Fitzpatrick, one of the leading lights as Victor Olander and Matthew Woll. Jesse Holdom, the other notorious judicial lackey, also crossed the tape with 200,000 votes in his pocket. As a result he can supply the master class with anti-labor injunctions for the next six years.

The result of the puny effort of the trade union officialdom to punish the most outstanding enemy of their class was a valuable lesson. It is a shining example of the total bankruptcy of the nonpartisan Gompersian policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies." Organized labor, as represented by the Labor Committee on Injunctions, was forced to endorse injunction judges in their attempt to defeat Sullivan and Holdom, the most notorious of the gang.

The only anti-capitalist party to place a ticket in the field was the Socialist Party. Even tho some of the candidates on the Socialist ticket were members of the trade union movement, they were not endorsed by the reactionary labor committee. The Workers party, not having any candidates in the field, endorsed the Socialist ticket.

The policy of the United Front, which the Workers Party urges on all working-class groups, is the only policy that can bring about unity of action among the workers. Railing at the reactionary leaders of labor will not serve any useful purpose. The revolutionists must prepare for the next election and be ready to place a ticket in the field, and in the meantime continue to advocate a united front of the trade unions with all political groups, that all the forces of the workers may go to the polls as a class and cast their votes for working-class candidates. If this is done we will not again have the sorry spectacle of a committee of labor officials endorsing capitalist candidates, including injunction judges, turning down independent political action. This policy will meet with the opposition of the reactionaries, but a strong rank and file sentiment properly organized will compel them to change their tactics or suffer the consequences.

Coolidge For Anti-Alien Laws.

The news that President Coolidge favors Secretary of Labor Davis's proposed anti-alien law was hidden away in an obscure corner of the capitalist press among the want ads. We wonder why.

For an Aggresive Leadership

An important election is approaching in the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America. It will be an opportunity to measure the recognized desire for progress of the membership of this important organization in the needle trades.

That the membership is discontented with the regime of the present secretary-treasurer, Thomas Sweeney, there is no doubt. The demand of the rank and file for the organization of the unorganized, for amalgamation of all the needle trades and for the Labor Party, finds very little or no response from the present administration.

The tailors do not have to go far to find the man they need for militant leadership. The sturdy militancy displayed by M. J. Sillinsky as delegate of the Journeymen Tailors' Union, at the Portland, Ore., Convention of the American Federation of Labor, stamps him as the type of official needed to interpret the new spirit, daily growing stronger, of the thinking sections of the American working class.

Sillinsky does not lack for qualifications. He is held to be the best speaker in the organization. He has been an official of the union already, in one capacity or another, for 12 years. He worked at the bench for nine years. He would thus bring to the most important office of the union the experience gained over a score of years.

We do not know what Sillinsky's feelings may be in this matter. But we do know that large sections of the union's membership would welcome Sillinsky's candidacy for secretary-treasurer at this time. Sillinsky should enter this struggle. He is sure of election. He will bring to the tailors' union the aggressive administration needed to make the organization an important and growing factor in the American labor struggle.

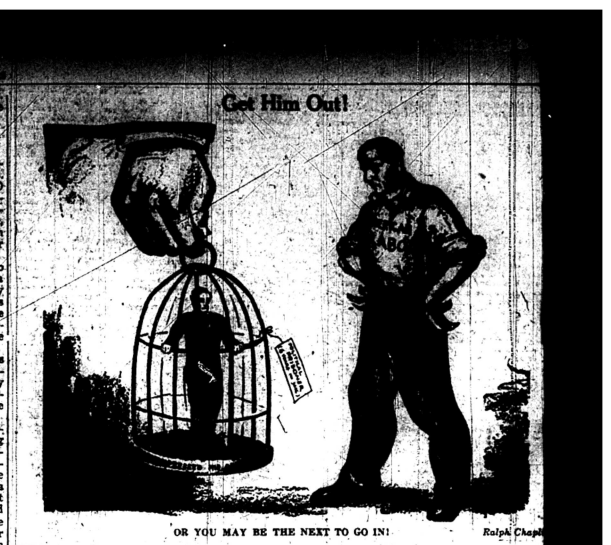
Among those who rejoiced over the defeat of the proposed Chicago Zoo was William Jennings Bryan. "Another defeat for the Darwinian theory," he declared.

Business Failures Increase

Dunn's Review for October shows a sharp increase in the number of domestic business failures. The business mortality for the month of October is the largest reported since last March and is over 36 per cent higher than the September total. Especially unfavorable is the volume of indebtedness incurred by the collapses. The amount is more than two and three-quarter times greater than the September total and has been exceeded only once before in any month. This was in December 1921. The indebtedness of the failures for October is 130 per cent higher than the total for the corresponding month of last year. All in all there were last month 1,673 failures involving $79,301,741.

The manufacturing failures were less than 30 per cent of the total number, 66 per cent of the insolvencies were amongst traders. However, 75 per cent of the total liabilities were suffered by manufacturers.

This October record shows exactly which way the wind is blowing so far as the economic conditions of the country are concerned.



The Rule of the Brass Check, The Shame of All Labor

What is the strength of the daily press in the United States, and how many daily papers in English are there which may be said to support the workers' side when, as in strikes, lock-outs, unemployment, injunctions, militarism, political corruption and all forms of oppression of labor at home and abroad the capitalist press pours forth tens of millions of papers filled with lies and misrepresentations of the workers' efforts and organizations?

Here we are:

Capitalist dailies:	Labor dailies:
2,492.	4
Circulation: 33,000,000.	Circulation: 152,501.

The four dailies which may be said to represent the daily labor press in English are:

The New York Leader, circulation 9,283

The Milwaukee Leader, circulation 45,845

The Minnesota Star, circulation..45,248

The Seattle Union Record, circulation 39,157

Workers: Is it not a shame that there is no more than this to call the "labor press" of this country? Weekly papers are impotent to fight against the great publications of the capitalists. A new, centrally located, centrally organized and vigorously conducted militant labor daily is needed. Not only are labor dailies few, but they are limited too much to local circulation and local interests. With headquarters in Chicago, the industrial center of America, THE DAILY WORKER will speak to the nation as a whole in a voice that will deserve and demand attention. To work, then, for THE DAILY WORKER!

The country was almost thrown into a panic last week when the startling announcement was made that "Mary and Doug" (you know who is meant) had a rift in their conjugal relations. We could stand the amorous pitfalls into which Charlie Chaplin led by his nimble feet, but to have the Sweetheart of American Dumbbellhood indulge in a matrimonial jamboree would be the last straw that would bend the donkey's back. It would be too much, on top of the European situation. We are much obliged to Doug and Mary because of their indignant denial of the story. The public can rest.

The capitalist press informed us a few days ago that Japan had definitely decided not to reopen the negotiations looking toward recognition of Soviet Russia. Then the following day this headline appeared: "Japan seeks to reopen Russian treaty parley."

Don't Throw This Paper Away Pass It on to Your Neighbor

The Rush to Southern California

By ROBIN ERNEST DUNBAR.

Hard times struck California during the World War; houses were plen ful and rentals low; prices for foods no higher than usual; fruit, vegetabl and California products plentiful and cheap; unemployment prevalent.

About 1919 or '20 the after-the-war prosperity began to operate and season of hectic real estate, oil and other bourgeois operations dawned. T all-the-year-round - out - door climate drew the falling and the fallen from the middle west, and the boom was on.

It is stated 2,500 people enter Los Angeles every day by auto during the height of the season; and that many more by rail. Many enter by boat, too; so that the growth of the town is phenomenal. Long Beach, where oil is King, is jumping faster than any city in the United States below the 100,000 mark. It seems the oil workers don't ditch their cards; and they constitute a strong union element in the inflowing population. Iowa farmers, who have been cheated out of their farms by the railroad trust and other sharpers, form the majority of the argonauts. One dollar wheat enthroned thousands and thousands of ranchers out of their land, and in desperation they are flying to the land of the sun hoping to be able to live and get by there, if not to get ahead.

Outdoor workers generally find something to do, and so save themselves from ruin. But indoor workers go to pieces in the mad struggle to find a base. Wages for women start and end mostly at $3 per day; for men at $5.50 in the stores and shops, and lucky to get a job at that. Mexicans do the rough work on the railroads, in the sewers, etc., at scab wages.

In Hollywood the most impudent pretenders stand a chance of work; modesty and worth need not hope there. All the half-wits gather there from the four corners of the earth, and those with the most brazen assumption, with the most tireless self-pushing, with the shrewdest chicanery and biggest bluff manage to get a toe-hold after heart-breaking struggles and rebuffs, and some rise to the top of bourgeois success and acclaim. But the percentage who do well from a bourgeois point of view is ne glig; while the percentage who g at 100 per cent, if we count loss manhood and womanhood. The w aim to succeed in that hotbed of ca talistic poison propaganda is indi tive of prostituted character.

The main outstanding events of five years' sojourn in and around L Angeles are: the raid on the I. W. Hall by the newly formed Americ Legionist lick spittles of capitalis the speeches of Ralph Chaplin shor after the Wesley Everest lynchi of William Z. Foster on Soviet Ru sia; of William Dunne on amal mation, and of Cannon on Comm ism in general. California is not as a labor baiting and hating sta and with Mooney and Billings, F and Suhr, innocent men, still prison after their innocence is pl to the whole world, its reputati isn't likely to be lost soon. Quentin is full to capacity of ra cals, and still is being crowded w more.

We saw a great deal of the st during our five years' residence th from Mexico to San Francisco; fr the Coast Range to the high Sierr from the Yosemite to the entrance Death Valley. And while we grew thusiastic at first over the many ma nificent changes of scenery, tow the last we cooled off quite a bit, viewed even the magnificent Colora Canyon with a bit of indifference, it was the constant hard struggle self-preservation and self-protection family which made it impossible maintain the same high pitch of thusiasm for even these wonders nature.

TEN WORKERS SHOULD RE THIS COPY OF THE WORKE KEEP IT IN CIRCULATIO

Railway Profits Show Big Increas

The September report for the first 35 class one railroads shows an crease in profits of $35,585,000 over the corresponding month of last ye This return is a 4.30 per cent profit on the present highly inflated proper valuation and compares with 2.88 per cent rate of profits for September, 19

Yet the railroad capitalists are refusing to grant an increase in wa to the workers of the Big Four. During September alone, according to Bureau of Labor statistics wholesale prices increased over 2 per cent. It especially interesting to note that the Interstate Commerce Commission h also reported a drop in the average paid for the maintenance of equipme forces. For instance, the shop workers have averaged for August of t year, $245.00, while in 1922 when strikebreakers were at work the avera was $231.00.

The employers are always blaming poverty when the wages of un workers are in question, but they never hesitate to squander millions maintaining strike breakers.

The Communists Constitute Only Force That Will Fight Militantly for The Working Clas

By ARNE SWABECK

The militant progressivism by which the Chicago Federation of Labor, thru its official spokesmen, formerly gained a leading position in the American labor movement, has been repudiated. One step backward has followed another until these spokesmen have come out in open support of black reaction.

The principle of amalgamation, once accepted with an overwhelming majority vote by the Chicago Federation of Labor, has been repudiated. It has refused to stand by its once adopted Labor Party policy. And now the Labor Committee on Injunctions, headed by John Fitzpatrick and appointed by him, at the instigation of Samuel Gompers, puts its official stamp of approval on the Gompers' political policy of "rewarding friends and punishing enemies." It endorses 21 judicial candidates selected from among the tools of the bosses on the democratic and republican tickets. The very policy which has many times in the past been declared obsolete by Fitzpatrick.

Thus a long journey has been completed in a short span of time. From an advanced position of lofty principles, leading the struggle toward a higher level for labor, Fitzpatrick and his "progressive" friends have come down to the ugly reality of spinning the first threads of an alliance with the arch reactionaries in support of the henchmen of capitalism. The lofty principles were hollow. The militant progressivism was only a bright tint which wore off at the first touch of the dead hand of Sam Gompers. The struggle for a united front of labor has been supplanted with open support of the representatives of craft conflicts. This action gave tremendous stimulus to the then already growing sentiment. It made a powerful national campaign possible, every day gaining in momentum and crystallizing into more definite expression. Today 12 International Union conventions, 16 State Federation convention and 3,277 locals of the sixteen standard Railroad Unions have endorsed amalgamation. But today Fitzpatrick and his "progressive" friends have shown they did not want amalgamation, because it represents a mighty surge toward a united front of labor. Because it means not only a mere change in the present form of organization. It means more efficient methods of struggle against the bosses, and with that the elimination of the present reactionary leadership.

Four years ago the Chicago Federation of Labor, under the leadership of Fitzpatrick and by referendum vote of its affiliated local unions, decided to take the initiative to form a Labor Party. It was a direct challenge to the obsolete Gompers' political policy. It lighted a spark of rebellion which further expanded when this year the Farmer-Labor Party joined in with the Workers Party in the campaign for a united Labor Party. The calling of the July 3rd conference, altho the Farmer-Labor Party refused to go along in the deliberations of this conference, gave a tremendous impetus to this campaign. It gave it national significance. It became a powerful expression of the rank and file sentiment crystallized into a united demand for united independent political action by the workers. The Farmer-Labor Party went ahead on top of the mighty waves because it had adopted the slogans of the united front put forward by the Communists. But at the crucial moment it did not stand the test. The outstanding spokesman for the Farmer-Labor Party, John Fitzpatrick and his "progressive" friends found that they did not want a united front Labor Party. They repudiated the principle upon which their own party was built. They have since refused to fight for the Labor Party idea, and now the betrayal has been completed with the endorsement of the capitalist judicial candidates.

This endorsement has been made under the plea of trying to defeat the two notorious Injunction Judges, Dennis E. Sullivan and Jesse Holdom, when as a matter of fact some of the endorsed candidates have a record of being as bitter enemies of labor as the two aforementioned. Indeed, past experience has proven conclusively that no matter how good the promises no matter what endorsements and faith may be placed upon the candidates on the capitalist tickets, they will always be willing to do the bidding of the masters. They will issue new injunctions at their request because they are bought and paid for by dominant capitalism. Yet some of those who subscribed to the endorsement, in the past professed to stand for independent political action by the workers, which has now been sacrificed.

Labor candidates were in the field. The Socialist Party ticket at least stands in opposition to the capitalist parties. Many of its candidates are members of organized labor, some are delegates to the Chicago Federation of Labor; but none of them were endorsed by the Labor Committee on Injunctions. True, the official leadership of the Socialist Party has thus and again manipulated its power of leadership to defeat the best interests of the rank and file and support the reactionary Gompers machine. The whole Daily Forward crew have become the messenger boys of Samuel Gompers in his red baiting campaign and goes to the extent of disrupting the unions by expulsions of militant workers. It has refused to fight militantly even for the daily needs of the workers, and as pointed out in the statement on this election issued by the Workers Party, Local Chicago, its program and tactics cannot lead to the emancipation of the workers from the rule of the bosses. The Socialist Party has refused to fight alongside of the only true workers' republic in the world—the Russian Soviet Republic. It carries a great deal of the responsibility for the present political division of the workers thru its refusal to join in a united front of labor for independent political action, and with it the responsibility for the fact that there is no united labor ticket in the field in this election. Some of its own candidates as the last Chicago Federation of Labor meeting made a miserable apology for the fact that the party had decided to put up an independent ticket in opposition to the official Gompers policy. Nevertheless the endorsement of candidates on the capitalist judicial ticket has thrown the principle of united action by labor to the discard.

It is precisely for this reason that the Workers Party, Local Chicago, called upon the workers of Cook County to vote the Socialist ticket in this election to uphold the principle and continue the struggle for a united front of labor; to emphasize the need of labor voting for labor candidates in opposition to those of the bosses. Such united front would by no means be an electoral combination for the pursuit of certain parliamentary aims. It is a call for united struggle in defense of the elementary and vital interests of the working class against the bosses. this case particularly the right to organize trade unions and to strike for better working conditions were at stake. Every such united struggle, even in an election campaign, is a source of revolutionary education and revolutionary training. It helps convince the workers of the need of uniting all as a class and solidify the ranks. Such united action will soon weed out the treacherous opportunistic elements with their reactionary leaders, and it will furthermore convince the workers of the inevitability of revolution and the importance of Communism.

The Workers Party has thus shown that it is the only force in the labor movement which sincerely fights for a united front of labor, and the only party which fights for the interests of the proletariat as a whole; while simultaneously it preserves an independent line of action. This is no small matter when it will make possible the building up of an independent power by the Workers Party, because the Communists are the only force which will fight militantly for the economic and political needs of the workers.

Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party Calls 1924 Convention; Joins Other Groups for United Front in National Fight

Bouck and Manley Represented the Federated Farmer-Labor Party at Preliminary Conference in St. Paul

(By Staff Correspondent to "The Worker.")

ST. PAUL, MINN.—A national convention of some three to five thousand delegates, representing several million organized farmers and workers, is forecast in the results of a conference held here, Nov. 15-16, for the purpose of uniting the various groups of the Farmer-Labor movement in this country.

The conference was called by the Farmer-Labor group of Minnesota, which invited all organizations standing for the creation of a Farmer-Labor Party, to fight the battles of the industrial workers and farmers politically, to send representatives to the conference.

There were present at the conference John Fitzpatrick and Jay G. Brown, representing the old Farmer-Labor Party nationally; William Bouck and Gerald Manley, representing the Federated Farmer-Labor Party; John C. Kennedy, representing the Farmer-Labor Party of Washington; Ray McKaig, Kennedy, representing the Farmer-Labor Party of Washington; Ray McKaig, representing the Progressive Party of Idaho; Charles E. Taylor, representing the Farmer-Labor Party of Montana; Tom Ayres and Alice Lorraine Bouck, representing the Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota; William Mahoney, H. Teigan, representing the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, representing the Committee of Forty-Eight, and J. F. Emme. George Meyers, R. D. Cramer, Fred Seigel, Frank Fisher, William Mahoney, H. Teigan, Roy C. Hawkins, A. C. Fields, Otto G. Nellermes, representing the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, and C. C. Platt, of the Wisconsin Non-Partisan League.

After a half-day of discussion, in which the various groups presented their views in regard to the present political situation in the United States, in which the need of a national organization for the purpose of uniting the various groups and nominating a candidate for president and vice-president, and adopting a national platform was stressed by practically every speaker, the session adjourned, without action being taken up.

J. A. H. Hopkins, chairman of the Committee of Forty-Eight, stated that several months ago his organization started a plan for a similar conference, to be held in Chicago, Nov. 15-16, and suggested that the St. Paul conference adjourn to meet with the Chicago conference. This plan was rejected by the conference and it was decided that the program which the conference adopted should be presented to the Committee of Forty-Eight conference for their acceptance, should this committee desire to join forces with the Farmer-Labor forces participating in the conference.

A proposal was made to the conference that all the organizations present join in signing a call for a national convention. This plan, however, was superseded by a motion made by Jay G. Brown, of the Farmer-Labor Party, proposing:

"That we, the representatives of the following organizations, in conference assembled, recommend that the Farmer-Labor movement of the State of Minnesota call a national convention, to convene in the Twin Cities, May 30, 1924, and we hereby appoint William Mahoney, H. C. Teigan and William A. Schaper, a committee, to issue such call and make the necessary arrangements; and further, that this committee be instructed to attend the Chicago conference, Nov. 15-16, and present to the conference the action of this conference and ask concurrence."

Later in the conference R. D. Cramer and J. A. H. Hopkins were added to the committee, making the full committee Mahoney, Teigan, Schaper, Cramer, and Hopkins.

Delegate McKaig proposed an amendment to the proposal, adding after the words "and that the national call, when issued, shall have the names of all the organizations which support it."

This amendment was adopted, and the representatives present were then requested to affix their signatures to the call. The following groups signed the proposal immediately:

Committee of Forty-Eight, J. A. H. Hopkins, chairman.

Farmer-Labor Party of Washington, John C. Kennedy, secretary.

Federated Farmer-Labor Party, Joseph Manley, secretary.

Federated Farmer-Labor Party, William Bouck, chairman.

Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota, Tom Ayres, chairman.

Farmer-Labor Party of Montana, Charles E. Taylor, representative.

Farmer-Labor Party of Montana, John J. McElroy, representative.

Progressive Party of Idaho, Ray McKaig, representative.

Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, William A. Schaper, William Mahoney and H. G. Teigan.

Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota, Alice Lorraine Daly.

The representatives of the National Farmer-Labor Party withheld their signatures pending reference of the call to their national committee for approval.

Representation in Convention.

The question of representation in the national convention was then taken up and a committee, consisting of Delegates Hopkins, Daly, Kennedy, Teigan and Brown was elected to bring in a report. The committee found, however, that the problem of representation in a national convention in which some of the organizations participating would be bound by state laws providing for their representation in a national party convention made it impossible to work out the details at once. The committee so reported and Delegate Kennedy made a motion, which was adopted, that it is the sense of this body that the committee call provide that all producers', political and economic organizations be entitled to representation.

Program Adopted.

The conference then adopted a program in line with the general principles of this program, are invited to send delegates."

Tell Co. and Ku Klux Klan Hands Off.

Alice Lorraine Daly brought before the conference a complaint against the Conference for Progressive Political Action to the effect that it was interfering in states where Farmer-Labor Party organizations already existed, and a resolution, which she presented, read:

"In order to hasten the bringing of relief to the farmers and industrial workers of the middle west, and in order to avoid causing discouragement to workers who have labored for many years to build up a Progressive Party in the several mid-west states, and in order that the weakening of the Farmer-Labor Party, now made imminent by the state branches of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, be made impossible,

"Be it resolved, That the National Conference for Progressive Political Action be hereby urged to support in South Dakota and elsewhere the efforts of established Farmer-Labor Party organizations, whose economic aims and its aims are identical, in preference to giving support to either of the old party organizations."

Delegate Taylor presented the following preamble for the proposed call for the convention, which was accepted and referred to the committee which is to issue the call for use in connection with that call:

Coolidge Neutral Toward Ex-Kaiser; How About Russia

By LAURENCE TODD,
(Federated Press Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON.—After a cabinet meeting, following the receipt of news that the ex-kaiser was to return to Germany, the Coolidge administration announced its policy to be one of indifference as to what form of government shall prevail in Germany if the monarchy is restored there will be no protest from Washington, for the change concerns only the Germans and the powers that ratified the Versailles treaty.

By taking the position that the existence of any particular form of government in Germany is none of the business of the United States, Coolidge sweeps away at one stroke the theory that the United States went into the world war to make the world safe against the Hohenzollern autocracy. He likewise demolishes the logic of the anti-Russian propaganda, and leads up toward a position where he might, if he chose, recognize the Russian republic. He abandons the position, then and intrenched in Woodrow Wilson, that the American armies went to the aid of Britain and France solely in order to rid the world of the menace of militarist imperialism, and that on this ground Wilson was justified in trying to drive Russia and restore the Czar.

But it will not be upon the Russian issue that the logic of this White House attitude toward the Hohenzollern's return will first be tested by politicians. The Democrats, for political advantage, and the more thoughtful of the old guard Republicans for reasons of safety, will ask whether the blood of American soldiers was shed in vain at Bellau Wood. They will raise the cry of treason to the cause of peace and humanity.

Men who have talked with the German workers in mines and factories and on railroads during the past six months will take a different view of the Coolidge policy. They will say: "If the United States is not concerned as to the form of government in Germany, when monarchy is about to come back, then it cannot claim a veto if the German workers ever throw that monarchy after a few months, and set up a new type of government."

Five Years After the Armistice

Let U. S. Workers Follow This Example

MONTREAL.—A unanimous endorsement of the principle of amalgamating the present craft unions into industrial unions was given by the Quebec Labor Party in session in Montreal in November. The party, which is a provincial unit of the Labor Party of Canada, sent 88 delegates representing 8,000 members to Carpenters' Hall for the seventh annual convention.

A telegram was ordered sent, to the premier of Nova Scotia demanding the release of Jim McLachlan, deposed secretary-treasurer District 26, U. M. W. A., sentenced to two years for alleged seditious trade union activities during the steel and mine strikes of last summer. The release of Bernard MacKeen, also convicted for remarks in behalf of labor was similarly demanded.

Defense of the coming workers' republic of Germany was pledged in a resolution adopted by the convention promising "to do our utmost to thwart any action of the imperialistic powers to crush" it. Another resolution demanded full recognition of the Russian government.

The party decided to favor unrestricted immigration except for "certain nationalities and classes of people who either by temperament, non-assimilative qualifications, habits, customs, are not a desirable acquisition to our citizenship."

Efforts to promote joint action by the unions and the labor parties were made.

Canadian Labor Protests.

OTTAWA, Can.—The Trades and Labor Council of Canada respectfully requests that James B. McLachlan, sentenced to two years imprisonment in Dorchester penitentiary by his honor, Judge Mellish, on Oct. 31 for an offense under the criminal code be released on bail pending an appeal of his case to the supreme court of Nova Scotia."

This is the text of the telegram sent by the highest Canadian labor body to Premier Armstrong of Nova Scotia in behalf of J. B. McLachlan, deposed secretary-treasurer, District 26, U. M. W. A.

Foster on New Tour For Labor Defense Council

William Z. Foster, who has spoken at scores of enthusiastic Labor Defense mass meetings in every important industrial city in the East, Middle West and West is again to tour for the Labor Defense, speaking at meetings as follows:

Worcester, Mass., Saturday, Nov. 24th in the Horticultural Hall.

Brockton, Mass., Sunday afternoon, Nov. 25th, Pythian Hall.

New Bedford, Mass., Sunday evening, Nov. 25th, Labor Temple.

Providence, R. I., Monday, Nov. 26th, Eagle Hall.

New York City, Tuesday, Nov. 27th, Webster Hall.

Philadelphia, Wednesday, Nov. 28th, Machinists Temple.

Newark, N. J., Friday, Nov. 30th, place to be announced later.

In all of these places, with the exception of New York and Philadelphia, it will be the first time that Foster has spoken at Labor Defense Council meetings.

A month ago a meeting was arranged for Foster in Newark, N. J., but this meeting was stopped by the police and the meeting on November 30th will carry with it a definite significance as a free speech fight and a fight for the defense of the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism cases.

The New York meeting will be [illegible] occasion as an additional [illegible] Elizabeth Gurley Flynn as chairman.

Foster will take as his subject the new conspiracy entered into between the Department of Justice and the American Big Business interests, to secure a federal peacetime sedition law under which outstanding labor radicals may be prosecuted in the federal courts; and further to secure the passage of an alien registration act which will make it possible for the enemies of the labor movement to deport any alien who takes active part in the labor struggle.

William J. Burns and U. S. Solicitor General, James M. Beck, have taken a great deal of activity to lay the ground work for the passage of these new vicious pieces of registration. Burns in a letter to the leading "patriotic" society in Detroit said, "If this bill (the alien registration act) is passed, there are not enough ships in New York to carry those we will deport out of the country."

Labor and civil liberties organizations have determined to fight to the very limit against the passage of these acts.

Speeches which Foster will make in the East on this tour will sound the key-note of the struggle of labor against this new attack.

Dolla Frameup Before Pardon Board in East

(By Federated Press.)

PHILADELPHIA. — The case of Jacob Dolla, a steel striker serving a 12 to 17-year sentence in the Pennsylvania Western penitentiary at Pittsburgh for allenged offense committed during the steel strike of 1919-20, will again come before the state board of pardons Nov. 21. Efforts to secure the pardon are being made by lawyers and others in Pennsylvania who regard the case as a "frameup."

Investigation by the attorneys who handled the case, Earl W. Thompson and Francis Fisher Kane, of Philadelphia, convinced them that Dolla was the victim of steel company detectives who fastened upon him the crime of dynamiting a residence in Lebanon in September 1919, Dolla had been active as an organizer in the strike and it is charged that he was arrested because of his activities. These who testified against him have since made affidavits that they did so in the hope of getting light sentences for themselves and that Dolla had nothing to do with the affair. He has already served four years of his sentence. He has a wife and two children living in Lebanon.

An application for pardon has been pending for several months before the state pardon board, which has kept it under advisement since last June. It is understood there is a difference of opinion in the board as to the merits of the case. Among the organizations interested in the case and which have appealed to their membership in Pennsylvania to put the facts before the proper authorities are the International Association of Machinists and the American Civil Liberties Union.

54 Party Branches Organized

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Secretary, Workers Party.

New branches of the Workers Party are being organized at the rate of one branch a day, according to the reports received by the National Organization for the months of September and October. During this period a total of 54 branches were brought into the Party.

In addition to the members recruited thru these new branches, the sale of initiation stamps shows 635 members accepted during the month of September and 717 during the month of October.

While the increase in membership during these months has been gratifying, the organized efforts to increase the Party membership have not yet been fully developed. If the slogan of 10,000 new members by January 1st is to be realized, the Party organization must be mobilized more effectively for the work of recruiting these new members.

Branches of the Party, which have not yet elected a committee to plan the systematic work of bringing new members into the Party, must at once organize such a committee.

The Party growth politically, that is, its growth of prestige and influence, has been so great during the last year that if the Party organization is able to mobilize its strength for the membership campaign there is no question but that the goal of 10,000 new members can be easily achieved.

The issue which is to be decided in the membership campaign is whether the organizational units of the Party are sufficiently developed and have sufficient strength to crystalize the sentiment, organizationally, which is created by the Party leadership in the political work of the Party.

To present this question as the issue, is to challenge the whole Party organization to make good, organizationally, on the work that we have done politically in building up sentiment for our Party.

Every unit of the Party is urged to put this question to its order of business and discuss ways and means of building an organization equal to the political influence and political strength of the Party.

James P. Cannon will speak at the Workers Party branch meeting, 3322 Douglas Blvd., Monday, Dec. 3, 8 p. m. Subject, "Revolutionary Trend in the American Labor Movement."

Why Congress Should Investigate Communism!

On this most interesting subject Comrades C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of Workers Party; J. Louis Engdahl, Editor of "The Worker" and well-known lecturer, and Jay Lovestone, author of "Government-Strikebreaker," "What Is What About Coolidge," "Steel and Blood," will address twenty-one mass meetings arranged in various parts of the country. The dates are:

C. E. Ruthenberg as speaker, Nov. 28, Emmet Memorial Hall, Ogden and Taylor Ave, Chicago, Ill.; Dec. 1 Labor Temple, Michigan and Jefferson Ave., Toledo, O.; 2 (afternoon), Cleveland, O.; 2 (evening), Central L. U. Hall, 17th and State Sts., Erie, Pa.; 3, Frohsinn Hall, Genessee and Spring Sts., Buffalo, N. J. Louis Engdahl as speaker, Dec. 4, Springfield, Ill.; 6, Hall No. 1, Fraternal Bldg., 11th and Franklin Sts., St. Louis, Mo.; 7, Fraternity Hall, 1225 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.; 8, Omaha, Neb.

Jay Lovestone as speaker, Dec. 1, Milwaukee, Wis.; 2, Minneapolis, Minn.; 2 (evening), Labor Temple, 404 N. Franklin St., St. Paul, Minn.; 3, Duluth, Minn.; 4, Workers' Hall, corner Gerser Ave. and E. Fifth St., Superior, Wis.

Polish Workers Denounce Haller's Tour for Fascisti

The Polish Socialist Alliance in this country, whose leaders are social renegades, rejected a call sent out by the Polish Bureau of the Workers Party to various Polish organizations for organizing a united front of this Polish-born workers against the growing menace of Fascism and its representative, General Joseph Haller, who is now touring this country. In Detroit, the rank and file of the Polish Socialist Alliance revolted against their leaders, and the Detroit branches of that organization responded to the call sent out by the District Committee of the Workers Party. But the pressure exerted by their leaders held the social traitors, compelled them to withdraw at the last moment from the committee for organizing the united front.

Nevertheless, in spite of the treacherous action of the Polish Socialist Alliance, few mass meetings have been held in Detroit with such great success as the one held on Sunday, Nov. 11, at Oswiata Hall, where a strong resolution was adopted denouncing General Haller and his poisonous Fascist propaganda in this country. The same resolution was adopted at a labor mass meeting held on the same day at Hawtramck, suburb of Detroit.

The rapidly Polish workers in this country are realizing more and more the necessity of establishing a united front to combat the bloody forces of Fascist reaction.

Favorable Report on Soviet Russia

By JOHN ROSUE.

(Toronto Star Correspondent.)

OTTAWA.—From the Senate, in addition to a report made by the Canadian government by L. D. Wilgress, special trade commissioner, "it is perhaps in the realm of finance," says Wilgress, "more than in any other department of trade and economy that progress has been made."

The accomplishments of the last five years," he continues, "include the introduction of a budget, control of exchange, imposition of taxes, raising of loans, introduction of new unit of currency, efforts at currency stabilization, re-establishment of the state bank, creation of credit and savings deposit institutions.

"The 'authorities' are proceeding along right lines. Expenditure has been greatly curtailed. Thru the shifting down of staffs of government institutions, the number of persons supported by the state has been reduced from 35,000,000 in 1930 to 3,500,000, which includes the standing army of 600,000 men."

Closely following the publication of this favorable view of conditions in Russia has come the word that a trade mission is leaving Moscow shortly to discuss trade relations with the Canadian government. Canada has no trade treaty with Russia, but Canadian traders are free to do business with that country, and a number of Canadians have already visited Russia with a view to securing concessions there.

Amalgamated Makes Progress in Union Drive in St. Louis

By BARNEY MASS.

ST. LOUIS, MO.—A call for a general membership campaign meeting of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers 150 workers responded. An impressive feature of this responding group was the large representation of young people. Bread and butter necessities at home seem thus to have penetrated the mentality of the youth, sobering their judgment and counteracting the "Jazzing all night spirit" so prevalent, seemingly, during the past few years. A membership, predominantly composed of young people with the employment of correct tactics, should assure the Amalgamated marked success.

Convincing evidence that there is no excuse nor necessity for decrease in membership in the A. F. of L. is presented by the fact that workers come direct to the meetings from the shop, fatigued and hungry, yet eager for the message the organizers have to deliver to them. That the Amalgamated is prepared at all times to take advantage of any situation of favorable appearance, explains its strength, and if it continues this policy of "preparedness," it will surpass all others in the labor movement. Manufacturers are already expressing fear of the Amalgamated, and "baiting" of the workers, if the shape of increased wages is anticipated as their next move.

The Showing in New York City

NEW YORK.—The Federated Farmer-Labor Party, with candidates in six of the 60 assembly districts in New York City, participated in an unofficial report on record at police headquarters here with 1,500 votes.

"This is quite a satisfactory result," said Eric R. Saenger, New York secretary of the party, "in view of the fact that we did not organize here until Sept. 16, and our actual campaign did not begin until Sept. 30, about five weeks before election. During the coming year we will organize for a united front at the polls—a strong labor party—which has its roots deep in the labor movement."

Court Action Is Sought to Compel Showing of Russian Relief Film

Action to stop interference by local officials with the showing of a film by the Friends of Soviet Russia in various cities has been started by the American Civil Liberties Union with the announcement that court action would be sought to compel the Providence, R. I., Board of Police Commissioners to rescind its order barring the film.

The board revoked its permission for the showing of the picture on Sept. 28th because they were not convinced by the film that the funds collected would be used for "the relief of orphans in Russia," as advertised. Attorneys for the Civil Liberties Union in New York have advised representatives of the organization in Providence and in Boston to proceed with a suit if the police persist in tactics of delay.

The Board of Police Commissioners recently stated that the question has been referred to Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover, as an authority on Russian relief. This move is characterized by Dr. Harry F. Ward, chairman of the Civil Liberties Union, as "wholly obligatory and unwarranted," and the whole action "probably illegal."

The interest of the Civil Liberties Union in the case, according to its representatives, is limited to the protection of the legal rights of the Friends of Soviet Russia to carry on its propaganda for Russian relief throughout the country. It charges that interference by local officials is due to "reactionary organizations which seek to obstruct all aid by radicals to Soviet Russia."

Upon good faith and the relief organization, the Union states, has been attested by a special investigation committee, which went into the charges of irregularity and diversion of funds a year ago and gave the organization a clean bill. The committee was composed of Prof. Robert Morss Lovett, of Chicago, Norman M. Thomas and Roger N. Baldwin, of New York City, and Timothy D. Healy of the Association of Stationary Firemen.

As We See It

By T. J. O'Flaherty.

"Silent" Calvin Coolidge sent a telegram to the president of Poland on the occasion of the opening of the Warsaw radiotelegraphic station expressing the hope that the establishment of another means of communication between America and Poland would strengthen the already friendly relations existing between the two countries. The Polish president Woljaxlj (or was it Zing the test any way you like) was equally optimistic. Poland has just gone into France's pawnshop pockets for several more millions of francs in order to keep the militarists of the French vassal state in the saddle.

A Helsingfors dispatch via Geneva reports that Russia threatens war on Poland as a result of the latter's action in storing huge quantities of garlic on the Polish-Russian frontier. The Muscovites were obliged to place heavy orders for gas masks with Krupp and in view of the crying need for economy in Russia the garlic episode was considered an unfriendly act by the Soviet leaders. The Kremlin can count on good faith and the restraining to drop bombs made of Limburger cheese and American moonshine on the Muscovites. This report of garlic was immediately withdrawn. Eastern Europe fears that war is in the atmosphere.

Potter Palmer, commander-in-chief of Calvary's four hundred, was on the witness stand recently charged with taking liberties with the Volstead act. He could not tell what his occupation was. He does not remember how many cases of liquor he got, being about to go on one of his vacations and he did not want to have business interfere with his pleasure. Potter Palmer wrote a check for $1,600 in payment for the liquor, but that check was such a trifling matter that he barely remembered it. This trial may give the workers of Chicago an object lesson on the uselessness of these society parasites. But the parasites have plenty of money, plenty of rest and plenty of good liquor, tho they never work, while those who do real work live from hand to mouth.

Soviet Russia has adopted a vast scheme of installing electric plants in the villages thruout Russia, according to dispatches from the Danish trade delegation in Moscow. Each village is expected to develop its own power. Thus the peasant who formerly slept and drank thru the dark hours will no longer be content to be in the dark and hopes are expressed that he may turn to art and literature once sufficient light is thrown on the subject.

Out of Jail by Christmas

By—HARRISON GEORGE.

By witnesses, documents, letters and telegrams it is proved that Charles R. Forbes, former director of the Veterans' Bureau, was the center of a corrupt ring of patriotic grafters who, at the expense of the blind and maimed ex-service soldier brought back from the trenches on stretchers, stole money, whiskey and supplies from the government and proceeded on wine, banquets and wild women.

Will Forbes and his fellow grafters be sent to the federal penitentiary by Daugherty? Not a chance in the world! Look at the howl raised against the profiteers of war time! Seventeen thousand new millionaires and not one of them to fall for the Hazelfeld graft or anything else!

Penitentiaries are not built for exhibitionists, however crooked they may be. Prisons are built for workingmen who have a vision of a world without graft, parasites as Forbes, Daugherty, Gary, Morgan, Rockefeller and the whole class of capitalist exploiters and their labor lieutenants. In proof, look at the thirty members of the Industrial Workers of the World, who committed no other crime but that of union agitation, still rotting at Leavenworth after SIX YEARS behind the bars on a pure frame-up on the ridiculous charge of "espionage" conspiracy! Daugherty can let them out and Daugherty can put Forbes in—but he'll do neither!

Every decent man in America should know that this outrage is against his own liberty as a worker and should aid in the campaign made by the I. W. W. Defense Committee, 1001 West Madison Street, Chicago, to get AMNESTY BY CHRISTMAS!

Anti-Communist Leader of Farmer-Labor Party Routed from Office

Gifford Ernest, the ex-parson who led the red baiting revival at the July 3rd Farmer-Labor conference, and who has been on the job since he has been skating and is now considered politically submerged as a moral force, has been routed from office as secretary of the Cook County (Chicago) Farmer-Labor Party. Thomas McCabe, a delegate to the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, was elected secretary of the Cook County Farmer-Labor Party to succeed him.

This is the second battle in which Ernest played the role of loser in Farmer-Labor Party history. The first was his attempt, thru the medium of a motion introduced by his wife, to have Big Bill Brown removed as National Secretary of the F. L. P. for alleged communist leanings. His effort was defeated by the grand skid toward political oblivion was aided by Jack Leheney, expelled I. W. W. organizer, who sometimes runs Muscle Shoals stock to the hahtnes of Madison and Canal Streets. Sometimes he writes "educational catechisms." He recently handed Ernest a Greek gift in the form of a booklet, attacking William Z. Foster.

The pulpitless parson, tickled with the idea of becoming a celebrity, sponsored penny's child and went into the publishing business. No doubt the decent elements in the F. L. P. resented fastening this gentleman's unsavory activities on them, so they decided to drop him. Politically, he is now a dead cat on the Farmer-Labor Party dungheap.

Old Socialist Party Branch Joins the Workers Party

The Month Hudson, New Jersey Branch of the Socialist Party, at last meeting, held on Nov. 19th, voted 19 to 3 to affiliate with the Workers Party at the previous meeting, in session as observers in the Socialist Party, 16th convention, the Executive Committee of the Workers Party to form a united front of labor and in their demand to expel the counter-revolutionaries from the Socialist Party.

The county secretary of the Socialist Party, Alfred Ellenberger, came to the branch with an ultimatum from the state organizer, demanding that the branch send a letter to all the newspapers stating that they were not responsible for all the statements printed in their name, and all those who wanted to comply with the demand of the state organizer were requested to sign the pledge and give their names in. Only four out of about 30 present at that meeting turned in their names to the secretary.

The comrades who sympathize with the Workers Party then had a meeting on Thursday, Nov. 16th, and after a three discussion of the question, decided that the time was ripe to leave the defunct Socialist Party which allows influential members of the type of Joseph Mattinock, who openly organized counter-revolutionary plots against Soviet Russia, to remain in their party, and to join the live, militant organization of the working class in the United States, the Workers Party.

Fourteen comrades have already made out applications, and they are confident that they will have a branch of at least 25 members.

The installation of the branch will be held Saturday, Dec. 1, at the Labor Lyceum, 17th St. and Tyler Ave., West New York. H. M. Wicks, Julius Stuart Poyntz and Benjamin Lifshitz will be the speakers at the meeting.

Labor Party Calls Farm-Labor Forces Together

ican being is endowed with certain inalienable rights and that among these rights are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. These rights are today denied to the great majority of this country by a privileged class which thru its economic and political power dominates the life of this country.

"This privileged class has, thru the organization of trusts, thru interlocking directorates, thru its grasp of banking institutions of Wall Street, concentrated the control of economic life of the country in the hands of a financial oligarchy with its headquarters in Wall Street. It uses its power to amass great wealth for itself at the expense of the happiness and well being of the farmers and industrial workers, who are the producers of the wealth of this country.

"In order to maintain its special privileges and to aid it in exploiting the farmers and industrial workers this privileged class has fastened its grip upon the government. It uses the legislative, executive and judicial agencies of the government alike as instruments in its service to secure greater and greater profits and to amass greater and greater wealth.

"During the past few years millions of farmers have been driven from the farms because unable to subsist upon the means for a livelihood thru their labor as a result of the exploitation by this privileged class. The Esch-Cummins law passed in the interest of the railroad owners has been one factor in producing this situation.

"The industrial workers, struggling to maintain their organizations and a decent standard of living, have found that this privileged class has at its command the power of the government whenever the struggle over the right to organize, wages and working conditions have resulted in a strike. The use of injunctions against the workers on strike is an every day occurrence. The infamous Daugherty injunction against the railroad shopmen still stands—an injunction which at one stroke robbed the workers of every right supposedly guaranteed by the constitution.

"The Republican and Democratic parties have proven themselves equally the instruments of the privileged class in using governmental powers against the farmers and industrial workers.

"These conditions have developed a widespread movement by the farmers and industrial workers to organize a political party which will fight their battles and challenge the continued rule of the privileged class in this country.

"The political organizations of farmers and industrial workers, scattered over the country, must be united for the 1924 presidential campaign, so that they may present a united front against the service of the privileged class and join in a common struggle against that class.

"To achieve this end the undersigned groups join in this call for a National Convention to be held in the Twin Cities beginning Friday, July 4th, 1924, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for president and vice-president and adopting a national platform.

"We extend an invitation to send delegates to this convention to all farmers' organizations, local trade unions, central labor bodies, state federations of labor, international unions, co-operative organizations, labor fraternal organizations and all farmer and labor political organizations, the Non-Partisan League and the Committee of 48, provided that they endorse the following tentative program:

A. Public Ownership.

B. Government of Banking.

C. Public Control of all natural resources.

D. Restoration of all civil Liberties guaranteed by the constitution.

E. The abolition of the use of injunctions in labor disputes."

Enthusiasm is Great.

Those participating in the conference left St. Paul full of enthusiasm for the prospect of a great national convention of farmers and industrial workers. The delegates believe that a great part of the organized labor movement will be drawn into this convention, as well as practically every farmers' political organization in the United States. A convention of from 3,000 to 5,000 delegates was forecast.

The committee in charge of the work of preparation will issue the official call in a short time and the work will begin to familiarize the workers and farmers everywhere with the proposals of this convention and to win their support.

I. W. W. Convention Hears Representatives of Red International

The question of international affiliation was again brought to the front in the I. W. W. when James P. Cannon and Robert Minor spoke before the Fifteenth General Convention now in session in behalf of the Red International of Labor Unions and extended the official invitation of that body to the I. W. W. to send delegates to the forthcoming World Congress. Strong opposition to any consideration of the question was manifested by a part of the delegates, when the request of the Red International was read by the chairman, but on the roll call vote the majority voted in favor of hearing the message of the Red International. This action of the convention marks a new and most significant development. It was the first time in the long controversy over the question, that a delegate body of the I. W. W. ever heard the proposals of the Red International put forward by anyone authorized to represent it. The I. W. W. in the past has received most of its information from prejudiced sources, and the inevitable result of this has been to prejudice the majority of the members against it. Several delegates declared on the floor of the convention that they had never yet heard the side of the Red International presented.

Minor extended to the convention the fraternal greetings of the fifteen million workers in the Red International, and appealed to the I. W. W. to join hands with them in the world wide battle against capitalism. He drew special attention to the critical situation in Germany and showed how the plans of International Capital to crush the revolution there, make the necessity of international solidarity of the workers clearer than ever.

"The workers of Germany," he said, "are in the future going to raise the red flag and they will not be fooled with capitalist bands of mercenaries, to shoot them to death and take it away again."

Cannon said the aim of the Red International was to unify and consolidate the revolutionary labor movement within each country as well as on an international scale. "It will be the International by which this result is finally accomplished in America," he said. "The interests of the working class demand that, in spite of all differences, we find the way to work together in the common fight. If we do not try to do it, and do not continue to try persistently and patiently, we are failing in our duty to the working class."

Argument is made that the Red International of Labor Unions has for a purpose the liquidation of the I. W. W. There is no foundation for such a statement. The Red International of Labor Unions takes a position of friendly interest in all labor organizations. It takes conditions as it finds them and works from that point. It does not undertake to liquidate the I. W. W., and neither does it undertake to liquidate the United States. "Workers, the amalgamated Clothing Workers or any other functioning labor organization. This could not be done. The Red International of Labor Unions seeks to unify all the workers' organizations on a common platform for action against the capitalist class, regardless of organizational differences.

"It must be frankly admitted that there are many differences between us, and we will make no headway by trying to cover up that fact. The Red International does not hide real differences; it brings them out in the open and tries, by their discussion and mutual confession to arrive at a unified program of action. It is not to be expected that all the differences between us can be overcome at once. We have no patent prescription to work such a miracle. But we say that in spite of those differences we must strive to find a common ground for the fight against the capitalists. We can agree now on 75 per cent of the program, and work together for it, even if we continue to argue with each other over the remaining 25 per cent. This may appear difficult, but it can be done if we will all develop a little flexibility of mind and keep our attention centered on the big things instead of the little ones.

"We have a common fight now against capitalist reaction in all its manifestations and for the release of class war prisoners. And there are many other points where there is no conflict of interest or principle between us. On these questions, therefore, we must be able to conduct a joint struggle. And you can depend upon it, fellow workers, that a joint struggle, more than anything else, will bring us closer together and make it easier to reach an agreement on many other disputed questions. The first step toward this is fraternal discussion. Therefore, we propose that you accept this invitation to send to the next World Congress two or three delegates, without obligations or restrictions, who will sit with the workers' representatives of all other countries on that congress, and then come back and report to you. You should not fear to do this. The only people who have a right to be afraid of the leaders of the Russian Revolution are the capitalists of the world.

"Another point I wish to speak about is the decision of the Second Congress of the Red International to sever its organic connection with the Communist International. This was done in order to effect a compromise with the C. G. T. U. of France, and the revolutionary syndicalists generally, and thus to pave the way for complete unity in one international organization of all workers who, regardless of tactical differences, want to join in the common struggle against world capitalism. Since this organic connection with the Communist International has been raised on one of the chief objections to the affiliation of the I. W. W. in the past I hope you will not fail to appreciate the significance of this action. It shows that the Red International puts unity and solidarity above all other considerations. It is willing to make concessions to the revolutionary syndicalists in order to attain it."

In Next Week's "Worker": The I. W. W. and the Red International.

In this article, which is of timely importance in view of the consideration of the question by the General Convention of the I. W. W. now in session, Comrade Cannon will analyze the role of the I. W. W. in the labor movement today, its attitude toward the Red International, its conflict with the revolutionary trade unionists and the Communists, and the reasons for it. It will show the tremendous influence already exerted upon the American trade union movement by the Red International and outline its probable future influence on the I. W. W.

Federated Farmer-Labor Party Gives Support to Drive for Nation-Wide Unity of All Farmer-Labor Forces

By JOSEPH MANLEY,

Secretary, Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

ST. PAUL, MINN.—Without any blare of trumpets a conference was held here, that marks another milestone on the highway that leads toward a great political party of exploited farmers and workers.

With but little exception the various conferees were unanimous in their desire for unity on the basis of economic grievances rather than complete philosophical analysis.

The conference was small but thoroly representative. It was filled with the spirit of the dirt farmer and the modern industrial worker.

William Bonck said: "We'll meet here again on Decoration Day and decorate the graves of the old parties."

An industrial worker conferee said: "I have heard a most grievous charge against Magnus Johnson, that he was a 'snuff chewing Swede,' and that to me was something in his favor. Because I, myself, belong to (The Structueral Iron Workers) has thousands of 'snuff chewing Swedes in it, and while at work I have had to depend on them for the safety of my life. Therefore I ought to be willing to trust them in political office."

The conference, after being in session two days, instructed a committee, consisting of Charles Mahoney, H. G. Tiegen and William A. Schaper to issue a call, which the organizations represented at the conference, and those supporting it, would be given authority to sign, for a great national convention to be held in the Twin Cities on May 30, 1924.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party, thru its National Chairman and Secretary, assured the conference of its enthusiastic support of the call for the great convention.

St. Paul is the furthest port inland in America. The great Mississippi River, "the Father of the Waters," is navigable from here to the ocean. Here, at "the gateway to the great North-West," one finds an equilibrium of the forces of the exploited city worker and those of the dirt farmer. It is therefore to be expected that the genuine farmer-labor movement of the future should get its final launching at this furthest inland port.

At St. Paul, on next Decoration Day, dirt farmers from all over the West will drive in their battered Fords. From the cattle plains of South Dakota and Montana, they will come dressed in "chaps." They will be there from the general farming section as well. The city workers from the East will rally to the call instituted by this conference.

The prime movers in this conference were William Mahoney and H. G. Tiegen. William Mahoney is the editor of the Minnesota Labor Advocate, the official organ of the Minnesota Federation of Labor. Mahoney is one of the most virile and progressive men in the trade union movement. H. G. Tiegen, a Swede, and not unacquainted with Marx. His friends say of him that "he is the most scientific Marxian socialist in Minnesota." H. G. Tiegen is secretary to Magnus Johnson. He is a Scandinavian, who thoroly understands the psychology of the dirt farmer of the Western States, having been for long years a prominent local official of the Non-Partisan League.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party will support with ever greater and more militant energy this farsighted move toward the organization of a great national convention for the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party will join in a great national campaign in support of the candidates of the Farmer-Labor movement nominated at the convention called in St. Paul on Decoration Day, 1924.

Meeting at Barrackville, W. Va.

The Jugo-Slav Branch, Workers Party, Barrackville, W. Va., will have a big meeting in the United Mine Workers' Hall, Nov. 29th, Thanksgiving Day. Fred H. Merrick and other comrades will address the meeting.

J. Louis Engdahl will address a mass meeting arranged by the Italian Branch, Workers Party, in Kensington, Ill., Sunday, Nov. 25, 2 p. m.

Gas in Grand Opera

Samuel Insull, angel of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, and gas king of the same city, ran into a temperamental Italian cyclone in the person of Madame Amelita Galli-Curci, the noted diva, who refused to comply with Insull's demand that she sing Dinorah for her debut. But the gas magnate pays the piper, and thought he had a right to call the tune. Thereupon the fiery Italian lady declared that she did not carry a card in Big Tim Murphy's Gas Workers' Union, and could not be ordered around like a very common ordinary person. We are not suffering any mental anguish over the trials and tribulations of Madame Galli-Curci, but we do insist that for the sake of art and to prevent disappointing the public the ruffled songbird should apply for admission in some union of her calling, or if her industry is not organized, she should take steps to have that defect remedied. She may consider the vassals of Big Tim Murphy beneath her contempt, but when the gaswokers threaten to strike, Mr. Insull, powerful though he is, feels obliged to at least grant them an audience.

Business Agent Slugs Woman

Morris Sigman and Mayer Perlstein, president and vice-president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, are certainly very hard pressed when their agents have to slug women in order to put over their terroristic program.

Mrs. Cohen was slugged last Tuesday as she came out of the shop, by a business agent employed by the name of Roofer. The reason for the slugging is that she actively supports the cause of the expelled members and is the wife of one of the expelled.

At the shop meeting the workers protested to Perlstein against the slugging. He advised them to prepare charges in writing and present them to the Joint Board. This was done, and about the matter, the entire shop presented the charges in person. The officials of the Joint Board not only refused to allow them to appear before that august body, but also refused to even accept or consider the charges.

Perlstein, who is always present at these meetings, was absent, but no one was deceived as to who was responsible for the action taken by these officials. Perlstein's terrorism has now extended to the slugging of women, and he refuse to tamely submit to his dictatorship.

Appeal of Expelled Denied Without Being Read.

In denying the appeal of the eleven expelled members, the appeals committee of the general executive board in their letter to the expelled members plainly shows that they never took the trouble to read the appeal. The letter is as follows:

"Secretary's Office,
Chicago, Ill., Nov. 2, 1923.

Dear Sir and Brother—I wish to inform you that the Appeal Committee of the International that has entertained your hearing, after long consideration came to the conclusion to reject your appeal and sustain the action of the special trial committee of the Cloak Makers' Joint Board.

Fraternally yours,
Salvatore Ninfo,
Secretary, Appeal Committee."

The first part of the letter states that the appeal was denied, while the second part upholds the decision of the special trial committee. The letter gives two contrary decisions. First, they are expelled; second, they are reinstated. This stupid decision was reached by the appeals committee, according to their own statement, after long consideration.

The special trial committee of the Cloak Makers' Joint Board found Davidson and Kanlewsky not guilty, nevertheless they were expelled; the other nine were expelled without bothering with trial committees, because it was impossible to get a trial committee that would convict, yet the appeal committee upholds the decision of this committee, but at the same time denies their appeal.

The fact that the G. E. B. did not read the appeal of the expelled is not surprising. Altho it is stupid and very crude work, they should have been informed by their henchmen, about the situation, so as their decision would not have been so raw. Evidently some one slipped.

The real issues of course are Amalgamation, the Shop Steward system, the Labor Party and the Recognition of Soviet Russia. Their hatred towards these progressive questions is so great that the violation of the constitutional rights of the rank and file becomes a small matter in comparison.

Reactionaries Determined to Rule or Destroy the Organization.

That they are determined either to force the membership to meekly submit to their dictatorship or destroy the organization is self evident, the Joint Board, Perlstein, Dubinsky, Ninfo, Breslaw & Co. are determined to rule or ruin.

In Philadelphia at a special meeting of Local 15, with Sigman and Perlstein present, the Call to Protest, the demand that this left wing be disfranchised for six months was defeated by a vote of 138 to 49. Now they have started to reorganize the local, and their defeat in that direction is even more marked, less than 50 out of a membership of 500 responded to their call.

The same process was gone thru in Local 2, of the same city, with an even greater defeat for their politics. In attempting to reorganize this local they could not get a corporal's guard out of a membership of 900 to follow them in their disruption of that local. Everywhere the rank and file have refused to be carried away with the smoke screen of dual unionism. They see clearly the real issues, and have repudiated the reactionary and demoralizing policies of the G. E. B.

All the Time Is Milking Time.

Workers Party Asks I. W. W. to Join the United Front

Two communications have been sent by the Workers Party of America, Michigan District, to the General Executive Board of the I. W. W., one in connection with the call for the united front in the fight against the "Hands Off Workers' Russia" policy, and the other urges the united front in the fight against the lynch laws, particularly those now in force against the I. W. W. These communications are as follows:

"Hands Off Workers' Germany."

"The workers of Germany, who during four years of war were preserved as canon fodder for the aristocrats who ruled them, after five years of unheard of misery and hardship, are revolting against those who have so mercilessly exploited them.

"The struggle which is now engaged in Germany with the workers people on one side and the capitalistic and autocratic generals on the other is a struggle in which every worker has an interest, for should the capitalists and their successful revolution triumph they would exterminate every vestige of a labor organization and the workers of Germany.

"When the war in Europe broke out in 1914 the capitalists of the United States first drove the nation and made loans to the warring nations and later demanded that the United States enter the war to protect their loans and accounts and it a "War of Democracy" and a "War to End War," which every one now knows were slogans which were lies.

"Should the workers of Germany establish their own rule as they have come of the present crisis in their country, the capitalists of the United States will undoubtedly join with the capitalists of European countries in fighting against the workers of Germany. They will follow the same course as during the world war, first lending money and selling munitions to European countries in order to put down the effort of the German workers to free themselves and then send the American soldiers to fight their battles.

"We believe that it is the duty of every working class organization in the United States to join its strength with others to prevent the United States from in any way interfering with the German war going on in Germany. The slogan of the workers of this country must be, no intervention against workers' Germany, either thru loans or munitions or soldiers.

"The Workers Party calls upon all working class organizations to form a committee of action to carry on the fight for the United Front in Germany. In view of the I. W. W. organization in the ports on the Atlantic coast it can render a most vital service.

"In upholding this slogan by refusing to allow the I. W. W. to lead ships with supplies for use against the workers of Germany.

"We urge the I. W. W. to join with us in forming the Committee of Action in support of this policy.

Against Capitalistic Lynch Law.

"The prosecutions directed against the radical movement in this country in an effort to destroy all militant labor organizations in America, continues as the strongest weapon of the exploiters against the workers. The members of the I. W. W. Workers of the World have suffered as much under these persecutions as the radical movement has, or the United States. We believe that it is a common interest between the Communists and members of the I. W. W. as well as every militant worker who should unite to fight these persecutions and for the freedom of these workers who are in capitalist prisons for their part in the class struggle.

"The use of the injunction in labor disputes, state criminal syndicalist laws as well as the proposed national criminal syndicalist law are weapons against the labor movement, and the workers everywhere should unite in the struggle to defeat the attempt of the exploiters to weaken and destroy the labor movement thru such measures. The Workers Party of America is prepared to enter into a united front organization with the I. W. W. for the purpose of carrying on the struggle for the freedom of all political prisoners and against all measures directed against the labor movement. We would be very glad to have your convention appoint a committee to work out ways and means to carry on a common campaign on the questions outlined above."

United Front in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati "United Front Committee" is making extensive preparations for the mass meeting scheduled for Dec. 20, 8 p. m., at the Labor Temple, 1318 Walnut St. The meeting will be addressed by C. E. Injunctions Are Not Weapons of "Bad" Judges, But of the Whole Capitalist System

By ALEXIS SWABECK.

Twenty-one judges, ready to issue new injunctions in times of labor struggles, were elected from the two old capitalist tickets in the Chicago judicial contest. It was a case where the active assistance of the Labor Committee on Injunctions, and even some of the candidates of the Socialist Party.

Naturally, such a line-up could only result in sure victory for the two notorious labor enemies, Dennis E. Sullivan and Jesse Holdom. These were the two particular candidates whom both the Labor Committee and the Socialist candidates pretended to want to defeat. It is but one more proof that the injunction system can only be defeated by making it a clear cut issue between the tools of the capitalist class and representatives of labor; a united working class ticket against the capitalist tickets.

Injunctions are not only weapons of certain judges, but an institution which the whole capitalist class and the capitalist-owned political parties, as a part of the whole capitalist system, are using to crush the labor movement. It will prove an effective instrument in their hands to suppress the workers and maintain the present system of exploitation. In this case it should be particularly evident.

The Democratic and Republican tickets were picked by the same committee which selected Dennis E. Sullivan, and the whole Republican ticket was picked by the same committee which selected Jesse Holdom. Those who supported these two particular candidates also supported the others and none of them would become disturbed over the fact that certain "labor leaders" favor some of their pickings in preference to others, no matter what the excuse.

Even General Dawes, of the Minute Men of the Constitution, could have spared all his excitement, their stakes were not seriously threatened. No, they were indorsed with certain changes, as a matter of expediency. One thing, however, they all fear, and that is a united labor opposition, and such united opposition would have ducts himself in the fight. He stood there in that den of business men and told the truth about them to their teeth. Even the capitalist reporters had to pay tribute to his brave and manly attitude. They said he was "bold and audacious;" that is to say, he was a Communist. He indicted the traitor leaders in burning words, pouring out the scorn that honest workers feel for them. He made the issue clear and sharp, standing proudly by his own good record and the principles of his party. One labor writer said about his speech: "It was a splendid, fearless answer, retracting nothing, apologizing for nothing."

Is anyone so foolish as to think they killed Comrade Dunne by expelling him from the convention? Even the capitalist press has some uneasiness on that score. The New York Times said: "The Federation action makes a new hero among the Communists and may give that propaganda a new impetus among the workers." We can say that Comrade Dunne is no new hero to us, but an old fighter in the ranks. The stupid reactionaries have now made him known to a much wider circle. By expelling him they have only given more life to the party they sought to kill. They have centered attention of thousands of workers on him, and the Workers Party, which he personified there, in such a way that the Workers Party in their minds will be identified with the picture of a working man standing there in that vast gang of agents of the capitalist class, fighting for the unity and file of labor and denouncing the traitors to their faces, putting forward all constructive proposals to better the trade unions and yielding not an inch in the camp of the enemy. There can be no doubt that the event will give the Communist propaganda a "new impetus among the workers." Communism, after, Portland, will have a stronger propaganda. It will not be eliminated from the trade union movement but will penetrate deeper into it. And Comrade Dunne will play a bigger part in this work than ever before. The expulsion in Portland did not signify the end of Communism in the trade unions but the real beginning of it.

Defeat Fickert, Mooney Framer.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Charles M. Fickert, the district attorney who framed up Mooney and Billings, and who was exposed by the famous dictograph revelations, was defeated by more than 44,000 votes in his attempt to "come back" in the recent municipal election. Four years ago Judge Matthew Brady won over Fickert by a bare majority; this time Fickert polled only 27,000 votes against Brady's 71,000. Brady has been generally fair to labor during his term as district attorney, and was endorsed by the nonpartisan political committee of the Central Labor Council.

Police Ban Anti-Fascists.

An anti-fascist meeting at Wilmington, Del., was broken up by the police who warned the speakers, A. S. Berardini and Caleb Harrison, under threats of imprisonment, to leave Wilmington. A quantity of literature was seized by the authorities. An open-air meeting which the police attempted to hold following the police raid was also scattered. Orders were issued to the police to prohibit the holding of any meeting.

Kate Richards O'Hare for United Front

"We have not been with the Socialist Party since its officials eliminated us for daring to take the Children's Crusade to Washington to free the political prisoners. I believe that Foster expresses the living, progressive spirit in the labor movement and Gompers the dead spirit. I am working with and supporting the amalgamation movement and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party political action. I am for the United Front all along the line."

This is a statement made by Kate Richards O'Hare, at one time very prominent in the Socialist Party, formerly editor of the "Rip-Saw," and who was imprisoned during the war in the Missouri State Penitentiary at Jefferson City.

The statement was made in answer to a question regarding her views which she was asked by Comrade Ida Weisman, who writes to "The Worker" from the Llano Co-operative Colony at Newllano, La., where Kate O'Hare is at present active.

What Happened at Portland?

By JAMES P. CANNON.

Only six delegates, representing a voting strength of 130, voted against the expulsion of "Bill" Dunne, the Communist, at Portland, while 27,888 votes were cast for it. On the face of this showing, two conclusions are being drawn from the convention. The labor officialdom sees the labor movement again made safe for capitalism by this holy war against the Communists; while some elements in the radical labor movement, like the I. W. W. and the O. B. U., claim it proves their contention that the Communist policy of working within the conservative trade unions is a failure. They point to the shamelessly reactionary character of the entire convention, its open and cynical declaration of partnership with the masters against the revolutionary workers, its expulsion of the lone Communist, and say: "There is no hope here, no sign of progress." Both of these conclusions are false.

The triumph of reaction at Portland appears only on the surface. The real victor was the Communist movement.

Communism was the victor because it was raised there into a living issue of the labor movement. It was the victor because it has penetrated in so short a time into the very citadel of the reactionary officialdom and made them recognize it as their most deadly enemy. It was the victor because the message of Communism was called to the attention of millions of workers by the tremendous amount of publicity given to the expulsion of Dunne. The Portland convention did not prove the falsity of the Communist tactics in the trade union movement. On the contrary it proved that they are already beginning to register decisive results.

Anyone who paid attention to the convention could see that these labor leaders are hand in glove with the bosses. Never was the complete identity of their interest and viewpoint with those of the capitalists so clearly and dramatically revealed as it was at Portland. Major Berry comes there directly after breaking the strike of the members of his own union in New York City. He is given a warm reception and compared with Dunne by Gompers. He boasts of his dastardly work in siding with the employers, and the convention votes approval of his actions. John L. Lewis gets up and tells how many district organizations of the workers he has disrupted in his war against the militant rank and file, and the convention agrees that it has done a good thing. The convention adopts a set of "principles" enunciated by strike-breaker Berry, the principal point of which is the "recognition of the right of property in industry." Amalgamation, the Labor Party, the recognition of Soviet Russia and every other proposal calculated to strengthen and regenerate the pitifully weak labor movement are defeated. Finally, Wm. F. Dunne, the Communist, the most talented worker of the Anaconda Mining Company, the well-tried, intelligent and courageous fighter for the cause of labor, is expelled from the convention amid the plaudits of the open shop press. Many thousands of workers will look at this record and say that there is no difference between the men who made it and the employers. Many of them will look a little further and see that Communism, personified by Comrade Dunne, stood there as the champion of everything these men were against.

Some workers are able to see only one side of the Portland convention. They say: "It is easy to see that these men are not workers at all and have nothing in common with the workers. What is the use to bother with them? You can't expect to convert them to Communism, and as soon as you begin to carry on your work they will expel you from the unions. Why not leave them now and start new unions without them?" That looks like a simple and easy way out of the difficulty, but it does not solve the problem. These men dominate and control the official machinery of the trade unions which embrace the overwhelming mass of the organized workers in America. The problem is how to free the great mass of the rank and file from their influence. This cannot be done by leaving the old unions, because the rank and file workers do not follow. It can only be done by working amongst them in the old unions, and winning them over, by degrees, to a revolutionary position. Intelligent and systematic work, combined with the historical development, will eventually do it. It is a process, and the events at Portland are a part of that process.

We have to expect that the reactionaries will go to extreme lengths before they will give up the control of the labor movement. The history of the world movement shows that they will not hesitate to split and disrupt the unions when their treacherous leadership is challenged. But these tactics avail nothing in the end. They can expel Communists but they cannot expel Communism. The Communists are destined to win because their platform corresponds to the actual needs of the working class. Splits and expulsions did not save the yellow leaders of the Russian unions and it is not saving the yellow leaders of the American unions. It will not save them in America if the revolutionary workers keep their heads and follow the right tactics.

Comrade Dunne's service to our cause at Portland was a double one. He not only raised the issue of Communism there and forced it to be discussed, but he gave a splendid example to the whole working class of America of how a Communist con-

A Letter from New Mexico

Dear Comrade Editor: Inclosed find list of subs for "The Worker" which I obtained last week. Everyone thinks "The Worker" is a great paper and getting better all the time.

My copy containing Comrade Dunne's speech at Portland, is almost worn out. Everybody handing around to readers. Some members of the American Federation of Labor didn't know Dunne made a speech in his defense, as they saw nothing of it in their union or Socialist papers.

I wish I could tell our brave and loyal comrades, Foster, Ruthenberg and Dunne how many are with them in their fight against the capitalist courts, gunmen, capitalist fake labor convention officialdoms and labor traitors such as Lewis and Searles. We're with you for Amalgamation, for independent political action, recognition of Soviet Russia and all the things the workers and the Workers Party so vigilantly stand for.

The I often feel so discouraged, when I see the apathy of the working class, I wonder how you can carry on so bravely, putting up the fight, writing so encouragingly, such wonderfully optimistic literature, in spite of such enormous odds.

I get new enthusiasm with every copy of "The Worker." After reading last week's issue, containing the article about Lenin College and the educational program for training of Communist teachers, etc., I just wished that I'd had such an opportunity when I was younger.

We're unable down here to do very much actively as the militant, or intelligent workers are so scattered. Some of our members live over 50 miles away and we don't see each other often. Then, too, this is not an industrial center. Few union members in Deming at all, and they all belong to crafts that have locals in El Paso or Albuquerque, so they hardly ever attend meetings. Since the shop strike broke up about the only active union there was, everything has gone from bad to worse. My husband is working at laborer's work but I guess still retains his membership with the Machinists' Union. To reinstate with Electrical workers would entail an expense we could hardly afford, but we wish to retain our membership in the Workers Party.

Some of the best friends and supporters of militant propaganda are not of the workers' class. The actual workers, seem too afraid of their jobs or else haven't the intelligence to read or understand the class struggle.

The names of subscribers I am sending all wish to get "The Worker," weekly, as before, since we are so far away from Chicago the daily news would be so old before we'd get it, tho we wish to help in The Daily Campaign and are in hopes we may be able to do so later.

Minnesota Union Advocate Answers the Open Shoppers' Bulletin

The Minnesota Union Advocate of St. Paul, Minn., official organ of the St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly and of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, answers the Citizens' Alliance Bulletin's recent attack upon it in the following editorial:

The Minnesota Union Advocate Criticises A. F. of L. Convention.

The Citizen's Alliance Bulletin is greatly disturbed by the apparent disloyalty of the Union Advocate to the local labor movement, because of certain strictures made on the A. F. of L. convention and the Mine Workers' officials. It is charged that the Union Advocate is mere a "Socialist propaganda sheet" than an organ of labor.

Ordinarily any noise emanating from the Citizens' Alliance "weekly squeak" might be ignored; but we are glad to use the occasion to present our position to all who are interested. It is the object of the Union Advocate to avoid misunderstandings of our policies and purposes.

The Union Advocate of St. Paul is practical and progressive; and is not only concerned with the problems that arise from day to day, but is always alert to find methods of meeting these problems in a more effective manner. It is one of the few to recognize that the labor problem is a very fundamental one which intimately concerns all society and which is seeking measures that will ultimately bring a permanent solution. The labor movement is democratic in its methods and structure, and thrives on constructive criticism. It is only by free and open discussion and the interchange of ideas that any improvement and progress is possible. The labor movement is like every other aggregation of human beings, it has its faults, its blunders and servants before action is taken.

The Union Advocate is near the right and do not tries to interpret the feelings and desires of the rank and file of labor, and to express their opinions, and feels free to comment on and criticize those who seem to be acting contrary to the best interests and aspirations of the ordinary workers better than do the high officials far removed from the daily struggle of the toiler.

We are not supporters of Foster nor say the particular things he says nor do not need the authority of Samuel Gompers nor William Z. Foster to help us recognize a fact. We do not believe in the philosophy of violent revolution, but we do believe in the continuous advancement of mass and class consciousness of labor and those who do not think will be cast from the domination of a rolling class. We do not know by how many votes this or that man was defeated for the office of "Socialism" or "Communism," and it does not matter to us whether it is called "Socialism" or "Communism" or "Development of the existing industrial system which now compels toiling men while willing and able to work to go hungry and starve in the midst of plenty.

If the A. F. of L., which is simply a loose aggregation of autonomous international organizations, wants to persecute things as they are it leaves itself out of touch with the times. We want industrial peace, prosperity, progress, and these cannot come where the employers are banded together to despoil and oppress the unorganized and destitute toilers.

We want the useful workers in all lines of industry to be organized politically and industrially to the end that they may accomplish the profound changes in the shortest possible time. It is impossible to secure real betterment and fail only to try another line. Persistency, intelligence and determination will assure continuous success and we hope ultimate solution of the grave problems of modern civilization

Hiram Launches His Boat

Hiram Johnson, U. S. Senator from California, has launched his campaign for the presidency in 1924 from the fashionable, anti-union Drake Hotel on Chicago's Gold Coast, home of the idle rich. . . .

The California senator thus lives up to the best traditions of the "open shoppers" of his own state. Altho Johnson claims to be a "friend" of labor, the workers and farmers will not be deceived. It is Johnson who keeps Mooney and Billings, Ford and Suhr, and hundreds of members of the Industrial Workers of the World prisoners in the penitentiaries and jails of California. It was Johnson who defended the master frame-up artist, William J. Burns, when the head of the U. S. secret service was under charges.

Hiram's attack on reaction and his claims to progressivism fall like ducks, one among those most ignorant of his record. When he dodged the vote on Newberryism in the Senate, he lost the support of even his former colleagues, LaFallette, Borah and the rest. He should be decorated with the order of the double-cross.

U. S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts, says he is a friend of Johnson, but that he is pledged to Coolidge. But if Coolidge slips, Lodge might grab Johnson, and he would quit just as faithful and loyal a servant of entrenched privileged and profit-hungry greed.

The British Elections

Since Lloyd George followed his colleagues of Versailles treaty fame to the political wilderness, England has tried two saviours: Andrew Bonar Law, the apostle of tranquility, and Stanley Baldwin, who also smokes his pipe as if he did not have a care in the world. But even a well-seasoned pipe cannot calm the feelings of a nation confronted with the problem of paying doles to an army of 2,000,000 unemployed, and the situation has grown so serious that the Tory government suddenly decided to go to the country and stake its existence on a general election.

The principal contestants in this coming election are the Conservatives or Tory Party, led by Stanley Baldwin, the Liberals, led by Asquith and Lloyd George, and the Labor Party, headed by J. Ramsay MacDonald.

The main issue in the election is the old one of protection versus free trade, with the Tory elements favoring the former, and Liberal and Labor parties the latter. The unemployment problem overshadows all other questions and it is as a remedy for this that Baldwin favors a protective tariff. This, asserts the Conservative, would mean protection for the British workers as well as for the British manufacturers.

Lloyd George and Asquith have united forces to slay the dragon of protection. The Labor Party, in a manifesto, declared that a tariff on imports instead of relieving unemployment will foster profiteering and perpetuate the inequalities in the distribution of wealth, which labor seeks to remove. The party proposes "to restore to the people the lost rights in the land, including the minerals," by re-equipping the land valuation department and facilitating the acquisition of land for public use.

Meanwhile the sterling is being hammered down as a result of the Labor Party threat of a capital levy and the fact that for the three months, ending Oct. 31. British imports exceeded exports by $256,000,000. The Communist Party of Great Britain is taking an active part in the election campaign and holds before the eyes of the British working class the vision of a Workers' Republic as the only solution for the present chaos.

The Shorter Workday

Elbert H. Gary, head of the steel trust, fought the abolition of the 12-hour day, predicting disaster. He charged that profits would be wiped out, that the labor supply could not provide the additional workers needed. It was a black picture indeed that he painted for the steel barons in New York City early last summer.

But the crushing blows of progress have now practically eliminated the 12-hour day in the steel mills. In Gary, Ind., itself, the men in the mills now toil eight hours, and there are three instead of two shifts per day.

Even Mr. Gary's friends in the financial world confess that he has not suffered financially. The steel trust has announced an increase in its common stock dividend. The Wall Street Journal, that stood by Gary loyally with its daily propaganda for the 12-hour day now admits that:

"Either the switch to the eight-hour day was not as expensive as generally supposed, or deliveries to customers were made at higher average prices than estimated."

It was Mr. Henry Ford who first learned he could profit most by the three-shift, eight-hour day. The steel trust has fallen into line. But now the coal miners are fighting for the six-hour day. The fight of the miners should be carried into all industry, with the declaration of the late Charles P. Steinmetz always in mind, that the nation's work can be accomplished thru the four-hour workday. The victory of the eight-hour day in the steel industry should stimulate the fight for the still shorter workday in all industries.

Switzerland Upholds Assassination

Maurice Alexandre Conradi has been freed by the Swiss court that tried him for the assassination of V. V. Vorovsky, Soviet envoy at the Lausanne Conference. Thus is repeated the travesty on capitalist justice that occurred when the French courts stood back of the slayer of Jean Jaures, assassinated on the eve of the world war.

Jaures was opposed to the war. His slayer performed a dastardly deed in the service of French imperialism, and he won his reward. Switzerland, always heralded as the home of "true democracy," with the freeing of the assassin of Vorovsky, definitely takes its place as the ally of the worst reaction.

The trial of Conradi was a farce. The Swiss public prosecutor, instead of urging the protection of foreign envoys at an international conference, openly pictured the assassin as a victim of Bolshevik persecution. Instead of prosecutor, he became defender. Conradi was lauded for his service in the armies of the Czar, and later in the white counter-revolutionary hordes that attacked and sought to overthrow the workers' rule. The prosecution made no mention of the funds received by the assassin from the emigre czarist organizations to be found in every capitol of western Europe. He was held high above any suspicion of the least wrongdoing.

This farcical court action will no doubt arouse the workers and farmers, not only in Switzerland, but of all western Europe, to the real nature of capitalist rule. And knowing it, they will learn the quicker how to rid themselves of it.

Bolshevism in the Air

The air must be freed of all taint of Bolshevist propaganda. This is the ambitious program outlined for the next congress by the National Association of Broadcasters. The air must be made safe for bedtime stories, the latest "blues" and other song hits, the jokes of our favorite comedians and the latest attacks of the open shop baron on the labor movement.

Paul B. Klugh, executive chairman of the Broadcasters' Association, declares, "I believe it to be necessary to guard against the possibility of the radio being misused. Bolshevism or other un-American principles may be poured into the ears of the radio public unless the government keeps the air as free of this type of matter as the mails are kept."

By "Bolshevism" and "un-American principles," this very interesting Mr. Klugh no doubt means anything in defense of organized labor. He would bar a plea for the release of the class war prisoners, an actual experience of the Civil Liberties Union, in New York recently. Such pleas, pleas for the amnesty of victims of Soviet Russia, the organization of the unorganized, the abolition of child labor, would be put down as Moscow propaganda.

There is a German word, "klug," meaning shrewd or wise. It sounds like Mr. Klugh's own name. If Mr. Klugh lives up to the meaning of the name he bears, he will become disgusting enough to know that it will be quite difficult to Burlesonize the air. Postmaster General Burleson, during the late war, tried to purge the mails of anti-war matter which included any written word that would hurt the profits of munition makers. Mr. Klugh fears anything derogatory to the bosses. But, if all Bolshevik sending stations in this country were destroyed, what would Mr. Klugh do, if the Russian Soviet Government, at Moscow or Petrograd, set up stations powerful enough to girdle the globe with their messages of hope for labor, not even forgetting the United States of America? Mr. Klugh and his capitalist friends will find that it is much easier to control the U. S. postal system that it is to monopolize the air of the world. At the same time we wish to remind them that "The Worker" is still going thru the mails.

Hiram Johnson Is the Magnet

The Voice of Labor.

The current issue of the Voice of Labor is devoted to the German situation. The leading article is by H. M. Wicks and sets forth the position of the militant workers of America toward the revolutionary proletarian revolution in Germany.

J. Louis Engdahl exposes the sordid conspiracy underlying the "humanitarian" pleas of the "wall street Midas" in the present crisis in Germany, while Jay Lovestone presents "facts regarding the proposed "Morgan Receivership for Germany."

Wicks writes editorials on Communist strategy in relation to the Socialist movement in Germany that untangle the confused ideas of many sympathizers with the proletarian revolution.

Clara Zetkin, the veteran Communist of Germany, writes an appeal to the American workers and tells us that the best way to help the struggle of the revolutionary workers in Germany is by fighting our own capitalist class in America.

The special German edition will undoubtedly have a wide appeal to the working class of this country, which has responded so favorably to the previous editions of this agitational publication. The Voice of Labor is unique in the annals of American labor journalism and proof of the fact that it strikes a responsive chord is the wide distribution it is receiving.

It is distributed in bundle orders by the Workers Party, Room 214, 1009 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.

The Metal Trades Bulletin.

The November number of the Metal Trades Amalgamation Bulletin, just off the press, contains many features of interest to metal trades workers and delivers some smashing blows at the officialdom of the various unions in this industry. A report of the 26th convention of the Molders' Union contains information regarding the ignoble antics of the notorious arch-reactionary, John F. Frey, who is one of Sam Gompers' particular pets in all campaigns against the rank and file of labor. Encouraging in this respect, is the fact that the convention was definitely aggressive and voted for advanced measures against the bitter opposition of Frey.

Interesting also is an article on the electrical industry by Jack Burton. The situation on the Canadian side of the border is narrated by Tim Buck, leader of the Communist Party of Canada, in a fearless fighter for labor. James O'Connell, head of the Metal Trades Department of the A. F. of L., also gets a deserved panning at the hands of John Weigel.

Many other valuable contributions directed toward a more militant unionism in the metal trades industry will be found in this live publication. Address 1426 S. Keeler Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The Building Trades Worker

Another addition to the rapidly increasing list of left wing trade journals is the Progressive Building Trades Worker published by the Industrial Committee for the reorganization in the Building Trades. A very appropriate cartoon represents the building trades unions old hen trying to persuade his brood, which turns out to be ducklings from swimming pond, appears on the first page. The ducklings represent State Federations, Central Labor bodies, local unions and international unions. The ducklings however like the water and honk defiance at Sam.

There are articles by J. W. Johnstone, Arne Swabeck, Jack Paull, David Coutts and Jack Burton. It is published at 166 W. Washington St., Room 41. Single copies 5 cents each. Bundle orders of ten or more two cents each. A yearly sub is 35 cents.

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE,
(Our European Staff Correspondent.)

MOSCOW.—In Soviet Russia everyone talks politics—world politics, national politics, party politics—morning, noon and night, from Moscow to Baku. And practically everyone is quite well informed on the political conditions of each country now playing a leading role on the world stage.

An American must expect to answer many questions and from people of all ages, complexions and walks of life. Children ask about school conditions—"Have the American children a chance to develop themselves free in school as we have, do they govern their own schools?" Bright-eyed girl workers and students want to know about the hours and living conditions of the American youth—and particularly about the development of class-conscious organizations among their American comrades. The older folks have a whole line of questions—Coolidge, the Ku Klux Klan, Gompers, etc.

But first and foremost, especially among the better informed, comes the question: "How soon will you start to publish your English Daily?"

These comrades are schooled in decades of patient plodding propaganda work as well as in years of military struggle to preserve and extend their successful revolution. They realize that without a daily paper to bring to the eyes and ears of the American workers the daily happenings in the working-class world, the American Communist movement is indeed blinded and dumb.

Most of our comrades in the States do not credit our present press with the value it really has. Too many of us give a copy of The Weekly Worker a five-minute "once over" for meeting and entertainment notices and then kick about the ineffectiveness of the American labor press. Our papers are read with greater care and attention in Petrograd than in New York. It takes a trip to Russia to give proper perspective to the thing. To the American emigrants The Worker is like a letter from home, to the world's revolutionary labor leadership the pulse by which the class tempo of America can be accurately read.

It is particularly gratifying to read of the enthusiastic response of the Young Workers League to the call for the Daily. It proves conclusively that our own Young Workers League are at one in spirit with the Russian Komsomols, the glowing inspiration of present day Russia and the security for her Communist future. The daily about to be launched after a career of battle for the working class, will be the registrar of the accession to power of the American workers under the leadership of the party at present in our youth movement.

All hail the new daily, the first of a nation-wide series of dailies, the first big cannon that is destined to force the surrender of American capitalism to an aroused and militant American working class.

Workers' School Great Success

NEW YORK.—At the third conference of the membership of the Workers' School Society great enthusiasm was shown by the members at the progress the Workers' School has made in its brief existence of two weeks.

The executive secretary, Comrade E. B. Jacobson, reported as to the policy of the school. He stated that the aim of the School was to establish a basis for the development of true proletarian culture in America. The school aims to provide aggressive revolutionary education. The prime objective is to train workers for effective leadership in the American labor movement, both on the political and industrial field.

The Workers, the Great Majority, Driving Force in the German Revolutio

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV,
Chairman, Communist International.

Events in Germany are developing with the inexorableness of fate. The road which the Russian revolution required 14 years to travel, from 1906 to 1917, has been covered by the German revolution in the space of 6 years, from 1918 to 1923. The simple "Coalition," the "Grand Coalition," the Kornilov period (the events in Bavaria), "business ministry," personal candidatures (like the Russian Kishkin and Borishkin), then again the great coalition—an unending change of ministers. This is what happened "at the top." And down below, among the broadest masses of the people, dissatisfaction has been seething, and the struggle is flaming up which, in the near future, will decide the fate of Germany, and he who does not see this must indeed be blind.

The approaching events will be of historical significance for the whole world. Time will prove to all that the autumn months of 1923 have been a turning point, not only in the history of Germany, but in the history of the whole of humanity, far beyond the boundaries of Germany. With trembling hands the German proletariat is turning the most important page in the history of the world struggle of the working class. The hour has struck. A fresh chapter is beginning in the history of the proletarian world revolution.

What will be the social import of the impending German revolution? What class will carry forward the revolution, and supply it with leadership? Let us cast a glance at the social composition of the German population. In the year 1920 Germany had a total of 59.4 million inhabitants. The adult population included in this total fall under the following categories:

	Independent	Semi-Proletar	Employees	Workers
Agriculture and forestry	1,120,750	2,724,250	194,000	7,173,000
Industry	550,000	1,700,000	1,824,000	11,000,000
			1,824,000	11,000,000
Trade	500,000	1,000,000	1,500,000	2,500,000
			1,500,000	2,500,000
Personal service				330,000
Free professions	150,000
Without profession	1,760,000		1,000,000	950,000
	4,030,750	3,470,250	3,218,000	21,953,000

Thus: 4 million "independent," 3½ million semi-proletarians, 3¼ million employes, and 22¾ million workers. The number of workers, even apart from the employes and the semi-proletarian elements, is twice as large as that of the all other groups put together. In industry: ¼ million owners, 12 million workers, 2 million employes, and 1¼ million of semi-proletarians and semi-owners, in agriculture: Over 7 million workers, 1¼ million landowners and large farmers, 1¼ million semi-proletarians and 200,000 employes. In trade: ½ million owners, 2½ million workers and employes, 1 million semi-proletarians. In the free professions: ½ million independents, 2 million workers and employes.

The social basis of the coming revolution may be plainly seen. In the cities the workers are in the absolute majority. Up to now the working class in Germany has cooperated in one way or another with the counter-revolutionary German Social Democracy. So long as this giantic class wandered along the path of "peace," in the attempt to avoid revolution and to secure its morsel of bread without civil war, so long could the German bourgeoisie sleep in peace. The whole absence of the "present moment" lies in the fact that the moment has come to which this gigantic class has arrived at the conviction that there is no possibility of avoiding the inevitable; that there is no other way of saving the country and the working class than by revolution. From the moment the working class of Germany turned its back on social democracy, and turned to the Communists, from this moment Germany's destiny was decided. Small delays are possible. This or that variation in the order of the program of the coming events in Germany is also possible, but only within very narrow limits.

The seven million agricultural laborers will also contribute, in the German villages, to impress an indelible stamp on the course of the impending decisive events. While resistance of the landowners and large farmers will be inevitable, the proletarian revolution in Russia to carry on a real war against these classes, the Russian revolution had no other choice but to provide the city workers with weapons and to lead them into armed battle against the large peasantry. The armed troops of workers from the cities could only find support, even in the best of cases, among the poor peasantry, the service men, etc. In this respect things will proceed much more smoothly in Germany. Here it will only be necessary to send proletarian leaders from the towns to the villages. The small landowners are rapidly rendering the landowning and large farming counter-revolution harmless (to speak more exactly, the work of annihilating it), will be carried out in the villages by the agricultural workers themselves. The great masses of these are already in sympathy with the communists. The German large farmers—in reality small landowners are naturally excellently organized. They will attempt to oppose a furious resistance to the proletarian revolution. But anyone bearing in mind the proportions of the above figures cannot be in doubt as to which side will carry off the victory.

The approaching German revolution will be a classic proletarian revolution. The 22 million workers form the core of the international proletariat; they represent the working capital of International Revolution. On a generous estimate, Russia had only 8 to 10 million workers in 1907, out of a total population of 160 millions. But Germany has more than 20 million workers out of a total population of 60 millions. In Russia, the working class was in reality but a fraction of the population, but in Germany it forms the main part, the majority. The German workers have almost all enjoyed the advantage of elementary schooling. But the main point is that the factor in German industry has at its disposal a mighty industrial basis. It is true that German industry is in a critical situation at the moment. But nevertheless, German industry has mighty powers at its disposal. In this lies the pronouncement of Comrade Lenin, when he predicted that in Europe (especially in such European countries as Germany) it will be more difficult to begin the proletarian revolution, but more easier to continue it and bring it to a conclusion, still holds true. The German proletariat is superior in numbers, both in city industry and in agriculture. Technics have advanced in Germany as in no other country. The kernel of qualified workers, able to successfully take a position at the head of socialist economics, is nowhere so compact as in Germany.

Today it is no longer possible for the German proletariat to seize power too soon—in the historical sense of the word. The objective prerequisites for the victory of the German revolution have long since matured. And the war of 1914-18, as well as all the events connected with the war and the Versailles Peace, wrested the remaining prerequisites, for the real victory of the proletarian revolution in Germany.

The German revolution will be a classic proletarian revolution. This does not, however, mean that the whole remainder of Germany's population will form a "reactionary mass." On the contrary! The new and distinguishing characteristic of the German proletarian revolution will consist precisely in the special role played in it by the petty bourgeoisie, office officials, lower and medium employes, small traders, etc. These strata are naturally vacillating between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie. In the course of the revolution they will be won over through side with the opponents of revolution. The main bearer of the revolutionary idea is naturally, now as ever, the proletariat in town and country. But the vacillating strata of city petty bourgeoisie none the less represent an important factor in the relationship of forces. In a certain sense they form the background of the picture. The revolutionary proletariat of Germany has already succeeded in neutralizing some sections of the petty bourgeoisie at its disposal. In this brief period and even to a certain extent, in securing their support. There are already a number of employes, lower officials, etc., who take part in the illegal factory council meetings held under the leadership of the German Communist Party.

We know—this has been taught us by Lenin—that every great revolution develops a new country in its own peculiar way. We know that the German revolution cannot simply repeat that which we have seen in the Russian revolution, that it is bound to have its own characteristic features. Today there can be no longer any doubt but that the unique feature is the part played by the petty bourgeoisie of the cities.

The classic proletarian character of the revolution—and a more favorable one than in Russia—will express itself towards the revolutionary proletariat—are these two things consistent? Yes, there is no inner contradiction in this? By no means.

The attitude of the German city petty bourgeoisie results in the first place from the brutal policy of the Entente, which has done every possible thing calculated to drive this stratum of the population into despair and indignation, and in the second place by the extreme narrowmindedness of the class policy pursued by the German big bourgeoisie, which, caring nothing for the morrow, has, by its whole policy, driven the great masses of the city petty bourgeoisie to the brink of economic ruin. As Marxists we were also theoretically aware that the capital disintegrates and annihilates the petty bourgeoisie of the towns by the process of proletarianizing a large section of this bourgeoisie. This process may be most clearly observed when it takes place in a large state —and we are seeing it for the first time on such a large scale in Germany.

The impoverishment of the petty bourgeoisie has attained immense proportions in Germany. And this is inducing one section of the petty bourgeoisie intelligensia to side with the workers. There are considerable numbers of the petty bourgeoisie, the same strata which Russian conditions rendered for so long a time our most irreconcilable opponents and the most reliable pillars of "social revolutionary" counter revolution, which in Germany are in part so demoralized that they will not be able to take any part as a serious factor in coming events; this group is in such a mood, that at the decisive moment it will remain neutral or take sides with the workers. The unheard of financial bankruptcy of Germany has dealt the petty bourgeoisie of the towns a severe blow. The fact the owner of a cigarette shop in Berlin closed his shop, and displayed a notice that his business having been ruined by the high prices and the depreciation of the mark, he was shutting up shop and going over to the Communist Party, is not an anecdote, but a characteristic symbol

For a correct policy is pursued, a proletarian power in Germany can secure the permanent and complete victory of the German revolution, as the support lent by the German proletariat, plus that of a part of the petty bourgeoisie, insures for proletarian power the support of the majority of the population within the country. And this is the foremost condition for the maintenance of power.

The impending German revolution as we have already said, will be a classic proletarian revolution. But this does not by any means exclude a far-sighted and conciliatory policy with regard to the petty bourgeoisie indeed, it presupposes such a policy. The German revolution is ultimately to lead to the dictatorship of the proletariat, and will endeavor to avoid the errors committed in the last proletarian revolution, that in Russia, and will endeavor to avoid the errors committed in the last proletarian revolution, that in Germany, when taking its first steps towards building the new state, will not be content to sow the seeds of the dictatorship of the proletariat and the city petty bourgeoisie on the other. Revolutionary power in Germany will endeavor, from the very first, to pursue such a policy towards the petty bourgeoisie, the intelligensia, the small craftsmen and traders, and the small and medium farmers as will permanently sechre the sympathies of the petty bourgeoisie of town and country, in favor of the proletarian regime.

Because the proletarian revolution in Germany is built on such a foundation, precisely because the proletariat will no preponderate in the German revolution, will it be able to allow itself the luxury of avoiding anything which might repel the petty bourgeoisie. Just because in many today, the material premises for the carrying out of a series of great economic measures of a socialist character are already present, the German proletariat, at first, will not brutally brush aside the vital interests of the city petty bourgeoisie.

What miracles of energy the united, self-sacrificing, and organized proletarians of Germany will perform when they step forward in decisive battle for Socialism, that something of which today we can even form no idea.

Third National Convention of Workers Party Will Discuss and Act on Problems Confronting the American Working Class

Problems of the most vital interest to the industrial workers and the exploited farmers of the United States will be thoroly discussed and acted on by the Third National Convention of the Workers Party, to be held Dec. 29-Jan. 1.

This is assured by the all-inclusive theses presented to the party membership by the central executive committee on the present economic and political situation in this country, and its report on the developing Labor Party movement.

This theses is being discussed by all the district conventions of the party now being held. It will come up for final discussion and approval at the national convention.

Because of the great interest attached to this theses, not only for the party membership, but for all thinking workers, we publish it in full in this issue of "The Worker." It is as follows:

Theses on the Present Economic and Political Situation and on Labor Party Policy Proposed by the Central Executive Committee

1—ECONOMIC CONDITIONS IN THE UNITED STATES.

A—The farmers of the United States did not participate in the prosperity which followed the economic crisis of 1920—21. The prosperity was a one-sided industrial prosperity. In 1922 some two million farmers left the land because of bankruptcy and it is estimated that three million others will follow them. Tens of thousands of farms have been abandoned in a number of states. The mortgaged farmers are having mortgages foreclosed on their farms and are being compelled to become tenants. The government reports show a tremendous increase in tenantry in the farming regions. Taxation has increased to such a tremendous extent that it is estimated that in 1922 thirty per cent of the net products of the farmer went to pay his taxes. As a result of this economic pressure upon the farmers they are entering politics en masse.

B—There is every indication that the existing industrial prosperity will soon come to an end. Production and employment already show decreases in the basic industries. Unfilled orders in the steel industry have decreased 30 per cent during the last three or four months. Employment in the bituminous coal industry is decreasing. In many coal fields the miners are working short days and unemployment is already quite general. Textile mills are closing down because of lack of orders. The Amoskeag mills in New Hampshire have closed down for the first time in 25 years. There is a great over-production in the copper industry and prices have fallen to the lowest figure in many years. The oil industry is in a catastrophal condition. The development of another economic crisis and widespread unemployment is forecast by all the symptoms of economic life in this country today. Just now the interlocking financial oligarchy which is the ruling power in American industry is throwing in its last reserves to avoid a crisis by having the railroads place larger orders for steel and the Washington government has begun negotiations for the purpose of making a loan to Germany, with the condition, of course, that the money will have to be spent in the United States.

During the wave of prosperity which is now passing, the working class was unable to bring to a halt the offensive of the capitalists and was able, in some cases, to win wage increases and to shorten hours. However, during this period organized labor was not able to strengthen itself. On the contrary, the membership of the American Federation of Labor decreased in the year 1923 from the year before by 269,167 and in the railroad industry the shop crafts organization was practically destroyed. Reports generally in regard to the trade unions indicate that organization is at a low ebb. This crisis will be all the greater because millions of exploited farmers are invading the industries in search of the means of gaining a living.

2—The Political Situation.

A. Political parties in this country have had within the same parties various economic classes. The sharpening of the conflict of economic group interests is developing a situation which makes it impossible for these economic groups to remain together in the same political party. The first result of this clash of economic group interests within the old parties manifests itself in the failure to agree upon a common program. This has developed into factional struggles in many states and the continuance of the divisions which are developing means the split of the old parties. This division is clearer and sharper in the Republican than in the Democratic party altho the latter shows the same tendency.

B. These economic groups whose class interests are in conflict with the ruling big capitalists', such as the lower middle class, the professional groups and the farmers, drawing in their wake a part of the aristocracy of labor, are splitting away from the old parties and the tendency is for these groups to draw together to form a third party which will contain elements from both the old parties and which will enter the political arena as the enemy of the big capitalists who now dominate the government. The LaFollette movement, the Henry-Hylan movement, the Ford-For-President movement, the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, are all expressions of this tendency. The birth of such a party means a revolutionary change in the American political system, but the policies of such a party will be the backward-looking policies of destroying the trusts or regulating the big capitalists and it would be foolish to believe that such a party would make any fundamental change in the existing industrial system which would be of benefit to the exploited workers and farmers.

On the other hand such a party will weaken and split up the united capitalist class and make impossible a united attack of the capitalists upon the workers.

We must differentiate between such a third party which includes small business men, well-to-do farmers and the professional classes, even tho it may call itself a Farmer-Labor Party, and a class Farmer-Labor Party made up of the industrial workers and exploited farmers.

C. There exists a growing sentiment for a labor party which has developed out of the industrial crisis of 1920-21 and the interference of the government in all the great strikes. This movement as it now expresses itself in two forms: 1. The support of the third party movement, and, 2. The organization of a class labor party.

The Conference for Progressive Political Action holding under its influence more than a million workers is friendly to, and a great part of the organized workers it represents are supporting, a third party movement.

On the other hand, farmer-labor parties have been organized in some states, such as West Virginia, Minnesota (with the Farmer-Labor Federation expressing the class-conscious element), Montana, and many local labor parties are springing up as in Buffalo, Los Angeles, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the American Labor Party of New York, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of Washington County, Pa., and the 14,690 Grain Farmers Fail

By LELAND OLDS.

Failure has been the lot of 14,690 grain raising farmers in the northwestern grain area, according to a lengthy report from John H. Rich, agent Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis. During the last year, he asserts, there has been a radical change for the worse. Costs have risen higher, yields have fallen lower, the farm labor problem has become still more difficult.

The number of failures, says the report, represents over 7 per cent of the 203,040 farmers within the area properly classified as wholly or principally grain raising. Of the total number of failures 4,959 have already been forced to abandon their farms and leave the country. According to the report:

"Changes of so drastic a character have occurred that substantial areas that were in farms a few years ago are now deserted."

Nebraska Endorses National Call for Farmer-Labor Meet

(Special to "The Worker")

OMAHA, Neb.—The Nebraska Progressive Party, in session here, voted unanimously to participate in the national nominating convention, to be held in St. Paul, Minn., May 30, 1924.

Thus the Progressive (Party of Nebraska) joins hands with the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and other groups for a monster convention of farmer-labor forces on a national scale.

W. H. Gresst, secretary of the Progressive Party, spoke in favor of participating in the Minnesota national convention, because he said it had the support and endorsement of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, which he said: "Is the one outstanding political movement on a national scale in this country."

Gresst spoke on his recent trip to Russia, to attend the first World Congress of farmers, as vice-chairman of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Green's speech elicited great interest, plainly indicating that the western farmers are very much interested in international problems, especially as they affect the agricultural market.

Roger Babson, Financial Expert, Tells Business, "Get Ready!" Communists Urge the Workers, "Organize! Be Prepared!"

By BEN GITLOW

(Special to "The Worker")

NEW YORK CITY.—Roger W. Babson, the leading business expert in the United States, declares the nation is facing an industrial depression that will develop into a panic. He stated his views frankly in an address delivered here at Cooper Union.

Mr. Babson is head of the Babson Statistical Organization, an institution engaged in gathering statistics for business men and concerns in the United States as well as giving them expert business advice. The Babson organization employs 350 economists and business experts and costs $2,000,000 a year to run.

What Babson has to say is taken very seriously by the business world. The hall was packed with prosperous looking business men who came to hear what he had to say about the business outlook in the United States. Mr. Babson is a very interesting and pleasant talker. He did not mince words. He insisted that the truth must be told even if it is displeasing.

He asserted with emphasis that an analysis of fundamental business statistics indicated that the United States would soon be entering a period of readjustment and that the period of readjustment would bring on a very severe business depression—a panic.

Mr. Babson opened his remarks with an attack particulary upon New York business men who are blind to the realities taking place in the business world of America and who are foolishly optimistic that the United States for a long period of years is going to enjoy unprecedented prosperity.

He analyzed all the so-called signs of business prosperity that these New York business men presented to him and shattered them with realism. He stated "Pay-as-you-go" buildings as an indication of economic sanity, to savings bank permits and to the increased retail sales, that prosperity would continue in the United States for some time."

In answer he pointed that these were only indications that registered surface conditions at the particular time but could not be considered in arriving at an understanding of the real conditions confronting American business. These indications according to Babson, are only thermometers that register the amount of business that is being done at a particular time but do not register whether business conditions are good or bad, because just as a thermometer registers only the degree of temperature and not whether the weather is good or bad so these indications register only the amount of business being done at the time and have nothing to do with the question of whether the conditions confronting business are good or bad. Babson insisted that it is necessary in order to understand the business conditions to investigate the conditions of the basic industries, because the basic industries are the ones that form the foundations for prosperity, and that the other industries and business concerns just carry that prosperity along.

He said, "The basic industries of coal, copper, oil, fertilizers, leather, rubber, wheat and others are to-day flat on their backs. The basic industries are not making money today. Until the basic industries are prosperous, all other industries and business will suffer."

He pointed particularly to the situation that the wheat farmers find themselves in and stated that when the farmers are realizing nothing on their labor, that such a situation is deplorable, and that no country can safely tolerate such conditions and confront the farmers in the United States at the present time.

He emphatically exclaimed, "You can't have good business in the country when the conditions for the farmers are bad. In order to have good business it is first necessary to revive the basic industries."

He ..... "Nor can you expect good business in the United States when the situation in Europe is unsettled. Europe is on a war footing. England has over 2,000,000 unemployed. Italy and Spain are under martial law. The whole economic life of Europe is in chaos. American business cannot prosper when such a deposable state of affairs exists in Europe."

Then Babson considered what effect the establishment of peace and normal conditions in Europe would mean to American business. Ignoring a surprise attack by the modern reality that would face American capitalism as soon as peace would be established in Europe. He stated it in this fashion:

"The real problem for American industry will come after the peace is established, when France, England and Germany combine in an industrial campaign."

He then produced articles from his pocket to demonstrate how ridiculously cheap Europe could manufacture goods, and ended up by saying: "What then will keep the factories of the United States busy when the factories of Europe are completely put in order, begin pouring their products into the markets of the world?"

Then Babson became historical. "The attitude of the American people is to blame," said Babson, for the deplorable conditions confronting the country. Labor thinks entirely of its unions, bankers of their deposits, merchants merely of sales and the young people only of having a good time. Honesty, industry and service to others have been lost sight of. The outlook indeed for the next two or three years is a gloomy one." He then appealed to the people to be sensible, industrious and interested in the service they can render to others in an effort to change the deplorable conditions confronting the country. As if this rhetoric can prevent the storm that is facing American capitalism. Babson's sentimental appeal here was just as futile as the word of the king who thought he could order the tide of the ocean to subside.

He closed his speech by stating that the coming years will see more wage decreases than increases, and if the immigration restrictions are not abolished, inferring by his remarks that a removal of immigration restrictions could be expected in order to cheapen the labor market that commodity prices would prevail for a long period of years; that a large number of the weak, inefficient small business concerns would fail as a result of the readjustment that would take place in the business world and that the depression would sweep them out of existence.

The depression, the polite way of calling a panic, may be delayed, in the view of Babson, until the votes are counted next November. He stated the administration is making its keenest efforts in holding up business prosperity in order to keep the people optimistic until the election of next year. But in spite of all this he insisted the readjustment and depression must take place.

How long the panic will last Babson cannot tell, for he predicted it would last one, two or three years, and perhaps for a longer period of time.

As the business men assembled he gave this advice, which if carried out will bring the panic upon the country soon. Here is his advice to the business men and he is telling it to them through his service that reaches hundreds of thousands of them, and thru meetings that he has arranged in forty-nine of the biggest cities in the country. His advice is: "Don't speculate. Don't stock

Labor Goes to Petition Congress

43 New Branches in November

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Secretary, Workers Party.

The increased impetus of the drive for 10,000 new members during the month of November is shown by the new charters issued by the National Organization. During the months of September and October 64 charters were issued. During three weeks of the month of November 43 new charters were issued by the National Organization. By the end of November the number of new charters will equal the number issued for the two months of September and October.

The list of charters shows that all of the Federations of the party are now participating in the membership drive, for charters were issued to South Slavic, Italian, Russian, Finnish, German, Armenian, French, Lithuanian, as well as to new English branches.

The goal of the National Organization in the drive for new members is not only to build up new party organizations, but to strengthen the present branches of the Party. In fact, the larger number of new members should be secured in those places where the Party is already organized. The Party work in the large industrial centers during the past year has greatly increased its prestige among the workers. If the city organizations take the proper steps to systematically carry on the work for new members, we can secure the 10,000 new members in the large industrial centers of the country.

It is of the most vital importance that the Party be strong in the industrial centers. It is there that the workers have thru their experiences been prepared for membership in a Communist Party.

While every unit of the Party must systematically carry on the membership drive, the large city organizations should reach the largest number of new members. Those organizations which have not thus far organized a committee and gone to work must do so at once.

Mellon Tax Program Favors Rich Against Poor

By JAY LOVESTONE.

The big interests have fired their first volley in preparation for the Sixty-Eighth Congress opening December 3rd.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, the richest man in the millionaire cabinet of President Coolidge and considered by many the wealthiest man in America today, is the man behind the gun in this instance.

In his much-heralded tax-cutting program Mr. Mellon has laid down a plan which will save the rich infinitely more than the poor. But Mr. Mellon and the press are not saying anything about this fact that the biggest bankers and manufacturers are the heaviest gainers from the proposed plan of tax revision. The newspapers are harping on the fact that the small fellow will get something out of the new income tax scales. But not a single employing class editor or financial expert has dared analyze the Mellon plan and tell the truth about it.

What the Plan Is

The multi-millionaire Mellon has proposed that the income tax be reduced from 4 per cent to 3 per cent and from 8 per cent to 6 per cent. Surtaxes are to begin at $10,000 instead of $6,000. They are to scale up progressively to $100,000 at 25 per cent where they would stop.

All in all the new scales would mean a total reduction of $300,000,000; of this sum, $290,900,000 would be saved in income tax payments, and $100,000,000 thru the discontinuance of the tax on telegraphs and theatre tickets. But thru reducing the tax limit on capital losses, a further limitation of the allowance for deduction from gross income, and a revision of the scale of taxation on community property income (husband and wife in certain states) the sum of $68,000,000 would be added to the present income tax totals. There will thus be a reduction of $322,900,000 in the federal taxes paid.

Big Business Applauds Mellon.

All the big bankers are applaudingMellon for this plan. The insistence by the Secretary of the Treasury that this plan can be put over only if the bonus to ex-soldiers is dropped has further endeared the tax-cutting program to the mellon-cutters the country over. Chas. M. Schwab, the steel magnate, has called the new tax proposal a great stimulant to business. E. R. Grace, President of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, thinks that the Mellon program will again enable the big financiers to invest in attractive securities. The spokesmen of the most powerful railroad, coal, oil, insurance, textile and banking interests are all unanimous in their enthusiastic praise of the plan, though they all emphasize their endorsement on the basis of the new scales saving the lower income tax payers. The representatives of five of the biggest banks in the country whose total deposits are close to the $2,000,000,000 mark have been specially invited in their enthusiasm for the revision.

Mellon's Program in Operation.

There are in the United States 14,-014,150 income tax payers. Of this number, 13,124,600 pay taxes on annual incomes ranging from $1,000 to $6,000. The remaining 889,550 are taxed on annual incomes ranging from $6,000 to over $1,000,000. The lower and middle salaried and wage-earning sections of our population fall in the first division and constitute 93.66% of the total number of tax payers. Those who get their income thru rent, interest and profits on business, commerce, real estate, stocks, bonds, royalties, dividends, fiduciaries and notes—fall overwhelming in the second category of tax payers. These constitute the backbone of the capitalist class and are only 6.4 per cent of the total number paying an income tax.

There is no way of arriving at an accurate estimate of the extent to which the poor and small fellows of the first income tax-paying group would benefit from discontinuing the present $100,000,000 tax on telegraphs, theatre tickets, and other miscellaneous nuisance taxes. But one can make an accurate estimate of the extent to which the poor and lower middle class on the one hand and the upper middle class and big bankers and manufacturers on the other hand would gain from the remaining net saving of $222,900,000 in income taxes.

According to Mellon's program the big capitalist would be spared the payment of $27,100,000 on the normal tax, $101,800,000 on the surtax, and $66,250,000 on earned income at 75 per cent of rates. This would be a total gain of $195,150,000 to the employing class and its captains of finance and industry. Deducting, however, from this total saving the $65,000,000 that these men of wealth would have to pay in new taxes on the revised basis, we find that under the Mellon scheme the rich would have a net saving of $130,150,000 annually.

In accordance with Mellon's new provisions the poor and lower middle classes would be saved $64,500,000

Trotsky Tells Moscow Metal Workers Russia Will Come Out of Her Trials Not Only Honestly but Victoriously

New proofs of Soviet Russia's desire to avoid war and to concentrate all her energies on peaceful work are to be found in Leon Trotsky's speech on international conditions delivered recently before the annual congress of the Metal Workers of Moscow Gubernia.

"The importance of the international situation at the present time cannot be exaggerated," began Trotsky. "We are living in months and weeks leading to events that may take place only once in thousands of years. Up still this time the sign posts of history have been the great French revolution, and the great movement of humanity in Napoleon's time. But these are of minor importance compared to the events that have developed in recent months. Five years ago the hopes entertained by the working class of Germany for a victorious revolution were not justified.

"The Social-Democrats at that time were directing the working class. They divided power with the bourgeoisie, and eventually turned it over to them completely. Germany now stands before the dilemma of perfect ruin or a social revolution.

"What conditions are necessary in order to effect a revolution? The economic, technical and class factors should be mature. The first and second of these are at hand. In the third factor, we see favorable symptoms. There is a numerous working class in Germany—15 million out of a population of 60 millions, and the workers are going more and more away from their compromising leaders toward the Communist Party. The question is; this party is still young. Will she find in herself the will to effect a revolution, and will she be able to do so? In this respect circumstances favor the working class of Germany. They are ready for the struggle, and in order to act they must know that at their head stands a party ready to lead them from struggle to struggle and to final victory. They realize that the question now is not about separate skirmishes, but the decisive struggle for life and death. Of late we have noticed that the German Communist Party grows from month to month and is attracting non-party workers and groups formerly under the influence of the Social-Democrats.

"The present crisis has grown directly out of the occupation of the Ruhr. The ministry of Stresemann has capitulated before the French government, but the French government does not even want to discuss terms with Germany, knowing that Germany once recovered will be dangerous. What do we see in Germany at the present time? There are two powers in Germany. On the one hand the revolutionary masses—on the other the Fascisti, and in the middle the amorphous masses of small bourgeoisie and the vacillating Social-Democrats. The middle layer will be washed away by the revolutionary wave. It is necessary to deal the enemy such a blow that they can resist no longer. Can the German Communist Party do this? We see favorable conditions for the class struggle. The forces of the bourgeoisie are an army of 100,000, a police force of 150,000, and the Fascist bands well organized and with splendid leaders. But it must be remembered that these Fascist bands scattered all over the country consist largely of workers who at the decisive minute will not defend the bourgeoisie. On the side of the revolution are the red hundreds, we do not know their quantity, but we know that the German working class can rally sufficient force to break their enemy. At the present time the situation is clear. The coalition of the Communists with the Social-Democrats in the governments of Saxony and Thuringia is comparable to the coalition of the Communists and Left Social Revolutionaries in Russia. Generally speaking the development of the movement grows all the time. Those working masses which are still clinging to the Social-Democrats are growing impatient and are ready to leave their leaders. Events are developing as if according to a plan. If all the signs of struggle do not deceive us we may expect that in the near future power will go over into the hands of the working class. But this is not the whole problem. There is the danger of attack from Germany's neighbor's—France, Belgium, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, and England from the sea."

Trotsky pointed out that if England had the strength she would use it to fight the revolution, but that since she was powerful only on the sea there was no danger from this direction. As for France, he declared that if absolute madness should overtake her and she should try to occupy the whole territory of Germany, she would need from one and a half to one million seven hundred thousand soldiers, whereas the French army is only 700,000 in all, and even if such a mass could be mobilized the results would be most inevitable for bourgeois France.

"As for Poland," Trotsky continued, "she is hardly ready to advance against a revolutionary Germany. She may try to snatch a bit off the bear's ear, but nothing more. There was a time when we were squeezed so far on all sides that the enemy was at the gates of Moscow. But we stretched our elbows, and now there are no more enemies at our gate. Such a time may come for Germany if Poland should squeeze her, and the German workers will stretch their elbows.

"The problem of Poland has international significance. It cannot be approached diplomatically. Is a war with Poland possible? Some impatient comrades say that war is inevitable. I do not think so. There are many facts pointing against it. Why should they wage war? We do not want to wage war, and we do not say so just for the sake of foreign criticism. Our economic successes are not so great. The difference between the prices of agricultural products and manufactured articles is not yet adjusted. We are just beginning to heal our wounds. War under such conditions would be the severest blow to our public economy.

"We must do everything we can to avoid war, and we shall do so. (prolonged applause). War is an equation with many unknown quantities. As to a victory within Germany, she does not need any help on our part. Within, German workmen will be victorious—Poor would be such a revolution that could not cope with its own bourgeoisie. The German revolution does not need any physical help.

"In this situation Poland must be either a bridge or a barrier. If she will be a bridge we will pay for it in cash. We need direct transit communication with Germany. This transit is just as necessary for whole country, it must be understood even by the village peasant and the kulak, for without it agriculture will be ruined. Poland must solve this problem, either to be a bridge or a barrier. We do not wish war. We shall pay not to wage war, but not at the expense of isolating ourselves from the European market. If Poland insists on being a barrier, she may have to justify the words of the Polish bullet who say that Russia and Germany are phoers against Poland.

"Poland must also promise non-interference in European civil war with arms. Is such a program realisable? Why not? It would be wrong if our government were affected by the mood of the Communists who feel that war is inevitable. We must continue our daily work of re-establishing our public economy. We must strengthen our army and our air fleet, which does not mean that we are led by military plans. It is clear to everybody that Europe is standing on the eve of great upheavals. We must take all possible measures to avoid war. We must increase tax times our current work. Speaking to you, workers of the union, I say the coming German revolution does not change our fundamental work. What inferences are we to draw from the approaching revolution? That we must do all of our work better and more quickly than ever. If it should come to an open war, then our better preparedness will be in the improvement of production. Preparation for war is two-sided—moral and political. If fate demands that we should experience again the effects of war, then it must be understood by the most backward masses of the population. It is not necessary to become nervous and heated. If our enemies should hurl us again into war every peasant must understand that they made us accept war as inevitable. Then we shall come out of the trial not only honestly but victoriously."

New York Prosecutor Confesses Failure in Attack on the F. S. R.

Six months ago representatives of the district attorney's office in New York City came to the Friends of Soviet Russia offices, then located in the East, and subpoenaed all financial records, as well as the office staff.

The staff marched down to the district attorney's office together with a lawyer and books. The staff were questioned and dismissed, but the books were kept.

The following letter from Attorney Joseph Brodsky tells the whole story of the taking of the books and their release.

799 Broadway, New York, Nov. 17, 1923.

Friends of Soviet Russia,
23 E. Wash. Ave., Chicago.

Gentlemen:—By the time this letter reaches you, you will have received all your books, checks, receipts, vouchers and papers which since last May have been in the possession of the district attorney for the county of New York.

The staff marched down to the district attorney's office together with a lawyer and books. The staff were questioned and dismissed, but the books were kept.

The following letter from Attorney Joseph Brodsky tells the whole story of the taking of the books and their release.

May I not conclude by stating that the F. S. R. made good every promise and that it emerges from the investigation stronger than ever, having proved that it is entirely worthy of the complete confidence of continued support of the working class of America.

Yours very truly,
HALE, NELLES & SHORR,
By Joseph Brodsky.

Demand Russian Recognition.

The Friends of Soviet Russia at a mass meeting Nov. 17th in Lorimer Hall, Boston, passed a resolution calling on the United States to recognize Soviet Russia immediately and urging city and state officials to use their influence toward that end.

Reverend Dr. E. O. Hartmann, editor of "Zion's Herald," who together with Bishop Blake recently returned from a trip in Soviet Russia, was the speaker at the evening. Professor Ellen Hayes, of Wellesley, was the chairman.

Rev. Mr. Hartmann said: "Lenin, I believe, is the greatest statesman in Europe today. It is my personal belief that Russia in 25 years will be the finest democracy in the world."

Dr. Hartmann made it clear that he was not a Bolshevist, then added: "The Russian army is about the best army in Europe and I believe that if ever Russia should combine with any of the other countries of Europe, she would come out victorious."

He spoke of the accomplishments of the present government, pointing out especially the educational improvements.

Miner's Journal Under Lewis-Searles Control In the Hall of "Capitalist" Fame

The "Brazen" attitude assumed by those responsible for the make-up of the United Mine Workers Journal, is one that should forever place them in the Hall of Fame conducted by Wall Street, or by the British Empire Steel Corporation of Canada, as this particular case would require.

On page seven of the Nov. 1st issue of the Journal, the article that stamps it as nothing more than a camouflaged "Capitalist" sheet, and as being totally unworthy of the expenditure of a single cent of the miners money. The members of the United Mine Workers of America are actually deluded to the extent of approximately $160,000.00 a year, in order that the officers of the union may be provided with a propaganda sheet. In bold headlines the article starts, "McLACHLAN GUILTY," followed by this, also in bold type, "SENT TO PRISON FOR 'SEDITIOUS LIBEL' ON CANADIAN GOVERNMENT."

A more contemptible or dastardly attitude could not have been presented by even "B. E. S. C. O." itself, for, after boasting of McLachlan's ousting for having tried to "deliver the district over to the Red Internationale of Moscow," the writer says "he has been convicted in the Leicester penitentiary for two years for seditious libel, by the Canadian government." It so happened that during the strike of the steel workers at Sydney, Nova Scotia, the B. E. S. C. O. people had no use for the Canadian federal police to protect the slaves, and McLachlan sent out a circular letter denouncing Besco for their action. Very choice words are used to tell the membership that President Lewis ordered McLachlan to send the Canadian miners back to "scab" on the striking steel workers; boastfully they claim that "Following McLachlan's house and took possession of the Offices and Statutes' of the 'Third Internationale,' and closes the article thus, 'McLachlan's defense was the right of free speech.'"

If some of the men who built up the miners' union by fighting for it, by going to jail for it, and by doing "thousand and one" other things that were necessary to advance the cause of the miners and all other workers, could only come back and look at the "stripe" and "calibre" of those who now "RULE" the unions, they would certainly have a righteous indignant might, and start right in housecleaning. Let those who are now there do the job, "Do not break the faith."

Four Days' Labor Defense Bazaar

Four days of colorful entertainment, dancing and merriment are in store for those who are wise enough to attend all four sessions of the Chicago Labor Defense Bazaar which is to be held Dec. 8-9, in Northwest Hall, North and Western Aves., Chicago.

Preparations to make the bazaar superior to anything which has ever been done in Chicago along the same lines have been made and a host of Chicago comrades are now at work so that the elaborate plans which have been made may be consummated.

Every section of the Workers Party in Chicago has offered something special in the way of entertainment and Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon, the times set aside for the entertainment, will see the Northwest Hall turned into an Arabian Nights Bazaar as of old when the people of all nations gathered together to show their wares and to vie with each other in novel and exotic performances.

The sale in the booths will be peasant handicraft from most of the countries in Europe and Asia, including a large assortment of the Russian work, which the Friends of Soviet Russia had for sale last year and which met with such popular demand. For those who want to do their Christmas shopping where novel and distinctive gifts can be purchased for little money, the bazaar will be a haven. The knowledge that a better assortment of merchandise at lower prices can be bought and at the same time the Labor Defense Council will be supported in its fight for the freedom of Foster and Ruthenberg, will bring thousands of Chicago workers to the bazaar.

Chicago Open Forum.

The Open Forum, conducted by Lovett Chicago, every Sunday p. m. at Capitol Building, 159 N. State St., Room 210, has shown a healthy growth at every meeting, both in attendance and interest shown in the lectures delivered.

The program for the month of December has now been completed. It contains a variety of vital subjects being discussed by capable speakers. The outline is as follows:

Sunday, Dec. 2, Max Bedacht on: "What Is Happening in Germany." Sunday, Dec. 9, William Z. Foster speaks on "Past Experience and Future Prospects for the Labor Movement." Sunday, Dec. 16, Duncan McDonald, former president Illinois Federation of Labor, speaks on "Industrial Unionism vs. Craft Unionism." Sunday, Dec. 23, J. Louis Engdahl, editor "The Worker", speaks on "Labor, the Third Party and 1924 Elections." Sunday, Dec. 30, Leland Olds, well known Economist, speaks on "The Economic Background of Unemployment."

Wisconsin Employment Drops.

Detroit Reaction Broke Workers' Political Front

By CYRIL LAMEKIN.

(Special to "The Worker")

DETROIT, Mich.—The climax in the political drama staged by organized labor in Detroit on the occasion of the recent municipal election came on election day, when two of the five men endorsed by the Detroit Federation of Labor for the city council met defeat. The election of the other three makes the result no less a defeat for labor, in view of the fact that the two defeated candidates were more closely connected with the labor movement than two of the three victorious candidates; and also because they were members of the present council and sought re-election.

The defeat, without hesitation, can be laid at the door of the reactionary Building Trades Council and its allied and associated reactionaries in a few of the other unions. These reactionaries attempted to restrict endorsement to only two of the nine men that comprise the city council, but they were overwhelmingly repudiated in the Detroit Federation of Labor which was determined to challenge a majority of the council.

Instead of submitting to the decision of the majority of the organized labor movement the officials of the Building Trades Council proceeded with their splitting tactics. Under the name of the "Labor Candidates' Political Committee" they addressed unions and circularized members urging them to vote for only two men, Ewald and Castator. The following is a paragraph from their circular letter to unionists: "There is one thing that will insure the retention of labor representatives in the council, and that is for our members to get out and vote for Castator and Ewald, with the understanding that voting for other candidates than these discounts our chances for victory."

The break in the political front made defeat inevitable. However, the defeat overtook the reactionaries as well. Their leading candidate, Robert Ewald, Business Agent of the Bricklayers' Union, failed of re-election. Fred Castator was elected, the defeat of Ewald can be explained only as a rebuke on the part of the majority of the unionists of the city. The instigators of the splitting tactics being the officials of the Bricklayers' Union, the other workers rightly or wrongly held Ewald, the business agent of that union, responsible and voted against him.

A significant result of the election is the fact that Joseph Martin, until recently Commissioner of Public Works, a notorious anti-trade unionist, felt the pull of the council and by virtue of this he becomes president of the new council.

The Workers Party of Detroit, in line with the united front policy of the party, endorsed the candidates of the Detroit Federation of Labor.

Scott Nearing Is on Speaking Tour for Labor Defense

Not since last spring, when the accounts of the trials of William Z. Foster and C. E. Ruthenberg were filling the pages of labor and capitalist papers alike, has there been so much activity on the part of labor militants in the Labor Defense Council.

News locals are being organized, meetings are being arranged all over the country and individual workers are collecting funds on the L. D. C. contribution lists. In addition to the meetings for Foster, which were announced last week, meetings at which Scott Nearing will speak have been arranged as follows:

Ziegler, Ill., Dec. 3.
Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 4.
Toledo, Ohio, Dec. 16, evening.
Canton, Ohio, Dec. 17.
Akron, Ohio, Dec. 18.
Youngstown, Ohio, Dec. 19.

These meetings, like those arranged for Foster, are attracting wide attention in the cities where they have been arranged.

In addition to other activities practically all of the local Labor Defense Councils have arranged for dances, bazaars or entertainments for the defense. Among these are the masquerade ball to be held in Cicero, Ill., by the International Bazaar, arranged in Chicago, Dec. 6-9; dance in Detroit, Dec. 1; bazaar in Minneapolis, Dec. 15-16; bazaar in St. Paul the end of December; dance in Boston, Dec. 29, and one in Los Angeles the last part of December.

Requests from practically every industrial center in the country have been made for speakers to address Labor Defense Council meetings. These are being complied with as rapidly as possible. Cities in which no local Labor Defense Council is organized, should send in their requests for speakers at once.

WATERBURY, CONN.—The Russian branch of the Workers Party here requested its members to refrain from working Nov. 7, the sixth anniversary of the Russian revolution. Those who could not lay off work without losing their jobs were requested to donate their day's wages to the defense of political prisoners. A check for $45.85 was forwarded to the Labor Defense Council.

Invitation to Moscow.

MOSCOW.—The Russian Government has received an invitation, transmitted by the Italian Representative in Moscow, to take part in the International Art Exhibition at Venice, in April of next year.

Millionaire Mellon's Tax Program Favors Rich Against Poor

normally on incomes of $25,000 and $31,250,000 on their earned income at 75 cent of rates. This would be a total gain of over $95,750,000 to the lower and middle salaried and wage-earning class. However, deducting from this total the $5,000,000 which this economic group would have to pay in new taxes on the revised basis, we find that the poorer layers of our economic society, the workers, the small farmers, and clerks and small tradesmen would have a net saving of $92,750,000 annually.

Saves Rich and Hits Poor.

The powerful rich class of manufacturers, bankers, high-priced corporation managers, and wealthy farmers who constitute only a little over six per cent (6.34%) of the total income tax-paying population receive the net gain of $130,150,000 or close to sixty per cent (58.39%) of the total saved through the new Mellon arrangements.

The workingmen, poor farmers and lower-salaried white collars workers, whose annual income ranges from $1,000 to $6,000 and who constitute about ninety-four per cent (93.66%) of the total number paying taxes on income, receive only a little over forty per cent (41.61%) or $92,750,000 of the total reduction of $222,900,000 that the revised tax program would entail.

Thus, six per cent of the income tax payers, the wealthy and millionaire class, will gain almost sixty per cent of the total advantage while ninety-four per cent of the number paying an income tax, the overwhelming majority of the poorer people, will gain only about forty per cent of the sum saved by the reduction of the present income tax rates.

But interesting as this analysis is, the reasons given by Mellon for the adoption of his plan are still more interesting and enlightening.

Mellon is responsible for saving the big capitalist interests hundreds of millions of dollars through the repeal of the excess profits tax and the reduction of the surtax from 65 to 50 per cent. Now he is advocating a reduction of the surtax to 25%.

The argument given by Mr. Mellon for this reduction is that "the rich will pay more under his plan than they do now, as now, by investing in tax-exempt securities, they avoid paying almost altogether." Of course our efficient Secretary of the Treasury doesn't mention the countless avenues of escape open to the wealthy owners of property through the declaration of stock dividends and the manipulation of their income figures by high-priced, skilled accountants.

Yet, it is interesting and instructive to all workers and farmers that Mr. Mellon, the guardian of our national treasury, admits publicly that the Government cannot and will not do anything to prevent the millionaire stock and bond owners from defrauding the country of hundreds of millions of dollars annually in unpaid taxes. This is the same policy pursued by the government when the poor come before its courts for judgment, as shown by the severe sentences often imposed on people found guilty of stealing or attempting to steal the most trifling sum, for example the case of Judge Talley in New York sentencing Louis Wiley to fifteen years for attempting to steal 82 cents.

If the government were to apply the same measure of justice to the rich as it does to the poor it would take many centuries, going back to the Stone Age, to punish the millionaire capitalists for their failure to pay on upwards or $2,000,000,000 in corporation accumulated surpluses. Yet, it is Mellon's own corporation, the Gulf Oil Co., that began the merry dance of stock-dividends; it is the Aluminium Corporation of which Mr. Mellon is the leading stockholder that has received an amortization of $15,000,000 on about $30,000,000 valuation; and it is another Mellon company the Standard Steel Car, that still has an alleged $2,000,000 tax due, though the assessment letter has never been sent out.

Taxes on Rich Decreasing and on Poor Increasing.

It is estimated that there are at least $18,000,000,000 of tax exempt securities. Some maintain that the total is nearer twenty-five billion dollars.

In 1916 there were 1298 annual incomes of over $500,000. Year by year the capitalists learned the great game of taxdodging. In 1917, despite the fabulous profits, gained in the war industries, the number in this class shrunk to 1,015. By 1921 the group dwindled to 264. And now the government offers to make a public retreat before these millionaire plunderers of the national treasury.

From the report of the commissioner of internal revenue for the year ending June 30, 1922 we learn that in the last year the receipts from corporation taxes decreased by almost $400,000,000. The inheritance tax alone showed a decline of $18,000,000 in the same period.

On the other hand the number of people in the class of income tax payers from $1,000 to $5,000 has increased from 92.10 per cent of total in 1921 to the 93.66 per cent for the last fiscal year. What is more, the receipts from miscellaneous taxes, almost always paid in the main by the poor, is on the climb.

Against the Workers and Farmers.

The taxation program of Mr. Mellon is simply another broadside fired by our employing class government against the workers and farming masses. Its present issuance was of course precipated by the pressing needs of the Republican Party which happens to be in power at this time.

Almost one-sixth of our national income, according to so conservative an authority as the Federal Industrial Conference Board, is consumed in the expenses incurred through running the State, local, and national governments. The employing class needs the government to devote itself primarily to activities and campaigns to suppress the working and farming masses and thus guarantee the maintenance of the present system of the private ownership of the social means of exchange and production. But the capitalists hate like Cain to pay the mounting costs entailed in the upkeep of this machinery of oppression which rises in expense as the class conflicts sharpen. The employers therefore try to pass on these costs to the workers and poor farmers.

The new Mellon program is simply another effort, a very clever one, to save the rich and soothe the poor. It plays directly into the hands of the big bankers and manufacturers against the working and farming classes.

Cotton Interests Organizing in Congress

Congressmen and Senators of the cotton growing states are going to organize a bloc in the next Congress in the interests of the big cotton growers. On Nov. 30th these Senators and Congressmen will get together. They will devise ways and means to do for the Southern Cotton Barons what Cagney's bloc did for wealthy farmers in the last Congress. Representative B. G. Lowry, of Mississippi, has sent out the call.

The moving spirit of this proposed cotton bloc in the Senate is Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia, a prominent figure in Southern banking and insurance business for many years.

Speakers Discuss, Should U.S. Congress Probe Communism?

C. E. Ruthenberg, secretary, Workers Party, spoke at the first mass meeting in the nation-wide "Why munism!" drive of the party, Wednesday night, at Emmett Memorial Hall, Ogden and Taylor Aves., in Chicago.

The two other speakers in this drive are J. Louis Engdahl, editor, "The Worker", and Jay Lovestone, author of the "The Government Strikebreaker" and leader of the Workers Party Research Bureau.

These meetings are being held incidental to the opening of congress. Reactionary labor officials, among them Sam Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers of America, in alliance with the most reactionary, red-baiting organizations in the country are demanding a congressional investigation of the American Communist movement. The Workers Party thus gives its reply to this demand at these meetings. They are as follows:

C. E. Ruthenberg as speaker, Dec. 1, Labor Temple, 14th St. and Jefferson Ave., Toledo, O., 2 (afternoon), Cleveland, O., 2 (evening), Central L. U. Hall, 17th and Sedat Sts., Erie, Pa.; Frohsinn Hall, Genesee and Spring Sts., Buffalo, N.Y.; 6, New York City; 5, Palma Memorial Hall, 9 Appleton St., Boston, Mass.; 6, Horticultural Hall, Front St., Worcester, Mass.; 7, Eagles Temple, corner Broad and Spring Garden Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.; 12, House of the Masses, Detroit.

J. Louis Engdahl as speaker, Dec. 4, Springfield, Ill.; 6, Hall No. 1, Fraternal Bldg., 11th and Franklin Sts., St. Louis, Mo.; 7, Fraternity Hall, 1225 Walnut St., Kansas City, Mo.; 8, Omaha, Neb.

Jay Lovestone as speaker, Dec. 1, Milwaukee, Wis.; 2, (afternoon) Richmond Hall, 225 So. 8th St., Minneapolis, Minn.; 2 (evening), Labor Temple, 406 N. Franklin St., St. Paul, Minn.; 3, Duluth, Minn.; 4, Workers' Hall, corner Gower Ave. and N. Fifth St., Superior, Wis.

Textile Workers Resist Owners' Schemes

At a meeting of the New England Conference of the United Textile Workers of America it was accepted against the attempts of the Pacific of Dover, New Hampshire, to force them to run additional machinery per man.

The workers are bent on preventing the bosses from forcing them to turn out 50 per cent more at the same wages. The employers are threatening to shut down the mills in order to force the workingmen to accept these unbearable conditions. With the prospect of a general strike looming up the movement as a whole and its unity under one banner, the banner of the Red International.

Cannon Speaks at Irish Forum.

The Irish Social and Educational Society is bringing the economic question to the attention of the Irish workers in Chicago thru the means of a forum which is held every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in Emmet Memorial Hall, Ogden Ave. and Taylor St.

The venture is already a pronounced success and an unusually large attendance is expected on Sunday evening, Dec. 2, when James P. Cannon, National Chairman of the Workers Party, will speak on "The Decline of the British Empire."

Readers of "The Worker" are invited to attend and also bring the forum to the attention of any Irish workers they come in contact with.

with goods, buy only as much as can dispose of without credit. Reduce your overhead expenses as much as possible. Stop every needless waste. Reduce your credit. With the slowing down of industry will come severe unemployment, terrible want and misery for workers.

From Babson's speech, one gets that capitalism in the United States is in a dilemma, that domestic and foreign conditions are undermining its prosperity. The capitalists expect the panic and they know it is coming. Nevertheless, they, together with Babson admit that they can absolutely nothing to avert it.

The panic that is coming in the United States, and Babson fears, is but a part of the universal crisis that the country has ever experienced. Out of the hardships it has imposed upon the mass of the workers, farmers and small business men will come bitter class struggles that will give rise to important political problems and changes. The future, therefore, will bring great opportunities for the Workers Party of United States, unemployment demonstrations, gigantic strikes against the open shop and wage reductions, fights against high prices and rebellions against the political dominance of big capitalism.

For the Communists, the coming years in the United States are going to be very fruitful. Mr. Babson and other Communists agree with you, that the storm is coming. Your advice to the business man of America is to be prepared. And the Communists' advice to the workers, will be the same: organize and be prepared.

Philippino's Labor Strength Grows in Spite of U. S. Imperialism

By JAY LOVESTONE.
(Special to "The Worker.")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In a special interview given to "The Worker," Vincente G. Bunuan, the director of the Philippine Press Bureau, outlined the growing strength of the labor movement in the Philippines. It should be of particular interest to the workers of the United States to know what their brethren in the Philippines are doing in view of the present crisis in the Islands involving the campaign of American imperialists to exploit and enslave the Filipinos.

The situation in the Philippines was never so critical for the independence movement as it is now. Military Governor General Leonard Wood is using all the influence in his power to forcibly himself in his unjustifiable position in the Islands.

In this interview, granted exclusively to "The Worker," Mr. Bunuan, who is one of the leading journalists of the Philippines and an ardent worker in the movement for Philippine Independence from American imperialism, supplies the much needed information as to the likely role of the Philippine workers in their struggle for freedom from the Wall Street controlled government in Washington.

Labor Unions in the Philippines.

Mr. Bunuan went on to say: "There are two labor organizations in the Philippines: the Labor Congress and the Federation of Labor. Both aim to protect the laboring classes organized into unions affiliated with either one or the other.

"The only difference between them lies in their zeal, vying with each other in this respect, in looking after the interest of their respective constituents, especially in connection with attempts on the part of capital to encroach upon their interests as a class and as individual workingmen.

"While the leaders of both organizations belong to separate political parties, the former to the Coalition Party headed by Senate President Manual L. Queson, and the latter to the Democrata Party led by Governor Ruperto Montinola, they are one, absolutely one, in their desire to see their country immediately, completely, and absolutely independent, as in fact all Filipinos are."

Labor Ready to Fight.

"The labor element is not slow to assert its rights and to go to the extreme when driven to it or shown by the strike of hundreds of employes—conductors and motormen—of the Manila Electric Company, a corporation owned and managed by Americans, due to refusal of the management to increase wages and to accede to other reasonable demands made by the laborers.

"Other comparatively important strikes were those by the members of the crew of inter-island vessels and cigar makers employed in cigar factories. They were adjusted, however, soon after the declaration of the strikes to the satisfaction of all.

Labor Strength Growing.

"These two labor organizations meet in annual conventions on Labor Day, which is an official holiday in the Philippines. Recommendations to the Philippine legislature embodied in resolutions all looking toward improvement of labor conditions, are adopted during the meetings. One of the important recommendations of the two organizations was enacted into law last year, Senate President Quezon himself, fathering the bill. It gives better protection and facilities to women and children employed in factories. Passage of an accident insurance law, of an eight-hour labor act, and of a law making full observance of Sunday compulsory are among their important recommendations.

"There are about 60,000 workingmen in the Philippines affiliated with the two organizations. They belong to various unions, such as the Cigarmakers' Union, the Farmer Tenants' Union, the Shoemakers' Union, the marine unions, and others.

"Politically and socially the labor element in the Philippines is getting stronger and stronger. While as yet Philippine workingmen are not strong enough to organize themselves into a political entity sufficiently strong to launch their own candidates at elections, the time is not far distant, when as in other countries, they will be a separate power, politically, to be reckoned with."

Congress to Act.

The Philippine question will be one of the most important matters acted upon in the Sixty-Eighth Congress, opening on December the third. The charges made against General Wood and the exposure of the financial interests controlling his policies in the Philippines as printed in the September issue of the Liberator having evoked much interest among several congressmen who promise to air the whole, scandalous situation on the floor of the House.

Pittsburgh Soviet Visit Greets Delegates

The Red Reception Committee and Friends of the Russian Workers' Defense and Russian Council of Western Pennsylvania said in the interests of the Soviet Delegation to Pittsburgh, was a wonderful success.

It was presided over by A. T. Mc-Nevin, the Chairman of the Committee, who is also business agent of Dist. 6 of the Machinists' Union. Enthusiastic meetings were held in halls all over the Pittsburgh District to the effect that the trades unions are becoming deeply interested in the work of this conference particularly the campaign to abolish the Anti-Sedition law of Pennsylvania under which the members of the Workers Party are being prosecuted at the present time.

The Organization Committee reported that 27 local unions of the American Federation of Labor, 1 local union of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, 2 branches of the Socialist Party, 29 branches of the Workers Party and 10 other working class organizations are affiliated and send delegates to the conference. In addition to these eight new delegates presented credentials as follows: three from the Chartiers Valley Trades and Labor Assembly, one from the Washington Central Labor Union and three from the Machinists' Local No. 491 and one from the Pittsburgh Metal Trades Council. Two Machinists' officials from Cincinnati visited the conference and expressed themselves as greatly impressed by the work of this committee.

Slowly but surely the unions of the Pittsburgh District begin to see that if free speech and assemblage can be established in Western Pennsylvania the workers will organize almost spontaneously.

Attacks "Do Nothing" Labor Leaders.

Discussing the recent American Federation of Labor convention and the attack by Gompers on the Communists because they advocate constructive, progressive policies for the trade union movement, the Minnesota Union Advocate makes the following interesting remarks:

"The widespread industrial stagnation, with its millions of unemployed, the bitter conflicts between employer and employee, with the many wage cuts of the past few years, did not evoke a single suggestion except an appeal to organize.

"The employers have the 'one big union,' which is well financed and efficiently managed. They control the government, and the courts give deference according to their interests. They control industry and shut it down and starve the workers into submission when that suits the interests of the masters. Many of the laws that have taken labor a quarter of a century to have enacted have recently been swept off the statute books by the courts.

"In the face of these adverse conditions, the convention did not propose a single counteracting measure. The modern method of aeroplane, poisoned gas and machine gun fighting of the employers is to be met by antiquated and obsolete flint-lock weapons of labor."

In the last few years, it is interesting to note, the Communist workers have been the most insistent in the campaign to have the labor unions adopt tactics suited to the conditions of modern industry.

Mass Meeting Protests.

A mass meeting addressed by J. J. Woodsworth, M. P., was held at Edmonton, Canada, on Monday, Nov. 5, to protest against the sentencing of James M. McLachlan, secretary of the Nova Scotia miners, to two years of prison. The following resolution was adopted at the mass meeting: "We protest against the action of the jury and judge in convicting J. B. McLachlan, regarding it as a curtailment of the right of free speech, and send a wire protesting against the conviction, and demand his immediate release."

Intellectual Atavisms Proclaim Virgin Birth

By Art. WISH.

American representatives of the Church of Henry VIII of England, assembled in Dallas, Texas, last week reaffirmed the Virgin Birth of Jesus Christ and hurled anathema at all those who dare to question or doubt that long ago in a cow shed near a Roman village a ghost became the papa of a Hebrew baby boy.

This intellectual atavism of Tudor and obscurity was proclaimed with all the pomp on occasion demanded by the apostles of ignorance who call themselves the Houses of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States. Altho scientifically minded thy the divines who participated in the conference, it is generally understood that the reaffirmation of the creed is a rebuke to the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant of New York who has recently expressed doubts regarding the virgin birth of Christ. Bishop William T. Manning declared "there is nothing new in the situation and I have nothing to say." When any preacher gets to the point where he has nothing to say it is high time a congressional committee were appointed to investigate the phenomenon.

It is obviously imperative that the Episcopal Church preserve its apostles' creed just as it was enunciated by the religious hangers-on of King Henry VIII, who started the divine institution as a weapon to use against the feudal gangsters of his time who used the Holy Roman Catholic Church against him and the rising bourgeoisie. Not only did Prince Hal, as he was called by his pals, object to the feudal lords interfering with the rising capitalist class that loaned him money to pay for his debaucheries, but when he desired to sublate his lawful marriage only the Pope interfered, which infuriated him. So the good king established a spook shop of his own with a religion that enabled him to have as many wives as he desired. He appointed himself as pope of the new church, altho he used a renegade cardinal as a marionette to function officially. Ecclesiastical duties interfered with the amours and butcheries of this holy being, so he had an assistant pope to render homage unto God and to consecrate the rule of British royalty.

Religion has always been able to change its spiritual propaganda to conform to the demands of a rising or ing material world. It is prudently flexible. But in spite of the change which condoned a plurality of wives and sanctioned the murder of castoff concubines, it persistently maintained the doctrine of the holy virginity, which includes the immaculate conception. Tho breaking with the Holy Roman Church ostensibly on the marriage question, but in reality because of other motives deeply rooted in changes taking place in material life, the new Church of England remained piously orthodox otherwise.

The doctrine of the immaculate conception has not always been a part of the Christian creed. In fact, it was at the Council of Nice in the year 325 A. D. that the question came up for solution. There had been much speculation as to whether Jesus were actually born of a virgin with God as his father. It was generally conceded that God was his father, but the problem pressing for solution was whether Jesus himself was a God also, since he was born of an earthly mother, or whether he was merely God-like. At the Council of Nice the eminent divines got gloriously drunk and engaged in a free-for-all fight with fists, chairs, table legs and other improvised weapons. After the fight was over and the wounded removed to neighboring hospitals those remaining decided that the two were in reality one. This may seem unreasonable to sober people, but it was probably as clear as anything could possibly be to the renowned ecclesiastics the morning after the night before.

But on second and soberer thought another puzzle arose. If Jesus and God were one and the same, did God really visit Mary in nocturnal secrecy or was this miracle accomplished thru some other agency? For fifty-six years this question was under dispute. Then another council was called at Constantinople and again the leaders of Christendom assembled, got drunk again and indulged in their customary pastime of a knock-down and drag-out.

When the conflict subsided some one arose and proclaimed the solution of the mystery. Mary was really a virgin. God did not visit her in person but sent the Holy Ghost as a substitute. The result of this visit made possible the virgin birth. These arose the doctrine of the Holy Trinity —the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost. Three in one; one in three.

The fact that the clergymen at the Councils of the Fourth Century were drunk may have had something to do with their brain contortionings, but in these days of prohibition this extenuating circumstance is not operative. Nor are these dope-peddlers crazy. They are simply vassals of the capitalist class whose particular function is to keep the workers in ignorance and fear. Religion is one of the pillars of capitalism, because religion and ignorance are synonymous. All religionists are ignorant, but all who are ignorant are not religious.

One of the great tasks of the revolutionary movement of the world is to throw the light of science upon these bats and vultures of darkness and drive them into the open where we can analyze them for what they really are—intellectual atavisms, perpetuating a dead superstition to justify the robbery of the workers of today by the parasitic capitalists.

The Y. W. L. in Shop and Union

By NATALIE GOMEZ.

The Young Workers League of Chicago has at the present time over 350 members, of which about 75 per cent are workers. In spite of this fact the industrial work of the League has only recently begun to assume its proper importance. Over one-third of our total membership are union members and at the present time one out of every one of them a fighter for our principles in the trade unions and an active member of the Trade Union Educational League.

This is a bigger task than it might seem because we have problems and difficulties that our adult comrades are free from. Our union membership is composed mostly of very young comrades who have not been in the movement for a long time and consequently have not yet fully grasped the importances of Communist participation in trade unions. We are trying to remedy this by lectures, discussions and educational meetings and as a result we have an ever-increasing number of our comrades joining the unions of their trades and our union members are becoming more active. In the meetings of the T. U. E. L. there are many more young workers present now than there were a few months ago. From now on we are going to have every union member of the Y. W. L. notified of the meetings of the particular group of his or her trade and we expect good results from this work.

In order to systematize our industrial work a city industrial committee, consisting of branch industrial organizers and the city industrial organizer, has been meeting regularly and discussing the general industrial work and problems facing the branches. Branch industrial organizers are now being supplied with information about various unions in order to help them in getting the members to join the unions.

Our industrial registration, which is very complete now, has shown some very interesting facts about the composition of our membership. First and most important it shows clearly that our membership is almost entirely of a purely industrial character, whereas previous to this we had the idea that the student element predominated. We have only 24 students thruout the city, which is indeed a small number. Clothing workers lead in number, about 85. Building trades and various clerical occupations are next, followed by all kinds of industrial workers. These figures show a very favorable condition for successful industrial work and shops nuclei reorganization, which I will deal with in the next issue.

American Intellectuals and Communism

By MICHAEL GOLD.

It is almost a commonplace among American intellectuals, for one of them to confess that he is a Communist. Thinkers like Max Eastman, William Z. Foster, or John Pepper, to name the first three that come to mind, are not alone and unfriendly in the exclusive academy maintained by contributors to the Freeman, the Dial, the World and the New Republic. The older pacifist-liberals in this country still regard Communist thinkers as dangerous, and perhaps dangerous allies, as liberals gone wrong; while the younger intelligentsia, nurtured on the burlesque and esthetics of the Smart Set—Dial philosophy, do not even understand what Communist thinkers are thinking about, and leak the windows against this rough, living storm while they play on the floor of their steam heated ivory tower with their bright toys of art.

The American philosopher of art and life, even when he is a rebel against the orthodoxies of the last century, pursues a lonely path. There is no steady North Star by which to guide his bewildered journeying. He creates a tragedy out of this situation. He figures life to be the hopeless struggle of the individual against a universe too vast and overpowering; he does not perceive, like the Communist, the immense armies of workers who all over the world are engaged in the titanic struggle for a new scheme of things. He stands alone, and it is inevitable that he should feel the whole weight of the cultural burden of world-chaos. He has no social sense, and he pays for this with despair and futility.

The American rebel-intellectual has come to an impasse. When one reads a book like the Waste Land, by T. S. Eliot, one easily understands, thru the fevered ramblings, that this sensitive artist has found the modern world too much for him, and that he has chosen the path of intellectual suicide. When one mourns with Theodore Dreiser over the pathos of the suffering world, or when one moves thru the Ohio fogs of sex and maladjustment with Sherwood Anderson, or among the hysterical lightnings of Waldo Frank's sex-ridden America, one is sure that there is no escape if one follows these guides, but that individualism has defeated them in their deepest souls.

The American fiction writer, artist and poet, sensitive and aware of the rotten foundations of the life here, has as yet only reached the destructive phase of revolution. He is amazed that anyone can peer into the future and see a new world rising out of this confusion. Is there any answer in H. L. Mencken, for instance, but that we forget reality, and eat, drink and be merry? Is there any answer in Sherwood Anderson, but that we grow more and more befuddled? Is there any answer in Eugene O'Neill, but that we become more and more obsessed with the mystery of sex? Is there any answer in Dreiser, but that we become more and more fatalistic? Is there any answer in Frank, but that we become more and more mystical?

One reads a great and promising book like the Mind in the Making, by James Harvey Robinson. The groundwork is splendid; the conditions as pathetic as those of a child confronted with an earthquake. Mr. Robinson thinks a war, powerful enough to destroy capitalism can be obliterated if the human race will only read history and acquire the historical sense that teaches one the possibilities of change and hope for the future. Would that such a war, or factory revolution could acquire the elements of a college education, as Mr. Robinson wishes! But is literary gossip to wait until that far-off day to usher in its revolutions? This, too, is a doctrine of despair, one that could only be preached by a man who has never been in a factory, or who has never had to earn his living by the sweat of his brain. Robinson's book is full of his confusion. His idea of the rebellions of the modern fiction hero and heroine rise way higher than the genius of these creators. These creators are still seeking the born-again freedoms of the eighteenth century.

The Communist movement is not without its own confusions, but it is the only movement in which the intellectual can find his thought and action move with the steadiness and determination of the class. The liberal intellectuals are wasting their spiritual substance in trying to find one spot to weather, and do not know that they are inhabitants of a collective body—the new Communist world. They feel chaos within them, and see chaos about them, and each individual in his private world of dreams are as unconscious of the fact that they are harbingers of a new spring time in the world, as the driven birds who migrate from the south, and in snow and ice, announce the coming of the northern spring. These solitary artists and intellectual rebels of America are unconscious revolutionists; the Communist is a conscious revolutionist, and the difference is like that of adolescence and maturity in an individual.

Final Tasks Face Third Convention of Workers Party

federated Farmer-Labor Party has been organized on a national scale.

While the sentiment and pressure for a labor party is growing, it would be an illusion to believe that an all-inclusive mass labor party will be organized in the near future. The bumpers machine will, as in the past, again support one of the old capitalist parties. Johnston and the Railroad Brotherhood and their followers, organized in the Conference for Progressive Political Action, will undoubtedly follow the third party or support a candidate on the old party ticket. Only the left wing of the labor movement will at the beginning participate in the organization of a mass class party of the farmers and workers. On the other hand the question of that part of the labor movement controlled by Johnston and Gompers will be counterbalanced by a great mass of desperate farmers who are ready to join in a class farmer-Labor Party.

The Third Party and the Farmer-Labor Party.

A. We must continue our campaign for the organization of a party of the workers and exploited farmers emphasizing, as broad a section of these groups as can be won for a class, farmer-labor party. Our policy must be to develop a class party of workers and exploited farmers, and not a third party including the lower middle class and the well-to-do farmers. We may, in special circumstances, be compelled to participate in a mass class party of the farmers and workers, but in such a situation it is our duty to develop inside of such an organization of the workers and exploited farmers.

Our goal is not the organization of a so-called third party, even tho we may disguise itself and call itself a Farmer-Labor Party, but to organize a class farmer-labor party of workers and exploited farmers.

B. Where such third parties calling themselves farmer-labor parties arise which include the workers and exploited farmers, we must enter these parties, but our policy must be to win all the workers and exploited farmers away from the third party and to organize them in a class farmer-labor party.

B. While we carry on our campaign for the organization of a class farmer-labor party we must at the same time carry on a campaign for the third party forces to split away from the old capitalist parties and wherever a third party is organized we must make an alliance with it against the old capitalist parties and the capitalist government. This alliance must not take the form of organizational unity between the class farmer-labor party and the third party, we will enter into common campaigns with the third party against the capitalist class, such as the maintenance of civil liberties, recognition of Soviet Russia, against intervention, to uphold capitalism in Europe, demobilization of the government, and nationalization of the railroads and mines, measures to enable the farmers to buy at lower prices the products of the great trusts.

a. We will nominate our candidates on the Farmer-Labor Party ticket wherever possible and carry on an independent campaign.

b. Wherever the Farmer-Labor Party candidates have a chance to win we will carry on the fight to elect these candidates against those of the old parties and the third party. Wherever the Socialist Party or any other labor political group has a chance to win we will support these candidates against all other parties including the third party.

c. Wherever neither the Farmer-Labor Party nor the third party candidates have a chance to win we will carry on a campaign for the Farmer-Labor Party candidates in the election.

d. Where the Farmer-Labor Party candidates have no chance to win and the third party can conglomerately win against the capitalist parties with our support we will vote for the third party candidates.

e. In any case and under all circumstances we will maintain the separate organizational existence of the Farmer-Labor Party, carry on an independent campaign for its separate policies and under its own slogans.

f. While maintaining the alliance with the third party we must at all times carry on a campaign of merciless criticism against it, pointing out the uselessness of its reformism, and its cowardice and hesitation and destroying the illusion that the class struggle can be won thru its measures.

The Labor Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

A. There are three great dangers which threaten the labor party movement in the United States at the present time. These forces, if not counteracted, can dissipate and destroy the whole movement for years to come. These forces are as follows:

a. The third party movement and the Ford movement. The workers and exploited farmers of the United States have for so many years supported the Republican and Democratic parties in the presidential which breaks away from these old parties will have a tremendous appeal for them and they will not differentiate between such a general third party movement and the class farmer-labor movement. Unless there is a national rallying point for the existing Farmer-Labor groups which represent the class parties there is great danger that these isolated groups will be swept into the third party movement and thus the whole movement for a class labor party will be halted for years to come.

b. There is also the danger that the existing isolated state labor parties will disintegrate and disappear because there is no national expression and no national center to give them direction and hold them together. The past history of similar larger labor party organizations has been that such isolated parties will not exist for a long time. They can only become permanent thru a national leadership and functioning unifying policies which bring them into action and thus giving them life and permanency. It must at all times be clear that these isolated parties may carry on independent campaigns locally, but on a national scale they reflect only the old capitalist parties. Thus, for instance, in West Virginia one of the leaders of the party has already announced that the Farmer-Labor Party of West Virginia will have its own independent ticket and that in fact in the state of West Virginia, but that on a national scale the members will be free to vote the Republican and Democratic tickets as in the past. A similar expression has been made by Magnus Johnson in relation to the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party.

c. The presidential campaign of 1924 will be one of the most vital importance to the labor party movement. Unless there is a national crystallization of the labor party movement enabling it to nominate a presidential candidate and to conduct a nation-wide campaign the movement will receive a severe set-back and there will be no hope for organizing a class farmer-labor party on a national scale for some years to come. The whole life of the movement depends upon a national organization and a national campaign for such a campaign is bound to awaken great enthusiasm and enable the class farmer-labor party idea to make great strides forward.

B. All of the foregoing analysis shows conclusively, first, that only the left wing masses of the labor and farmer movement will at first participate in the organization of the class farmer-labor party is organized on a national scale for the 1924 election the whole movement will be dissipated and destroyed for years to come. Our policy, therefore, must be to group these left wing bloc among the workers and exploited farmers into a national class farmer-labor party for the 1924 elections.

C. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party is the beginning of the organization of the left wing of the exploited farmers and industrial workers. We must, as part of the campaign for the organization of the whole left wing, assist in maintaining, organizing and strengthening the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

a. We should also seek to have the Federated Farmer-Labor Party as an instrument for propagandizing the whole idea of the all-inclusive mass farmer-labor party and must draw as broad a mass of the workers and exploited farmers into the labor party as possible.

b. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party must organize wherever possible and affiliate those organizations of which it can win the support.

c. The campaign of the Federated Party should be carried on to secure:

1. Affiliation wherever possible.
2. Where we are not strong enough to secure affiliations we should seek endorsement.
3. If we are unable to secure either affiliation or endorsement we should endeavor to have delegates sent to the next convention.

D. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party should consider each situation separately and thoroly. It should organize the Federated Farmer-Labor Party only in such places in which the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party will not bring a split of the left wing; that is, if the followers of the class-labor party movement, in the process of organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party it will come in conflict with some of the progressive leaders in the labor movement. Its effort must be, thru a careful policy, to clarify these progressive leaders and to win them for the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, but it cannot sacrifice the organization of the left wing masses because of the hesitancy and irresolution of individual progressives here and there, provided that it can carry with it the masses.

E. Where a class farmer-labor party exists we must endeavor to become affiliated with it and must carry on propaganda for its radicalization and for national affiliations.

F. The Farmer-Labor Party is an expression of the united front. While it must be our policy to draw as large a mass of workers as possible into the united front, this does mean that we cannot at a particular time organize a united front with those forces which are ready to join us. It is not sufficient to carry on propaganda and to build up a powerful organization united front on some particular issue. The propaganda and the building of united front must be followed by an organization or it will quickly dissipate itself. Where we build a united front organization which includes only a part of the masses it is the task to endeavor to expand it and win as many as possible of the workers into the organization.

G. All our organizational effort should be to assist the Federated Farmer-Labor Party to carry on a national crystallization of the class farmer-labor movement for the 1924 campaign. To achieve this end we will not insist upon a dogmatic attitude that the national convention in which such crystallization will take place must come in the form of a convention of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. On the contrary, our position should be signed by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and if possible, by the West Virginia Farmer-Labor Party, the Montana Farmer-Labor Party, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of Washington County, Pa., and any other local or state group which may be organized.

The policy of the Conference for Progressive Political Action creates a situation which will force the Socialist Party into a different position. The Socialist Party is not likely to follow Johnston in support of one of the old parties. Unless it is to completely isolate itself it must come closer to the existing Farmer-Labor Party movement. Our policy must be to hasten this development and to endeavor to secure the support of the Socialist Party for the call for the 1924 convention.

H. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party should only carry on a struggle to organize itself in the industrial centers but should make the greatest effort to win the support of the laboring farmers. All facts indicate that there are great masses of farmers who can be won for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

5—Dangers to the Workers Party.

A. The manoeuvres in relation to and the third party constitute a serious danger to the Workers Party unless our members are given a clear Communist understanding of our strategy and tactics in each particular situation. We makes it necessary to immediately begin a thorogoing campaign of education in Communist principles among our members and thus to create a party membership which will never forget its fundamental Communist principles in these manoeuvres of the class struggle.

B. As part of the campaign of education we must also develop a stronger disciplining among our members. It is only if the party members understand that they are soldiers in the class struggle carrying out definite principles and thus to create a party membership which will never forget its fundamental Communist principles in these manoeuvres of the class struggle.

C. In order to impress upon our membership the real character of a Communist party we must develop campaigns which are directed against the capitalist system and the capitalist government. Our struggles in the past have been too much confined within the trade unions against reactionary labor leaders. Unless we develop these struggles against the capitalist class our members and even the masses of the workers will get a one-sided suppression of the character of our party. The utilization of the discontent of the masses for our campaigns is therefore of the first importance.

D. One of the methods thru which we can carry on our campaigns against the capitalists is to participate in election campaigns in opposition to the capitalist parties. Thus far our party has in principle declared itself in favor of parliamentary action but in practice it has been anti-parliamentary organization. We must change these conditions and throw our party into the election campaigns. This also applies to political action against the capitalist government both in and outside of election campaigns.

E. The campaign for ten thousand new members for the party must be supported with all the strength of our party. At present time our interests and campaigns are of such a widespread nature that our party structure is unable to carry them on successfully with its present strength. We must increase the membership of the party in order that we may have the forces at our command to carry thru the many actions in which we are involved.

F. The Daily Worker will aid in carrying thru all of the measures necessary to strengthen our party. It will be a powerful Communist education, a means of teaching our members the needs and the purpose of our various actions and the establishment of the daily is one of the important factors in strengthening our party and overcoming the dangers which face it.

G. Danger of new prosecutions directed at the destruction of our party constitutes a danger. We cannot forecast when the class struggle will so sharpen that the ruling class will find it necessary to again launch an attack upon the Communists and thru such an attack endeavor to crush the whole revolutionary movement. We must take measures to safeguard our party against the possibilities of such an attack. These measures should be the following:

a. We must as quickly as possible reorganize our party as far as it is possible upon the basis of shop units in addition to the existing territorial branches. Shop units cannot be destroyed altho territorial branches can easily be driven out of existence.

MILWAUKEE.— The indefinite shutdown of the locomotive and repair departments at the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul shops here has thrown 4,600 men out of work.

Notice! Chicago Trade Union Militants!

The Trade Union Educational League, Local Chicago, will hold its general monthly meeting on Friday, Nov. 30th, 8 p. m., at Carpenters' Hall, 4640 N. North Ave. The change of the meeting date is due to many other meetings being held Wednesday, Nov. 28.

This meeting is very important due to the fact that the Labor Herald Hall is to take place on New Years Eve, which gives us only one month to prepare for making the affair a success. A considerable amount of energy must be put into this work by every member of the league. All roads must lead the workers to the Ashland Auditorium New Year's Eve.

Marty Ahern will speak on the important role the young workers play in revolutionary activities.

Demand Amnesty by Christmas

By ROSA LADDON.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK.—Unconditional freedom by Christmas for all wartime political prisoners is the demand that was the burden of a rousing resolution unanimously adopted at a meeting of 2,000 persons at Cooper Union under the auspices of the General Defense Committee, I. W. W., in its interstate amnesty campaign. Speaker after speaker and himself a political prisoner at Leavenworth until last June, was the principal speaker, together with Arthur Garfield Hays, Harriet Stanton Blatch, Scott Nearing and the Rev. Wolcott Cutler, presiding.

Salzman on Second Tour of Northwest for Youth League

Max Salzman, national field organizer for the Young Workers League, is now retour the Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin district of the branches and strengthen the ones formed during his last trip thru that territory.

The last six months trip of Comrade Salzman was very successful in bringing the principles and program of the Young Workers League to large numbers of young farm and shop workers and was the first fruitful venture of the League in this section. The support of the local Workers (Communist) Party proved invaluable to the organizer and their cooperation is expected to be even greater on his return trip.

One of the main reasons for revisiting the newly-formed branches is to help them into more activity than heretofore, and especially to use every possibility for the formation of shop nuclei, which is one of the most important phases of the League's work at the present time.

The tour of comrade Salzman will take him thru the following cities:

Nov. 30, Minneapolis and St. Paul, General membership meeting. Dec. 1, Superwell, Minn.; 2, Cloquet, Minn.; 3, Superior, Wis.; 4, Florenton, Minn.; 5, Orr, Minn.; 6, Chisholm, Minn.; 7, Washkwuk, Minn.; 8, Hibbing, Minn.; 9, Duluth, Minn.; 10, Brule (Waino) Wis.; 11, Brantwood, Wis.; 13, Phelps, Wis.; 14, Ironwood, Mich.; 15, North Ironwood, Mich.; 16, Paynesville, Mich.; 17, Baraga, Mich.; 18, Green, Mich.; 19, Firesteele, Mich.; 20, South Range, Mich.; 21, Hancock, Mich.; 22, Herman, Mich.; 23, Ishpeming, Mich.; 24, Marquette, Mich.; 25, Eben Junction, Mich.; 27, Munsing, Mich.; 28, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

PARIS.—The French General Confederation of Labor is organizing a national peace demonstration on November 11, Armistic day. Mass meetings are to be held thruout the country, a manifestation against war and militarism.

Next Step in Daily Worker Drive

The greater part of the $58,218.07 raised in The Daily drive has been subscribed by the members of the Workers Party and our closest sympathizers.

Our next immediate task is to get before the trade unions and arouse their interest for the first really militant workers' daily newspaper ever published in the English language in this country.

THE DAILY WORKER will open on a systematic propaganda to make the trade unions effective organs of working class struggle and all militants in the labor movement should try to get before as many local unions as possible to get their financial and moral support for THE DAILY WORKER.

Organize Committees to Visit the Unions in Your Locality!

This is the most important duty of the Local-Daily Worker Campaign Committees of every City Central Committee and in every party branch.

Bend ever yeffort to help raise the other $40,000. Do not delay. Live up on your pledges. Sell a share. Buy another share. Circulate the COUPON LISTS among your friends and fellow-workers.

WHAT CAN BE DONE TO SPEED UP THE DRIVE? Take this question up in your local committee and your branch. Have you taken up the problem of approaching liberals who might be ready to donate substantial sums? Have you brought the question of supporting THE DAILY WORKER before your union; your fraternal or benefit society? Have you talked about THE DAILY WORKER to your shop mate and neighbor? If you will do all these things we can raise the balance of the $100,000 fund and publish our daily in January.

LET'S GET TOGETHER AND PUT THIS DRIVE OVER.

For What Shall We Give Thanks?

This is the week of Thanksgiving Day, 1923.

For what shall we give thanks?

For the new wars that threaten the world five years after the armistice?

For the now and increased unemployment and reductions in wages, promised by John Moody, of Moody's investment service, while the Standard Oil Company distributes cash dividends totaling $135,000,000?

For the $800,000 settlement received by Helen Elwood Stokes from her doddering millionaire husband, W. E. D. Stokes, and the custody of two children, while 1,060,000 children between the ages of 10 and 12 are at work in the mills and factories of the nation?

For the release of the ex-Kaiser's last spy from an American prison, while hundreds of workers still languish in capitalism's penitentiaries?

For the spreading of the bosses' propaganda in the schools, thru the drama, the movies, the radio, from the press and the pulpit, while the truth about labor's aspirations is everywhere gagged and strangled?

For the reduction of taxes on the huge, unearned incomes of the parasite rich, while greed gathers its forces to smother any effort to secure a mere pittance of a soldier bonus from the next Congress?

For J. Ogden Armour, food profiteer, who needs a little ready cash and sells a few shares of Kansas City light and power stock for $2,500,000.00, while two millions of farmers, bankrupt and landless, are making their way to the cities this year, with prospects that they will be followed by three millions next year?

For the increase of 82 per cent in the profits of ten large corporations, including Rockefeller's Colorado Fuel and Iron Co., while the American Academy of Political and Social Science reports that 25,000 coal miners have been killed during the last 10 years, two-thirds, preventable thru the adoption of cheap safety methods?

For the 15 per cent profits, or $7,768 854, coined by the National Biscuit Co., while food prices are generally higher than at any time in two years?

It is not likely that the workers will be thankful for any of these manifestations of the capitalist social order. Thanksgiving Day originated when the early New England colonists, without bankers, landlords or food gamblers to rob them, had harvested their year's crops and found that they had plenty.

Thanksgiving Day still lives as an institution because it affords the owners an excellent opportunity to hypnotize the many into believing they are not agonizing under the iron heel of insatiate greed.

The hypocricy of the present day celebration of Thanksgiving will not disappear until the social system of rob and have, that makes a mockery of it, is completely abolished.

Then, with the passing of capitalism, all humanity will have new cause for Thanksgiving.

In Backward West Virginia

West Virginia still insists on being one of the blackest spots on his dark continent. Within the week it has barred from its sacred errain, dedicated to the service of the profiteering mine owners, not only the Russian film, "The Fifth Year," but Channing Pollock's play, "The Fool."

The disgraceful feature about the whole affair, if we are to believe a report in the Pittsburgh Press, is that the attack on "The Fifth Year," has the support of Perry E. Donley, secretary of the Central Labor Union at Morgantown, West Virginia, and C. R. Boyles, a vice-president of the State Federation of Labor.

"The Fifth Year" is a labor film. "The Fool" is a labor play, with a long New York run, and a multitude of companies now on the road, exposing the revolting conditions existing in the West Virginia mine fields.

This shows the inevitable working out of the Gompers policies. His lieutenants attack a movie telling the inspiring story of reconstruction in the first Workers' Republic. And then the bosses and their kept press coin the prejudice created into the suppression of a favorable labor play.

The question has often been asked, is West Virginia a part of the United States? We might supplement this by asking, can such men as Donley and Boyles be a part of the American labor movement, and if so, how long?

There Are Knocks and Boosts

The business manager has just handed us two letters. One comes from a subscriber who writes: "I do not get enough information from the wide of a worker in New York state. The single taxer who addresses us as "Gentlemen," tries to hand out a knock, that looks to us like a compliment. Our comrade, who opens her letter with "Dear Comrades," sends in an inspiring boost:

The single taxer says:

"I request that you stop sending the paper to me when the time is up. I am wasting time to read your stuff. It is not worth the money. It is not enough to accomplish anything, only raise hell, and make it no better to get a living. I am a single taxer, and what you say sounds like the weakest kind of stuff, and I have been reading it for years. It is insulting my intelligence to your intelligence to be feeling away your time on anything so futile."

The wife of the worker writes:

"Please send me The Worker for another six months. Would have subscriber sooner, only my husband has very little work and we know only too well what that means. But I would rather go without my meals, as long as I could, than to go without the best paper in the country. Thanks ever so much for last week's paper. I hate to miss an issue."

The attitude of the single taxer is that of the "tired" or phrase mongering radical, whose self-estimated superiority absolves him from all activity in the class struggle. In fact, most single taxers deny the class struggle, belonging to that fraternity that pledges itself to war alike on reaction and revolution. The supercilious vaporings of these pessimists, however, usually have a depressing effect on a small segment of the labor movement. This must be overcome. And if the Oregon gentleman has any real working class instincts in his make-up, he will again find himself reading Communist publications and taking his stand in the Communist movement. If he has no interest in the working class, we shall not be sorry to lose him.

On the other hand, we see in the worker's wife, who writes us, the material out of which a really revolutionary working class movement is not only built, but which carries it on to victory.

And the Rich Shall Grow Richer

We are asked to shed tears for William Wrigley, Jr., the chewing gum king, because the Wrigley Co. "largest chewing gum concern in the world," has lost a $3,718,000 damage suit to a business rival, C. P. Larson, Jr., Co.

But let all chewing gum fans pause. There is a joker in this situation. Mr. Wrigley and a group of his associates withdrew $11,000,000 of their investment before the court order was made public. We are not told how the big gum magnate and his friends got hold of this valuable information in advance. But they dumped 400,000 shares at $40 per share on the market, for a total value of $16,000,000.

The dumping of this avalanche of stock on the market, with the unfavorable court decision, will put the value of chewing gum securities on the toboggan. With the drop in prices the small investor, who didn't know how the court was going to rule, will be the heavy loser. The lambs in the investment world will be sheared again.

When the stock has hit bottom prices Mr. Wrigley and his friends will buy it up again. They will thus coin new profits out of a supposedly unfavorable situation. Wrigley has made good on the old proverb. "The rich shall grow richer, and the poor shall grow poorer. To those that hath shall be given. From those that hath not, shall be taken away."

The small stockholders in Wrigley, Jr., chewing gum shares will at least get the wisdom that comes with experience.

While the little investors go broke, Mr. Wrigley will go ahead, industrially, making more millions thru robbing the producer and consumer of chewing gum, and thus become an even greater figure politically, thru his money, as the chief backer of U. S. Senator Hiram Johnson for the presidency in 1924.

The Banks Keep On Busting

In the six business days, Oct. 23-29, twenty-four business banks closed in the Minneapolis territory. Many people believed that this serious condition ended with the bumper crop of farm bank failures two years ago. But at no time before have so many banks failed. Besides, for every bank reported failed according to the Wall Street Journal, there is one bank that is to be classed doubtful.

The inability of the farmers to pay old debts and the depleted cash reserves are given as the cause of this collapse. Of these closed banks one was in Minnesota, two in Montana, and 21 in North Dakota. We wonder why Coolidge's farm investigators have overlooked this opportunity to show that the farmers are getting more prosperous day by day as the 1924 election approaches.

Most interesting of all is the fact disclosed by these failures that the poor farmers are the ones hardest hit. Most of these banks were small. They had as depositors the poor working farmers who have very little to put away after the railroads and grain gamblers and packers get thru with them. Nine were small banks whose capital was $10,000 or less. The total capital of the 24 banks was less than a half a million dollars and their total deposits a little over three and a half million dollars.

Investigators of the conditions of the farming masses the country over who do not play the role of political pawnbrokers for the big interests of the capitalist class report similar distress prevailing in all the farming areas.

Coal Miners Dig $17,000 for Lewis-Searles Publicity

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

Searles, the "efficiency" expert, who is a miscellaneous "hired man" for Green's report shows, anything might happen. What a poor fish Searles appears to think he can fool an army of workers. The day has passed when he or anyone else can consistently fool them. It is possible also that that there will be more expenses attached to the infamous expose, because the artifact were released after the issuance of Secretary Green's report. But if that is the case, the delegates to the convention will take care of it, because Green will have to make a report to that body.

Much to his surprise, however, he finds that it has had the opposite effect; not only did his "stuff" fall on deaf ears among the workers of this country, but it brought forth the wrath of the liberal press of the country thru their editorial columns, a challenge from the radicals to prove his statements, and an offer from those he attacks to assist in an investigation, which he (Searles) proposes.

To date he has done nothing regarding either the challenge or the offer, probably because he knows that it will serve to discredit him all the more. Besides, since his "expose" has been exposed, he is not very anxious to come out in the open. It has been shown that the "dope" he dished out to the newspapers of the country was secured from an agent of the mine owners, whose name is Clark.

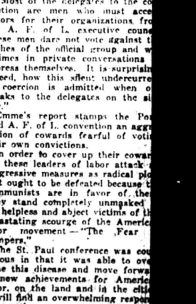
Ellis Searles doesn't know a thing about mines or mining, in fact it is doubtful if he knows the difference between a coal mine and a brickyard. But he knows how to spend the miners' money. The report of Secretary William Green, on receipts and expenditures, for the period Feb. 1 to Aug. 1, shows that Searles received more than $17,000.00 for "publicity" purposes, besides the princely salary he receives.

Little wonder this man Clark has been wearing a big smile and telling everyone he met that he was working for Searles, and "was being well paid for it."

It is quite possible that the above mentioned sum of $17,000.00 is not even been permitted to see what the theatrical critics have had to say about the various productions in the newspapers.

Like the other plays of Toller, Hinkemann has a working class drama, laid in working class scenes. The problem treated is an unusual one. During the war a certain working man was unnerved by a shot from the enemy's guns. His wife for a time continues to be faithful to him despite his deformity, but eventually succumbs to the seductive offers of a virile "ladies' man." The seducer himself tells Hinkemann about the wife's infidelity, but adds the lie that she has made fun of his ailment. This proves too much for Hinkemann. He is willing to forgive his wife as, in a touching and strong scene, she evinces deep contrition for her act. But he finds himself unable to continue to live. "I don't want to—I know too much," he cries. He commits suicide.

By this means Toller introduces many vivid pictures of proletarian life. Delicate though the subject is, Toller treats his whole theme in a manner that precludes the possibility of lewdness or obscenity.



I, Puddinhead Lear neighbor of The Poet Fish—says: "What the country needs most is—confidence!"

(He isn't certain what it needs confidence in, but that doesn't matter.

Coolidge Farm Angels Find Farmers Hopeless

The noted banker, Eugene Meyer, and the now famous lame duck Frank W. Mondell, were appointed by President Coolidge to find ways and means of helping the bankrupt farmers. How serious these Administration salesmen were in their efforts can be seen from the fact that they have thrown up their hands in despair and cannot suggest any other remedy but an increased tariff on wheat.

Already on the basis of the present high schedules in the Fordney-McCumber tariff, the farmers of Kansas, Texas, Washington, Oregon and Idaho are losing about $400,000,000.

To increase the rates on any of the products, such as wheat would simply mean increasing the loss of the farmers.

No one should be surprised at the suggested "remedy." Mr. Meyer has long been in the service of the Wall Street bankers and Mr. Mondell has a record which speaks volumes. In his autobiography, page 431, Roosevelt pointed out that the conduct of Mr. Mondell was a bit too rough even for him. Speaking of a bill proposed by Senator Newlands (Democrat Nev.) for conservation of the nation's resources, Roosevelt pointed out in his message to Congress, December 3, 1901: "My active interference was necessary to prevent it (the bill) from being made unworkable by the undue insistance upon states' rights in accordance with the efforts of Mr. Mondell and other congressmen, who consistently fought for local and private interests against the interests of the people as a whole."

It's just this class of friends that Mr. Coolidge will appoint to relieve the distress of the farmers and workers. Mr. Coolidge can and will appoint only agents of the employers. These "relief agents" will relieve the farmers of whatever is still left them after the last three years of depression.

Ernst Toller—Dramatist of the Working Class

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER,
(Federated Press Correspondent)

LEIPSIC, Germany.—Ernst Toller, greatest contemporaneous dramatist of the German working class, whose play, "The Machine Stormers," is well known in America, has achieved another success with the production at the local Altes theater of his new play, Hinkemann (Limping Man).

Again this first night has had to take place without the presence of the author. Toller is still confined in a jail in Bavaria, into which he was put by the reactionaries for his alleged offense of helping Kurt Eisner put over the brief Soviet regime in Bavaria in 1918-1919. Three great plays of his have gone over the boards since he was locked up—not one of them has he been allowed to see staged. Worse still, he has not

Farmers' Earnings Show Steady Decline

In a recent issue of the well-known financial paper, the Annalist, there appeared a very interesting study of the farmers' earnings. The investigation was made by the statistician, Mr. L. M. Graves of the reactionary Farm Bureau Federation. Yet the figures are highly instructive for all farmers, especially in view of the intensive propaganda being waged by the daily press to show that the farmers are improving their conditions.

In the four-year period, 1919-22, Mr Graves shows a continuous decline in the gross sales of farm products. In millions of dollars the gross sales of farm products declined from $7,860 in 1919 to $4,523 for the year 1922. In the same period the gross sales of livestock fell from $3,622,000,000 in 1919 to $2,256,000,000 in 1922. During these years animal products fell in gross sales from $2,114,000,000 to $1,700,000,000.

In view of the rising cost of living this condition of steadily declining income for the farmers is becoming still more unbearable to millions of the rural working masses.

The Devastating Scourge of the American Labor Movement—"The Fear of Gompers"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

When the farmer and labor forces gathered at St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 15-16, decided to issue a call for a National Convention, to be held May 30, 1924, they did a courageous thing.

They swept aside completely the greatest obstacle to independent political action of the workers and farmers in the United States.

This obstacle is—FEAR!

Among the organized workers fear of the reigning Gompers' bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor.

Among the organized farmers fear of the old partyite reaction that still wields its influence among them.

Fear is a powerful argument. When all the convincing arguments for mass political action have been made and accepted, fear turns the scales the other way. It dictates the final decision.

President John Fitzpatrick, of the Chicago Federation of Labor, attended the St. Paul conference but failed to sign the call for the 1924 convention. He was fearful that Gompers would be opposed to it, that he would polarize the unions of the nation against it. Fitzpatrick has returned to Chicago. He maintains his opposition. But it remains to be seen what decision the National Committee of the Farmer-Labor Party will take on this important question.

That this fear of Gompers does not sway the Minnesota Farmer-Labor forces, and the Farmer-Labor Parties of Washington, South Dakota, Montana, the Progressive Parties of Idaho and Nebraska, and the Nonpartisan Leagues of other states is an indication of big progress made.

The dread of what Gompers will do, or say, has been and still is a devastating scourge upon the American labor movement. It holds organized labor in the vise of inaction. The most devout cannot fear God more than some labor officials fear Gompers. The Minnesota industrial workers and working farmers are providing the antidote for this destructive malady.

Perhaps there are timid ones who will say that the Minnesota farmer-labor movement is entering upon this new move in blind folly; that it is their hope of immediate, nation-wide success, that breeds their audacity. These will snugly proclaim that this is a futile hope.

It is because the Minnesota farmer-labor forces are not blinded by illusions that their present action is all the more courageous.

Thus we find a very conservative statement, of the ambitions of the farmer-labor drive, in the Minnesota Union Advocate, edited by William Mahoney, when it says:

"It is not reasonable that a third party (Farmer-Labor Party) can win in 1924, and this fact will influence a number of liberals to withhold their sanction to the undertaking at this time. There will lie a hope that something can be secured by voting for the better of two evils which may be served by the old parties.

"There will be four big questions up at the next national election. The railroad question, the currency question, the judiciary question and the taxation question will occupy the center of the arena. The position of progressives on these questions will be fundamentally different from that which exists today and will therefore place the movement on a different plane from the old parties.

"It will not be possible to get a proper expression of the progressive position in the platforms of the democratic and republican parties, and it will be necessary to have a third party to meet this need.

"But there is not much hope of organizing the progressives of the United States into a national government. It is evident now that this will come in the form of a gradual growth by the federation of state movements.

"With a good platform and strong candidates there is no reason why a large number of states could not be carried for a national Farmer-Labor ticket. Once this result was accomplished the party would soon become an assured fact, and would gather all the progressives within its fold."

This was written before the recent conference in St. Paul that called the national convention for Memorial Day, May 30, 1924.

It is significant that farmers constitute some of the staunchest elements in this drive. Magnus Johnson, United States Senator, in an address in Chicago, appealed for Farmer-Labor unity, while the officials of the Chicago and the Illinois Federations of Labor hold aloof.

The Progressive Party of Nebraska, supported by Nebraska's farmers and workers, endorses the national convention call of the St. Paul conference, while the Omaha Central Labor Union unseats Tom Matthews, delegate of the Butcher Workmen's Union, because he dared write an article criticizing the actions of Gompers' regime at Portland. The Omaha Central Labor Union has been "progressive" in the past, no doubt it still is, but it seems infected with the scourge, "The Fear of Gompers."

J. F. Emme, delegate of the St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly at Portland, helps reveal this fear of a large number who have been called "progressives" in the past.

Delegate E. G. Hall, of the Minnesota Federation of Labor, introduced the resolution for independent political action, at Portland, and Emme supported it, both in committee and before the convention.

Emme reported to the workers in St. Paul, according to the Minnesota Union Advocate, Nov. 5, that: "From the very earliest moment of the A. F. of L. convention—in fact, the opening addresses themselves served notice on those who were interested in political activity, that no third party resolution would find favor in the eyes of the executive authority."

Emme tells what happened at the committee hearings, as follows:

"There was not a single objection raised against the Minnesota resolution, nor the policy pursued by our group on the political field excepting that were the A. F. of L. to take a stand such as we wish it, it would preclude the possibility of their entering into negotiations with either the democratic or republican parties for considerations from that day on.

"This argument is on a national scale the same as the argument we have been compelled to meet locally in our state. No doubt there is a kernel of truth in this argument, but our experience in Minnesota has clearly shown that as long as we want to trade with the political powers that be we lay no foundation for a final and entire victory."

The Gompers lieutenants on the resolutions committee tried to get Hall and Emme to withdraw the Minnesota resolution, no doubt because it didn't look good to fight a movement that had sent two Farmer-Labor spokesmen to the United States Senate. But Hall and Emme refused, and so the report of the resolutions committee pounced on the declaration, identical in form, sent in by the Chicago Federation of Labor. Emme reported:

"On this resolution the committee immediately pounced and assigned that it was the work of some of the radicals of Illinois, and in every conceivable way aroused the prejudice of the conservatives and reactionaries against the resolutions in question."

Of the Portland results Emme reports that:

"The roll call shows only a vote of 1,895 in favor. There is, however, a group representing 1,628 votes not voting, while the vote against independent political action was 25,066."

Then Emme shows how fear got in its last and greatest argument. He reported:

"At the first appearance the vote seems to show an overwhelming sentiment against political action, but one must be careful in accepting this view as it is far from correct. Your delegate had opportunity to talk to many delegates at the convention and the general feeling expressed by all of them is that political action such as demanded by our resolution is inevitable. They, however, are not prepared to vote against the official family of the A. F. of L., for numerous reasons.

"Most of the delegates to the convention are men who must accept favors for their organizations from the A. F. of L. executive council. These men dare not vote against the wishes of the official group and were oftimes in private conversations express themselves. It is surprising indeed, how this silent undercurrent of coercion is admitted when one speaks to the delegates on the side line."

Emme's report stamps the Portland A. F. of L. convention an aggregation of cowards fearful of voting their own convictions.

In order to cover up their cowardice, these leaders of labor attack progressive measures as radical plots that ought to be defeated because the Communists are in favor of them. They stand completely unmasked as the helpless and abject victims of the devastating scourge of the American labor movement—"The Fear of Gompers."

The St. Paul conference was courageous in that it was able to overcome this disease and move forward to new achievements for American labor, on the land and in the city. It will fight an overwhelming reaction among the great masses of the exploited and robbed American people.

Now Let's Put It Over!

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.
Secretary, Workers Party.

"THE DAILY WORKER," January 1, 1924.

That is the goal which the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has set for itself. That is the goal which the whole party must work for.

That goal is in sight. One more united effort and we will achieve what we have been striving for—the publication of an English-language Communist Daily.

These are the facts:

Comrade John J. Ballam, manager of "The Daily Workers" campaign, reports that we have raised in cash $58,000. This figure includes $4,000 raised by the Finnish Federation of the Workers Party up to November 1. Since that time the Finnish Federation has raised another $4,000, making the total cash available $62,000.

The Secretary of the Finnish Federation has sent to "THE DAILY WORKER" Campaign Committee a letter stating that by January 1, that organization will complete its pledge of $25,000 for "THE DAILY WORKER" in cash, or give secured notes as good as cash for the amount which it is short of the $25,000.

That means that in addition to the $62,000 now available we can count on $17,000 more by January 1, bringing the total to $79,000.

WILL THE REST OF THE PARTY RAISE THE REMAINING $21,000 TO COMPLETE THE $100,000 FUND BY JANUARY 1? THERE ARE FOUR WEEKS TO DO IT IN. FOUR WEEKS FOR THE HARDEST KIND OF WORK TO PUT OVER THE BIGGEST JOB OUR PARTY HAS UNDERTAKEN.

The Central Executive Committee of the party believes that our party is equal to that job. It is going ahead on the basis of $100,000 being raised by January 1.

It is going ahead on the basis of publication of "THE DAILY WORKER" beginning January 1.

It has appointed Comrade Moritz J. Loeb, formerly secretary of the Labor Defense Council, as Business Manager of "THE DAILY WORKER." Comrade Loeb is organizing his staff and preparing the machinery for publishing and distributing "THE DAILY WORKER."

It has appointed J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the weekly "Worker" as Editor-in-Chief of "THE DAILY WORKER. Comrade Engdahl is organizing the staff of editors and reporters, which will get out "THE DAILY WORKER."

By January 1, the business management and editorial staff of "THE DAILY WORKER" will be ready to go.

THAT MEANS RAISING THE REMAINING $21,000 TO COMPLETE THE $100,000.

We are going to start "THE DAILY WORKER" with a fund sufficient to keep it going once publication is begun. A fund of $100,000 will do that. We must complete the $100,000 to start publication.

To secure the remaining $21,000 in four weeks means that every party member and every unit of the party organization must put renewed energy into the campaign for "THE DAILY WORKER."

The party has done some fine work in this campaign, but it must do even better work. Those members who have not yet purchased their share of stock must be canvassed and their application secured at once.

NOW IS THE TIME FOR THOSE MEMBERS WHO HAVE HELD BACK THUS FAR TO BUY THEIR SHARE OF STOCK AND DRIVE UP "THE DAILY WORKER" FUND BY BIG JUMPS.

The friends of our movement must be seen, the favorable unions must be canvassed, the subscription lists for smaller contributions must be circulated in the shops and everywhere where workers gather.

Let's put our whole twenty thousand members behind this campaign during the next four weeks. Let's make one big, united drive for that remaining $21,000. Let's show that we have a real organization that can mobilize its strength for a big achievement.

Remember the goal—an English-language Communist daily.

"THE DAILY WORKER" will be the only daily Communist paper in the English language.

It will be a new step forward for the Communist International to have an English-language daily newspaper to fight its battles and voice its ideals.

It will be a victory for our party and for the workers and farmers of the United States to have one daily newspaper which will never falter in upholding their interests.

It is our party, our organization which is making that possible. We can make it possible to publish "THE DAILY WORKER" by January 1. Let every member and every party unit acts upon this call for full steam ahead to raise the remaining $21,000.

VICTORY IS IN SIGHT.
LET'S CARRY IT OFF WITH FLYING COLORS.
LET'S PUT OVER THE DAILY WORKER BY JANUARY 1.

Gompers Tries to Hide Alliance with Big Bankers; Also Exposed in Effort to Aid Agents of Stinnes

Amalgamated Gives Lie to New Charges Spread by Gompers

(By Federated Press)

False charges of sharp practices by the Amalgamated Bank of New York in transmitting money for its clients to Russia are broadcasted by Samuel Gompers, President, American Federation of Labor, and vigorously denied by the bank's president. Gompers, who has been writing a series of six articles on trade unionism syndicated in the capitalist press by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc., devoted his final article to the Communists in America. He charges that the bank leads clients to think it transmits actual cash to the Russian payees whereas the payees get soviet paper rubles, according to Gompers, the gold remaining in America. Gompers cites this alleged fact as an evidence of red propaganda work in America.

The bank is not identified by name in the Gompers article, published in the Daily News Nov. 27, but is described as a "New York bank" that has just arranged with the Soviets to transmit money direct from Americans to relatives or friends in Russia."

"It is absurd," commented R. L. Leidheffer, president, Amalgamated Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago and of the Amalgamated Bank of New York, in refuting Gompers' charges. "Our remittances to Russia are paid in Russian in American dollars, not in paper rubles. Our charge for remitting is 7 per cent plus 50 cents postal charges. For example, a man wishing to remit $20 pays us $21.90. The $20 remains in whichever of the Amalgamated banks is handling the transfer until the payee in Russia has received the funds, the Russian bank financing the American dollars to save the payment there. When we receive the receipt showing the money paid we obviously owe the amount to the Russian bank. This amount is then placed to its credit either in London or New York, or remitted in cash. We have been remitting actual money, a hundred thousand dollars at a time, thru the First National Bank of Boston.

"The largest banks in Chicago are sending their customers for Russian exchange to us. When every dollar deposited with us for remittance is paid in American dollars in Russia, it is obvious that it does not remain in America and that there is no misuse of the funds either in this country or abroad."

Facts Show Reactionary Labor Head Allied with Financiers in War on Russian Recognition

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

Congress has assembled in Washington. This issue goes to press as President Cal Coolidge is sitting on the steps of the national capitol ready to deliver his message to the hundreds of self-appraised statesmen in the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America.

At this writing we do not know what President Coolidge will say about the recognition of the Russian Workers' and Farmers' Republic. But whether he ignores this subject in his message or not, it will be one of the big problems before the present session of this Congress.

The carefully laid down barrage of Secretary of State Hughes and the well-prepared propaganda campaign of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, have not been for nothing. Their anti-Soviet attack has been as thoroly thought out as their lies are vicious and well-planned.

Gompers and his regime in the American Federation of Labor are cooperating with the open shoppers of the National Civic Federation in the attack on the first Workers' Republic. It is enough here to shatter some of the malicious propaganda this combination has spread over the land thru the medium of the kept press.

We wish to accept the recent challenge broadcasted by Mr. Gompers, calling upon the friends of Soviet Russia "to tell the American people just who the international bankers are who are preventing the recognition of the soviets." A line-up here now would be interesting."

The Company Gompers Keeps.

The quotation is taken from a special Washington dispatch to the Chicago Tribune, dated Nov. 22, and a part of what the Tribune correspondent calls "a bristling statement opposing recognition of Soviet Russia." The statement is an attack on William Randolph Hearst, because his publications were connected in some way with the sending of a congressional delegation to Soviet Russia during the past summer. But the attack might just as well have been levelled at anyone else. Two big facts, however, stand forth:

FIRST—Mr. Gompers recently joined with about 150 other enemies of labor in signing an open letter to Senators King, Ladd, Brookhart and Wheeler, Former Senator Fall, Congressman Frear, Bishop Blake, Bishop Nuelsen, and other recent visitors to Soviet Russia, this whole open letter being an argument against recognition.

SECOND—Among these co-signers with Samuel Gompers are some of the biggest international bankers in the land, not to mention their open shop activities.

Pointing Out the Bankers.

Let us be more specific. Almost at the head of the list appears, very modestly to be sure, "Cleveland H. Dodge, New York." Other signers identify themselves. Not so Mr. Dodge. This Mr. Dodge is a director of the National City Bank, of New York City, a Standard Oil-Morgan-Rockefeller institution. The Soviet government today has a suit for $2,000,000 against this powerful international banking institution. What have you got to say, Mr. Gompers?

There is Grayson M. P. Murphy, of the Guarantee Trust Co., the New York Trust Co., and the Textile Banking Co., the first two being Morgan banks, and Gompers must know that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan is an international financier. If he doesn't know it, we tell it to him now.

We find this signature "George Zabriskie (Attorney), New York." But Mr. Zabriskie is a director of the American Trust Co., the Bank of Manhattan Co., and the New York Title and Mortgage Co., the first of these being another Morgan international banking institution. How now, Mr. Gompers?

Let us add to the list:

The Number Grows.

Darwin P. Kingsley—Listed as President of the New York Life Insurance Co., but he is also director in the Chemical National Bank, the Industrial Bank of New York and the New York Trust Co.

Morgan J. O'Brien, Jr.—Listed as a lawyer and ex-judge, but he is also a director in the American Trust Co., and the Metropolitan Bank.

V. Everit Macy—He appears as the Vice-President of the National Civic Federation, but he is also a

Ernest Faction Quits Fitzpatrick Ranks in Illinois

(By the Federated Press).

There are now two Illinois Farmer-Labor parties as a result of a secession of the state committee led by Gifford Ernest from the national Farmer-Labor party. The national executive committee has reorganized the state party following the Ernest defection and the properly affiliated Farmer-Labor party now has the following provisional officers: John Fitzpatrick, chairman; Charles Wills, vice chairman; David McVey, secretary-treasurer.

The Cook county branch of the Illinois Farmer-Labor party is standing by the Fitzpatrick organization, having recently ousted Ernest as county secretary. The vote of the national executive committee authorising the reorganization of the Illinois party was 8 to 1 in favor, with one committeeman who could not be reached not voting. Committeeman Spurr of Oklahoma cast the only dissenting vote.

The split in the party dates back to the July unity convention called by the national Farmer-Labor party at which the Federated Farmer-Labor party was founded. The Ernest faction took exception to the manner in which, so it charged, the new party, with the Workers party as a unit in it, was made possible.

In a statement issued by Ernest announcing that his Illinois Farmer-Labor party is no longer affiliated with the national party, he declares that his group gladly supports the call of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor party for a national free-for-all convention to be held in Minneapolis or St. Paul, May 30, 1924. Among the signatories to the request for that call is the Federated Farmer-Labor party. The Illinois party was not represented at the conference last month that decided on the call. The national Farmer-Labor party was represented by Jay G. Brown, secretary, and John Fitzpatrick.

The Ernest organization, which was recently incorporated under the laws of Illinois, claims to be the "legal, bona fide and constitutional expression of the movement."

Brown Issues Statement.

"Only the national Farmer-Labor Party has been invited to the St. Paul conference," said Jay G. Brown, secretary of the national party, in commenting on the status of the seceding group. "The Cook County branch, which is the only virile part of the Illinois farmer-labor movement, is active in the reorganization of the party in Illinois."

New York Gathering of Labor Czars Plans Stab in Back for Militant Workers in Germany

By H. M. WICKS.
(Special to The Worker)

NEW YORK CITY.—Samuel Gompers and a group of labor leaders met here in a hotel last Sunday and formulated plans for assisting the reaction in Germany to crush the rising working class revolt.

Not content with his unenviable notoriety as scullion for the loathsome sleuth, Wm. J. Burns, and the chauvinist moron, H. M. Whitney, of the American Defense Society, this arch-reactionary, who has betrayed the rank and file of American labor for 40 years, now proceeds to extend his perfidy to the service of Poincare and Stinnes under the guise of assisting the German workers.

Gompers and his associates propose a voluntary assessment of ten per cent of a day's wages upon members of all unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to send to the officials of the German Trade Union Federation "to be used to assist the unions in their fight against Bolshevism," and to enable them to "maintain their organizations." Thus, under the cloak of benevolence a vicious attempt is made by the A. F. of L. officialdom to stab the battered and bleeding masses of Germany in the back.

The decision of Gompers was in response to an appeal from the leaders of the German Federation. These leaders are the same agents of the capitalist class that came to the rescue of the Kaiser of Germany in 1914 and forced upon the trade union movement of Germany a policy in complete harmony with the imperialistic aims of the German government and who waged relentless warfare against every German worker who had the courage to stand against the bloody monster at the head of the government. These German trade union leaders adopted the same treacherous policy in support of the Kaiser of Germany that the swivelling Gompers in America adopted toward the chief agent of the House of Morgan, Woodrow Wilson. In Germany during the war the labor lieutenants of the Kaiser declared that "whoever is not for the war policy of the unions is our enemy and must be relentlessly fought." Gompers repeated the same formula in relation to the United States participation in the world war.

In Germany it was these treacherous leaders of labor, both in the unions and the Social-Democracy, that made possible the launching of the German offensive against Belgium that Gompers denounced as a crime against humanity, while the identical labor leaders that Gompers is now trying to rescue from Communism in Germany denounced Albert, king of the Belgians, as the murderer of his own subjects in the interest of the war aims of Great Britain. The present labor leaders of Germany whom Gompers now supports were during the war the staunch supporters of the late Karl Legien for many years head of the German Federation of Trade Unions, who entered into a conspiracy with Hugo Stinnes, the steel king of Germany, against the membership of the trade unions and who organized the infamous "industrial parliament," a mechanism for settling industrial disputes between workers and capitalists, invariably in the interest of the latter. It was precisely these leaders of the German Federation of Trade Unions who formulated the governmental policy that a strike in the time of war is treason. In this respect Legien and his cohorts, tools of the Kaiser, anticipated Gompers, lackey of Wall Street, by at least two years. During the war this same Gompers never missed an opportunity to denounce, with his peculiar elegance of diction, the trade union leaders of Germany.

The trade union officialdom of Germany, just as the Gompers machine in America, followed its betrayal in the world war with a series of the most flagrant acts of treachery in all the history of labor's struggles. At last, after nine years of war, starvation, pestilence, with every achievement of years of struggle taken from them, the masses of German workers have deserted their treacherous leaders and are driving steadfastly toward the proletarian revolution under the flaming emblem of the Communist International. Confronted with the conquest of Germany by Bolshevism, capitalism orders all its flunkeys into action, so Gompers forgets his past animosity against the German labor leaders and calls upon labor in the United States to come to the assistance of the identical people

Illinois Miners in Militant Stand at District Convention

By TOM TIPPETT.
(Federated Press Correspondent.)

TAYLORVILLE, Ill.—Telegraphic demand on the international executive board, United Mine Workers of America, for the reinstatement of Alexander Howat and his associate officers as well as the other expelled members of the Kansas miners, marked the first special convention of Sub-district 5, Dist. 12 (Illinois).

A resolution dealing with the Howat case was unanimously passed urging that representatives from this subdistrict vote for Howat and the Kansas miners at the international convention of the organization to be held in January at Indianapolis.

Other resolutions, passed without dissent, call for: Abolition of the appointing power both in the international union and in the Illinois district. The resolution calls for direct referendum election of all field workers and men now appointed by the presidents. Release of all political prisoners now in American jails, U. S. recognition of Russia. Six hour work day and five-day week as a way out of the unprecedented unemployment in the coal mining industry. Investigation into the removal by the international executive board of the Nova Scotia (Canada) district officials. This resolution declares for an investigation by the international board in conjunction with a committee of five to be selected from the national convention and that, "if conditions be as we surmise," the provisional officials be ousted and the deposed men be "again put into office where they belong." That delegates work in their unions to have the delegates to the next international and district conventions instructed to vote for the resolutions adopted by this convention.

A resolution which divided the house, favored "our respective local unions getting behind the movement to have a truly rank and file labor paper established instead of papers controlled by officialdom of the miners' union." The measure was carried by a small majority. During the discussion both the Mine Workers' Journal and the Illinois Miner were

Kill 25,000 Miners in Ten Years

PHILADELPHIA.—"In ten years we have killed nearly 25,000 miners, 18,248 of whom were in the bituminous mines," was the statement made at the conference of the American Academy of Political and Social Science here by Dr. John B. Andrews, secretary, American Association for Labor Legislation, who said that two-thirds of the fatal and serious accidents in the bituminous coal fields could be prevented by the universal adoption of safety methods already in successful operation in some of the mines in this country and in Great Britain.

Spirit of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party Is Winning in So. Dakota

By JOSEPH MANLEY,
Secretary, Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

The opening guns are now being fired in what will no doubt prove to be the greatest presidential contest ever waged in the political history of America.

Curiously enough it is an agricultural state, South Dakota, where these first shots are being fired. In this state so long under the heel of the Republican Party machine an open rebellion is breaking loose.

The heart of this rebellion is the old timers of the Nonpartisan League Party, that has recently changed its name to the Farmer-Labor Party. The work of the old leaguers and the militant fight put up by them and their organizers, combined with the present desperate economic conditions, is giving birth to a genuine farmer-labor movement that has the two old parties very much worried.

As usual the Democrats feel and act as the they were the rightful heirs to the offices that have been so discredited by the occupant Republicans. Many there are in South Dakota who point out that the lukewarm progressiveness of the Democrats has in the past gummed up the works for real reform, and played right into the hands of the ruling Republican clique.

The Democrats are making a desperate attempt to stem the farmer-labor wave that is rolling over this and many other western states. The hand of the democratic national committee can be plainly seen in the blasts of publicity now occupying the front pages of South Dakota papers. McAdoo is being paraded as the candidate that will bring relief to the bankrupt farmers.

South Dakota is the first state in the Union to hold its proposal convention. The republican party, the Democratic Party, and the Farmer-Labor Party will all hold their conventions at Pierre, South Dakota, on December 4th. The delegates to these conventions are all elected and most of them will attend as their mileage is paid by the state.

Efforts, no doubt, will be made to capture the Farmer-Labor convention, for either of the Democratic prospects—Ford or McAdoo. We predict these efforts will prove fruitless because the farmers of South Dakota are fully conscious that their increasing bankrupt condition is due to basic economic factors that cannot be met by the tinkering reforms proposed by the Democrats.

Tom Ayres and Alice Lorraine Daly, both leaders in the South Dakota Farmer-Labor Party, were present at the St. Paul conference that decided to issue a call for a national nominating convention in Chicago, May 30, 1924. The stalwarts in South Dakota, after their experience at St. Paul, realize that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is driving toward a great national united front farmer-labor movement. The spirit of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is taking a hold in South Dakota and will be in evidence at the coming state convention at Pierre, S. D., Dec. 4th.

Railroad Bosses Are Capturing the Shop Unions!

By EARL R. BROWDER.

The unions of the railroad shopman will, it schemes recently disclosed are successful, soon become the tools of the machinists, of the various trades and their days as militant organizations of the workers come to a close. That is the meaning of the "Co-operation" plans, announced by William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, at a meeting in the Y. M. C. A., St. Louis, and reported in "Labor," the railroad weekly.

Mr. Johnston proposes (and he evidently speaks for most of the officials of the shop unions) that the unions shall become efficiency auxiliaries to the companies, promising the corporations greater profits from union labor than they can squeeze from non-union labor. Thus it is hoped to gain the favor of capital so that the unions, instead of being busted up by the bosses, will be invited into the parlor and served with ice-cream and cake.

The scheme is being tried out on the B. & O. Railroad. The unions are hiring efficiency experts to show the bosses how to get more work out of their members.

"The idea underlying our service to the Baltimore & Ohio," said Mr. Johnston, "may be compared to the idea which underlies the engineering

The union, in short, is to become a supply corporation to the railroad companies, engaged in the business of selling labor power, as the corporation may sell lubricants. It will compete in the market, hire any other nonconforming organization, and engage to deliver more work for less cost than non-union labor can deliver. That is the essence of the idea.

The effect of this proposition, if established thruout the railroad industry, will be to eliminate unionism altogether. It is a method for the railroad employers to capture the railroad unions and turn them to profit-making purposes. It is a direct competitor of the "company unions," promising the bosses that it will be more effective for them than even company organizations formed by their paid agents. Johnston says on this point:

"I want to emphasize as strongly as I know how the fact that in the task of positive cooperation in the railroad industry there can be no substitute for the genuine unions of the railroad employes."

And later:

"I maintain that such a management would never again, as long as it retains its good sense, desire to see the affiliated shop crafts effaced from the scheme of things on its road."

The plan, in short, is to make the railroad unions tools of the railroad corporations, and to use them to help the bosses in their fight against the railroad workers. It is a plan to make the unions help the railroad corporations in their fight against the workers, and then to refuse to aid the union if the day comes when it will be needed by the employers. It is all so simple!

How comes it that corrupt poison as this can be pushed in the labor movement by so-called responsible leaders? If such proposals had been made two years ago, there is no doubt they would have been scorned by the rank and file. But now, the shop unions have been so battered, so disheartened by their struggles, the unions have been wiped out on many lines, and petty quarreling everywhere. Pessimism and hopelessness are prevalent. The disastrous tendency toward leaving the unions has been facing large numbers. It is under such circumstances as these, suffering from the sickness of its bad leadership, that the shop unions are thought ready to take a new dose of medicine from the same doctors.

The prime motive for action of the reactionary officialdom of the shop unions, is the desire to remain "leaders" with secure and comfortable positions. They were afraid to put up a real fight against the railroads, but were forced by a militant rank and file to go along with the strike. They sabotaged the struggle, however, by complete failure to have any central-

The union officials, in the railroad shops, have also been afraid of the militant rank and file. They have been afraid of the power of the workers, and they have been afraid of the power of the capitalists. Their only hope, they think, is to make peace with the capitalists, and to help them crush the militant workers.

Now comes the open proposal to do this openly, and to put the whole labor movement, by so-called responsible leaders? "Whereas, The farmers of South Dakota and other states are face to face with economic ruin because of low prices for farm products and excessive interest charges and high taxes, and

"Whereas, This condition operates to drive the farmers off their farms, thus causing great loss to food production with consequent injury to civilization, and

"Whereas, There is now formed in this state a Farmer-Labor party that stands for the interests of the farmers and workers, now therefore, be it

"Resolved, that we, the farmers, in general meeting assembled in Save Hall, Frederick, S. D., on the 31st of December, 1923, endorse the idea of the formation of a real class party by the farmers and laborers of South Dakota, and be it also

"Resolved, That we urge the officials of the Farmer-Labor party of this state to do what they can to bring about the affiliation of the state party with the Federated Farmer-Labor party, organized last July in Chicago, and which we believe, is a genuine party of, by and for the farmers and laborers, and be it further

"Resolved, That we call upon all farmers' and laborers' organizations in South Dakota to do all in their power to unite with the state organization, to the end that the farmers and workers in both states may speedily be delivered from the tyranny and domination of big business and the big banks."

Truth About Prostitution in Russia.

CHICAGO.—The capitalist press in this country came out with a new lie about Russia. A few days ago the Chicago Tribune and other similar newspapers printed a message from Riga, where most of the lies about Russia are manufactured, to the effect that prostitutes in Russia are classed by the Soviets as working women. It was intended as an insult against the Soviet Government for taking a different attitude towards this disease of the capitalist system, as against the attitude of the "respectable" governments, which officially prohibit prostitution and privately commercialize it.

What is the truth about prostitution in Soviet Russia?

This question will be forcefully presented in the Case Against Prostitution to be heard at the public trial where Prostitution will be the defendant.

The public trial will be held in the Soviet School, 1902 W. Division St., Chicago, Saturday, December 15th, at 8 p. m. There will be a judge, an American lawyer, a prosecutor, a strong defense, witnesses, doctors, etc. A jury will be selected from the public. It will be conducted in the Russian language.

The labor press is invited to send reporters to the trial who understand the Russian language.

Nothing Else to Do; New York Bomb Squad Arrests 11-Year Old Junior Young Workers Leaguer

(Special to "The Worker").

NEW YORK—Unable longer to justify its existence, the infamous New York bomb squad arrested Leo Granoff, 11-year-old member of the Harlem Branch, Junior Section, Young Workers League, Nov. 29th, at the home of his mother who had gone to a downtown theater. Without the least provocation or act on the part of young Granoff, other than the fact that he was standing in front of his home, the bomb squad detective questioned and searched Granoff and found in his possession only the usual material issued by the National Office of the Junior Sections, Young Workers League.

Granoff was hurried before Justice Hoyt of the Children's Court, New York. No specific charge is made against him, but it is evident that the unemployed detectives are bent on carrying on their campaign of terror to the extreme in order to hold their jobs since the abatement of the red terror raids in New York.

Mis Nancy B. Kirkman, assistant principal of Public School No. 171, where Granoff is a pupil, declared that he has always been first in his class and has consistently had a mark of "A" for behavior. The only thing the teacher could think of against Granoff was that when the preamble of the United States Constitution was discussed in the class room, the young adherent of the Junior Section of the Communist movement inquired whether it was really justice under the constitution of this country to permit children to work in the Pennsylvania mines.

The daily capitalist press of New York is carrying scare-heads misrepresenting the arrest and the purposes of the national organization of the Junior Section of the Young Workers League. "Boy of 11, Red Plot Leader, Has No Use For 'Parasects'" is the manner in which the New York World greeted the news. The Chicago Tribune terms the Junior Section, "Baby Anarchists, while the New York Sun-Globe informs its readers "The Republic Saved in Time!" "Police Arrest 11-year-old Avowed Anarchist Leader Uptown—Revolt is Checked."

Explaining his arrest Leo said, "The night I was arrested my mother went down to see the Minsker Art Theater. I was standing in the door of a drug store when a cop asked me what I was doing. Then he searched me and found some pamphlets in my pocket and the Internationale on them. 'So you're a Communist!' asked the cop. Then he called two other cops and they arrested me. 'Sure, I'm a Communist,' I told them."

The New York capitalist press is unanimous in urging an investigation of the Junior Section of the American Section of the Young Communist International. Nat Kaplan, national director of the Junior Section, has headquarters at 1009 North State Street, Chicago, Ill., announced that he would welcome an investigation, not only of the New York group but the national movement as well with its strong organization in over 16 cities in the United States and with over 1,000 members enrolled, most of them public school pupils.

Immediately after the misrepresentation of the shameful arrest of Leo Granoff, the New York Young Workers League issued the following statement:

"The Daily Press, in reporting the arrest of Leo Granoff, stated that he and the organization of which he was a member, are anarchists. We ask that you correct this mis-statement of fact.

"We are an organization of young workers seeking to unite the youth of this land to fight for their own interests. We have never been, and are not now, a secret body, nor do our members wear night-gowns at meetings. The stupid attack made by the bomb squad on Leo Granoff brings to mind the hysterical Palmer raids in 1919, which have been so thoroly repudiated by the American people. The bomb squad tries to give the whole affair a melodramatic coloring by throwing out hints about "mysterious personages" who are somehow involved and who are being sought. Any time the bomb squad seeks information about the Young Workers League, they can very readily obtain it at our Local Office 1-208 E. 12th St. We take this opportunity of inviting them. They will be received with the utmost courtesy.

"We hope that the authorities, in bringing Granoff to trial, do not forget to answer his and our question as to whose interests they represent when they so brutally attack an individual who joins with an organization to help abolish Child Labor, to raise the wages of the young workers and to bring about better living conditions among the workers generally.

"The boy's mother is threatened with having her son taken away from her. We hope that the bomb squad tells us whether a mother has the right to bring up her children as she grows up he will try to change a system that compels the mother to work and thus deprives the child of proper parental guardianship.

"The Young Workers League has arranged a PROTEST MEETING for Wednesday evening, Dec. 5, 1923, at the Harlem Educational Center, 62 E. 106th St. The Press is invited to send its representatives and find out the truth of the whole matter."

With the strengthening and growing effectiveness of the Communist children's movement in the United States, even the children are not immune from the blind persecution of the promotors of child labor, the capitalists.

The news is fast spreading that not only is the Junior section itself under the heavy hand of persecution of the New York Junior Section as stated by Comrade Harry Fax, active in children's work in that city, but the organization is going ahead to take the fight and make it a national issue in the interest of the exploited children of the United States.

Maryland Miners Meet at Frostburg to Protest Lewis Action

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH,
Secretary, Progressive Miners' Committee.

A miner of Dist. No. 16, Maryland, writes, "A big mass meeting was held in Frostburg to protest against the action of the National Executive Board, of the United Mine Workers' Union, in calling off the strike of the miners in this district."

What does this mean? It means that we must thank President John L. Lewis for a new connection. Heretofore we had no connection in the Maryland district; but it appears that in one district after another, the suicidal politics of the Lewis machine are driving the disillusioned miners out of his field, into OURS.

Not many miners are familiar with the situation in George's Creek, as the Maryland section of Dist. No. 16 is known. But there are many who could make a correct guess. It is the old story over again, signing up part of a big coal company's mines and leaving the emnieves of the rest of their mines to strike.

In this case it is the Consolidated Coal Co. They signed up for their mines in West Virginia and proceeded to work them in Somerset County, Pa. President John Brophy of Dist. No. 12, conducted a lengthy strike against them, being forced to call it off last summer, largely because of the sabotage of the Lewis' district-organizers.

With the forces thus pitted against them, the Maryland miners became easy victims of the open-shoppers, and Lewis is to blame. The action of the Lewis Board in calling off that strike was a betrayal and CRIME. It differs from Alabama, West Virginia, Fayette, Somerset and Westmoreland because the Pennsylvania coal is an extrapeat, and that is the most recent. Lewis' crowd will probably figure that they have the Maryland miners at their mercy, and that soon we the ones they themselves select will get to Indianapolis to tell the sad story. This should not be. The Maryland men, altho they have had nearly two years of struggle and hardships should display some of the spirit that carried them thru that ordeal, and raise enough money to send some real men to the convention to tell the delegates the truth about Maryland.

The letter also states, "There was a determination to launch an independent union." We answered, as we always do, "DON'T SECEDE." "You belong in the U. M. W. of A. This is your union. Stay in it and make of the U. M. W. of A. the UNION it should be.

Special Offer Out of Print
THE GOVERNMENT STRIKEBREAKER
By JAY LOVESTONE

It says:

"Our economic life, from the standpoint of the worker, is basically the union man; is controlled, spurred by Jay Lovestone, of the Workers Party. He gives the financial history of Capital's most unconfined workers struggle for the right to live, in the textile strikes, the coal strikes, the railroad strikes; the effect of the class war raging relentlessly in the big fields of industry. It is the well-known story of the Government serving 'Big Business.'"

The reader boils again at the latest wrongs perpetrated upon citizens by their so-called representatives in the courts particularly, and the infamous weapon of employers, the injunction, are bitterly attacked. Neither does the author hesitate to condemn the reaction ary union leaders who in some instances have helped a strike to fail. It is a study of industrial conditions by one who knows his field and sees the facts in their light. He accomplishes his purpose; the book makes the reader see red."

Thousands Hear Foster Speak for Michigan Defense

(Special to "The Worker).

PHILADELPHIA, Penn.—A great rally held here at Manhattan Temple on Thanksgiving Eve under the auspices of the Labor Defense Council drew a crowd which packed the hall from wall to wall and from stage to door to hear William Z. Foster speak.

The following is a report of the meeting which appeared in the Philadelphia Public Ledger:

William Z. Foster Speaks to 2,000 at Meeting Here.

Red Leader Denounces Sentencing In Machinists' Temple Address."

"William Z. Foster, self-styled 'deliverer of the oppressed workers of America,' whose trial for criminal syndicalism at St. Joseph, Mich., attracted nationwide interest last spring, spoke last night at Machinists' Temple, Thirteenth and Spring Garden Sts.

"Two thousand persons, mostly members of trades unions, heard the man who is regarded as the leader of the American Reds denounce Senator Sterling for his anti-syndicalist bill and charge that the Department of Justice had become the police force of the Department of Labor.

"Policemen in plain clothes were in the audience ready to step to the platform in the event of inflammatory statements. Foster was not molested.

"The meeting was to raise funds for the defense of those who were indicted with Foster on the charge of violating the Michigan law against criminal syndicalism."

Foster was given a royal welcome. Clinton S. Golden was chairman. L. G. Hines, of the Metal Polishers, made a short talk. A collection of over $200 was taken for the defense of the Michigan cases.

Some of the local capitalist papers made the ridiculous statement that the recent bombing of the Spanish and Italian Consulates was connected with the Foster movement. Attempts to place "ads" in the Philadelphia papers, explaining that the Foster movement was educational(in contrast to the "terroristic" attacks by the capitalist class) and that Foster would explain his position at the Labor Defense Rally, resulted in only one paper accepting and printing the advertisement. Another paper refused to place any ad with Foster's name in it.

Meetings Stir Up Enthusiasm.

The Labor Defense Council meetings in other Eastern cities, have stirred up great enthusiasm. The messages of the Defense Council thru its speakers such as Foster and Scott Nearing, warning American workers against the Sterling Anti-syndicalist bill and the Department of Justice, which has become the "police force of the Department of Labor," have rallied labor everywhere to the support of the Michigan Defense. In places where locals of the Labor Defense Council did, or do, not exist, some of the best Defense Rallies have been held. Other cities are looking forward to the Foster or Scott Nearing meetings that are being arranged.

DO "RADICALS" HAVE BANK ACCOUNTS?

Through The Worker the Humboldt State Bank is asking this question. The Humboldt State Bank is under state and clearing house supervision; the only criticism ever made against it is that "the Humboldt State Bank will not take a chance." No prudent person wants to do business with chance-taking banks, and that is one of the reasons why the Humboldt State Bank is one of the safest banks in the United States. Its directors, Jacob Nilsen, Oliver M. Ulvestad, Chilton C. Collins, Soren T. Corydon and John B. Hessler, are men of integrity and can be trusted. Readers of The Worker will help its advertising department by mentioning this paper when starting accounts at the Humboldt State Bank, North and Fairfield Avenues.

Favor Union Industries.

MINNEAPOLIS.—In what is believed to be the first action of its kind in any American city, the Minneapolis city council has officially requested local labor forces to help bring here industries operating on a union shop basis. The city council is under the control of labor's forces.

More Lewis-Searles "Exposures" Are Exposed!

Note.—Since it has been shown that an open shop mine owners' publicity agent wrote the anti-Communist propaganda fed to the capitalist press by the Lewis machine in the United Mine Workers' Union, it would seem that further reply is unnecessary. The Daily Worker, however, feels duty bound to expose these so-called "exposures" to the limit. It is, therefore, publishing the following parrying reply to the attack on the Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Conference. It shows how the Lewis regime even sought to cripple the humanitarian work carried on by this organization. The statement is written by James A. Hamilton, former secretary of the Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Conference, and is as follows:

By JAMES A. HAMILTON.

The fourth of the series of six articles "exposing" the Communists appears in the United Mine Workers' Journal for Nov. 1, 1928, and deals largely with the Pittsburgh Miners' Relief Conference. Being human we could almost burst with vanity at the thought of such wide publicity among our friends, the miners, did we not know what a slight attention is given the Journal by the rank and file. The radicals ignore it; as being chiefly a propaganda sheet for the Lewis machine. The reactionaries are averse to using their brains for reading the Journal or anything else. During the year ending July 31, 1928, the Journal cost the miners $171,361.55. Of course, this large sum was not entirely wasted; the copies are given out free, and they make very [illegible] for [illegible] in the mines.

After reading this article, every [illegible] will ask himself the question: What have we done against the interests of the miners or the U. M. W. A. to deserve such attack? 10,000 New Members

The whole party is in the drive for 10,000 new members. This is as it should be. This is as it must be. During the months of September and October, 54 new branch charters were issued. The figures will show that the month of November has equalled the record for the preceding two months. The avalanche grows. All workers ready for membership in the Workers Party must be brought into the ranks.

The success gained already shows the possibilities of building our party organization. We can win our goal of 10,000 members if our organization is mobilized for that purpose.

The campaign for "The Daily Worker" and the drive for 10,000 new members go hand in hand. The 10,000 new members are needed to support "The Daily," when it is started, and to put our Party in a position to fulfill its tasks in the class struggle in this country at the present time.

The opportunities to build a widespread Communist movement are greater in the United States today than at any time in the past. Whether the American Communist movement will rise to its highest possibilities depends upon the work of our party organization.

It is to fit the Party organization for its great task of leading the workers who are ready to follow a Communist Party in the struggle, that the Party has set as its aim—"THE DAILY WORKER" AND 10,000 NEW MEMBERS.

More Bad News

Here is more bad news for the grand dukes of the American labor movement. The London Daily Herald reports that the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam) is opening negotiations with the All-Russian Trade Union Executives for a United Front.

Reactionary American labor officials had heralded the resignation of Edo Fimmon, the militant secretary of the Amsterdam International, as an indication of the triumph of standpatism in the European trade unions. This false hope is now dissipated. A formidable minority in the Amsterdam International is in favor of the immediate establishment of the United Front with the Russian workers, especially in view of the possibility of counter-revolution in Germany, similar to that which has taken place in Spain, Italy, Greece, Bulgaria and Hungary. Another element, however, is in favor of delay thru negotiations.

Delegations have been appointed by the Amsterdam International to visit the United States, Mexico and other countries on this side of the Atlantic. This will also be bad news for Gompers and his following.

The Czarists May Enter

The Status of Liberty guides the gates to the Golden Door to the Harbor of New York. And great classes are shown as to whom they enter.

Not long ago Madame Kalenina, the wife of the president of Soviet Russia, was refused permission to enter the United States, even for a short time, to raise funds for the orphan children of the first Workers' Republic.

But today Baroness Wrangel, wife of the defeated "white army" general, is on American soil. She arrived with Prince Felix Youssupoff, and his wife, Princess Irene. They were all received into the waiting and welcoming arms of the parasite William K. Vanderbilt.

The magic piece of paper that gained admission for them to the United States of America was a tattered bit of an old czarist passport, a relic of czarism six years gone. Back in Bulgaria it is the troops of Baron Wrangel, driven off Soviet soil, who have shown themselves most brutal and savage in the killing of the workers and farmers who recently fought the establishment of Fascisti rule in their country.

The Czarists are allowed to enter. Youssupoff, who prides himself on being the murderer of the monk, Rasputin, wants to bargain with the millionaire, J. E. Windener, over the sale of some paintings. The dollar sign should be hung on the Statue of Liberty, for those who fight the aspirations of the many, and have money, are allowed to pass the portals it guides without question. Such is America!

From East and West

The farmers of Nebraska in the West and the great membership of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in the industrial centers of the East, join hands in support of the National Farmer-Labor Convention called for May 30, 1924, at St. Paul, Minn.

The Nebraska farmers took their stand in a decisive way at the state convention of their Progressive Party. The voice of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers is heard thru "The Advance," the official publication of the union. "The Advance" declares:

"We hope that the Decoration Day Convention will result in a clear cut working class party. Even if it does not, we shall not give up in despair. Futher attempts will be made. American labor will ultimately have its own party.

"If the St. Paul Convention will bring a real labor party, good and well; if not, it will simply mean that the advocates of a labor party must try again. But it must be a LABOR PARTY, not a new name for the thoroly discredited policy of 'rewarding friends and punishing enemies'."

There are six months ahead, during which to plan and work for the May 30th convention. This is a long enough time, not only to rally together the forces that will make a successful gathering, but time enough to lay the basis for what the official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers calls—"A REAL LABOR PARTY."

Legion, Klan, or Both

In reply to charges that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, John R. Quinn, recently elected commander of the American Legion, states he applied for membership but never really got into the Klan. He claims he is free of Klan influence.

This is enough of a confession, however, to show that the same Fascisti spirit that rules the Legion, also dominates the Klan. Both organizations look good to Quinn. But instead of being a Kleagle, he chose being a Kommander. Merely a difference in spelling.

Congressman James A. Gallivan made the charge that Quinn, the legionnaire, had been a klansman. Quinn says he is opposed to organizations that are out to crush the aspirations of the workers, the real aim of both the Legion and the Klan. Let the workers know this.

Little Rhode Island—A Big Political Lesson

All too often the workers in the United States look upon the political struggles of the capitalist politicians as examination of the Rhode Island State Committee discloses who the real owners of the administration party are.

Of the 30 members of this Central Committee more than two-thirds are directly or indirectly connected with the banking, public utility and banking corporations of the State. One of these owners of the Republican Party is a director in 16 banks, railways, textile companies, and manufacturing concerns. He is also a director in the Rhode Island Hospital Trust Company, which is the largest stockholder in the Providence Gas Company.

Rhode Island is the smallest state in the Union; but Rhode Island just now offers a splendid lesson in the principles of the class division in the country.

The Republican Party, the governing party in the country, has time and again come before the masses and asked to be endorsed with the management and operation of the government of these workers' exploiters.

Local Chicago seems to have a better plan and method of literature sales than is generally known to the literature department. It is simple enough and can be duplicated with ease. A complete list of labor unions and other working class organization meeting days and places is compiled, showing the day in the week, and place of meeting.

This list is apportioned among the branches, to their respective territory. The instructions that these meetings must be visited regularly and our current literature and pamphlets offered for sale to those attending. Each branch is to have a literature agent and assistants, constituting the literature committee. This committee is to arrange dates among themselves, so that each union can be visited regularly. This work is not necessarily confined to the committee, but they are to see that every member of the branch does his share, and sells literature at place of work, etc. Those best fitted for the union visiting work seem to be our women comrades. Somehow, they are better treated and they make better sales. There are instances, however, where men comrades, members of the Young Workers League, have made a better showing. The following is from a comrade in Chicago:

Experiences in Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 6th, 1923.

Dear Comrades:—Your letter, requesting that I tell the comrades about my experiences in visiting local unions with literature, at hand. The results obtained so far may be considered good but not to my satisfaction. But considering that I have to attend to my functions of four other committees in my branch and to sell literature of a particular language among such workers who cannot read English, I may feel satisfied. I have made it a point to be early at the meeting place so that every one entering could be offered a piece of our literature. In some instances I have been present before our selling-table the hall by cranky union officials. Most of them looked well fed and had "rocks" on their fingers. In other instances I have been very well received, given a chair to sit down, invited to come inside the hall and sell to those in attendance.

"Particular mention can be made of a local of Locomotive Engineers. The president asked me to go inside and they all buy the Labor Herald. In some instances it is very difficult, particularly if some one who "feels better and wiser" than the rest, and sets out to have an argument about the movement and its leaders the literature represents. It is hard to argue and sell literature. But, in spite of all difficulties, the venture is very interesting and worth our while. I sold in October, 246 copies of "The Worker," 100 "Voice of Labor," 110 "Labor Herald," 25 Soviet Russia Pictorial, 10 Liberator, 5 The Communist International, and other literature for a total of $62.10. I only wish we had many more in our branch who could and would help me.

"Fraternally, A. D."

It Is Possible Everywhere.

We have another very interesting letter from another comrade in Chicago, which we shall publish next week. These letters show, that the system outlined above, bring results in Chicago. The same thing can be done elsewhere. What is needed most are workers, willing and ambitious to carry it thru.

Detroit, Mich., evidently is about to follow suit, as the following indicates: "Dear Comrades:—The matter of literature was taken up by the English branch last night and after a lengthy and heated discussion several comrades volunteered to support the literature agent as best they can. In addition to this the Executive Committee was instructed to devise ways and means. . . . I think we at least have this matter in process of solution. . . .—Edgar Owens, D. O. 7."

October was the banner month in literature sales for cash by the Literature Department. But it is far from satisfactory. $20,000 a month should be the minimum for an organization with 20,000 members. The above comrade shows what can be done. At any rate, do not overlook to sell books and pamphlets by W. Z. Foster. The best way and means to repel the attacks on Foster and his past record with the American labor movement is with his writings. A special rate is offered for "The Great Steel Strike," formerly $2.00, now 75c, in lots of 5 or more 50c; "The Railroaders' Next Step—Amalgamation," formerly 25c, now 15c, in lots of ten or more 10c.

"Strategy of the Communists" is off the press. This pamphlet as well be called the A B C on Communist tactics. Price 10c, in lots of 10 or more 6c. Third and enlarged edition of "For a Labor Party," by Pepper, is ready, for shipment. Single copy 20c, in lots of 10 or more 13c.

Flames Kill and Injure Miners

By HERBERT HASLAM.
(Federated Press Correspondent).

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill.—Alleged economy stunts by the C. W. Neff Mining Co.'s huge Orient coal mine No. 1, three miles east of Frankfort, are held responsible by some of the local miners for the disastrous explosion November 26. Two men, Harry Odle and J. B. Hamilton, were burned to death and another injured so terribly that he is not expected to live. Four others were badly burned when the mine gas burst into flames. Eight others were somewhat less seriously hurt and over 900, the rest of the day shift, got to the surface within four hours of the blast. All are members of Local 303, Orient, United Mine Workers of America.

WASHINGTON.—The number of fatal accidents at all coal mines reported to the U. S. Bureau of mines for the first ten months of 1923 was 2,069, as compared with 1,443 fatalities in the corresponding period last year.

The German Working Class, the German Communists and the German Social-Democrats

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV.

Chairman, Communist International.

The working class constitutes the decisive power in Germany. The German working class holds the fate of its country in its own hands. Why then has power remained until now in the hands of the capitalist class? Is the year 1918-19 only a minority of the German workers followed Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg? On the opposite side, again only a minority of the German workers followed the bloodhound Noske. The main mass, the center of the German working class vacillated. This kernel — the general mass of the working class — sought peaceful means. That "middle" mass, which in the final instance decided the course of the struggle, at that time wanted no civil war, it feared the Revolution, it reckoned that in a legal way — thru the trade unions, thru universal suffrage, thru the German Socialist Party — it would slowly, but surely improve its condition and secure a piece of bread and work.

The German Social Democracy reckoned upon this sentiment of the average worker, and with cunning and craftiness it succeeded in killing the first German revolution and to secure victory to the capitalist class. We should not forget that the German Social Democracy called the national congress of workers' and soldiers' council in the year 1919, and at this congress it succeeded in having the resolution adopted for dissolving the Soviets and giving the power over to the National Assembly.

The Spartacists, the vanguard of the workers, were still very weak numerically in the year 1919. In the years 1918-19 the Spartacists were held in very high esteem by the workers. Many workers silently recognised the courage and and devotion of the Spartacist minority to the cause of the working class, for they intercepted with their breast the cruellest blows of the counter-revolution and they defended unflinchingly the interests of the entire working class. But even tho the Spartacists enjoyed the esteem which they deserved, nevertheless they were not followed. The kernel of the working class regarded the Social Spartacus people not without sympathy. Yet when it came to action they supported the Social Democrats.

The German Social Democracy knew how to utilize the sentiment of the great mass of the German workers who feverishly sought for peaceways out and most especially feared civil war, and thus secured breathing spell of four years for the German capitalist class, from 1919 to 1923.

In March of the year 1921 the Spartacist vanguard of the working class threw itself anew into the struggle. The Communist vanguard itself attempted to replace by means of itself the greater mass of the working class, that greater mass which at that time was under the almost unrestricted influence of the German Social Democracy by whom it was lulled to sleep with counter-revolutionary, sweet and senseless syllables and hopes. And once more considerable sections of the German workers regarded not without sympathy the daring provocations who time and again carried the flows of the counter-revolution. But once more these heroes remained without support from the greater mass of the workers. The vanguard which rose up too early was defeated.

The question of the present depends altogether upon whether the German Social Democracy will succeed now once more in saving the German capitalist class, even if only for a short time. There is every reason to believe that this time they will no longer succeed in that.

The lesson was not in vain. With the help of the Third world Congress of the Communist International the German Communist Party was able to assess correctly the mistakes of the past. The question of uprising, of the immediate struggle for power was pushed aside in the year 1921 and without a moment's hesitation a new task was set: the winning over of a majority of the workers.

How far is this task fulfilled today? Does the majority of the workers already follow the Communists now? On whose side are the sympathies of the kernel of the German working class? What influence does the counter-revolutionary Social Democracy still have among the German working class? Of what sort must our relation be to the Social Democracy in general and to the so-called "left" wing in particular?

There is no doubt that the tactic of the united front has had great success precisely in Germany, that the German Communist Party applied it correctly, that the doubt which existed among some "left" Communists and which still exists, has been found to be unjustified. For the entire substance of the united front tactic consists of drawing also the more backward section of the workers into the struggle, to attract the middle sections and to bring the rear guard closer to the vanguard. Therefore to hold it against the tactic of the united front, that it is guided in many things precisely by considerations of these sections of the workers, is to show complete lack of understanding of the very essence of this tactic.

The German Communist Party has accomplished the task set to it by the Third World Congress of the Communist International. At least it is no longer very far from this solution. The German Communists have won over the factory committee movement which, as we still see further, in present Germany plays in a great measure the role of our prerevolutionary Soviets (Soviets in women's councils (Soviets). In more than 2,000 cities and towns of Germany, the most important centers of industry, the factory movement is completely under the influence of the German Communist Party.

In the trade unions the German Communist Party shows great gains. It has not as yet got into its hands the direction of the trade union apparatus, and it will most likely not get it even up to the victory of the proletarian revolution. The task of wresting the leadership from the trade union bureaucrats is indeed no less difficult than the other task of wresting political power from the capitalist class. But the day after the proletarian overturn it will be necessary in many cases to seize the trade unions by the same methods with which the government institutions or the industries and factories are seized. In the lower sections of the trade union organizations the German Communists have already fought their way to tremendous influence.

The membership of the German Communist Party is constantly growing. Not only the vanguard of the working class but also its great bulk—that working mass which in the year 1919 helped the German Social Democracy to victory—is now turning more and more to the Communists. The working class as a whole, that is, not its organized portion only, but also the many million headed mass is inclined more and more to hand over political leadership precisely to the German Communist Party. During the great August strikes (1923), which overthrew the Cuno government the political leadership of the movement was already with the Communists. In the strike committees which directed the movement of the Berlin workers (about 800,000 workers struck) the overwhelming majority belonged to the German Communist Party, the rest—left Social Democrats and "Independents," but these latter were also elected on the proposal of the Communists and went unreservedly with us. In another large number of Germany, in Hamburg, the directing committee, consisted of five Communists, two left Social Democrats and one revolutionary syndicalist. Almost everywhere the ratio of forces was the same. Even in such places where the Communist organization was numerically weak up to the August strike, the laboring masses pressed the political leadership of the strike outright upon this small Communist organization. "The Communists are the only party with which leads the movement on a national scale; therefore you must take over the leadership in our city, too," declared hundreds of thousands of non-party workers.

We have a speak of a durable and sure majority? Perhaps not as yet. But there is no doubt that this will come, and indeed in the very nearest future. Moreover it is still questionable and not stable. The sentiment of millions of workers is altogether not a fixed one for all time. A part of the workers is still standing in the camp of the Social Democracy. During a transitional period this is inevitable. It would be ridiculous to insist, as a prerequisite to success, that all workers in the last hour must sweep loyalty to the Communist Party. In the course of the struggle the majority which will spring up will constitute itself decisively and will stand firmly behind the Communists.

And the German Social Democracy? It has by now already apparently more than half of its membership. All observers report, that the workers still in its ranks, belong mainly to the "more sober-headed" people. They represent the least active element, they are the people who have maintained connection with the Social Democracy from an old tradition, and they find it hard to break with it. The flower of the working class is abandoning the ranks of the German Social Democracy. A considerable part of these 600,000 to 700,000 still left to the Social Democracy belong to the petty bourgeoisie, the hangers-on. And among these workers who still remain in the ranks of the German Social Democracy a considerable number inwardly already belong to the Communists. We established that fact as far back as half a year ago, but now it is clearer than ever. When at illegal factory committee congresses in Stuttgart, Berlin and in dozens of other cities hundreds of workers who are formally still members of the Social Democratic Party compare with the Communists, against their own Socialist leaders, that shows that these workers indeed call themselves Social Democrats out of tradition, but in reality already our comrades. When many thousands of Socialist workers, together with Communist workers and against the will of the leaders of their own party constitute together with the Proletarian Centuries—the nucleus of the Red Guard—when hundreds of thousands of workers who "count themselves" with the German Socialist Party, in common, with us, under the direction of the Communist Party, against the decision of the German Socialist Party, declare a political strike, that shows that the ties of the longer established, the more considerable part of the Socialist workers will break definitely with the counter-revolutionary leaders and will unreservedly follow the Communists.

The present transitional period is well adapted to our Russian Communists from that time when considerable sections of the Menshevist and Social Revolutionary parties in Russia "count" themselves with their parties, but in reality interspersed arms for the last time with the group of the coalition government. The German Socialist Party stands on the eve of that time when in dissolution of "most powerful" party in Russia, the "Social Revolutionary" Party went under before our eyes. Before the eyes of the workers of the whole world the once such proud structure of the million headed German Social Democracy is collapsing with a crash, though during a whole epoch it determined the political fate of Germany. The silly assertion of Hilferding, has every reason to weep by the rivers of Babylon. . . .

And the difference of opinion and the split which is starting between the right and left Social Democrats—how shall they be evaluated?

It is possible that the "left" Social Democrats for a time will play in the Russia, that is they will play a revolution comparatively the same role as the left Social Revolutionists played in 1917-18 it did seem at first as if in Russia there was an immense difference between the right and "left" Social Revolutionists. In the year 1923 every objective observer sees that the "left" and the right Social Revolutionists—at least, if one considers the leading elements—were simply different strata of the same inconsistent, and counter-revolutionary lower middle class.

The whole or almost the whole present leading group of the "left" Social Democracy in Germany is familiar to us for a long time: these well known people have more than once betrayed the German workers in the decisive movement, and they will betray the German working class many times again. As a symptom, the appearance of a "left" current in the German Socialist Party naturally is a symptom of sickness. The "left" German Socialist Party shows, like the distorting mirror, the growth of a revolutionary sentiment among the broadest masses of the German working class.

If the called "left" leaders of the German Socialist Party were seriously determined to play an independent role it might cause tremendous dangers for the German revolution and turn into a direct misfortune. The longer and the more these gentlemen enter into a revolutionary government they will surely make an attempt in the decisive moment to turn the revolutionary government into a debating club. Every moment when an open dictatorship and a steel-like determination are necessary, they will hang like a brake to the wheel of the revolutionary government and their "support" on the part of the "left" Socialists might become downright fatal to the proletarian revolution.

This should not mean that Communists should in the present stage of development reject every agreement with the left Social Democracy. A few sections of the working class still follow them. The left Social Democracy is one of the last illusions of a considerable section of the German workers. One of the most important requisites for the success of further decisive struggles of the Communists consists in helping this section to free itself from this illusion. May a last example convince the German worker that the so-called "left" Social Democracy, all these Crispiens and Rosenfelds, will themselves make every effort to compromise and quickly and, as thoroly as possible in the eyes of the workers! And we can help them at it. The recent behavior of the left wing, if we may call them that, (voting for the continuation of the power of the half-Fascist Stresemann government) has shown with sufficient clearness the inconsistency and the counter-revolutionary baseness of the left wing leaders of the German Social Democracy. The hour is near, when the immense majority of those German workers who at present still have some hope on the "left" German Socialist Party will be definitely convinced that the decisive struggle will be waged without and against the right as well as the left German Socialist Party.

The entrance of the Communists into the Saxon government has a double aim. First, to aid the revolutionary vanguard of Saxony to get a firm foothold, to occupy a definite region, and to make Saxony the starting point of further battles. Second, to make it possible for the left Socialists to reveal themselves thru actions and thereby to make it easier for the Social-Democratic workers to overcome their last illusions. The step undertaken in Saxony by the German Communist Party, with the consent, naturally, of the Communist International, contains great dangers. We should be clear on that. It would produce, however, political timidity not to be able to bear the risk which is entailed in the entering of the Communists into the Saxon government. But it would also be a proof of childish silliness not to see those tremendous political dangers which threaten us. As soon as Already even before the definite formation of the labor government the "left" Social Democrats began to sabotage this labor government. The German Communists, who sent a group of their best workers into the Saxon government, will be on their guard. They will under no circumstance allow the German "left" Social Democrats to carry out their policy of vacillation and at the cost of the reputation of the German Communist Party, to sabotage the proletarian revolution. The entrance of the German Communists into the Saxon government is justified only if it provides a sure guarantee that the apparatus of state power actually comes to serve the working class; that the hundreds of thousands of workers will be armed for the struggle against Davarian and Pan-German Fascism; that not merely in words, but in deeds, a mass exclusion of middle class officials from the state apparatus begins wherever they may be found as heirlooms from Wilhelm's times; and that furthermore, immediately the formation of a revolutionary character shall be put into effect, which will strike decisively at the capitalist class.

If the present Saxon government will actually succeed in turning Saxony into a fortress of the workers, even if only in a certain measure, can become the point of concentration of all the revolutionary forces of the land, in that case the revolutionary German working class will understand and support this experiment. If Saxony should not be the case, the German Communists must utilize the whole Saxon episode to demonstrate again to the broad labor masses in obvious fashion, the lack of character of the "left" German Socialists and the counter-revolutionary treachery of the German Socialist Party leaders. We reject the united front for hushing up revolutionary tasks.

Summary: The German Social Democracy no longer constitutes the axis of political life—the center of gravity has shifted to the German Communist Party. The German Communists have already won over the majority of the many millions of the German working class or are in danger to lose it within them over. The chief task of the German Communist Party consists in convincing the majority of the German workers clear thru deeds that the German Communist Party—unlike the years 1918-23—knows how to lead, not only the vanguard but the whole mass of millions of workers. Above all the labor masses must be convinced that now the leadership of the working class by the German Communist Party actually assures victory.

Party in Action for "The Daily"

Communist Sundays on Dec. 2 and 30 to Aid Subscription Drive

Proclamation to the Members of the Workers Party.

COMRADES.—In Russia, when the great tasks of the revolution necessitated the greatest possible devotion and called for the last ounce of energy on the part of the Communists, one of the methods used by the Communists of Russia to make possible the accomplishment of the tremendous tasks was the institution of Communist Saturdays on which all members of the Russian Communist Party devoted their Saturday afternoon half holidays to the most necessary and important work to be done.

We are not now facing a revolutionary situation but we are facing a situation that calls for the mobilization of our entire party, of every member and party unit, if the ends which we seek to accomplish are to be gained. During the first or the second week in January we will begin to publish the DAILY WORKER. We are confident that by that time the devotion and sacrifice of our membership will have borne fruit in the realization of the $100,000 fund and as the goal is reached DAILY WORKER campaign and we are therefore making preparations to publish the first issue of the Daily as soon as the necessary physical arrangements for publication have been completed—about January 6.

It was a great task to raise $100,000 to found our Daily. Yet still greater tasks are confronting us. It is one thing to begin a daily paper. It is another to make that paper a living, pulsing, militant factor in the political and economic life of this country. IF THE DAILY WORKER IS TO LIVE AND GROW IT IS THE PARTY MEMBERSHIP THAT MUST SUPPLY THE FORCE AND THE ENERGY BEHIND IT.

Subscription Campaign for Daily Worker is Party's Greatest Task.

To secure a wide distribution of the Daily Worker to sell subscriptions to every possible worker in shop and factory and mill; in trade union and fraternal organization, to every member of the working class that we can possibly reach, is now the greatest immediate task of the party membership. Beginning now and lasting in a drive of the utmost intensity up until the publication of the Daily Worker the entire membership of the party must be mobilized for this subscription campaign into a veritable army of action.

Complete supplies for carrying on this drive have been mailed to every party unit. Instructions have been sent to every branch and are being reprinted in this issue. In every part of the country, wherever there is a branch of the party, or even a single party member, the task as outlined must be put into full and immediate execution.

The Communist Sundays.

The remaining Sundays of this month, December 16, 23 and 30, have been set aside by the Party as Communist Sundays for the Daily Worker subscription campaign. On these days, every workingclass neighborhood must be covered by a complete and systematic canvass, house to house, for a solicitation of subscriptions to the Daily Worker. Let these three Communist Sundays be days long to be remembered as days of great accomplishment for the working class.

The next three weeks will, to a large extent, determine how successful our Daily is to be, how far it will penetrate into the lives of the American workingclass. Above all, the next three weeks will determine whether or not our party is able successfully to bear the responsibility of the only militant workingclass daily newspaper in America printed in the English language.

With full confidence of securing a 100 per cent response—

WE CALL THE PARTY TO ACTION.

Workers Party of America.

C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

Mystery Shrouds Financial Aid in Attack on Foster

(Special to "The Worker")

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—While [illegible] $3,973.10 can pay bills totalling approximately $100,000, then there is no mystery concerning who furnished the money to persecute Foster, Ruthenberg and the other Communists arrested in Berrien County, Mich. The State Administrative Board has just handed Assistant Attorney General D. L. Smith a check for $3,873, announcing that this covers all expenses thus far incurred by Berrien County in connection with the cases.

Sober and intelligent workers refuse to accept such ethereal mathematics. Now, louder than ever, they are demanding to know who paid to persecute Foster and Ruthenberg. The answer to their question lies hidden away in the wide and unexplained margin between $100,000 and $3,873.10.

The voucher check is a pitiful attempt on the part of the prosecutors to hide the real source of the funds with which they have been working. Berrien County Workers Lukewarm.

Incidentally, it brings out the fact that the voters of Berrien County are so far from being enthusiastic about the assault on the Communists that the State Legislature thought it best to pass a special law relieving the County from all expenses.

"We're it not for this law," says the capitalistically owned St. Joseph Herald, "officials, it is believed, might hesitate to make a similar raid and push prosecutions on account of the expense to the taxpayers of the particular county affected thereby."

Instrumental in getting the State Administrative Board to authorize the telltale check was Attorney General S. B. Dougherty, who laid the basis for his action some months back, when he induced the Legislature to pass a law providing that "whenever the Attorney general shall institute criminal proceedings in any county in this state, all costs incurred in such proceedings, except the pay of the circuit judges, prosecuting attorneys and circuit court stenographers, may be paid by the state with the approval of the state administrative board."

No Mystery in Defense Funds.

In sharp contrast to the reticence of the prosecutors regarding the source of their immense slush fund is the attitude of the Labor Defense Council, which is defending the accused Communists. The Council prepares quarterly financial statements and publishes them to all the world. There is no mystery as to where its funds come from. Virtually every cent of it comes from individual workers and labor unions. And so State Legislature is passing laws to help them out.

In its latest statement given out this week, the Labor Defense Council warns of the moves now being made by the prosecution to fight the Ruthenberg appeal, and calls upon sympathetic workers and farmers to demonstrate their support anew. Additional funds, the Council declares, are needed right away. It also asks all workingclass organizations to get behind the subsidiary local councils scattered throughout the country.

Why Does LaFollette Not Split?

By JOHN PEPPER.

The so-called "radical" group in Congress made a fight against the ruling majority. For two days they blocked the election of the Speaker of the House of Representatives. They demand was greater representation of the "radical" group in the various committees of the house. But they dropped [illegible] quarrel, reactionary rules got Congress to be discussed on the open floor.

The whole country looked on with great interest and great expectation. The so-called "radical" group had announced months back, that it would fight as never before. For nine months there was no session of Congress. For nine months these "radicals" talked of a fight with vociferous bragging, like managers of boxing heroes before some championship match. For nine months the "radicals" promised they would fight, and then they fought for two days.

The compromise of the radicals is a betrayal, not only of their promises, not only of their program, but also of the masses who elected them. The radical Republicans and Democrats made the election fight everywhere against the reigning administration, against the capitalist machines which control the two old parties. They are in duty bound to fight, and they are in a position to make the fight under favorable circumstances. Never has the situation been as favorable as today. The conservative New York Times had to admit before the opening of the present Sixty-eighth Congress:

"In all the history of the United States there has never assembled a Congress such as the one which will meet . . . it will be a Congress of minorities, a Congress in which the Republicans will have a paper majority only, a Congress in which the regular Republicans and the old-line Democrats will be just about tied, so far as membership is concerned, a Congress in which a well-organized, ably led group, calling themselves Progressives, will hold the balance of power in both Houses."

The New York Times tells the truth: The so-called radicals and progressives hold the balance of power in both Houses of Congress. They have the power and it is their duty to utilize this power.

A mighty class-struggle is raging throughout the United States. Big capital is expropriating millions of farmers and driving them off their land. The working class is going, for the most part unorganised, towards an industrial crisis and serious unemployment. The imperialism of the international bankers and trusts wants to lead the United States once more into new world entanglements, into new world-wars. The army and navy preparedness is going forward apace. The taxes of the poor farmers are growing to an unbearable degree. The cost of living of the workers is on the increase. The criminal tariff renders the monopoly of the trusts on industrial products the greatest menace against the life of the whole nation.

Underneath a seemingly prosperous exterior, the situation in the United States is extremely serious. The dissatisfaction of the masses is becoming ever greater and more clamorous. Only bold measures can clear the situation.

The dissatisfied and ruined farmers, and the workers struggling with the increasing cost of living, the open shop drive, and injunctions, elected these so-called radical and progressive Congressmen. And these masses have the right to demand that these "radical" politicians shall keep their promise and fight against big business, represented in the Republican and Democratic parties.

The chaos of the coal industry can be relieved only through nationalization of the mines. Congress must devise measures without delay to support the unemployed workers. The Chinese Wall of protective tariff must be immediately torn down in order that the prices of industrial products may be lowered, to make it at all possible for the exploited farmers to do farming, and to decrease the high cost of living. The fake measures of the Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and the leader of the farm bloc Senator Capper, cannot help the farmer in any way. The only real help for the mortgaged farmers is a moratorium of at least five years for all their debts. The only help for the tenant farmers who are living today in the same condition as the peasants of Czarist Russia before the revolution, is the abolition of the tenant system, and the realization of the program: the land shall belong to its users.

The most elementary duty of the "radical" Congressmen is to put these measures into effect immediately.

And the La Follette group has avoided the struggle. They had nine months in which to arouse the whole country with the propaganda and agitation, and in this way, through the power of the masses, to force Congress to adopt radical measures. But they failed to do so.

It was their duty during these nine months to make every effort to force the reactionary administration to call a special session of Congress to [illegible] past pressing demands and farmers. They neglected that.

And above all, the most outstanding duty of these "radical" groups was to split from the reactionary Republican and Democratic parties and to constitute themselves as a Third Party. As long as the "radical" Congressmen remain members of the Republican and Democratic parties their fight will always remain a sham fight. La Follette says he is in opposition to big business; but he is a member of the party of big business, the Republican Party. La Follette says that Coolidge is a dangerous reactionary, yet he sleeps in the same party bed with Coolidge, and we see no signs of his really seeking a divorce.

The hesitation and vacillation of the La Follette group is the greatest danger for the cause of the farmers and workers. By not making the split with the Republican Party, La Follette supports—whether he wishes or not—the owners of the Republican Party, the international bankers and trusts. The hesitation of La Follette is the greatest obstacle today against the crystallization of a Third Party. The cowardice of the La Follette group makes possible the growing agitation for Ford, makes it possible for the labor-enemy, Hiram Johnson, to appear as a progressive candidate, makes it possible for the counter-revolutionary Gompers clique to mislead the workers into supporting McAdoo.

In the name of the exploited farmers and workers we demand that the La Follette group shall really fight and make the split. They have the balance of power, and we demand that they use the power.

South Dakota Farmer-Labor Party Starts National Drive for 1924 Unity of City and Land Workers

EDITORIAL NOTE—Comrade Manley has taken the first definite step in the drive for the Farmer-Labor Party for the 1924 presidential elections. The South Dakota Farmer-Labor Party refused to fuse with the Democratic Party at the conventions just held at Pierre. It refused to be led astray by the Progressive Party, formed as a stepping stone, and political party, endorsed the May 30th, 1924, national convention, to be held at St. Paul, Minn., nominated a full ticket of its own, and endorsed the effort of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party to secure a national united front of all farmer-labor groups. The story of the Pierre, So. Dak., Farmer-Labor Party, written especially for "The Worker" by Joseph Manley, secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, is as follows:

By JOSEPH MANLEY.

(Written Specially for "The Worker.")

PIERRE, S. DAK.—Out here in the "Sunshine State," at a former French trading post, situated on the bluffs of the great Missouri River with a surrounding country peopled with Indians, cowboys, ranchers and farmers in the heart of the "last Great West," where the bankrupt farmers are making their last stand against the steadily encroaching power of capitalism, that thru its bankers and politicians is destroying the life and hope of the farmer, was staged a dramatic struggle that represents all of the political forces of modern American life.

The setting itself dramatized the whole fight. On one side of the tracks "up on the hill" is situated the Capitol, a beautiful building that cost millions with its Italian marble staircase and expensive fittings, all of which is in great contrast with the frame houses of the town and the vast plains on all sides. The next important modern building and situated close to the Capitol on the same side of the tracks and on the same "hill," is the hotel, the joint headquarters of the republican and democratic parties.

Down below the "hill," and on the other side of the tracks, is an old ramshackle hotel built many years ago to accommodate 80 people. It housed the 300 delegates and visitors to the Farmer-Labor Party convention. Most of us had to sleep under strictly proletarian conditions.

To get the full significance of the struggle it is well to recall a few facts. South Dakota is the home of Senator Sterling (of espionage fame) and his rotten Republican machine, a faithful servant of capitalism, has brought the state, its farmers and workers to a bankrupt condition. Its population of 700,000 is 80 per cent agricultural. In the last 34 years the population of the state increased 100 per cent and taxation increased 4,000 per cent. The old Republican machine has held its grip on the farmers and workers by the most ruthless kind of expliditation. A sample of which is the automobile tax (this is a life and death matter as the farmer must have his old Ford, most of them without tops and many lacking a windshield as they are too poor to buy a new one). Last year the automobile tax was $6.00, 10 per cent of this went to the state and the remainder to the county. This year the tax is $13.00, 27 per cent of which goes to the state and the remainder to the county. Should the county try to economize, for instance by dispensing with the services of a road superintendent at the legal salary of $2,000 per year, his duties are ostensibly to inspect the county roads but he is invariably a henchman of the old gang, the county will in most cases not be allowed to do so as the State Road Commission will insist on appointing one to fill the vacancy.

The delegates to the three conventions came from all over the state. From Pierre to either the western or eastern border it is over two hundred miles. Many of the Farmer-Labor delegates drove this full distance in old battered Fords. While the Republicans and Democrats rode the trains. The delegates are called peasalmen. They are elected under the Richards primary law, in their various precincts and counties. Each precinct is allowed three to its county convention and three for each county convention go to the state convention. The vote being divided amongst the delegates and being based upon the last highest vote cast in the last election. The delegates to the state party convention then nominate their party candidates who shall run on the party ticket in the primaries. A losing candidate may file on a minority ticket.

The delegates to the republican convention looked and acted like, and were bankers, lawyers, business men and rich farmers. The democratic gathering was of much the same calibre.

Workers Aroused by Challenge to Probe Communism

The challenge of the Workers Party to Congress to take up the proposal of the Lewis machine of the United Mine Workers of America and appoint a committee to investigate the Communist movement in the United States has aroused a great deal of interest among the workers of this country. Large meetings have been held in most of the principal cities at which representatives of the Workers Party spoke, urging that the investigation be undertaken.

C. E. Ruthenberg, J. Louis Engdahl and Jay Lovestone made flying trips to various sections of the country, which were timed so as to enable them to address meetings during the opening week of Congress, at which to present the Communist agreement with the proposal for the investigation.

The speakers, in each instance, stated that they did not believe that Congress would accept the challenge, and proceeded to tell the workers what the Communists would have to say for themselves if such an investigation was made.

"We do not care what the Senate of the United States thinks about Communism," declared C. E. Ruthenberg, speaking before an audience which overcrowded the Eagles' Temple in Philadelphia. "We do not care what any part of the government at Washington thinks about Communism. But we do care about what the workers of this country think about Communism and we know that a congressional investigation would result in the workers learning more about the Communist movement and in building up that group of militant workers which will wipe out the capitalist system in this country. Therefore, we are for the investigation."

All of Ruthenberg's meetings drew out extraordinary throngs.

Engdahl spoke at enthusiastic gatherings at both St. Louis and Kansas City, in Missouri.

Lovestone spoke at Minneapolis, St. Paul, in Minnesota, and in Superior, Wis.

School Children Protest.

A children's protest mass meeting was held Monday evening, Dec. 10, by the Chicago Junior Groups of the Young Workers League to protest against the threat made by Mr. Beers, principal of the Clark elementary public school, 14th St. and Ashland Ave., to send away Jacob Greenberg, a sixth year pupil, to a reform school, for being absent one day from school. Jacob Greenberg is a member of the Junior Groups, and it may be that this severe punishment is threatened against the boy because of his membership in the organizations and his absence of one day is only used as a pretext. The principal made the threat when Jacob Greenberg defended himself intelligently and courageously in being unjustly commanded; but of course the dignified and august pedagog would not stand for any "back-talk" from a mere urchin. Pupils have no right to defend their rights, but must hang their heads, and be cringing.

Get Them Out by Christmas!

Army of Staunch and Loyal Readers Will Bring Growing Power to "The Daily Worker"

Next month, January, 1924, is to see the establishment of the first English-language Communist daily in the world. It will be owned, financed, controlled by a huge army of readers—the readers of "The Daily Worker," the official expression of the Workers Party.

Only weeks intervene, therefore, before this historic event takes place. These will be weeks of increased activity, of redoubled energy on behalf of "The Daily."

Work is being pushed during these few weeks on the two big drives. First, the raising of the remainder of the $100,000.00—the goal set, and, second, the getting of a huge mailing list, the rounding up of an unconquerable army of readers for "The Daily."

Moritz J. Loeb, former secretary of the Labor Defense Council, who has been selected as business manager for the paper, is directing the drive for subscriptions. During this effort and it is expected to reach many millions of progressive workers and sympathizer in the land.

C. E. Ruthenberg, Secretary of the Workers Party, on behalf of the Central Executive Committee, has issued a proclamation to all the members of the party, mobilizing them for the subscription drive. Special efforts will be made on the next three Sundays, Communist Sundays, Dec. 16, 23 and 30, paralleling the efforts of the Russian workers and farmers on their "Communistish Saturdays" during the most crucial days in the struggle to safeguard the fruits of the revolution of November 7, 1917.

It is expected that tens of thousands of "subs" will roll in from all sections of the land, since "The Daily Worker" is to be a national publication, with a country-wide appeal. This subscription drive for readers of "The Daily Worker" has been more carefully planned than any other effort of the American Communist movement and it is expected to bring greater results than any previous efforts. Every member of the Workers Party will participate. House-to-house canvassing and meeting class sections will constitute the major task. The workers will also be reached in the shops and factories, in the mills and the mines. Meetings of trade unions and workers' fraternal organizations will be covered, as well as all gatherings of sympathizing organizations.

"The drive for the subscriptions is now the most important effort to insure the life of 'The Daily' in the future," declares Comrade Loeb. "With an army of staunch and loyal readers, 'The Daily' will grow in power and influence. Its success will be assured."

Instructions for Subscription Campaign

(Clip This Out For Further Consultation)

I. House to House Canvass For Subs.

Party Declared Sec. 16, 23 and 30 Communist Sundays.

The major task to be carried on for the support of The Daily Worker is to be the securing of subscriptions. One of the best ways to fulfill this task is by conducting organized house to house canvasses to be carried on by the branches under the supervision of the city centrals.

Every party member is to be required to take full part in this work. The organization of the house-by-house canvass committees where they exist and where none exist by the branches. The organization is made that the city centrals allot a certain section for each branch to cover.

Dec. 16, 23 and 30 are declared by the party and The Daily Worker to be Communist Sundays upon which the entire party is directed to carry on intensive house to house canvasses. That does not mean that evenings and other spare time are not to be used also for this purpose.

The supplies which have been furnished to every branch consist of:

1. Special subscription lists upon which the names and addresses of the subscribers are to be written and the length of the subscription and the amount of money taken are to be listed.

2. Special receipt books upon which receipts are to be issued to those who subscribe for the paper.

3. Return envelopes.

II. Shop Canvass for Subs.

To be carried on by individual members in their shops and among their friends and acquaintances. Above named supplies to be used.

III. Union Canvass for Subs.

To be carried on by city centrals and where these do not exist by the branches. Speakers are to be sent to every union in which the floor can be secured. City Centrals are to route the best available speakers to these unions. In unions that are sympathetic to us the attempt should be made to get the union to subscribe for the entire membership. Where this cannot be done attempt should be made to have a campaign for subs carried on by the union itself amongst its members. Where this cannot be done permission should be secured to canvass those at the meeting for subscriptions. Where admittance to the union cannot be secured, subs should be solicited as the members pass in and out of hall. It is suggested that when covering big unions two people be sent; one to make the appeal and another to assist him in the canvassing. Women comrades often make the best canvassers.

IV. Meetings.

Attempts should be made to secure the floor at all labor meetings to appeal (past as well as future), your organization is formed primarily for the purpose of propagating for increased armaments and preparations for war. Do you maintain that this is in the interest of the youth of America's working class?

"Undoubtedly, the stench of the treatment of ex-soldiers in government hospitals has become too strong for your delicate nostrils and you now turn your attention to an organization which is fighting for the organization of the American working-class youth to fight wars as well as exploitation by those who pay your organization for carrying on its murderous activities—the capitalists of the United States.

"You seem sublimely ignorant, not only of the true nature of our organization, but the rights of any working-class organization in this country, to propagate its ideas.

"We propose, in the interest of the great mass of the American people, the workers of this country, that an investigation be conducted for the purpose of inquiring into the aims and activities—

(1) of the Young Workers League of America and its Junior Section.

(2) of the National Security League.

"That this investigation be conducted by seven individuals, three to be chosen by yourself, three by our organization, and an impartial representative of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

"Of course it is understood that it is the national organizations that are to be subjected to investigation.

"In the interest of truth, we hope you accept this challenge and that we receive an early reply."

Chicago 100 per cent for Daily Worker's Sub Campaign

Party To Cover Entire City. Expect 10,000 New Subs. by Jan 1.

That "The Daily Worker" will become a publication with a circulation in Chicago of at least 10,000 to subscribers alone, is assured by the manner in which the party in Chicago has taken hold of the subscription campaign. In its meeting held December 4 the Chicago City Central Committee gave a thoro discussion to the Sub Campaign as outlined by The Daily Worker and laid plans to put it into complete effect.

Special committees have been appointed to visit trade unions and other labor organizations and to take charge of the house to house canvass for subs on the Communist Sundays, Dec. 16, 23 and 30. In the days intervening between now and January, practically every union in Chicago will be visited by speakers who will point out the tremendous advantage of the workers' daily newspaper and solicit subscriptions.

On the Communist Sundays, Chicago will witness a scene such as has not appeared since the Friends of Soviet Russia conducted its Tag Day here for the Famine Relief, when thousands of workers swarmed the streets and collected over $30,044 in a single day. The entire party in Chicago is mobilizing in the realization that the securing of subscribers for The Daily Worker is the most important work of Communist education and agitation that could be done. If the spirit in which the Chicago membership is entering into the subscription campaign is an indication of the results that can be expected, the slogan, "Ten Thousand Subscribers for The Daily Worker in Chicago by January 1," is setting too easy a goal.

Stations have been established in every section of the city at which all members who have not received their supplies or been assigned to a definite task should call on the dates given.

On Sunday, Dec. 16th, at 10 a. m., as well as the two following Sundays, Dec. 23rd and 30th, all members of the following branches on the North-side must call at Imperial Hall, 2409 North Halsted St. to receive their supplies and full instructions on how to proceed in house to house canvass for subscriptions.:

Trial of Harrison George in I. W. W. Is Blow at Heresy

After the most extraordinary "heresy trial" ever prosecuted in the Industrial Workers of the World, that organization vindicated Harrison George from charges of "disorderly conduct, dishonesty and disloyalty." These charges arose from George's article in the Communist press attacking the anarchistic policy of the I. W. W. papers with the grossest misinformation about Soviet Russia and the Red International of Labor Unions.

The two hearings held in I. W. W. headquarters and in the unofficial presence of the delegates to the I. W. W. convention, George introduced incontrovertible proof that I. W. W. officials had gone beyond their rightful control over the press, which on questions of policy is supposed to be upon equality to both sides, and had deliberately filled I. W. W. papers with one-sided misinformation against the Red International, while refusing repeatedly to give any space to articles in favor of the Moscow economic international by himself and other I. W. W. members. The verdict upholds George's contention that I. W. W. members, denied space on this matter of international affiliation in their own press, have a right to read other members with their arguments thru the Communist press or any other independent means.

George's militant defense was, in reality, an attack upon those who have carried on a campaign against Communists and Red International sympathizers in the I. W. W. His proof that such policy had resulted in official disruption and the loss of a great body of membership, which stood out because of expulsions, sluggishness and censorship, could not be refuted. The measure of his victory may be seen by the fact that at the union meeting at which George was exonerated without a dissenting vote, George Williams was recording secretary and Justus Ebert, chairman.

Every worker who has the interest of the I. W. W. at heart and who feels that its place in world affairs should ultimately lead it to affiliation with the Red International, will hail this sign of an end of hysterical attacks on Communism and Russian sympathizers as a vindication, not only of George, but of the I. W. W.'s traditional claim that its membership is possessed of absolutely unfettered freedom of speech on matters of policy.

On the Question of Party Re-organization

By EARL R. BROWDER

The question of the re-organization of the party upon shop and industrial nuclei is one of the most burning questions on the agenda of the coming convention. There has been little discussion on the question, either among the members, in the press, or in the leading committees. No one is clear as to just how this measure is to be carried out. The proposal made for the convention by the Central Executive Committee, published in "The Worker," December 8th, does not meet the situation. It is not clear, and it definitely shows that the question has not been studied sufficiently. It cannot be adopted as it stands.

The Communist International has laid down the principles upon which our party should be organized, and there can be no question that the party will endorse these principles. The proposed application, however, is another matter, and promises to do little to solve the problem. But there is a more sensible and common-sense way of settling this matter than for everyone at once to begin writing theses about it. There is no dispute in principle. Therefore, the following proposal is made:

That the convention of the Workers Party immediately upon organization, shall form a commission on party re-organization, to include representatives of the federations, which commission shall work out a plan of application of the principles laid down by the Communist International, and that the plan shall then be submitted to the Fifth Congress in March.

Adopted by the District Executive Committee, District No. 8.

Arne Swabeck, District Organizer.

National Security League Gets Y. W. L. Challenge to Probe Activities of the Young Workers

A challenge to investigate the activities of the Young Workers League of America, with offices at 1009 N. State Street, Chicago, has been issued to the National Security League.

In a letter addressed to Etta V. Leighton of The National Security League, fascist organization, with headquarters in New York, the national executive committees, Young Workers League, proposes that an investigating committee of seven be appointed, three by the Young Workers League, three by the National Security League and one by the Chicago Federation of Labor, to inquire into the activities of both the organizations first mentioned.

Recognizing the fact that the Young Workers League, together with its Junior Section, is foremost in the fight against its imperialist military program, the National Security League, thru its "civic" secretary, Etta V. Leighton, has sent a rebuke to some of the capitalist papers because of the humorous manner in which they greeted the arrest of Grannoff, 11-year-old member of the New York Junior Section.

"It's no joke; it's a tragedy," says Miss Leighton. "What is facing us ten years from now, when the Leo Grannoff's vote?"

According to Miss Leighton, the National Security League "has been reading the Young Worker, as well as the Young Comrade, and is well aware of the persistent activities carried on by the Communist youth movement in the United States.

An investigation into the activities of the Young Workers League, and Grannoff's connection with it, was ordered by Judge Hoyt of the New York Children's Court, when the case was set for December 15.

In the statement issued to the press, the National Security League says:

"The pity of it is that Leo doesn't stand alone. All over the country bright young children, boys and girls, are of the Reds, who lose no chances to preach the doctrine that destroys personal morals and civic probity. The editor of one of the best known teachers' magazines asked the writer to help teachers counteract these influences.

"How long dare these fiends to be allowed to exploit the souls of little children? How long are they to be left free to warp the lives of our little children and teach them hate of the land that offers them freedom and opportunity."

Evidently, Miss Leighton is not concerned with the bodies and health of the 2,500,000 child laborers in this country, but is peculiarly interested in the exploitation of their soul.

The text of the letter, which was signed by Martin Abern, secretary, and Nat Kaplan, National Junior Director, Young Workers League, was sent to Miss Leighton is as follows:

"From various press reports we learn that you have taken a singular interest in the Junior Section of the Young Workers League of America, and have taken the occasion of Leo Grandoff's arrest to levy a host of hysterical charges against our organization.

"With 85 per cent of the national budget now being spent for war pur-

As We See It

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

The merry stool pigeons in the employ of the patriotic red-baiter, William J. Burns are getting out the hook. The worthy's assistants, who are "the greatest secret-service men since the days of Julius Caesar," B. Means, prosperous agent of the Kaiser and all-around criminal, is again in the toils of the law. His case is not dissimilar to the star action in a great bogus conspiracy in violation of the Prohibition Enforcement Act. Another Burns agent is up on the charge of a policeman and last week the Chicago papers carried a story of the rape of a young girl by a degenerate attached to the local office of the Burns International Detective Agency. These are the men who are depended on to protect American honor from the assaults of the progressive members of the trade union movement and from friends of human freedom in general.

"About the only silver lining to the black cloud of industrial depression that hangs over Butte, Montana, is the splendid reception received by the Farmer-Labor Party," writes Jack McCarthy, Advertising and Circulation Manager of the Butte Bulletin. The miners of the Copper City have just been handed a 50 per cent cut in wages. Yet we read in the papers that there is no let up in the prosperity wave and capitalist kings are handing out dividends in a rather reckless fashion. The upper set are having a jolly time this winter while a black prospect faces the wage slaves. "This country will never tolerate Communism," shriek the intellectual bats whose mental vision does not reach beyond the end of the week. Their prototypes in Germany were of the same opinion in 1914, but today, well dressed women are seen picking up rotten potatoes out of the gutter in the streets of Berlin and old women are dropping dead with hunger. Germany was strong and powerful in 1914. Today her people are in despair and in their last extremity they are turning with anxious faces to the only organization that offers the solution of their problem, the Communist Party of Germany.

O. Henry, one of the best short story writers that any country produced, used one of his funniest and most philosophical characters to reel off some sarcasm at the expense of the so-called legitimate business man. Jeff Peters (a creation of O. Henry) did not fleece the public according to Blackstone, therefore, he was obliged to wear a pair of nimble feet and keep a clear brain. Jeff sold stock in the Dreamland Gold Mine Company. The public robbed it up. But Jeff did not have the heart to keep the money. He returned it to the suckers. This is what he would call "illegitimate graft" as distinct from the way Rockefeller separated the public from their coin. That was "legitimate graft." The legal gentry take severe in their punishment of those who go outside the fold in preying on the public. This "Doc" Cook discovered when he hooked a fourteen-year sentence for greasing his palm with some of the proceeds from the sale of stock in an imaginary oil well. This is the second discovery the "Doc" made that did not turn out to his advantage. The first was the North Pole. The jury probably had that in mind so they gave his plea for leniency a cold reception. The Doc and freedom are now as far apart as the poles.

Coolidge Message Cheers the Employing Class

By JAY LOVESTONE.

President Coolidge has at last broken his long silence. "The Spokesman of the White House is no longer a puppet. After months of reticence, Calvin Coolidge has opened his mouth to proclaim himself the champion of the employing class. The President's first message is a reactionary thunderbolt hurled into the arena of national politics.

The Wall Street Journal, bosom pal of the richest financial interests in circulation, pictured this intimate bond between the White House and the Stock Exchange in these vivid, forceful words: :

"Wall Street's reaction to President Coolidge's first message to Congress was a great feeling of relief over the favorable auspices under which the new session was opened. Stocks mirrored the favorable, hopeful character of the President's attitude in one of the broadest and most buoyant markets of the year. Bonds were featured in this demonstration, but virtually every section of the list participated and the closing prices were at the highest levels of the current upswing . . . Wall Street rightly regarded President Coolidge's message to Congress as the most constructive document of recent years."

No plainer talking is necessary. No better eloquent and accurate characterization of the class character of the President's message could be made by any one.

Coolidge Caters to Capitalists.

From his first to his last word Coolige catered to the capitalists. In speaking of the distress of the ex-soldiers the President displayed his unexampled generosity with an offer of more hospital beds and new hospitals.

"But I do not favor the granting of a bonus," declared the President in relieving the wealthy property owners of their fear that for vote-getting reasons, he might not go the limit in preventing the enactment of this legislation.

Emphatically declaring himself against a bonus to the mass of ex-soldiers, the Chief Executive went out of his way to assure the shipping interests that he was opposed to the government owning the fleet of vessels which cost the country billions of dollars, and that he would do everything to transfer the ships to private hands.

The President came out unreservedly for the continuation of Section 15 of the Esch-Cummins Act guaranteeing the railroads profit on their investments. Of course, Coolidge refuses to call this a bonus or a guarantee to the railway owners. Politically it is more palatable to label this method of subsidizing the railroad corporations as fixing rates that "should be just and reasonable." But it is perfectly effective to note that the President is opposed to anybody proposing legislation tampering with the section requiring the railroads to return half of their profits in excess of six per cent. Coolidge prefers to rely on the Supreme Court to declare this section of the present railway bonus law unconstitutional than to have some disgruntled congressman from the wheat belt strengthen its provisions against the rail lords.

Naturally, the President does not mince any words in proclaiming his intention to have Congress cut the taxes of the big business interests. The New York Commercial reports that the Coolidge message "was received in Wall Street at the White House conference as being even more drastic in the way of tax reduction than the day was in the matter of economy." Coolidge at the moment of the President's message to Congressional henchmen the sale of a measure to reduce the taxes of the most hale a million—actually $24,000

Miner Militants Hear Call, "All Aboard for Indianapolis!"

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH,
Secretary, Progressive International Committee, United Mine Workers of America.

January, 1924, is almost here. With it comes the convention of the United Mine Workers of America. That historic market-house at Indianapolis, Ind., Tomlinson Hall, will be the scene of some lively doings when the convention assembles, for the forces of Progress intend to fight for their every inch against the forces of reaction headed by John L. Lewis.

This convention should and will without doubt be an epoch-making one, and when Lewis starts slinging his "Anti-Red Paint," the army of news-grabbers who are always on the job, will have an awful time feeding the news-consuming public with the true story.

It is safe to bet that it will be no re-hash of Portland, for in this convention the representatives of the most radical group of workers in America will assemble. Rest assured that it will not be an exclusive affair for "Officials Only," as Old Sam's American Federation of Labor conventions are, and boasts of charter revocation, Anti-Red bogey speeches and the sanctimonious wails of "Honest-to-God" labor fakirs will not be applauded by this delegation. No, they won't even be tolerated. In past conventions the administration forces have had things mostly their own way, because of the failure of the rank and file delegates getting themselves together, but different things will be doled after the close of this gathering.

That is because the "Progressives" have been on the job every local they could reach they have told of the necessity of cleaning house, so that we could better fortify ourselves for the inevitable struggle with predatory wealth. The slogan, "Put your own house in order," is not a very good one, wherein it applies to the American labor movement, for to this day the officialdom has done little more than demonstrate that it is the very quintessence of Capitalism itself.

The present mis-leaders of the labor movement in this country do nothing but present themselves as the bulwark of the very system they are supposed to protect us from. If that is the kind they intend to be, and their actions indicate that to be the case, then there is no time like the present for house-cleaning. We will turn them over to the system they love so well, and place in their stead men who have been tested in the fires of persecution, and found not wanting.

There are men in our ranks, men who are so disgusted with the manner in which our affairs are conducted that they think nothing of telling the world that they have never attended meetings for months.

Yet these same men are the ones who went down the line to establish our union in their respective sections. They are still good fighters "on the job," but will not mete a hand elsewhere. If one questions them about why they don't attend, they say they are waiting for the dawn of a better day, and try to let it go at that.

Of course, no self-respecting, class-conscious member of the union will accept that for an answer, so when they are pushed for a further examination they will say that they are tired of being betrayed by men whom they helped rout out of the "scab" fields a few years ago.

Of course, a statement like that makes one look for a new avenue of approach—especially when you know you are hearing the truth, for it is only about a decade ago, that men who now hold responsible positions in the U. M. W. of A. were working in the non-union fields of Pennsylvania.

Today a stranger would be unable to single them out of a body of mine owners and politicians, because they all look alike and talk alike. Such is the record of the "clique" that now rules the miners' union? What has this administration done to better the lot of the membership? At the Cleveland, 1919, convention, over which the then "Acting" President Lewis presided, such measures as "Nationalization," "Labor Party," "Election of Organizers" and "Alliance" with the railroaders received favorable action, but the results obtained are so conspicuous by their absence, that one is led to believe, and with some certainty, that Lewis never stopped his "ACTING." True they can point to wage increases, so do the grocer and the rest of the traders in charge would do well to write us to tell what can be done to help revive the sale and distribution of books, papers and pamphlets. Do not hesitate to tell us your problems. We will do all we possibly can to help out. The following letter, received from one of the speakers who addressed several meetings of the "6th Anniversary Celebrations," have shed some light on the subject. The district organizers, secretaries of city central committees and branches would do well to give this matter their attention, whether this letter does not picture just such conditions as prevail in their jurisdictions. Will you tell us, please?

To the Literature Department:
Comrades:

What's wrong with our sale of literature? Everyone will admit that in this activity, we boast neither energy, militancy nor any other virtue. The literature at meetings I addressed on November 7th, the Sixth Anniversary, shows what is wrong. The sole effort to sell literature at one of the meetings consisted of a table in the rear of the hall decorated with four or five copies of ancient matter, the "Thesis of the Second Congress of the Communist International;" a single copy of a letter Lenin once wrote to American workingmen. The party Trade Union Educational League pamphlets and magazines or other current matter never existed for this meeting. The spirit of the old song, "How the hell can we sell books when there are no books to sell?"

At the other meeting, this defect in salesmanship was much in evidence. Here the books were on hand. But flat on the table. They were as far away from the audience as were their authors. Books unfortunately have no legs. They cannot climb into the pocket of the worker. They must be sold. And to sell them they should be wanted by the worker. At least he ought to know there are such and such books on sale. A desire for them should be provoked. In short, instead of the decorating the table, a group of comrades should have been going thru the audience energetically proffering the books for sale.

The old Socialist Party, if it knew little else, understood how to dispose of literature—good or bad. Is this a lost art for us? More attention to the need of literature selling, better preparation for mass meetings and a group of comrades to look after this matter at the meetings and we will begin to dispose of literature.

Buy Brain Food For Presents.

While we do not harp on the old time system of spending money recklessly for Xmas presents, tho we know for a fact, that many of our readers and others who may not have anything in common with the Christian world in the celebration of Xmas as such, do spend money buying presents, etc. To those, of course, we address our advice to BUY FOOD, brain food, for holiday presents. Somewhere else in this paper appears an advertisement in that connection, and we expect that all our readers will help us to advance the up-to-date slogan: 'BRAIN FOOD FOR PRESENTS, among such people who would be up to do it and who need it.

Comrades in charge of the different open forums in the different cities, will you please tell us what literature you are selling, and how and what are the sales?

Membership Campaign Making Great Headway in New York.

The membership campaign is now beginning to show results. English branches were organized in Yonkers, Newark, Paterson and West New York. English branches are in the process of organization in Elizabeth and Passaic. The Finnish, Lettish, and Jewish branches are especially active in the drive. We have initiated 107 members in September, 117 in October, and 150 in November.

We are now organizing a systematic drive thru the Federation and the various sections of the District. The Jewish Federation started its campaign with an impressive demonstration at Central Opera House on Sunday, November 25th. Over 2,000 were present at the meeting, and the enthusiasm displayed there promises that the Jewish Federation will more than fill its quota.

The applications that are coming in are mostly from trade union members and it seems that the attack by the reactionaries of the labor unions, from Mr. Gompers down to Sigman, is helping our organization to bring the militant elements of the trade unions into our ranks.

We are now expecting the English Branches in the District to become more active in the campaign and to mobilize all their forces for the membership drive.

Stonecutters' International Union Endorses the Federated Farmer-Labor Party

(Special to "The Worker")

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—The movement for a Labor Party in which the farmers and workers of this country will be united for joint political action is going forward in spite of the refusal of the American Federation of Labor to endorse this movement.

The convention of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Union of America here went on record with only one voting against the resolution for independent political action by industrial workers and farmers thru a Farmer-Labor Party.

Not only did the convention endorse the principle of independent political action, but it also directed its approval of the largest organization of workers and farmers now carrying on the struggle on the political field by endorsing the Federated Farmer-Labory Party organized by the representatives of 600,000 workers and farmers in the convention held in Chicago in July.

The resolution adopted reads as follows:

Whereas, the events during the last years in the labor movement and especially in our trade show that the capitalists use their political influence against organized labor thru meaningless labor legislation and thru injunctions:

Whereas, the workers cannot resist the attacks of the employers if they do not organize and use their political strength:

Resolved, that the Cleveland convention of the Stonecutters' Union approves the movement for a bona fide labor party;

Resolved that the convention endorses the FEDERATED FARMER-LABOR PARTY as the best expression of the labor party movement.

A resolution was also adopted calling for the recognition of Soviet Russia with only the one dissenting vote against it.

The action of the Journeymen Stonecutters' International Union is noteworthy in that an international organization representing some ten to fifteen thousand workers is now definitely committed to independent political action thru an organized party—the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Clean Up for New Year

By S. T. HAMMERSMARK.

Having visited practically every Workers Party office in the United States this year in my travels for the Labor Defense Council and the Friends of Soviet Russia, I have been impressed with the tremendous amount of work so small a number of workers can accomplish.

The pioneer and missionary spirit of these comrades everywhere has been an inspiration and has made me feel proud that I am connected with work that has put me in such close contact with the best and most unselfish workers I have ever met.

But there is one glaring shortcoming that I noticed in practically every office and that eats stacks of old literature and unused copies of "The Worker" and other literature.

Why not get this out? Why not organize a Sunday morning distributing campaign? Make a thoro cleanup of every piece of old literature in every headquarters before the first of the year. This can easily be done. If there is a supply of blanks of any kind that should have been used, either get them out or write to the proper parties that you have more than you can use and dispose of them some way.

There is no excuse for untidy offices. There is no reason why every piece of literature should not be in the hands of workers and every local office ready for "The Daily Worker" on the first of January.

Through The Worker the Humboldt State Bank is asking this question. The Humbolt State Bank is under state and clearing house supervision; has only criticism ever made against it is that "the Humboldt State Bank will not take a chance." No prudent person wants to do business with chance-taking banks, and that is one of the reasons why the Humboldt State Bank is one of the safest banks in the United States. The British Elections

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

British labor leaders who have been taking lessons in royal etiquette may be obliged to test their erudition in the fine points of conduct, necessary for appearance before the royal presence without causing the butlers, footmen and potboys who decorate Buckingham Palace to giggle with merriment. As a result of the recent general election the Labor Party occupies the position of His Majesty's opposition with a greater number of representatives than at any other period in its history.

The Labor Party was represented in the last Parliament by 142 members. It now has 185, leading the liberals by 32 and only 74 behind the Tory Party. In the previous Parliament the Tory Party had a majority over all other parties combined. As a result of the latest election it could only function with the good will of the Labor and Liberal parties.

Stanley Baldwin, the Tory premier, tendered his resignation to the King after the results were announced. The King will very likely call on Ramsay MacDonald to form a government. In the event of the latter's refusal, he may call on Asquith as the leader of the Liberal Party. As neither the Labor nor the Liberal parties have sufficient strength to form a government independently, a coalition ministry is probable. But the Labor Party announced that it would not under any circumstances form a coalition with the Liberal party. Certainly such treason to the working class of Great Britain would cause an upheaval in the British Labor Party though Mr. MacDonald's flankering for office is well known. On the other hand it is quite likely that a Liberal-Conservative coalition will evolve out of the present muddle, and with it the development of a definite anti-Socialist Party. In this party the fake radical Lloyd George will play a prominent part.

The principal issue between the Conservative and Liberal parties was protection versus Free Trade. The Labor Party put forward a moderate program principally distinguished from the Liberal Party program by the capital levy, but the Labor Party leaders in their speeches did everything possible to take the revolutionary sting out of this demand, by using it its purpose to be the redemption of war debt rather than its use for social purposes, as the Communists demanded.

Lloyd George and Asquith, the two royal capitalist hacks who have been doing each other since the wily Welshman knifed his political tutor in the back during the early days of the war, put up a united front in the last election.

Stanley Baldwin, who rushed the election in an endeavor to get out of the mess in which his bungling foreign policy found him, succeeded in adding more of his dilemma and also got out of office. His rash tactics have cost the Tory the government.

The Communist Party candidates participated in the contest, six on the Labor Party ticket and two independently in the Communist ticket, but not against the Labor Party. While the Labor Party program dabbled in reform measures, accepted the Treaty of Versailles as its own, coddled the moribund League of Nations and in general attempted to put the machine of the labor movement into the old bottles of capitalism, the Communist Party declared for the abolition of the capitalist system and the establishment of a workers' government as the only solution. Among its main planks demanded were: Confiscation of all idle factories and land, sixteen dollars a week minimum wage with a six hour working day, full maintenance for all unemployed, housing for all, and the complete liberation from British dominion of all subject races.

The Communist Party worked earnestly in support of the Labor Party candidates and while the working class can hope little from such leaders as now dominate the British Labor Party, the recent elections indicate the approach of a labor government in England. Then the real struggle for the leadership of the British working class will begin between the recent reactionary tools of capitalism who are satisfied with mild reforms without going to the root of the trouble and the Communists who are out to establish a workers' republic as a first step in the building up of the Communist society where the land and factories and all the wealth producing machinery of England will be the property of the producers. And not until then can the British workers and working farmers begin to solve their problems.

Perlstein and Employers Unite to Blacklist Workers

By F. W. JOHNSTONE.

Mayer Perlstein, vice president of the Morris Sigman regime in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in connivance with the employers' association, has made the removed three of the expelled members from the shop in which they worked.

Not being able to make headway because of the great opposition of the rank and file to his disruptive and ruinous tactics, Perlstein has placed himself outside the pale of union ethics, when he appeals to the employers' association to help him to put those members on the black list, who refuse to bow to his tyrannical rulings.

In one case the worker was told frankly that the union demanded his expulsion from the shop, his employer blaming it on the employers' association, of which he is a member, and the association blaming it upon the union. This caused quite a stir among the workers, and they are demanding that he be returned to the shop. This way was too crude, so they tried another method.

The second member to be fired, was given no excuse. This, however, constitutes a grievance, as no one can be fired without reason, and the expelled members are entitled to the protection of the union until the committee hears their appeal. The third man to be fired was first told by his employer that he had nothing against him, but he insisted on being told why, the employer finally stating, "Well, if you want an excuse, your work is no good," this had to be said with a smile, because this man has worked for the firm for five years.

These workers placed their grievances before the union and were told that it would be taken up immediately. On the meeting at which the grievance was to be taken up, they were told bluntly that there was nothing doing.

Perlstein's Treacherous Acts and Broken Promises.

When Perlstein first came to Chicago it was for the purpose of starting an organization drive, at least that was the excuse advanced. He united the members who were now expelled to the shop, stating publicly that they were the best and most active members of the union. He told me personally, during one of the Chicago Federation of Labor meetings, that Davidson, Lipenson and others were fine people to work with, and that they were idealists. A few weeks later he demanded that the same idealist be removed from the Joint Board as delegates and officers.

He promised the rank and file then, that under no circumstances would anybody be expelled from the union, and gave them to understand that he was sympathetic, but was simply carrying out orders. He also told the membership that he was going to New York and straighten the matter out.

It evidently was straightened out in New York, because on his return he immediately started to expel the most progressive members without the semblance of a trial. Perlstein's treacherous acts are always accompanied with sympathy for those he intends to hurt with the steady promise that it won't go any further. This time he told the membership that under no circumstances would anybody be removed from the shop, that he felt sorry for them, but he was only carrying out the orders of the G. E. B.

Now he has found out, that finding, disfranchising and even expulsion from the union, will not keep the militants from advocating amalgamation, the shop steward system and the other progressive measures that he is opposed to, or rather to be correct, what Abe Cahan is opposed to. He has also found out that he cannot get the support of the rank and file in putting over his disruptive policy. So he has formed a united front with the employers' association.

Perlstein is the most treacherous labor official in Chicago. What he is thinking, and what he is saying bears no relation, the one to the other. His word is not worth a tinker's damn. He holds out the olive branch of peace to cover up an exceedingly treacherous act, and draws it away when he thinks the sting is too acutely felt, and prepares to stab his victim again. He has only a selfish interest in the union, and absolutely none for the workers as a class. He is drunk with power and wants to retain it at all costs. He has not the ability to lead a real live progressive union, so he is determined to destroy it.

He would rather be the head of a weak and spineless organization than top sergeant in the rear rank of a real live militant union. A tyrant, he is, a slave to the tyrants who lord over him. He licks the boots of those above him, and expects the same service from those whom he considers beneath him. No workable understanding can be reached with Perlstein, because he has no code of honor. If the I. L. G. W. U. wants to regain the position that it formerly held, namely, that of being one of the most militant unions in the city of Chicago, it must first get rid of Mayer Perlstein.

Sillinsky Stands for Progress in Tailors' Union

By LEONARD FREEMAN.

The Journeymen Tailors' Union of America has long been looked upon as one of the advanced sections of the American labor movement. Its membership is progressive and alert. Strangely enough, it still has a General Secretary-Treasurer, Thomas Sweeney, who belongs to the reactionary group of American Federation of Labor leaders.

Sweeney is to the tailors' union what Gompers is to the American Federation of Labor. The harmony between these two men was shown clearly in the Portland Convention where Gompers' speech, the progressives, and so did Sweeney. Both of them helped to stab the Federated Press, to kill the resolution for amalgamation, recognition of Soviet Russia, and other progressive measures. Both were for the expulsion of Wm. F. Dunne, the delegate of the Silver Bow Trades and Labor Assembly, because he is a Communist. Yet when the votes of the tailors at the American Federation of Labor convention were thus being cast for reaction by Sweeney, the tailors themselves were progressive.

But the tailors' union had one representative who stood for progress throughout the Portland gathering. That was Max J. Sillinsky, one of the best known and popular members of the tailors' union. Sillinsky is now being spoken of quite generally in the union as a candidate for the office of general secretary-treasurer. He has certainly made a good record to run on. He represents the progressive ideas of the rank and file of the tailors' union. In contrast to Sweeney, he voted for all the progressive measures that came before the Portland convention. He stood out against the "red hysteria" and voted for William F. Dunne. In his conservous stand he brought upon himself the wrath of the entire reactionary officialdom.

But if the reactionaries are angry with Sillinsky, not so the rank and file. They now say they want him as the executive head of their union. The fight between Sillinsky and Sweeney, in the coming election for general secretary-treasurer of the Journeymen Tailors' Union, is thus a deep struggle of principles. It is not Sillinsky versus Sweeney. It is progress versus decay. Sweeney will have the support of every reactionary, including the personal backing of Gompers. Sillinsky will have to depend entirely upon the alert and progressive rank and file.

Those of the tailors' union there are springing up "Sillinsky for Secretary Committees" to see that he gets the proper support in the coming election. It is natural that this should be so. Sweeney has the machinery of the organization at his disposal, while if the rank and file want to elect Sillinsky they must form committees for that purpose. The reactionaries are bound to be defeated in the coming contest if the issue is clear. That means that all progressives should unite upon one candidate, and that man is naturally Sillinsky. He is a national figure, and every tailor knows him. He has stood for progress in Portland. He does not know about this boost, and he may not approve of it, but if progressives rally he will join in the demand that he run for the office, he is a good union man and will accept the duty. Every militant and progressive will join in the great movement for SILLINSKY FOR SECRETARY OF THE JOURNEYMEN TAILORS' UNION.

Labor Fakers' Co-operation Scheme Receives Setback

By ANDREW OVERGAARD.

William H. Johnston, international president of the Machinists' Union, has received a setback in his proposal to turn the unions over to the employers to be used as efficiency instruments. The employers of Seattle turned down his proposition, in spite of all the efforts of the pay-roll gang to put it across.

In the Seattle incident we see another angle to the scheme of "co-operation" with the bosses. Whereas the publicity given the plan lately has related to the railroads, and concerned the installation of efficiency engineers paid by the union to the their slave-driver, in Seattle the scheme was to apply to the contract machine shops.

According to a leaflet issued in Seattle by Johnston, the machinists were to come to a mutual understanding with the bosses of that city, to compete with the united bosses and workers of other cities in producing the cheapest machinery. If the machinists of Tacoma, united with their bosses under the scheme, should fall behind the machinists of Seattle, united with their bosses, then the machinists of Seattle were supposed to make a gain in the extra profits brought to Seattle thereby. It is certainly a weird and wonderful scheme, and makes one wonder how such insanity can be allowed to wander over the earth unchecked.

In order that it may not appear that this is an exaggeration, here is an exact quotation from the leaflet, signed by Johnston:

"If every Manager and Machanic employed in the Machinery Industry of Seattle were highly efficient, the Industry here would develop a reputation, and soon outstrip other Coast Cities, as a direct result of economic and scientific productive powers: Co-operation. Increased Profits and Wages would result as the fruit of effort for both."

This is exactly what Johnston said, even to the capitalization of all the words in these extraordinary sentences. They can be no doubt as to the exact meaning of the whole co-operation scheme. It is not alone the complete abandonment of the unions, it is also the organization of the workers for mutual scabbery one upon another.

Not only are the bosses of each city to use the unions as instruments of competition with the bosses and unions of other cities, but the unions in the city are to be used against the workers who are members of that same union. Part of the agreement of co-operation with the employer is, that the union shall systematically weed out the poorer workers, those that produce less profits for the boss, and take this disagreeable task out of his hands. Johnston says:

"Care should be exercised in the employment of Managers and Workmen. No business can continue with inefficient Management nor with inefficient Workmen; and when both are inefficient, then failure is bound to result. The Employers and Employees should co-operate and insist that only efficient Managers and Workmen should be employed. If every Mechanic in Seattle were highly efficient, the Industry here would soon develop a reputation and soon outstrip other Coast Cities."

But the union is not going to stop with the systematic exploitation of their own members for the sake of the profits of the boss. They are also to help the boss to get his profits from the public, or that portion of the public which patronizes machine shops. Johnston says:

"There should be an attempt made by the Employers to standardize within their own business, and eliminate certain practices of taking work below a price that will not permit a reasonable profit."

One would think that the services here outlined, which the unions are going to render to the capitalists, would be enough for one time. But no, there are still little acts of servility to add to the list. For example, the employers are not well enough organized. One of the purposes of the "co-operation" plan is to help the bosses to perfect their own organizations, and even bring pressure upon any non-class-conscious boss who refuses to line up. Johnston says on this point:

"It is essential that the employers should be fully organized in the kind of organization that will offer them the best means of functioning through machinery established by themselves. This will restore confidence between themselves and permit them to co-ordinate through intelligent channels. They should remove any suspicions, or jealousies, or any thing that will obstruct or retard the co-operation."

Such laudable advice to the bosses —remove jealousies and suspicion, and co-operate with one another to protect their own interests! And what kindness to help the boss to do these things! But what are the workers only? Are they also to remove jealousies and increase their own solidarity? Not at all! The plan says that the workers are to

"Be organized and meet at stated intervals in order to be educated on plan, results and it relates to their responsibilities and duties."

The whole scheme is so fantastic and absurd that one strongly suspects it of being taken from "Alice in Wonderland" or the Arabian Nigths Entertainments. It is not to be wondered that the machinists of Seattle, a practical, hard-headed lot of men, laughed Johnston out of the yuke. The machinists of the entire Northwest are up in revolt against the yuke that the union officials are trying to fasten upon them. The only place where he has got by with it was where the men are apathetic and not attending meetings, and where Johnston dealt with the railroad companies and not with the men. The effect in those cases was that Johnston sold the union to the companies, they made company unions out of them, and the men are only staying in because of the compulsion of their masters on the job.

Let the bosses keep the defunct "labor leaders" as efficiency experts; the workers will surely be better off when they realize just what these men are, servants of capitalism, and throw them off labor's back. They may serve the bosses well, but they serve the workers ill indeed. We shall soon be facing another depression in the metal industry, and it is up to the militants in the Machinists' Union as well as the other metal trades, to strip for action. That means, get rid of the "co-operation" breed of officials. The alternative is to see our organizations smashed and ourselves enslaved.

but they did not go to the part to such a pronounced degree. Here and there they had a poor looking farmer, which clearly indicated that the pickings for the democrats were not so good in South Dakota. They were the outs whose only consideration was to get in. The farmer-Labor delegation looked their part, all poor farmers and a few workers with here and there a lawyer, the son of some poor farmer who had paid his own way thru school and still had his old man's prejudices.

There were a couple of notable exceptions, such as Mark Bates, who had the democratic psychology, and who had run as a Farmer-Labor proposalman and was beaten largely because of his confused proposals: partnership with the Democrats and part office-seeking ambitions.

Bates wants to be senator. He is fat and overfed, has a big farm and furnishes quite a contrast to his rival, Tom Ayres, who is spare and lean and left his cattle ranch when he saw such a bankruptcy coming, to fight capitalism.

In addition to Bates, who was not a delegate, was Ed Kelly, the real leader. Warren L. Beck, president of the State Federation of Labor. Beck was not a delegate, either, but had it that he ran as a democratic proposalman and was beaten. He had with him as henchman: G. L. Gordon, secretary of the State Federation of Labor. This group, with Batchelder, president of the South Dakota Division of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, a job with a big salary and a still bigger expense account, none of them delegates and headed by Beck, were the gang that tried to capture the Farmer-Labor convention and lead it "over to the hall" and the democrats. They represented the Gompers bureaucracy, and the disgruntled democrats, anxious for office at any cost.

The night before the Farmer-Labor convention went into session a meeting was held attended by all the Farmer-Labor delegates and visitors. Tom Ayres, chairman of the Farmer-Labor Party, delivered a classic speech that threw down the gauntlet to the "fusionists," showed clearly the difference between the democrat and Farmer-Labor movements and proceeded that Ayres understands the economic forces that are giving birth to this farmers' rebellion.

He said in part that this movement is not local but international, that it grows from problems similar in all countries.

He reminded his farmer listeners that while they were undoubtedly suffering, they must not forget that the workers of Germany were suffering still more. He said: "In Germany we see this system under which we live in all its nakedness. Because three men control the industries, the machinery of production, and the great landlords own the land that has produced more food this year than any previous year in the people are starving." "You must have an organization that will have the courage and vision to solve fundamental issues. We must stand for the abolition of private property. We must stand for the land to be used and owned by those who work the land. . . . Upon the rising generation depends whether or not the bourgeoisie will get into a state of European peasantry." Such were a few of the high spots from a speech which I hope to see reprinted in full, as it furnishes a graphic picture of how far the farmers are moving toward the left.

Warren L. Beck, tho not a delegate and an avowed enemy of the Farmer-Labor Party, demanded the floor. He delivered a lengthy speech, and in the course of which he read several flattering letters to him, for his efforts to block the Farmer-Labor Party, from Samuel Gompers. Mr. Beck insisted on, always referring to the A. F. of L. as "the labor movement." He, by innuendo, referred to the "professional politicians," meaning, of course, Ayres and Miss Daly.

Following Beck, Alice Lorraine Daly took the floor. She is a graduate of a Boston school of oratory and with her feelings aroused by the stupid attack of Beck, she made him look like a moron. She challenged his statement that she "was not a farmer or a laborer," by saying, "I was born and raised on a farm, then became a schoolteacher, and I am a member of the Teachers' Union, and I think that it takes at least as much work to be a school teacher as a telegrapher (Beck's calling is a telegrapher and as he stands over six feet and weighs over 200, he looks very foolish.) Miss Daly's speech showed an intimate grasp of the problems affecting the life of workers and farmers of this section, while Beck's was the typical argument of the Gompers agent forcing his policy upon the rank and file of the union. Fortunately in South Dakota there are such a large proportion of farmers who are not members of Gompers' organization that they will not be intimidated by the threats, veiled or otherwise, of Beck or any other Gompers agent.

With this clash of the opposing interests of the agents of Gompers, who were invariably "fusionists" or straight out Democrats, and the Ford boosters, the convention opened up with almost 150 delegates seated. The convention was held in a hall in the hotel, the headquarters of the Farmer-Labor Party, while "up on the hill" the republicans and democrats met in the lavish surroundings of the Capitol building.

From the outset of the convention it became plain that there was a small bloc of delegates, several trade unionists amongst them, under the leadership of the non-delegate Beck who were determined to bring about fusion with the democrats at their own nomination for office. They were bitter against Ayres because of his clear cut stand for the rank-and-file of the farmers and workers. The convention was getting well under way when a delegate moved to appoint a committee of six to meet with a like committee from the democrats "up on the hill," to see if there was any basis of getting together. The six of the farmer delegates were appointed by the chair, for the purpose of stalling for time, as it was clear that the democrats were not ready to meet with the Farmer-Labor delegates.

Two of the six, the chairman and secretary, were appointed to the committee. This illustrates the typical game of Gompers's agents who pose as being so Democratic as to be against "control from outside influences."

Following the adoption of the Platform and State Program the convention went into nominations. The Ford boosters who had made a bluff of noise on the side lines made a poor showing in the roll call. Robert La Follette got 31,999 for presidential nominee, while Ford only received 7,247. The Ford boosters then left the hall.

Tom Ayers and Mark Bates were both nominated for United States Senator. At least a dozen speeches were made. Mr. Ayers thereby handed delegates in favor of Ayers. He was nominated by a rank and file trade unionist. Bates was nominated by a "fusionist." He was simply snowed under by the overwhelming vote for Ayers. There was considerable consternation amongst the fusionists, and when the negotiating committee at this juncture announced that there was trouble to come to an agreement with the democrats, the fusionists bolted.

The bloc was led by Beck, Bates, Batcheller and Bartling, the last being the only delegate. The entire bolt consisted of twelve delegates and the "Beck steering committee." This aggregation got together later with a few democrats and nominated themselves for the various offices on a minority democratic-farmer-labor ticket, for the primaries.

The "bolt" did not cause even a ripple in the convention of the Farmer-Labor Party and the following is the final list of candidates nominated:

Governor—Marion Fallette.

Vice-President—Lyon of Prentice.

United States Senator—Tom Ayres, cattleman, edition.

Congressman-at-large—A. T. Putnam, farmer.

Lieutenant-governor—H. T. Eastman, farmer.

Secretary of State—Hans Hansen, farmer.

Railway Commissioner—Edward McGrath, farmer.

posed to the spirit of the motion but they voted for it because they wanted to try to clearly bring out the impossibility of "fusion." When this motion was carried a petty union official delegate moved that two representatives of the Federated Craft's be represented on the negotiating committee of six. The chairman asked all those who belonged in this category to please stand up. From the entire delegation five delegates arose. Two of the, rank and filed members, were appointed to the committee. This illustrates the typical game of Gompers's agents who pose as being so Democratic as to be against "control from outside influences."

Following the adoption of the Platform and State Program the convention went into nominations. The Ford boosters who had made a bluff of noise on the side lines made a poor showing in the roll call. Robert La Follette got 31,999 for presidential nominee, while Ford only received 7,247. The Ford boosters then left the hall.

Tom Ayers and Mark Bates were both nominated for United States Senator. At least a dozen speeches were made. Mr. Ayers thereby handed delegates in favor of Ayers. He was nominated by a rank and file trade unionist. Bates was nominated by a "fusionist." He was simply snowed under by the overwhelming vote for Ayers. There was considerable consternation amongst the fusionists, and when the negotiating committee at this juncture announced that there was trouble to come to an agreement with the democrats, the fusionists bolted.

Allies of Murder

Twenty-five thousand coal miners murdered in 10 years!

1,433 miners murdered during the first 10 months of 1922!

2,059 miners murdered during the same 10 months of 1923!

The Raleigh-Wyoming Coal Co., blamed by a coroner's jury at Charleston, W. Va., for the murder of 27 miners at its Glen Rogers mine Nov. 6.

Economy stunts by the C. W. Neff Mining Co.'s huge Orient mine near Frankfort, Ill., claimed two dead, a third burned fatally, and four others badly burned on Nov. 26.

Three miners drowned at the Radium mine near Belleville, Ill., Dec. 6, when weak walls give way, with 28 others barely escaping the flood.

Seven miners dead and six others injured in dust explosion at mine of Blackhawk Coal Co., near Hazard, Ky., Dec. 8.

And so the story goes on from day to day. A paragraph is enough to record each new disaster in the daily press.

Dr. John B. Andrews, secretary, American Association for Labor Legislation, says that two-thirds of the fatal and serious accidents in the soft coal fields can be prevented.

But the mine owners will continue with their "economy stunts" at the expense of miners' lives until they are forced to abandon them. Yet John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers' Union, with his whole administration, is too busy fighting the progressives in the organization to give attention to the crimes of the bosses. Lewis is thus a big ally of the mine owners in their murderous policy that has brought death to 25 000 coal miners in 10 years; death to 2,059 during the first 10 months of this year.

An Ananias Exposed

Ananias was a AA1 liar. Like all liars he was found out. But he has handed down his name to all those who deliberately pervert the truth.

Within these past few days, if not before, Mr. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has surely qualified for the Ananias Fraternity. He should be given a front seat among the elect.

Gompers charged that international bankers were not opposed to recognition of Soviet Russia. We showed that at least a score of big bankers were found in the list of names attached to the Gompers-National Civic Federation proclamation against Soviet recognition.

Gompers charged "sharp practices" on the part of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Bank in transmitting money to Soviet Russia. This charge was shown to be a deliberate and unfounded fabrication.

Gompers charged U. S. Senator King with getting a concession from the Soviet Government, claiming that this accounted for King's favorable attitude toward Russian Workers' Rule. But Senator King has blasted this fairy tale. And all this in one short week!

Thus do all of Gompers' ambitions to rival Baron Munchausen fall by the wayside. Gompers is exposed as a cheap liar and the value of his attacks on the militants has fallen to the worth of a German mark. He will soon be another useless weapon in the depleted armory of the labor hating bosses.

The Story of an Opportunity

The Farmer-Labor Party, headed by John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, was given the opportunity of its life, last July, when it was called upon to take the lead in the drive for independent working class political action. It failed to grasp this opportunity. This failure is responsible for the process of disintegration now going on within its own ranks.

In Illinois the Farmer-Labor Party has been split thru the withdrawal of the reactionary Ernest elements. Under ordinary circumstances this desertion would have been a blessing. But it is doubtful if the Fitzpatrick faction has the strength to rally even its own demoralized elements.

The hesitation and indecision that characterized the Fitzpatrick-Brown-Buck wing in the July conference is again present in the attitude taken toward the May 30, 1924 national convention, called by the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party. Speaking for this element, Secretary J. G. Brown, in the New Majority, Dec. 8, states that it:—

"will, if it possibly can, throw its influence toward holding the Minnesota state party assemble a large, enthusiastic and representative convention."

But it is taking this element pretty long to decide. In the meantime the South Dakota Farmer-Labor Party is in the field for the 1924 campaign in co-operation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The same is true of the Washington Farmer-Labor Party. And the Federated Party is actively working in harmony with the Minnesota forces for the Decoration Day convention next year.

At the July conference opportunity knocked hard and patiently at the door of the Fitzpatrick-Brown Farmer-Labor Party. But the door remained closed in its face. And opportunity passed on.

Every report in the developing political situation over the country shows that the initiative in the drive for independent political action of the workers and farmers has been ably taken over by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, that put out the welcome sign to every opportunity in this direction, immediately it was organized last July.

When Socialists Stay "Regular"

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union is conducting an organization drive in St. Louis, Mo. It is meeting with considerable success in spite of the opposing forces.

One of the interesting deyelopments of this struggle is the disclosure that St. Louis Socialists, thru their paper "St. Louis Labor," edited by G. A. Hoehn, are working hand in glove with the Rickert-Gompers United Garment Workers' Union. The Dec. 1st issue of "St. Louis Labor," under the heading "Short-Sighted and Profit-Hungry Employers Responsible for Lively Propaganda of Amalgamated Clothing Workers in St. Louis," says:

"Some time ago we called the attention of our readers to the fact that the clothing manufacturers of St. Louis, for many years, purposely failed to maintain friendly relations with District Council of the United Garment Workers.

"Of course, there always have been a few exceptions, but they simply affirmed the rule. Thru the columns of ST. LOUIS LABOR we pointed out that, as a result of this anti-labor attitude of the short-sighted profit-hunting, cheap labor manufacturers, more radical and militant organizations would get a hold of the St. Louis clothing workers.

"At no time could the United Garment Workers of St. Louis, as represented by the District Council and the affiliated locals, be stigmatized as radical; on the contrary: the demands made by the United Garment Workers on the St. Louis clothing manufacturers have always been moderate, almost too moderate.

"Well, this is all past history. We are confronted with the facts and conditions and must face them. This is the true of the employers. When even the Amalgamated Clothing Workers succeed in organizing the St. Louis men and women of this industry into a 100 per cent trade union, they have none but themselves to blame for the success of the more radical and more aggressive organization."

This criminal urging of the bosses to sign up with the well-nigh extinct Rickert organization becomes all the more reprehensible when it is known that even the central labor bodies affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, in Chicago, Buffalo, N. Y., and elsewhere have loyally stood by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in their struggles.

"The Amalgamated" will accept with pride the denunciation of "St. Louis Labor" that it is "radical and militant." But all backbone must have gone out of a Socialist, when he thus prostitutes his sheet in order to appear "regular" in the eyes of Gompers and his reactionary A. F. of L. regime.

Privately Owned Industry Takes Huge Toll from Workers

Mr. Carl Hochstadt, of the Department of Labor, has just compiled an interesting study of the heavy toll taken from the workers engaged in industry. "Present indications point to an exceptionally large number of accidents for the year 1923—in some states more than have ever been reported," says the November Monthly Labor Review.

The estimated annual number of industrial accidents is 2,453,418 and the total number of working days lost is 227,169,970. Taking the average per day as $4.50, Mr. Hochstadt finds a minimum wage loss of $1,022,264,866 per year. To this should be added at least $75,000,00 0 the workers spend for medical and hospital service.

It is especially significant that the unskilled workers, the workers who draw a weekly wage averaging from $24 to $30 are the ones who suffer most. Coal mining has the hghest rate of fatalities, 4.02 per 1000, next to lumbermen and woodchoppers, whose accident rate is 5.00. The steam railroad workers have a fatality rate of 2.75 per 1,000 the warehouse workers 2.84; iron and steel 1.35; water transportation, 4.00; and the electric lights and power workers top the list with an accident rate of 5.73 per 1,000 workers employed.

Of the above fatalities, 21,232 were death; 1,728 permanent total disability; 105,629 permanent partial disability; and 2,324,899 temporary total disability.

Of course these heavy losses in life and pay to the workers are not considered by the employers in their estimates of the big profits the working men annually grind out for them.

The Y. W. L. in Shop and Union

By NATALIE GOMEZ.

One of the greatest handicaps in the progress of our industrial work in our present form of organization. Organized as we are in territorial branches without a firm industrial basis, we cannot succeed in making the League a mass organization of young toilers. This we have fully realized, and in unanimously adopting the resolution on organization of shop nuclei at our last convention we meant business. We saw clearly just where our weaknesses lay and why we have been unable to do much industrial work in the past.

We shall have to reorganize or rather to build up our League on a purely industrial basis, through shop nuclei. As the first step in this direction we took a complete industrial registration of our members to ascertain their occupations, ages and places of work. Prior to that we had little knowledge of what our membership consisted of and industrial work under such conditions was hardly possible. The results of the registration are showing clearly the industrial composition of our membership showed also other favorable conditions for a successful start in shop nuclei work. Many of our members work in large factories such as the Western Electric Co., Hart, Schaffner & Marx, Kuppenheimer Co. and others. In several of these shops we have over two members working together, in some of them four, five and six. Although a nucleus can be formed with less than five comrades in a place, in fact even one active member can act often as a nucleus, it is much easier to start with five or six.

Owing to the fact that clothing workers predominate in our ranks we have thus far concentrated our efforts on that industry. At the present time the Chicago Y. W. L. has succeeded in organizing a nucleus of six active members in one of the largest clothing shops in the city. Conditions are most favorable for the complete success of this fraction. The large number of young workers in that particular factor offers a fertile field for our propaganda and the fact that the shop is organized will stimulate interest in union activities of our members. The young workers joining the League through the shop nucleus will not only start us on the right road to reach a mass organization but will also be a source of new life and activity of the organization. The organization of other nuclei will follow shortly.

Our slogans "Every Y. W. L. member an agitator" and "Every factory a strong nucleus" and "Young Workers League" will before long make "Every Y. W. L. member a union member."

Problems of the German Revolution: Trade Unions, Factory Committees and Workers' Councils

By GREGORY ZINOVIEV.
Chairman, Communist International.

The counter-revolutionary role of the German trade unions during the imperialist war is too well known. It was they who drove millions of German workers into the army of Wilhelm II, and they made it seem as if the German workers were serving Socialism by defending the "Fatherland" of Wilhelm II. It is, indeed, hardly an exaggeration to say that during the years 1914-1919 the German trade unions were the most important factor of the counter-revolution.

The German trade unions are to this day still very much of a factor of the counter-revolution, at least, if we consider the actual machine of the trade unions and its leaders. There is not the slightest doubt that in the decisive moment the German workers will see the "leaders" of the German trade unions again on the opposite side of the barricades. The defense of the apparatus of the German trade unions will come no easier to the German working class than the seizure of the state apparatus. And it seems that the German working class will succeed in taking possession of the trade unions only after a successful revolution. That was, in fact, the case even in a country where the influence of Menshevism was comparatively slight, namely, in Russia.

There was a time when quite an essential group within the Communist International insistently demanded the withdrawal of the Communists from the workers' sympathizing with them from the yellow trade unions. At the second Congress of the Communist International, even such far-seeing comrades as the deceased John Reed, insisted absolutely upon withdrawing the kernel of the Communist International put up a most determined resistance to all these tendencies, and there is no doubt that it was in the right. The work of the Communists in the unions, especially of the German Communists, was not in vain. If it had not been for this activity it would have been impossible to win over the majority of the German working class in the "lower sections" of the trade unions the soil is sufficiently prepared. The seeds sown by the Communists a few years ago will soon grow up in finest fashion.

It was no accident that the victory of the German Communists in the elections to the Metal Workers' convention was the earliest dawn to light up the sky for long overcast with dark Social Democratic clouds.

There is no doubt that in the approaching working class revolution in Germany the factory committees will play a decisive role. But if the German Communists had not taken an active part in the trade unions they could hardly have succeeded in capturing the factory committees; for at first even the factory committees themselves were organs of the German trade unions. They were created by the trade unions.

The leaders of the yellow trade unions thought of the factory committees (or councils) as organs of no great importance. In the conception of the leaders of the German trade unions these factory councils seemed a sort of appendage which could be removed at the opportune moment without pain. During the first year or two of their existence the factory committees were almost entirely in the hands of the trade union leaders. At the congresses of the factory councils the Social Democrats easily won a victory over the Communists. At that time the factory committees were but an adjunct of the trade unions—simply organs used by the yellow leaders for carrying out their treacherous policy. It is only in the third year of their existence that the factory councils begin to play a different role. They begin gradually to replace the trade unions in the economic struggle. In the measure that the situation grows acute, the Social Democratic leaders of the trade unions sink lower and lower. The laboring masses eagerly look for some organ which would be capable of waging the workers' struggle for existence. The Social Democratic leaders betrayed the workers at every turn, even in the most elementary economic struggles. In searching for a mass organization which would in any wise be capable of directing the economic struggle of the working class, the workers suddenly hit upon the idea of playing up the factory committees against the Social Democratic leaders. The factory councils begin now to play the leading role in the economic struggle against capital, a role which the trade unions had rejected.

At this juncture, foolish, half-Proudhonist attempts were made (which for the most part center about the name of the deceased leader of the "left" Independents—Daumig), to turn the factory councils into closed, independent organizations standing outside of the political struggle. There arises a sort of "Industrial Socialism"—a translation of "Guild Socialism" into German.

Yet life goes its own way. The laboring masses gradually purged the industrial councils, not only of treacherous ideas of the Social Democracy, but also of the Proudhonist distortion of revolutionary Marxism. The spirit of the true class struggle begins to infiltrate into the factory councils. The factory councils expand enormously all over Germany. Gradually, they take over all those functions rejected by the yellow trade unions, and not only these functions, but a host of others which are indissolubly bound up with the preparation of the proletarian revolution, and which render the German factory councils of today similar to the workers' Soviets of the epoch of seizure of power.

The yellow leaders of the trade unions still designate their "chairmen" for the central executive committees of the factory councils. Berlin the notorious Emil Barth fancies himself in this role—this former "Socialist minister" of the first "revolutionary" Scheidemann-Haase cabinet. This sad-faced knight contrives to appear in the role of a chairman elected by the trade unions at a time when as a matter of fact the factory councils have long ago outstripped the Social Democrats, and have solidarized with Communism, and when the factory councils send Barth and Company to the devil.

The factory committees are recruited from the "lower sections" from the shops, industries, factories, mines, railroad depots, great commercial firms. At present they cover all of Germany with a thick network. During the last year the factory committees have been growing in prominence from day to day.

The chief functions of the factory councils consist of the following:

1. The factory councils direct the entire or almost the entire economic struggle of the working class. No matter how much the Social Democratic leaders might demand (consider, for instance, the negotiations which have took place in Hamburg and Berlin) that the Communists "shall not play up the factory committees against the trade unions"—the reality shows that life itself utilizes the factory committees as a real organ of struggle of the working class against the yellow trade unions, which still contrive to sabotage the struggle of the working class.

2. The factory committees have created as their periphery in all of Germany such a unique organization as the control committees, that is, commissions which attempt to restrict the prices of the most important vital necessities, to relieve the housing shortage, to combat the mad, constantly rising high cost of living, and speculation. The elections to these control committees are held almost everywhere in Germany, and not only laborers, but all occupied persons of the lower ranks take part in the elections. The ideological and organizational leadership of this peculiar and highly interesting movement is in the hands of the factory committees.

3. The factory committees see to the arming of the German working class. The Red Centuries are likewise in Germany what the Russian Red Guard was in the Russian revolution. These Red Centuries are likewise recruited from the "very lowest strata"—from the shops, industries, factories, etc.

The Red Centuries blend into the millions of the laboring masses, and receive the support of the laboring masses and their factory councils. They are, therefore, outside of the compass of the capitalist class and the "leaders" of the Social Democrats. That is exactly where the "strength" of the Red Centuries lies. The arming of the German working class is one of the absolute prerequisites for the success of the German revolution. Of course, the technical direction of this process of arming the workers, as was the case in the Russian revolution, must be in the hands of a general staff of a limited number, a strictly secret organization. The factory councils do not have these features, but they form the basis. They constitute the great organizational groundwork.

4. The factory committees direct in a great measure, the political struggle of the workers, of tremendous masses of non-party workers. The August strikes of 1923 were handled by the factory councils. The Cuno government was literally overthrown by the factory committees, when they called a three-day strike. But once more the immediate direction of the movement in the month of August was in the hands of the Communist Party, in the hands of a limited general staff, which is as it should be. But the factory councils constituted the organizational basis of the movement.

The factory councils draw to the workers' side other sections of the population who can go at least part of the way together with the working class. We mean the small officials, a part of the intellectuals, the smaller and middle farmers, etc. In any number of localities the factory committees have been able to win over, even into the organizations, representatives of those sections of the population ready to advance together with the workers against the capitalist class.

All that together makes of the present factory councils of Germany something closely approaching the workers' councils of the revolutionary period. The plan of organization of the German factory committees is as follows:

Factory Committee.
Workers' Council. Officials' Council.

The Factory Committee is the combination of two parts—the Workers' Council and Officials' Council. It goes without saying that the deciding power is exclusively in the hands of the former, that is, in the hands of the working class. The factory committees are now organised vertically as well as horizontally, that is, on the industrial principle as well as the territorial principle. The German workers who, under the leadership of the Communist Party, have won the majority in the factory committees in 2,000 cities and towns of Germany, are working with marvelous energy and persistence at organizing and perfecting the factory committee system. We see in all of Germany a tendency to combine the factory councils, not only in every city, but in the districts and in the provinces as well.

The efforts of the capitalist class and the Social Democrats to outlaw the movement of the factory councils comes too late. Perhaps these gentlemen will succeed in forcing the leadership of the factory committees to engage in illegal work; but this can never be done with the factory committee movement itself; for in every shop, and in every industry, in every factory and with the "very lowest strata," the factory committees receive the whole hearted support of the laboring masses; that is the masses are a source of inexhaustible power.

In general, it can be said that those duties performed in Russia by our workers' councils and factory committees, between February and October of the year 1917, are now being performed in Germany by the factory committees alone. In many respects they are fundamentally nothing else than workers' councils. And therein lies the enormous significance of the factory committee movement of Germany. Therein lies the general, international significance of any great labor movement in every country, as soon as the situation becomes revolutionary.

In Germany we see the presence of a revolutionary situation in such a factory committee movement. It is the most important prerequisite of a proletarian revolution. Simply the revolutionary sentiment of the laboring masses would not suffice to bring about success—in order that the proletarian revolution shall be victorious and retain a foothold, it must have an organizational skeleton. It must have the skeleton of organization ready before the decisive uprising, so that around it could be erected the structure of Soviet power. The working class must first of all evolve a mass organization which will penetrate into the lowest depths of the laboring masses, and which even before the complete victory of the working class must permeate its mode of life in a considerable degree. The present factory committees in Germany constitute such a proletarian mass organization. They already take considerable part in the regulation of the most important questions, such as that of food, heating, wages, arming the workers, etc. In this way, they become the most important instrumentality in the revolution now ripening before our eyes. Out of the present factory councils, on the morrow of the victory of the working class, there will arise, on the one hand the workers' councils as organs of the immediate government power of the workers, and on the other hand, the factory councils which will be the basis of the live, fighting trade unions. These trade unions will be of great service to the Soviet power after production is taken over.

It is hardly likely that the German revolution will produce a new form of proletarian dictatorship after the conquest of power. The form will be the same as ours: The Soviet government. The organization in the industries," that is, no surrender of the industries to Siemens and Halske or of the Krupp works to the workers of these industries, with unrestricted authority—but rather, all power to the Soviets, that is, handing over all of production and all power of the country on an organized national scale, to the working class—that must be the slogan. Such are the perspectives which open up before the working class of Germany.

During the preparatory period, the situation developed somewhat differently in Germany than in Russia. The Social Democracy succeeded in discrediting the Soviet idea for a time. In the years 1918-19 the German Soviets fell into the hands of the Social Democracy which, at the national Soviet congress forced through the dissolution and voluntary surrender of the workers' councils to the National Assembly. In March, 1921, during the uprising of the minority of the German workers, the Soviet idea for a time again made its appearance. But in consequence of the defeat of the uprising, the idea was abandoned again. At present the great idea has every prospect of winning. The German workers have no reason to reorganize their factory committees now, before the victory. There is no need for setting up parallel organization immediately, as the existing organizations are on the whole adapted to the situation. The farmers' councils must be organized immediately, for only under especially favorable conditions is it possible for farmers to join the factory councils. The farmers' council's were already springing up in Germany at the time of the revolution of 1918. The farm laborers who are now fully revolutionary must see to forming farmers' councils.

The revolutionary industrial councils have in fact superseded the counter-revolutionary trade unions in the labor movement. Out of the factory (industrial) councils there will soon spring up sharply marked and perfected workers' councils as organs of government. The approaching victorious working class revolution will assign the proper roles to all the basic organizations—to the revolutionary trade unions, the revolutionary factory committees and the workers' councils.

Jan. 13, 1924, Is Date Set for Publication of "Daily Worker", First English Communist Daily

January 13, 1924, will be the date to appear on the first issue of "The Daily Worker," the first Communist daily in the English language. This date will therefore make history for the International Communist movement, as well as for the vanguard in the American labor struggle.

The date was definitely fixed at the recent meeting of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party. This was made possible thru the fact that the final drive for the $100,000.00 "Daily Worker" fund is now reaching its goal. It is felt that that sum will have been raised by the date set.

The establishment of a Communist daily has long been the ambition of the American movement. It has been urged for years. Resolutions favoring "The Daily" were unanimously adopted at the two national conventions of the Workers Party. But it was not until the summer of this year that "The Drive" for the $100,000.00 finally got under way. It was hoped to start "The Daily" on Nov. 7, the Sixth Anniversary of the establishment of the Russian Government of Workers and Farmers. But the time was too short to raise the fund required, and the date of publication had to be postponed.

The date has now been definitely set—Jan. 13, 1924.

Great mass meetings are being arranged by the Daily Worker Campaign Committee in 100 of the most important industrial centers in every part of the country to fittingly commemorate this historic event in the life of the revolutionary Communist movement. These meetings, which are to be held on Jan. 12 and 13, will be definitely announced in next week's issue of "The Worker."

The principal speaker at all of these meetings will be the first issue of "The Daily Worker" which will be put on sale for the first time. This issue will be a special souvenir edition, which will include articles by the leading working class writers of the country, a review of the present political conditions as they affect the class struggle and an appraisal of the tasks now calling for the immediate attention of the progressive labor movement. In addition, this special edition will contain greetings from the advanced labor organizations of this and other countries, as well as messages from prominent spokesmen of labor in all nations.

In order to stimulate the campaign to get long-term subscriptions for "The Daily," the yearly subscription rate has been reduced to $10, with the six months' subscription fixed at $5. The monthly subscription of $1 per month remains the same. Redoubled efforts will be made on the two remaining Communist Sundays, Dec. 23 and Dec. 30, to secure the list of subscribers for the first issue of "The Daily Worker," Jan. 13, 1924.

7,000 Lithuanian Workers Join the Federated Party

After an extensive and country wide discussion in their official press, a referendum of its 230 branches in all the various cities of the United States, the American Lithuanian Workers' Literary Association has overwhelmingly voted to affiliate with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. This organization has for its purpose the spread of education thru the publication of working class literature. It has great prestige with the whole Lithuanian population of the country. With its 7,000 members it exerts a major influence on their political thought.

The day is fast passing when societies of foreign-born workers can be used by capitalist politicians, to wring the vote of the various national groups toward either of the old parties. The American Lithuanian Workers' Literary Association, and its far-sighted Central Executive Committee, that initiated this referendum, are to be congratulated on their progressive stand.

William F. Dunne to Speak.

William F. Dunne, of Butte, Montana, well known labor leader, orator and writer, whose "expulsion" from the American Federation of Labor Portland convention attracted nationwide attention of both labor and capital, has agreed to address several mass meetings in various parts of the country. He is scheduled to speak on "Why I Was Expelled From the Portland Convention" in the following cities: Chicago, Jan. 2; Detroit, 3; New York City, 4; Philadelphia, 5; Boston, Sunday, Jan. 6, 2 p. m.; Buffalo, 7; Cleveland, 8; Milwaukee, 9. All sympathetic organizations are urged to arrange any other meetings or affairs on these dates.

Kruse Back from Europe with New Soviet Film

William F. Kruse, motion picture director of the Friends of Soviet Russia, returned a few days ago from a five months' trip to Europe. He was sent abroad to investigate the various "School-Communes" and other Russian activities supported by the F. S. R. as well as to get a motion picture to follow his two previous film successes, "Russia Thru the Shadows" and "The Fifth Year."

This trip was not confined to an excursion to Moscow, but included six weeks of constant traveling and picture making in the provinces, all the way from Siberia to Azerbaidjan. Ten thousand feet of celluloid record the new Russia—industry, schools, rebuilt cities, scenery, agriculture, old and new, and the whole industrial and social structure from Petrograd to Baku.

During his eight weeks' stay in Moscow, Kruse took part in the two opening agricultural Exposition, the International Peasant Day and the Sixth Anniversary Celebration of the Bolshevik Revolution—all of which have been recorded in film.

"Film production in Russia," he reported, "is thoroughly up to the highest standards of the art. The United States due to antiquated equipment, the isolation of the Russian technicians from world developments, and above all lack of finances. Russia is compelled to concentrate on "heavy industry" with the result that kino, like other social institutions, has suffered for lack of resources. The importance of the film is being recognized more and more now, however, and rapid development is to be expected. Trotzky, Kamenev, Lunacharsky and others have written critical articles in the press, articles pointing out the shortcomings of the Russian film world and demanding improvement. This recognition of fault is the first step in all improvements in Communist controlled industry, so quick and effective changes are to be expected.

"Handicapped as they are the Russian kino technicians have done some creditable work."

In addition to fourteen weeks in Russia, Kruse spent three weeks in Germany, studying conditions there, and also some time in Denmark, Lithuania and Lettland. It is expected that when he finishes the next pictures for the Friends of Soviet Russia, he will accompany the film, at least to the larger centers, to tell of his personal experiences in the production of the picture. His pictures of German conditions are sure to be especially interesting. Four meetings were thus far held, in New Haven, Bridgeport, Providence and Boston.

Frank Waite, Hero of Two Coal Mine Disasters, Fights Death in Hospital; Hopes to Return to Pits

By TOM TIPPETT.
(Federated Press Correspondent)

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill.—To find out whether Frank Waite, the 37-year-old miner, survivor of the Cherry mine disaster, who also was caught in the recent explosion at Orient, would go back into the mines after two such miraculous escapes from death, brought me to the miners' co-operatively owned hospital here where Orient victims are being treated.

There were three other burnt miners in the ward where I found Waite. When I arrived Waite was having his burns dressed. So that his attention might be diverted from the work of the nurse the doctor said I could talk with him at once. His injuries are not considered fatal. There are serious burns on his body and both hands are literally cooked. The skin had all been removed from the hands and the nurse was removing chunks of dead flesh with tweezers while Waite writhed under the pain. When she prepared to "pull" the finger nails I left, finding it impossible to divert my own attention from his misery much less divert him.

I entered another room. A man lay there alone awaiting death, an explosion victim, suffering indescribably from what the medical men called third degree burns. Obviously he was from a foreign shore. Great dark eyes, bereft of their lashes, looked out pitifully thru tears. Deadly gas and flame had entered his lungs and left their mark. His lips and nostrils were burnt to a crisp. The face was charred and the ears looked like toast. With a soothing white paste smeared over the wounds it all presented a pathetic picture that the "public" should see to appreciate what production of coal means . . . from the miners' end.

Returning to Waite, whose hands were now being bandaged, I found him relaxed and ready to talk. "Well, old man," I said, "are you going back and give death another shot at you?" He smiled, glanced over at another squirming unfortunate, where the nurse was. He said: "I've been thinking it over and I guess I'll go back. I don't see anything else to do. There's the house we're buying —just got it last year and there's a well, there's the wife and little fellow you know, and so I suppose I'll have to go back." I asked him how it was that he was not at his working place when the Orient explosion occurred. Had he been, he would have been killed. He told me that ever since the Cherry disaster he always took the last cage down. He figured that with the general commotion at starting time and its effect on the air currents explosions were most likely to happen at that time. So he planned on missing them if possible by remaining on top till the last minute.

On the morning of the Orient accident, Waite, as usual, was late and was caught in the entry on route to his working place. He saw the fire coming down the entry. There was no escape, not even time to remove his coat with which to cover his hands and face. He dropped to his belly and jerked the tail of his coat over the back of his head and buried his

Survivor of two Disasters

Frank Waite, the hero of Neff mine explosion at Orient, Ill., Nov. 26, was entombed for eight days in the Cherry (Ill.) mine when the disaster of Nov. 13, 1909, resulted in the death of 257 coal diggers. After the Orient explosion Waite, badly burned and exhausted from fighting the flood, climbed 600 feet to the surface and brought relief to the miners below. The cage in the escape shaft was not running because the company had put its tender on another job, and heroism the men below might not have escaped.

Food Prices Highest in 2 Years

The cost of the food necessary to sustain a wage earner's family was higher in October than at any time since December, 1921, according to the monthly report of the U. S. bureau of labor statistics on the retail price of food. The bureau's figures show that the rise in the cost of food has been steady since March during which period it has increased over 5¾ per cent.

In October the cost of this food budget was 50 per cent above the 1913 level as compared with 49 per cent in September and 42 per cent in March.

Chicago Labor for "Hands off Germany!" Refer United Front

By terms of a resolution sponsored by Painters' Local, No. 275, and the Painters' District Council, the Chicago Federation of Labor calls upon "the working people and farmers of this country to unite under the slogan of 'Hands Off Workers' Germany'." Every delegate present voted in favor of the resolution. If there can be unanimous sentiment on the importance of the dangers confronting the German workingclass, and the necessity of the farmers and workers of America uniting to assist the workers of Germany, then the time is not far distant when the importance of the dangers confronting the American working class will compel united action.

A resolution calling for a united front policy on the political field was defeated by a vote of 70 to 60. An attempt on the part of Delegates Arms- Swabeck, Jack Johnstone and others to secure a reconsideration of the stand of the federation on this resolution was the means of bringing up the heavy artillery of the reactionaries, with Vice-President Oscar Nelson superintending the attack.

One poor, unsuspecting delegate was tempted to speak, when he thought was right, when just as he was about to make his point, Oscar Nelson shouted: "Are you a member of the Trade Union Educational League?" What it had to do with the discussion nobody seems to know. It sounded like the old Masonic question, "How old is your grandmother?"

Culinary Workers Organize!

Unbounded enthusiasm marked the opening of the drive in Chicago, in a monster mass meeting at the North Side Turner Hall, for the organization of all culinary workers under the direction of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Branch of the Amalgamated Food Workers.

The Chicago drive is part of the national campaign of the Amalgamated Food Workers, from coast to coast. Six thousand new members have joined the organization in New York. 300 Greek workers have joined in Chicago. The slogan is, "We will not stop until every food worker is organized."

Among the speakers at the Chicago meeting were D. E. Early, district organizer, and Joseph Manley, secretary of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The local office of the union is at 214 N. State St. Albert E. Stewart is secretary-treasurer.

Needle Trades Workers!

There will be a special educational mass meeting for garment workers Wednesday night, Dec. 19, 8 p. m., Douglas Park Auditorium, Ogden and Kedzie. The speakers will be William F. Foster, editor of "The Labor Herald," and Robert Minor, editor of "The Liberator." The subject: "The Situation in the Needle Trades?"

Mexican Workers and Farmers Unite to Crush the Reactionists' Effort to Seize State Power

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.
(Staff Correspondent of "The Worker" and "Federated Press.")

MEXICO CITY.—If there was any doubt as to the attitude of the workers and peasants of Mexico toward the government of President Obregon, the counter-revolution of General Guadalupe Sanchez in Vera Cruz and of General Enrique Estrada in Jalisco has settled the matter.

No sooner was this Fascisti uprising effected than the president received the immediate adhesions of the Confederation Regional Obrero (Mexican Federation of Labor), the Labor Party, the Communist Party, the Agrarian Party, the Agrarian Communities and scores of individual unions and organizations of workers and farmers even including the two picturesque organizations of intellectuals, known as the League of Revolutionary Writers and the Union of Painters and Sculptors.

The peasants, already partially armed as a result of former revolutions and the liberty of bearing arms, which the constitution guarantees, are clamoring for more arms and more powerful and modern ones.

Thanks to the energetic aid of armed peasants, Jalapa, capital of the State of Vera Cruz, with a garrison of only 200 soldiers of the regular army, is still holding out against General Sanchez, who is attacking it with a force variously estimated at from 4,000 to 15,000.

The counterrevolution pro-De La Huerta, for it is in form at least a personal political counter-revolution, would not have promoted such overwhelming response on the part of the organized workers and farmers if it had been merely a question of personal succession to the presidency. But, in spite of the former revolutionary tendencies of De La Huerta, recent political events have slowly but steadily tended to line up the reactionary forces of the country behind him and make him, wittingly or unwittingly, their instrument. While Calles tended to take a more and more definite class stand for the workers and farmers, the manifestoes and speeches of De La Huerta spoke increasingly of pleasing all classes, of giving effective support to property, etc. But the personality of De La Huerta counts for little as well as the short secret-service rallying cry of the counter-revolution, are rapidly receding into the background and neither friendly nor enemy papers are mentioning his name. The state of war proclaimed by the rebellion, sharpened and clarified the class issue. Even professional politicians of the Cooperatista Party, who have held the reins up till now, such as Jorge Prieto Laurens, are scarcely being mentioned. Two personalities stand out with stark and revealing nakedness — General Guadelupe Sanchez and General Enrique Estrada. And whatever may have been their uncertainty, confronted with De La Huerta and even with Prieto Laurens, the peasantry are no longer uncertain. They have no doubt about him. And as to Estrada—he was the man to whom Obregon had offered the department of land distribution, only to withdraw the nomination when Estrada made declarations to the press completely hostile to the agrarian program of the present government.

The counter-revolution came suddenly, reached its maximum swiftly, and judging from present indications, will be over shortly. Up to a few months ago, Calles was the only candidate in the field, offered his nomination by both Cooperatistas and Laboristas, supported by De La Huerta, and engaged only by the big land owners. He had to choose between Cooperatistas and Laboristas. He chose the latter and split the Cooperatista Party. Followed in swift succession the resignation of De La Huerta from the cabinet, his nomination by the remnant (a majority, but a slight one) of the Cooperatista Party, the charge by the new secretary of the treasury that the former one, De La Huerta, had been guilty of malfeasance in office and diversion of the nation's funds, an impassioned defense by De La Huerta, the publication of photographed and fascimile proofs, and his "political trip" to Vera Cruz. The day he arrived, General Sanchez raised the standard of revolt. Two days before, the Cooperatistas had 129 deputies in the lower house, the Callistas only 124. On the eve of the revolt, only 70 Delahuertista deputies showed up and it was obvious that they had left the parliamentary field to appeal to force.

They have appealed to force. From Vera Cruz comes the report, now officially confirmed, that the first judicial act of Sanchez was the summary execution by rifle squad of Heron Proal, hated by the laborites because he was the leader of the Cooperatista Party in the state of Vera Cruz. Sanchez has also captured Jalapa and on three sides federal troops are closing down upon him with reinforcements for the peasants and the two hundred soldiers of the garrison there. The government has closed the custom house at Vera Cruz, retaining the one at Tampico.

General Estrada, in Jalisco, whose forces I cannot accurately estimate, on account of conflicting reports, is being approached by the loyal armies of Guanajuato and other surrounding states, as well as the army released by the surrender of General Romulo Figueroa, who had revolted in Guerrero a week previously, although it is not at present apparent whether in agreement with Sanchez and Estrada or for the purely local reasons that he alleges.

The rumors that some of the American papers published the first and second days of the revolt are grossly exaggerated. Neither Villa's brother, nor Madero, are implicated. The state governments of Puebla, Queretero, and one of two contesting and rival governments in San Luis potosi have been removed without bloodshed, all other governors and all other important military divisions remain loyal to Obregon. The North of the country, the Maya region of Yucatan, the Yaqui Indians remain loyal, all this by way of refutation of the false reports cabled by the New York Times's reporter here, De Courcey, who has been arrested on account of his activity as an alarmist. It does not appear at this writing that any foreign financial interests who have subsidized so many revolutions, have a hand in this one. The finance capitalists seem content with the debt recognition of the Obregon government. The Doheney interests have just advanced fleas than two weeks before the revolution when there were already clouds on the horizon 10,000,000 pesos on account of taxes of next year as a loan to the government.

The net effect of the uprising promises to be, a clear field for the presidential candidacy of Plutarco Elias Calles, nominee of the Laboristas, Agrarista, Communists and other parties of left tendencies; opposed only by some such candidate as Angel Flores, representative of land-owning interests, who is remaining neutral in the present crisis; a further veering toward the left of the present and future preferments as they lean more heavily than heretofore upon the workers and peasants; and a forward impetus to the work of land distribution and socialization which was slowing up to such an extent on account of the political preoccupation of the reactionary forces that it was practically at a standstill.

United in Canadian Labor Party

By JOHN A. McRURY.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia.—The fifth annual convention of the Independent Labor Party of Nova Scotia held here affiliated with the Canadian Labor Party as a provincial section. This makes the Labor Party a dominion wide organization.

The party is asking for the affiliation of all working class organizations, the farmers and local labor parties.

"To secure for the workers, by hand or by brain, the full product of their toil and the most equitable distribution thereof," was declared the object of the party in the new constitution that was adopted.

The unanimous election as provincial president of Jim McLachlan, deposed secretary Distaict No. 26, U. M. W. A., now in prison for leadership in the recent strike, betokens the policy of the party.

Coolidge Regime Launches Big Drive for "Super-Blacklist" Against Alien Workers in U. S.

Blame President Coolidge's message to Congress, the Burns and Daugherty crimes to make mob-hatred slaves of all alien workers in the United States has revealed itself as a straight-out administration measure. The Sterling-Johnson bill for registering all aliens and their fingerprints is shown to be no mere private affair of Burns and his gang, but something much deeper. The entire Coolidge machine is behind it. This means that a determined effort is to be made during this session of Congress to enact the plan into law.

President Coolidge declared in his message that "we should find additional authority in a law requiring the registration of all aliens." As there is now a bill before the House of Representatives providing for such registration, the President's unqualified statement may be taken as an endorsement of it. This is the Johnson Bill, already virtually endorsed by the Federal Department of Labor.

The Johnson Bill provides for punishment up to five year in prison for any alien who shall fail to register with the authorities every year, giving his name, sex, race, nationality, date and place of birth, age, residence, marital status and occupation. Aliens are also required to be photographed, and to furnish "such other information as the Secretary of Labor may by regulation prescribe. For all this, "the foreigners" are to be taxed $5.00 a year at the time of registration.

Characterizing the bill as "a super blacklist," the Butte Bulletin points out that its passage would be a severe blow to the labor movement in general. With the instruments for effective intimidation placed in the hands of the police agencies controlled by the employers, strikes could be broken with the greatest ease. What more would be needed than a nation-wide blacklist of alien-wage earners prepared at government expense? The trade unions have a high percentage of foreign born workers in their ranks, particularly unions like the United Mine Workers of America, which operates in a basic industry.

That the attempt to create a super blacklist is not an isolated phenomenon, but is part of a concerted drive against labor, which is being undertaken by the governmental forces of reaction all along the line, is illustrated by the many other vicious bills which have been introduced in Congress, notably the Sterling Bill, now in the hands of the Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate.

No greater mockery of the constitutionally "guaranteed" rights of free speech and free assemblage has ever been devised than this Sterling Bill, designated as "A bill to prohibit and punish certain seditious acts against the Government of the United States and to prohibit the use of the mails for the purpose of promoting such acts." Under its provisions the simple exhibition of a button or emblem denoting sympathy with Soviet Russia might be interpreted as rendering a worker liable to five years in prison or $5,000 fine, or both.

It is, in effect, what its well-fed supporters call it—"a national anti-syndicalism bill," worthy successor to the various state anti-syndicalism bills which have been passed in various parts of the country. These state laws have been used by the employing class to persecute some of the ablest and most outspoken elements in the militant labor movement.

The whole issue has been dramatized on a national scale by the persecution of William Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg and the other Communists in the so-called "Michigan Case," growing out of the brutal raid on the Communist convention at Bridgman, Mich., August 22, 1922. Burns and his army of stool-pigeons are straining every nerve to secure convictions in the Michigan case, because of its nation-wide importance.

Up to the present no national anti-syndicalism law has been established. The proposals of the Sterling Bill would give us such a law. Whether or not it will be passed depends upon the opposition labor is able to offer, and also, to a considerable extent, upon the number of convictions secured under the state laws. Thus, the Michigan Anti-Syndicalism Law, have become the focus of attention. Workers everywhere are sending in money to help the defense, while the forces of reaction are lending open and secret aid to the prosecution.

'Apologia.

In the dark, dread days of the Middle Ages,
When the pages of history told more in eyes
And the Statesmen of Europe were sages and sages
Rotted on barrel-rest tyrrus of stews,
The world of the terrible Feudal Law
Lay heavy; but what ever dared protest!
'Tis the day when someone suddenly saw
"Many a truth is said in jest."

Like a flash of hope in those dingy ages
Where the brave lay shelved for sake to guess,
The idea struck home. And the poet up rages
Scolding in lessons dared tell rulers
Of errors, all at once, in a land he knew,
A way had been found to voice unrest
Through a little jigsaw-puzzle-riddle at law)
"Many a truth is said in jest."

Education spread—and by right stages,
As the day dawn began to show,
And Cervantes scribbled his deathless pages,
Gave point of every Jest.
From Rabelais to the days of Shaw,
The "jokers" have played their part with zest
No need to be solemn and yet year law.
Many a truth is said in jest.

The Meeting Will Come to Order!

THE PARTY CAUCUS will now hold its weekly meetings in this column. Contributing delegates please notice.

Cal Coolidge in his message to Congress suggests one way to relieve the suffering farmer: "Cheap fertilizers must be provided."

For the sake of the farmers, we hope Cal gives many speeches to Congress.

I detest people who persist in knocking Capital! I'm for it! It is to Capital we owe so many things. Our education, our interest in life, our guidance—our very ideas we owe to Capital.

Work Daily—For THE DAILY.

From a Washington dispatch we learn the Department of Justice is going to investigate the Standard Oil Company from New York to California, charging them with price fixing on gas and all petroleum products.

Since Coolidge's speech the D. of J. feels it's their turn to make a gas attack.

There is talk of simplifying the income tax blank. What's the matter with the present one?

It is expected that the revolutionary workers of the Hudson Metropolis will attend in great numbers. Trachtenberg has been in Russia for an extended period, and he will give an interesting report. Trachtenberg has visited Germany during the most critical period. He was there when the military dictator put the ban on the whole Communist movement. He will be able to answer the question: how is the German revolutionary movement working—without a legal party?"

UNDER THE SOVIETS.

MOSCOW.—The Buriat - Mongol Area, one of the Autonomous Areas of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic, has now been proclaimed an Autonomous Republic, governed by its own Soviet Congress, Central Executive Committee, and Council of People's Commissaries.

This proclamation has been welcomed enthusiastically. Meetings held all over the new Republic have thanked the Soviet Government and stated that, under the able guidance of the Soviet authorities, the small nations of Russia are gradually emerging from their dark stage of ignorance and helplessness. "Only the Soviet Government of Workers and Farmers," says one resolution, "is capable of freeing the laboring masses and of putting an end to the exploitation of one nation by another."

Labor Defense Bazaar Success.

All the gaiety and festival spirit of a four-day holiday marked the Labor Defense Bazaar, which filled Northwest Hall, in Chicago, to overflowing, December 6, 7, 8 and 9. Eminently successful from half a dozen different points of view, the bazaar proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that the Chicago comrades are determined to see that the Foster-Ruthenberg defense shall not fall by the wayside for lack of support.

The Right to Work

OAKLAND, Cal.—Within sight of some of Oakland's largest and most modern office buildings, a lame, old, white-haired, bearded woman was seen digging in the garbage can for food. "I'm too old for work," I lost my job, and I had to move and have no place to go," gasped the old woman when she was found by a passer-by dying in the receiving hospital, where the police carried her.

Sam Gompers Turns His Popguns on Engineers' Journal and Brookhart

(By Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON.—A two-page editorial by Samuel Gompers in the December issue of the American Federationist, under the heading "A Senator Goes Upstairs Ceiling," rages at, and denies the leading statements of Senator Brookhart of Iowa in his discussion of Russian conditions, published in the Locomotive Engineers' Journal.

"The Locomotive Engineer," says the editorial, "has printed quite a number of pieces expressing sympathy for the Soviet outfit and perhaps some may wonder whether Mr. Stone's magazine has one eye on possible future banking business among the new autocrats of Russia."

As to Senator Brookhart—"He should not have gone to Russia. He is far too gullible. His eye for the detection of falsehood and evil loses its unerring precision once Wall Street's hated minions are lost to its focus."

This attitude on Gompers' part toward Wall Street has caused some ejaculations of surprise in Washington, since he had always been understood to consider Wall Street an actual menace to the welfare of the workers, and not a joke.

"He (Brookhart) lands on Russian soil with arms and ears wide open," resumes the editorial. "Tell me all,' he greets them, and smilingly they tell him what they want hha to know and he believes and goes his way. But of course there is no 'show me' tradition in Iowa to act as a checkering upon perspiring enthusiasm. To hear him is to believe, for, to be sure, no bloody Soviet butcher would tell a lie to a man from Iowa."

Senator Brookhart refused to discuss this comment when he read it, beyond saying that he would not enter into a debate on that plane with reference to Russia. He had gone to Russia, seen conditions, and reported them. The facts would stand.

Reception for Trachtenberg.

A public reception has been arranged for Alexander Trachtenberg, former member of the Central Executive Committee, on the eve of his return from a tour of Russia and Germany. Trachtenberg arrived in New York Dec. 20. The reception is arranged for Friday, Dec. 21, 7 P. M., at the New York Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St.

It is expected that the revolutionary workers of the Hudson Metropolis will attend in great numbers. Trachtenberg has been in Russia for an extended period, and he will give an interesting report. Trachtenberg has visited Germany during the most critical period. He was there when the military dictator put the ban on the whole Communist movement. MOSCOW.—The Buriat - Mongol Area, one of the Autonomous Areas of the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic, has now been proclaimed an Autonomous Republic, governed by its own Soviet Congress, Central Executive Committee, and Council of People's Commissaries.

This proclamation has been welcomed enthusiastically. Meetings held all over the new Republic have thanked the Soviet Government and stated that, under the able guidance of the Soviet authorities, the small nations of Russia are gradually emerging from their dark stage of ignorance and helplessness. "Only the Soviet Government of Workers and Farmers," says one resolution, "is capable of freeing the laboring masses and of putting an end to the exploitation of one nation by another."

Labor Defense Bazaar Success.

All the gaiety and festival spirit of a four-day holiday marked the Labor Defense Bazaar, which filled Northwest Hall, in Chicago, to overflowing, December 6, 7, 8 and 9. Eminently successful from half a dozen different points of view, the bazaar proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that the Chicago comrades are determined to see that the Foster-Ruthenberg defense shall not fall by the wayside for lack of support.

Anna Louise Strong Writes About 'RAIC' Prospects in Russia

(Special to The Worker.)

NEW YORK.—Anna Louise Strong, newspaper correspondent, has taken a look at the way the capitalists of the United States Chamber of Commerce operate in Russia. Some of her conclusions, drawn after long conferences with the U. S. C. representatives in Moscow are as follows:

"The R. A. I. C. contract with the Soviet government can create a wide field for commercial intercourse between Russia and America.

"The Russians are not afraid to see the R. A. I. C. make large sums of money, because they realize that the stockholders of the corporation will receive a reasonable part of their profits back into increasing the business.

"The R. A. I. C. contract is a better contract than that made by the Soviet government with any other foreign business concern, for from R. A. I. C. the Russians exact no definite amount of business or profit; at the same time that they give the American corporation a guarantee of a minimum dividend to be paid to it. Better terms could scarcely be conceived.

"The R. A. I. C. got a better contract than the business men of other countries, both because it is a workers' corporation and because it is an American workers' corporation. Because in the end America is the only country big enough for Russia to do business with! Some day the relations between the two countries will be very large, and Russia will do everything it can to establish better relations so that the organizing abilities of the Americans will be placed at the disposal of Russia's future, helping her develop in the direction she wishes to go.

"The Amalgamated is a labor organization, it stands for industrial co-operation with Russia. For this reason Russia gave R. A. I. C. privileges which individual capitalists have asked for in vain. It is not a chance to give charity, but a really sound business proposition."

Then writing of the clothing plants in which R. A. I. C. is interested, Miss Strong continues:

"The best clothing factories in Russia, the ones with steam and electrical equipment, have been organized in the All-Russian Clothing Syndicate. The poor factories, those not on a machine basis, were not allowed to enter this syndicate—only the most up-to-date shops. There are about ten million dollars worth of these buildings and about three and a half million dollars worth of goods."

The R. A. I. C. as readers of "The Worker" will remember announced its first semi-annual dividend of 8 per cent a few weeks ago. Since then activities of the steel corporation have been pouring in as the American workers again show their loyalty to the land of the Soviets.

With a zealousness that is hard to equal, he has struggled along to hasten the advent of better era. After a successful campaign in Pennsylvania, he waaded his way to the Hall-Hole of the United States, West Virginia.

There he found a very fertile field, for the workers there, worse than in the mining fields, are persecuted to such an extent that they do not know where they fit.

The coal barons and other financial interests of West Virginia who, thru their political and other agencies, have conducted a continued reign of terror in the state, and are without doubt responsible for the innumerable indictments now standing against officials of District No. 17, United Mine Workers of America, have recognized Hamilton's presence in their midst, and thru the medium of "Imperialists" if the "Empire" of the Ku Klux Klan, have "suggested" that Hamilton "waste" no further time in the community, as the following letter from the "Exalted Cyclops" will show:

American Militarism at Work.

Joseph Mirault, one of the Nationalist leaders of Haiti, has just arrived in New York to inform the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People of the outrages visited upon the Haitians by the American military forces serving as the agents of our big bankers and business men trying to enslave the country.

Such prominent advocates of Haitian independence from the clutches of American imperialism as the Jolibon brothers, Elie Guerin, Anteine Pierre Paul, and George Petit have been put in jail by the United States army of occupation.

What is more, in their wanton attacks on the Haitians the military forces have prevented all cable communication with the United States. A rigorous censorship of all outgoing mail has also been forced on the Haitians by the troops.

Dollar democracy at home means dollar diplomacy abroad. The Haitians are learning this lesson. The price they are paying for it is an awful one. The American army in the service of our imperial bandits is a stern schoolmaster.

Yet, one might ask Washington what happened to the much-vaunted principle of "self-determination" for which so many workingmen and farmers died on Flanders field and in France?

MOSCOW.—A statement recently reported to the International Congress of Agricultural and Forest Workers shows that 17 unions of agricultural workers, with more than 600,000 members, are affiliated to the Red International of Labor Unions.

Hungry for "The Daily"

"The daily paper is our propaganda instrument... Everything in the party depends on whether we have a high circulation or a low one. It is better to have a paper with a high circulation and less other party activity than a low circulation and half-a-dozen different forms of activity to make contact with the masses."

This is what Matti Tenhaunnen, Business Manager of the highly successful Finnish Daily Tyomies, wrote to The Daily Worker. Everyone who knows anything about the Workers Party knows that the Finnish Federation is the most highly organized section of the party. The Finns have built an organization which dominates the life of the Finnish population in America and they have done it because they have been able to build up a Finnish Daily Press of their own. The Finns realize what a daily newspaper in the English language would mean to the Workers Party and they are exerting themselves to the utmost to make The Daily Worker possible and successful.

The success of The Daily Worker depends utterly on its ability to secure a high circulation. The future of the Workers Party depends on its possession of successful daily papers. The success of the party dailies depends on the party membership. If the party membership were dissolute they can achieve a brilliant success for The Daily Worker and the Workers Party in the next three weeks. They can start off The Daily Worker as a successful daily paper supplying the news, education and inspiration to 50,000 subscribers right from the start. In the three or four weeks intervening between now and the time when The Daily Worker will begin publication the party membership can secure the success of the first Communist daily paper ever published in the English language and further secure a bright, immediate future for the party.

Is it any wonder that the party set aside three Sundays (Dec. 16, 23 and 30) as Communist Sunday for The Daily Worker subscription campaign? Is it any wonder that the party membership is wildly excited about the new daily? The task is so obvious, the duty of every party member, every militant worker, so plain.

Sell subscriptions to The Daily Worker! Go out among the workers. They are hungry for a paper such as The Daily Worker will be. They are looking for a paper to read that they can trust in the knowledge that with it their interests will be protected.

50,000 subscribers for The Daily Worker! It is a goal that can be reached, but only if the party members are alive to the opportunity and will exert themselves to take advantage of it.

West Va. Klu Klux Klan Threat to Organizer of Workers Party

Secretary, Progressive Miners' Committee.

Born in America, the son of a Presbyterian "Minister of the Gospel," a graduate of Washington and Jefferson College, a high school teacher, and member of the Teachers' Federation, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The foregoing would serve as material from which the biography of J. A. Hamilton could be written, and since 1919 the biographer would be able to gather additional material from the daring and fearless exploits of this "champion" of the cause of the "Working-Class" in "Boss-Ridden" territories.

Leaving his position as a teacher after he found he could not live on it, Hamilton identified himself with the more virulous elements among the working class, and has since been busily engaged in the task of trying to support the Boss slaves.

With a zealousness that is hard to equal, he has struggled along to hasten the advent of a better era. After a successful campaign in Pennsylvania, he waaded his way to the Hall-Hole of the United States, West Virginia.

La Follette, the Third Party and the Labor Party

By JOHN PEPPER.

A series of new facts demand explanation.

A number of things have happened lately which are in seeming contradiction to one another.

Contradictions.

A great national convention has been called for May 30, which will unite in one struggle all the groups, like the Committee of Forty-eight, Third Parties, like the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, and the party of workers and exploited farmers such as the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, and a Communist Party, the Workers Party.

Within the Progressive Party of Nebraska there are strong tendencies toward nominating La Follette or even Ford for president, while at the same time this party indorses the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and declares that it will participate in the May 30th convention because the Federated Farmer-Labor Party will be present there.

The convention of the South Dakota Farmer-Labor Party nominated La Follette for the presidency, and at the same time gave the warmest indorsement to the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

It is an embarrassing situation. La Follette is still in the old Republican Party. Senator Wheeler, the leader of the radical Democrats, is still in the old Democratic Party. But the convention of the Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota nominates La Follette for president, and yet this party is at the same time an enemy of the old Republican-Democratic Party. La Follette is in the Republican Party, but the Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota is carrying on the bitterest fight against the Republican Party. Senator Wheeler is in the Democratic Party, but the Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota refused to make the fusion with the Democrats, advocated in its ranks by fakers of the labor aristocracy and delegates of rich farmers.

In the big national convention on May 30th, at Minneapolis there will undoubtedly be a very powerful trend towards nominating La Follette for the presidency. We will find there political groups and parties of the small businessmen and well-to-do farmers, and intelligentsia on the one hand; but on the other hand we will find hundreds and hundreds of delegates of the rank and file of the trade unions and exploited farmers and the delegates of the class-conscious Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the Communist Workers Party.

What is the explanation of these contradictions? Do we witness the emerging of new organized worlds out of this chaos?

The explanation can be given only thru Marxian analysis of the relations of the various classes to one another.

The Relationship of the Different Classes.

The existence of the various Third Parties on a state scale is explained in this way: The small businessmen and the well-to-do farmers, who until lately stood under the leadership of the capitalists, have lost their faith in the leadership of the big capitalists. The class struggle growing more acute between big capital, the trusts, the banks and trusts on the one hand, and the other classes of society on the other hand, finds its reflection in politics in the fact that the representatives of the lower classes are starting factional fights in the old parties, in the fact that the masses are splitting away from the republican and democratic parties, in the formation of Third Parties under various names.

At the same time the class struggle, growing ever sharper, is beating asunder the ties which exist between the small businessmen and well-to-do farmers on the one hand and the exploited farmers and proletarian workers on the other. Thus, the election of the Farmer-Labor Legislature, in Minnesota, created a separate organization for the workers and exploited farmers within the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota, which is a typical Third Party and is ruled by politicians of the well-to-do farmers and small businessmen like Magnus Johnson, Shipstead and Pike. The split of the rich farmers, who wanted fusion with the Democratic Party, and boosted the candidacy of Henry Ford, cleaned the Farmer-Labor Party of South Dakota, and left it a party of the poorest and most exploited farmers. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party is on a national scale the party of workers and exploited farmers. (We do not wish to bring up here the question of the labor aristocracy and its political leaders, which is undergoing a contrary development. Instead of allying itself with the Third Party movement it is going with the old parties of big capital. Many comrades are confused by this fact, and they cannot understand that the sharper the class struggle becomes, the clearer will the game of leaders of the labor aristocracy ally itself with the bourgeoisie. They do not understand that Compers on a national scale, Holland in New York, Walker in Illinois, Scharrenberg in California, Beck in South Africa are of them coming to play more and more the same role as Dan and Abramovitch in Russia, Danszchinsky in Poland, Ebert and Noske in Germany and MacDonald and Henderson in Great Britain.)

Basic Tendencies and Transitional Situations.

The situation can be summed up: the well-to-do farmers and small businessmen are splitting away from the parties of big capital. But the split is not yet complete. It exists on a local and state scale, but it has not yet definitely crystalized on a national scale, as the deep-going social and political process, and we must understand it as a process. At the same time the split of the small and workers are splitting away, not only from the capitalists, but from the well-to-do farmers and small businessmen. This development also, is not fully completed and consummated, but it is crystallizing more and more. It is a deep-going political and social process, and we must understand it as a process. These two most important social and political processes—first, the class struggle growing ever sharper between big capital on the one hand, and small businessmen and well-to-do farmers on the other hand; and second, the growing class conflict between workers on the one hand and exploited farmers and proletarian workers on the other hand—are the basic facts of the present development of our political life. But we must realize that we can only understand this process correctly if we take it not as a fixed fact, but try to realize it as a dynamic. With full respect for the fact that the small businessmen and well-to-do farmers are basically more conservative, and that trade unions are always revolutionary or at least more revolutionary, we must understand at all the variety and richness of the class struggle.

The small businessmen have the main tendency, but we must also understand the many transitional forms and transitional situations.

La Follette is the political leader of the well-to-do farmers and small businessmen in fighting against Coolidge, the president of the international bankers and big trusts. But he will not be broken with the Republican Party, with the party of the banks and trusts. La Follette dubbed Coolidge's first message as a "presentation of the standpat revolutionary theory of government." La Follette accused Coolidge:

"If it be courageous to champion the interests of railroads, the profiteers, the coal magnates, and our other enemies against the mass of the people, then in all fairness it must be conceded that the President has earned the tribute to his courage so warmly accorded by many of the newspapers of the country."

La Follette is among all his Republican followers in the Senate to vote for the Democrat Smith who is against the Esch Cummins law, rather than to vote for the Republican Cummins who is the author of the most capitalistic law of the United States. La Follette is fighting against the reactionary wing of the Republican Party and is breaking party disciplines in the fight, but he still remains a member of the reactionary Republican Party. We see there a transitional stage.

The Farmer-Labor Federation in Minnesota is fighting in the name of the workers and exploited farmers against the political machine of the well-to-do farmers and small businessmen. This Federation is a class organization, and has the broad vision that the movement must be widened on a national scale. But this class movement is still not class-conscious; it has friendly relations with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, but harbors a strong tendency to nominate La Follette as president. This Federation is a separate organization, embracing the workers and exploited farmers of the state, but still it is united and has an organizational unity with the Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota which is at the same time the party of small businessmen and well-to-do farmers. This Federation is willing to go along with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, and even with the Workers Party. That is, it is willing to fight in the class struggle on a class basis, but at the same time is willing to accept La Follette, the political leader of the well-to-do farmer and small businessmen. This again is a transitional stage.

In South Dakota, where the poverty and exploitation of the poor farmers has developed the farthest, the class struggle between the well-to-do farmers and small businessmen, on the one hand, and the exploited farmers and proletarian workers on the other hand, has reached the highest degree of tension. The representatives of the well-to-do farmers were ready to accept Ford, the representative of the rich farmers rather than to accept Ford, the candidate of the workers. They were ready even to combine with the political influence of the fakers of the labor aristocracy and accepted the direct leadership of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the leadership of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. But even these transitional stages are disappearing. We do not call themselves farmers any more, but peasants, who express the struggle against proletarian property, even these farmers possess illusions, and they nominated La Follette for the presidency.

It is no chaos; we see before us, rather, transitional stages of strong, elementary class struggle.

If we have grasped that clearly, then the tasks before our party are clear.

No Opportunism and No Sectarianism.

1. We must realize that our chief enemy is the capitalist government and the political parties of imperialism. We must understand the revolutionary significance of the political upheaval of all the lower classes of American society against the ruling imperialistic capital. Our first task is therefore to throw into the scales the solid forces of this revolutionary process against capitalism. That means that we—regardless of how little we may like it—must retain a political alliance with the Third Party movement against the capitalist parties. This political alliance may mean support at elections, it may mean common campaigns for certain issues. It can even go so far as our taking part in the May 30 Convention in St. Paul, which will be, not a pure Farmer-Labor party convention, but a conglomerate of the various Third Party, Farmer-Labor Parties, and rank and file representation of industrial workers and exploited farmers. It would be a very dangerous opportunistic illusion to believe that the May 30th convention, which will meet in St. Paul, will be a representation of the Farmer-Labor Party class movement. The May 30 convention will only represent the transitional stage —in which the Third Party and Farmer-Labor Party movements are still not entirely separate. But it would be just as much a dangerous sectarianism to stay away from this mighty important mass convention, not to make every effort to strengthen as much as possible its proletarian character.

2. It is in the deepest interest of the working class and the American revolution to render the split between the capitalist class and the other classes as wide as possible. It is therefore a paramount Communist task to build up the Federated United front. We must drive the La Follette group to split with the Democrats, with the Workers Party. That is, it is willing to fight in the class struggle on a class basis, but at the same time is willing to accept La Follette, the political leader of the well-to-do farmer and small businessmen. This again is a transitional stage.

New York, Chicago for Party's C. E. C. Labor Party Policy

The District Convention of District No. 2, New York, Workers Party, held Saturday and Sunday, went on record in favor of the Labor Party thesis proposed by the Central Executive Committee of the Party and published in a recent issue of "The Worker." Considerable discussion arose over the attitude of our party towards the Third Party movement. The majority of the convention, however, approved the position held by the C. E. C. on this question. The convention elected ten delegates: Ludwig Lore, Ben Gitlow, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Ben Lifshitz, C. E. Ruthenberg, L. Paivio, Anthony Bimbo, Jack Jampolsky, Alexander Bittelman and Joseph Brahuy. This was the first district convention held in connection with the National Convention of the Party, Dec. 30-Jan. 1.

At the same time the thesis was unanimously approved at a membership meeting held in Chicago, Saturday. Earl Browder reported for the Chicago District Executive Committee. In his report he pointed out that the Chicago District Executive Committee was unanimous in its approval of the thesis proposed by the Central Executive Committee, which according to him, is a splendid document, one of the best ever adopted by the Party. On this point there was no disagreement. The discussion arose over the theoretical question, whether or not a "Labor Party" can ever become a mass Communist Party. The District Executive Committee offered a resolution against such a conception. This resolution was opposed by many comrades on the ground that it was nothing but an academic question which should be raised at all, especially at this stage of the development of the Labor Party movement.

The motion to approve the thesis of the C. E. C. was unanimously accepted. The resolution offered by the District Executive Committee was also adopted by a large majority.

There is no doubt but that with New York and Chicago in favor of the thesis, its adoption at the National Convention stands assured.

British Labor Party Prepares to Take Power

By THOMAS J. O'FLAHERTY.

Prime Minister Baldwin, of Great Britain, contrary to first expectations, has informed the king that his party decided to remain in power until January 8, when parliament meets.

A combined meeting of the Labor Party executives and the Trade Union congress passed a resolution of confidence in J. Ramsay MacDonald and approved the decision of the Labor Party to form a government at the earliest possible moment.

The die-hard Tories are making frantic efforts to form a coalition with the Liberals in an effort to keep the Laborites out of office.

Liberal elements are alleged to have made efforts to come to terms with the Labor Party but so far without success. It is believed, however, that the liberals will support the Labor Party on certain measures, such as the recognition of Soviet Russia, which is likely to be one of the first moves of the Labor Party on assuming the responsibilities of government. This was also one of the planks in the platform of the Labor Party.

According to the latest returns the Labor Party has now 190 representatives in parliament. A feature of the election was the almost entire wiping out of the Lloyd George following. In the so-called United Liberal Party bloc's own paper, supported the Labor candidates. The capitalist press adopted their usual policy of misrepresentation. This was true of the Liberal as well as the Tory organs.

MacDonald, in a statement, makes what is obviously a bid for a split in the ranks of the Liberal Party, with a view to absorbing the radical element into the Labor Party and driving the right wing into the Tory Party, "so as to consolidate political issues into two camps divided on principle."

MacDonald evidently fears that a continuation of the three-party system with representation divided as now, tends to make government along the present lines very difficult. He says, "The question that time and events must soon answer is, have we seen the final breakdown of our existing machinery of government, or I warn people of serious minds and of constitutional proclivities that continuation of a state like that in which we now are may lead to any folly, either from right or left, involving in the end destruction of free representative government."

The British Labor Party will make every attempt to lull to sleep the fears of the capitalist that their present heaven will be eliminated.

That MacDonald may have to battle vigorously to preserve "representative government" from the extreme Tories is suggested in an article written by Lloyd George for the Hearst papers. He says, "The Labor Party are entitled to fair play from the constitution which they are expected to obey. Any attempt at shallow cleverness to 'do labor out of its chance,' would provoke a resentment which would astonish its perpetrators. It would inflict irretrievable hurt on a constitution whose success has depended on the confidence it has always inspired in all classes in its stern and undeviating impartiality."

What has happened in England is an event of the greatest political significance. Conservative though its present leadership is the fact that labor has reached the point where it prepares to take over the task of running the mighty empire is enough to make the old aristocracy of the "tight little isle" shiver with dread. The Labor Party will try to use the machinery of bourgeois democracy to carry out its promises made to the workers. It will try hard to preserve the present system. But it will inevitably fail. British capitalism has seen its best days. It is caught in the advancing tide of evolution and the forms of government which it gradually perfected and which served it so well are now proving useless. Hence Ramsay MacDonald's fears for the future.

There is a Fascisti group in England led by the Morning Post Tory element that has a growing impatience with the House of Commons. The last elections will give this element a good argument to pull off a Mussolini stunt before the British working class arrives at the point where they realise that tinkering with parliamentary government will not suffice; that they must establish their power and hold it by force in order to place themselves in a position to initiate the necessary measures for the transformation of capitalist society into a communist society.

How Not to Make the United Front

By JOHN PEPPER.

The whole policy of our party is based on the thesis adopted by the last convention of the party which will be put to the test upon the manner in which the party carried out the united front policy. One of the most important chapters, and we can add, one of the most instructive, is the history of the united front in Chicago. We can say that the general policies of the party during the last year were an excellent example of how to make the united front, and the example of Chicago is an excellent example of how not to make the united front.

What was the situation in Chicago? The Workers Party in Chicago carried on a hard and successful fight to win a standing for our party in the labor movement. In order to reach this objective it formed a united front with the Fitzpatrick group which is the progressive group of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and at the same time the ruling group of the Farmer-Labor Party. The members of the Workers Party of the Chicago district, thru their trade unions, entered into the Farmer-Labor Party, and formed the left wing of this party.

We believe that it was necessary to establish the united front with the Fitzpatrick group in Chicago, but we also believe that the methods, the manner practised in bringing about this united front were fundamentally wrong.

What are the aims of the united front in general:

1. To organize the resistance of the masses against capitalism.

2. To bring the Communist Party into the masses.

3. Helping the masses to get rid of their reactionary or "progressive" leaders and to help them to a Communist leadership.

We Communists want the united front with the masses who are not as yet Communistic. We are even willing to make the united front with the non-Communist labor leaders, if we cannot approach the masses in any other way. But in connection with this tactic there are two factors which must never be lost sight of:

1. It would be the most dangerous illusion to believe that the reactionary or "progressive" labor leaders will really fight against capitalism and the capitalist government, if the masses do not press them.

2. We must assure our independence under any circumstances. We can never for a moment sacrifice our freedom of criticism.

We must examine the united front as it was carried out by the District Committee of our party in Chicago, and we make the criticism for the following reasons:

1. The united front here in Chicago remained on the surface. It was established only with the Fitzpatrick-Nockels group of leaders, but it was not sufficiently embedded into the depths of the masses of workers.

2. The District Committee of Chicago accepted the leadership of Fitzpatrick as an unquestionable fact and never attempted to assume leadership for the Communists.

3. The District Committee of Chicago abandoned the freedom of criticism of our party.

When the Central Executive Committee of our party criticised the Chicago District Committee of our party, for not emphasising sufficiently the independence of the Workers Party as against the Farmer-Labor Party, they reproved that party had no opportunity, because the Fitzpatrick group voted for amalgamation, Labor Party for amalgamation of Soviet Russia. But the District Committee of Chicago forgot that the Communist Party has something more and more to offer to the workers besides these three slogans. The District Committee forgot that the Workers Party of the Workers Party not only to get adopted by Fitzpatrick paper resolutions for amalgamation and recognition of Soviet Russia, but to force him to fight for those measures. Neither in the measures which they advocated nor in the fight for them was there an essential difference between the Fitzpatrick group and the District Committee of Chicago. When the Central Executive Committee demanded that the District Committee of Chicago, in the May 1st United Front Platform, take up the question of the fight against the Second and Second and a Half International, the District Committee protested against this "untimely" measure.

The Chicago District Committee did not make a single attempt during the last year to criticize the Fitzpatrick group. In the last year the "Voice of Labor," the official organ of the Chicago District Committee had not a single article or remark which contained in any way criticism of the Fitzpatrick group. When in one case the editor wrote a modest and timid criticism, the Chicago District Committee censured him, and forbade any further criticism. And again, and again, after the July 3d convention, when Comrade Dunne wrote a critical article, directed against the Fitzpatrick group, the District Committee of Chicago restrained the editor from publishing the article in the "Voice of Labor."

The Chicago District Committee had too great a faith in the Fitzpatrick group. That was the reason that they did not recognize in time his swing to the right, and his agreement with Gompers. And after the July 3d convention the policy of the Chicago District Committee made it possible for the Fitzpatrick group to go farther and farther to the right, without any danger to itself of being attacked by the Communists. The Chicago District Committee made the "over-cautious" decision after the July 3d convention that it would not bring up the question of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party at all, in those trade unions in Chicago, which form the backbone of Fitzpatrick's Farmer-Labor Party. The District Committee did not make any attempt to counteract Fitzpatrick's double screaming role in the July 3d convention, at the meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor at which the question of electing delegates to Fitzpatrick's Farmer-Labor Party was brought up. The District Committee did not hold any mass meeting of the party after the July 3d convention for the Federation of Labor at which the question the instructions of the Central Executive Committee. (Only the Trade Union Educational League held some meetings.)

The attempt on Foster's life was not utilized in Chicago against the labor bureaucracy, and despite instructions of the Central Executive Committee, the District Committee of Chicago arranged no mass meeting on that issue, whereas in New York there was a mass meeting of 7,000 workers. The District Committee of Chicago tolerated the unanimous election of Fitzpatrick, Nockels and Nelson in the Chicago Federation of Labor, without a single Communist speech, or a single criticism being uttered against them. And that was after the Decatur convention, after Fitzpatrick's and Nockel's open letter against amalgamation, against the Trade Union Educational League, and for Gompers, after the slanderous statement by Nockels that Foster himself had staged the attempt on his life—after the most vicious attack by Nelson at the Decatur convention against the Trade Union Educational League, amalgamation, Labor Party, and Communism. The Chicago District Committee claims that they were too weak to put up opposition candidates against Fitzpatrick and Company. But they surely cannot pretend that they were too weak to make a public statement against the Fitzpatrick group on the day of the elections or to make a vigorous attack against them—to expose their swing to the right, their betrayal of the idea of the Labor Party, amalgamation, recognition of Soviet Russia.

The Chicago District Committee has not understood the united front, and has applied it erroneously. Instead of helping the masses to get rid of the leadership of the reactionary or "progressive" leadership of Nelson, Nockels, Fitzpatrick, they appeared in the eyes of the masses as the helpers of the Fitzpatrick group, and thereby strenghtened the rule of the Fitzpatrick group.

It was our task to criticize the wrong attitude of the Chicago District Committee frankly and in a friendly manner. This criticism does not aim to bring into doubt their Communist integrity. The source of their bad tactic is not a lack of Communism, but a lack of political experience.

"So They've Got YOU Reading!"

During the imprisonment of the comrades arrested in the Michigan raids an incident happened that ought to fasten itself on the minds of our readers. One of the prisoners, a prize-fighter, was loaned a copy of Eugene O'Neill's "Hairy Ape." As soon as the department of justice representative spotted the prize-fighter reading, he yelled out, "So they've got YOU reading." The prize-fighter was removed to another section of the jail far from the influence of the imprisoned comrades. Why?

When war was declared in April, 1917, the first step of the government was to suppress all radical papers. There was a reason for it. Although there were an overwhelming large number of capitalist papers, whose circulation ran into millions, as compared with the radical press, the government went after even such avowedly conservative papers as the Milwaukee Leader. The employing class were not going to allow one particle of truth to filter out if they could avoid it.

Despite governments and their reactionary officials, the masses do know more today than they did yesterday. They continue to read—but not as rapidly as we would like them. The reason why the masses do not read as much as they should is more or less the fault of ourselves. We keep up with the times, at least we endeavor to create the impression that we do, but we do not attempt to have the masses follow suit. The capitalist press assists the United Mine Workers officialdom in its broadcasting of lying statements about Moscow and the Communist movement in America. How much have you assisted in the work of combatting the foul attacks of Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers Journal? How many, for instance, copies of the Decisions of the Red International have you circulated among miners? For one dollar you can obtain ten copies. Just imagine what you can do with a dollar. Skip the movies for about three night and help spread the truth among the miners. Just try this—if only for once.

Comrades in close proximity to the National Office will be wondering what to buy their kiddies for Xmas. A talking doll costs you about $2.50. Who in the h— wants to buy a talking doll? Not you. You are going to buy a copy of Rhymes of Early Jungle Folk by Mary Marcey. Even a respectable bourgeois family in Winetka thinks that this book is a wonderful book, because of its simplicity. Of course they fail to realize what a foundation they are laying in their child's mind. Anyhow, no Xmas present will equal it. Xmas presents live for a day, but this book lives in the mind forever.

"Deportations Delirium of Nineteen-Twenty," by Louis F. Post, is giving Mr. Palmer, ex-Attorney-General, and his "rites" belly and head aches. The book suggests the changing of the name of the "Department of Justice" to the "Department of Injustice." $1.50, postage prepaid.

"A Week," by Jury Libedinsky, the first novel under the Soviet regime, is another interesting book, which will have a circulation of a million. $1.50 to any address in U. S. A. Watch the announcement about "Bunk," it is something real.

Minneapolis Heard From.

Comrade O. J. Arnes, litterature director in Minneapolis, Minn., reports the following plan of action:

Our immediate plan in the rough is as follows:

(1) To work out a mailing list of workers who may be susceptible to education and who may also prove to become prospective members of the Party. This list will be classified alphabetically and geographically so that it will serve two purposes, that of locating these workers for personal interviews and for general circularizing. A similar list of comrades will be made up in order to bring their location into close proximity with the prospects.

(2) One or more literature squads will be developed for the purpose of covering meetings, unions, and street sales.

(3) Plans will be worked out to handle literature here in the hall during the day and evening, if practicable, and this fact will be advertised in communications out to workers, and at meetings.

(4) An immediate campaign will be put on to secure subscriptions for the Daily Worker as well as renewals. Comrades, branches, and sympathizers will be enlisted to success."

to carry this undertaking through

The Literature Department expects other party units to send in reports what is being done and contemplated. Do it now!

Change Minds on "Fifth Year."

After a committee of three members, representing the American Legion of Morgantown, W. Va., saw a special showing of the Russian relief film "The Fifth Year," the local post withdrew its open opposition to the film, according to advices to the American Civil Liberties Union from its local attorney, C. C. Rose. Two performances took place, as scheduled, without any disturbance.

When the picture was first announced in Morgantown, the county prosecutor, acting at the instance of the Legion, took steps to prevent its showing on the ground that it was "Soviet propaganda." A suggestion made by the local sponsors of the picture for a special "censorship" performance was accepted.

According to the Friends of Soviet Russia, which is distributing the film, opposition to "The Fifth Year" has been withdrawn wherever the opponents consented to seeing it. The American Civil Liberties Union has been protesting against interference with the picture on the ground that an issue of civil rights is involved.

Johnston-Jewell Outfit Told Labor Party Is Coming

Without raising a ripple of attention, the Illinois Conference for Progressive Political Action met and adjourned, Sunday, in Chicago.

Half a dozen rank and file delegates, among a hundred officials, found little opportunity to voice their demands.

The statement of principles adopted was the old familiar declaration to work within the old parties; first laid out by the Cleveland gathering of the conference.

Delegate George Maurer, Chicago, moved an amendment calling for independent political action and the organization of an all-inclusive Labor Party. He drew attention to the growing sentiment for this demand, crystallized in the National Farmer-Labor Convention called for St. Paul, Minn., May 30.

Bert M. Jewell, president of the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor, turned his best guns on the Maurer proposal, which was then promptly tabled.

Delegate I. W. Madoux, Local 2167, Maintenance of Way Employees, Litchfield, Ill., introduced a resolution for a "Labor Party," but this never came up for consideration. In fact, the gathering considered no resolutions of any nature.

Oscar Ameringer, editor of the Illinois Miner and the Oklahoma Leader, tried to put a little pep into the gathering. But he only succeeded in thoroly discrediting the policies of the conference by telling of the experiences with the now former Governor Jack Walton, of Oklahoma, elected by the workers and farmers on the democratic ticket, but who later sold out to the Standard Oil Company, the Royal Dutch Shell Oil outfit, also joining the Ku Klux Klan. Ameringer declared the conference would "eventually" be compelled to adopt the propositions advanced by Delegates Maurer and Madoux.

The gathering adjourned with William H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists, reading a list and claiming credit for the election of every "progressive" in congress, including Senators Johnson and Shipstead, the Farmer-Laborites in Minnesota. He didn't say that his conference had unsuccessfully fought independent political action in Minnesota. There were no delegates of the coal miners or dirt farmers of the state at the gathering.

"Another Revolution Necessary?"

(From "The Nation," Dec. 5, 1923.)

A well-confessed Russian aristocrat sailed into New York the other day without a murmur. I suppose that you and no trouble from the immigration officials. He was Prince Youssoeff, and if he did not have a valid passport he had a slip of paper which, he said, was a diplomatic pass dating from the good old days of the Czar. As the Berengaria steamed down the harbor the prince would look across at the Statue of Liberty on Ellis Island. He probably did not know that several hundred compatriots of his were locked up in one room on that island waiting for Washington to decide whether they might be admitted to the United States, which has no quarantine facilities and without screens, for weeks. But then, they were third-class passengers, peasant women and Jews, and he was a prince, and, if a monarchist, also a good counter-revolutionary. If Patrick Henry and John Adams and Thomas Jefferson were alive to see that contrast in the republic they helped found, they might think another revolution necessary.

The Reorganization of the Party

"The Worker" has received a copy of a "Thesis on Reorganization of the Workers Party on the Basis of Industrial Branches," proposed by Comrades Joseph Zack and Jack Zamparelli, of New York City. This thesis has been sent to the party press with the request to publish it. As it contains upwards of 8,000 words, it is manifestly impossible to publish it in full. "The Worker," therefore, gives space to its most important sections, as follows:

A. The class struggle, political and economic, acquires its bitterest manifestation where the exploitation of the proletariat day by day actually takes place—that is in the industries.

It is there where the worker first becomes even primitively conscious of his class interests and joins a class organization, the union; and there is also the basis of his class power, political and economic. It is there that our party branches should be organized and made to function.

Territorial Branches Useless.

These things are to most of us self-evident. But our party is not built on that basis; our membership, altho composed of at least 90 per cent of industrial workers, is not organized on a basis that would make them effective in the industries. Our party, on the contrary, is organized on the basis of territorial branches as if agitation, at random, to the nondescript and unorganized passerby in the street, would be our most important and effective form of reaching the masses and getting them to act.

Proposed Plan of Reorganization.

B. In order to reorganize our party on a basis that will put it into actual organizational contact with the masses, with their daily problems and struggles and to permit it to grow into a mass movement, and a party that can absorb readily the energies of these workers desiring action and results, we propose the following:

1. Reorganization of the party on the basis of industrial branches, the industrial branches to consist of all members working in one and the same industry, irrespective of whether at that time they are members of a union or not.

2. Each of the Language Federations of the party to organize industrial branches in its language beginning with those industries where its membership is most heavily represented.

3. Simultaneously with the reorganization of the federation machinery, the general party machinery will proceed with co-ordinating the various language industrial branches in each industry and locality.

4. The organization of the industrial branches to be GRADUAL, of course, the territorial branches remaining side by side with the industrial.

5. The territorial branches thru the transfer of members into the industrial branches will be reduced in size and number, but will still remain functioning with those party members who have not been or cannot be organized into industrial branches.

6. For political campaigns, the territorial branches, the industrial branches, the labor and fraternal working class organizations in any one particular election territory should form a committee.

7. The Central Executive Committee of the party to send out an appeal to all organized militant unions and unorganized militant to join the party and form industrial branches of their particular industry.

What About These Members Who Cannot Go Into Industrial Branches?

As already pointed out in No. 2 of our proposal, the industrial branches will be formed of all members engaged in one particular industry, irrespective of whether they are union members or not. It will be the task of the industrial branch to get them into a union or to organize new local unions where none exist. This will leave only a small percentage of our membership outside the industrial branches. The students, professionals, engineers, dentists, doctors, etc., what will they do?

There is no reason why Communist students cannot develop a broad activity among the student youth. The fact that the future of most of these students lies in the big army of white collar slaves, amongst the lowest paid workers in the country, should make approach possible and comparatively easy. Many of our intelligentsia should go into the educational machinery of the party. Professional associations of the engineers, etc., are the place for our professionals to get into, and where no organization exists, one should be organized. The Lawyers' Federations.

It has been claimed that reorganization into industrial branches would isolate or abolish the language federations. On the contrary it would strengthen their influence upon the workers of a given language in industry. A federation organized on an industrial basis would face to deal with the problems of these workers in the industries right here in the United States, where they are exploited, instead of diverting their interest to their mother country.

The federation branches would function just as any party industrial branch, transact their business, agitation, press, etc., in their own language as before.

Of course, the forces of the federations will most probably thru this form of activity be forced to learn the English language sooner than under present conditions, but until the proletarians of their language become more English speaking, language federations will remain an indispensable necessity for the party as at present.

There is no possible argument that can be advanced to show why the federations by reorganizing their machinery into industrial branches and establishing effective contact with the masses of the foreign workers in the industries should not benefit even more than the rest of the party, considering that most of their workers are more receptive to our aims and most federations have a daily press at their disposal.

The fact that our federation members are as a rule not citizens and do not speak the language of the country and are accordingly excluded from the parliamentary election campaigns as voters otherwise, makes the industrial formation practically the only means by which to get them out of their nationalistic isolation and have them become the factor in the labor movement that their numbers warrant.

Foreign Comrades Concentrated in Few Industries.

B. Industrial federation branches are not only highly desirable but also practical, in spite of the fact that it may appear at first consideration that the membership of a federation is so scattered over so many industries that usually there are not enough in any one industry for effective organization. The actual facts are that in certain industries, as the mines of coal, steel, textile, oil, almost the entire membership of the various party branches in these areas are composed of workers in these industries. Even a casual survey of the memberships of the federations will show that the bulk of the membership of any one of them is engaged in two or three industries. Even where the bulk of the membership is working in one industry, for instance the Jewish Fur Workers, the Jewish Building Trades, the Finnish in the Building Trades, Germans in the Food and Building Trades, etc.

The federations need only to concentrate to begin with, upon those industries in which the bulk of their membership is employed in order to make this plan operative and be soon as their membership increases where there is not enough, proceed to organize the smaller groups.

Co-ordination of Language Industrial Branches.

C. A further objection is made that there being so many languages, the industrial branch cannot function. All the branches of all languages in one industry must, of course, work in very close harmony as their problems in that particular industry are the same, the only difference is their language. That problem, however, is solved as well as it can be, by organizing each language industrial group separately.

Co-ordination of the various language industrial branches is effected thru the formation of a local executive committee of all branches in that particular industry. This committee will unify the work of all members, no matter what language, in each industry. In smaller towns the problem will most probably be simpler, the groups being smaller.

The reorganization will leave the general apparatus, District Committees, Federation Bureaus, City Central Committees, Section Committees (where they exist) practically untouched. These general directive organs will function the same as they do at present, but with additional strenth and support of the industrial branches.

Syndicalism.

If political class consciousness would depend on the form of organization that a worker happens to be in, there would never be a chance for such a thing as a Labor Party. How could we ever expect to win great numbers of members from among the left trade unionists? Did not a large number of active I. W. W. members join us, in the last three years. Political consciousness does not depend on the form or organization but on the necessities of the class struggle.

The Syndicalists were wrong by entirely ignoring the political field but their activities were of greater revolutionary patent and value than those of the Socialist Party, whose main political activity consists of parliamentary action.

The Communists combine with the proper emphasis an evaluation these two fields of activity, laying the greater emphasis upon direct work among the masses in the industries within their economic organizations. The fact that the large European parties are developing this plan of party organization, and that the Communist International favors this development only confirms our contention that this is the logical development out of the Social Democrat parliamentary form of organization into a form suitable to the Communist aims and needs.

Territorial Branches Encourage Syndicalism.

The fact that active workers do not meet in the present party branches with those who have the same problems to face, discourages them from attending branch meetings at all. How many of our most active militant trade unionists do not attend party branch meetings? The most valuable elements thus become lost to us from activity along political lines. They become engrossed and enveloped in the problems of their own trade union. They develop a contempt for "Politics" or political action and ultimately become opponents.

Importance of Political Action.

If there is danger of non-political tendencies among the left elements this form of organization will do much to counteract this danger. The Communist influence among them and closely associating the political work with the industrial in their every day work. At present this is not the case, and with the growth of the T. U. E. L. there may arise the pure and simple trade unionist tendency on the part of those not thoroly class conscious. A strengthening of the party's machinery on the industrial field will be an effective means to lessen that danger.

Shop Nuclei.

To reorganize the party on the basis of Shop Nuclei is nothing short of Utopia at the present time, first of all because our party is far too small numerically. The number of plants or shops with enough members to form a permanent group would be ridiculously small, and considerable working conditions that prevail in most of the unorganized industries, the places of work are changed too frequently.

Even under the most favorable conditions the shop nuclei would have to be supplemental to our general industrial work and would have to work hand in hand, in harmony, with our union activities. If shop nuclei could be effectively formed in the shops and to function properly, they would have to be formed by and be a part of our industrial branches. The territorial branches can neither organize nor effectively direct their activities as far as necessarity out of contact with the actual needs and problems in each particular industry.

Shop Nuclei organization cannot be made virile and live by and for the sake of our occasional party leaflet distribution. Most of our members in unorganized industries would not risk their jobs for such trifles, and even the industrial branches would find it advantageous at this stage of the game in the United States to organize shop nuclei only in preparation to a unionization campaign in the industry, in which case they would appeal, organize and get the support of all those who wish to set up a union to protect their bread and butter. Secret or semi-secret trade union nuclei would then have plenty to do. They would be the framework and preparation for a big drive to organize the workers against the bosses, effective centralized nuclei work in the industries can be done only by the industrial branch.

Industrial branches would undoubtedly protect the party organization very effectively against destruction, as the members of the branch, knowing each other, could connect easily within the unions, around the factories during shop hour; their headquarters being the union and the factory district. The purpose and aims of the reorganization, however, should be a much larger one. If the reorganization is limited only to the nuclei it will only affect a very small portion of the membership.

In Conclusion.

We are rather inclined to think that the Central Executive Committee has not looked into the matter seriously, but has simply used a popular phrase, hoping that the convention will shed light upon the subject and work out a plan.

The greatest opposition to this plan will undoubtedly come from those active members and leaders (especially in the federations) who do not see where they would fit in if the party should be reorganized on this basis. They have adopted certain habits and methods in their party work for many years and may look upon this plan as designated to upset most of their old ways and ideas. They look with suspicion upon innovations, and may seek to prevent the adoption of this plan. But industrial branches will come and these comrades will have to adapt their abilities to the new needs and we know they can and will do it easily enough if they have to. We will not be satisfied with a pious resolution endorsing this plan in principle at the convention. Knowing that many comrades are with us, and that the tendencies in the movement, internationally and nationally, are with us, we will fight and agitate for this plan inside the party until it is put into effect.

Shop Nuclei not Entirely Question of Organization or Re-organization

By HARRY GANNES.

It is a grave mistake if the question of reorganizing the Workers Party to a more industrial form of organization is considered only in the light of a change in organizing procedure. To change the form of our organization involves a profound political change within our organization.

A shop nuclei cannot exist simply on the basis that our branches now transform themselves into shop nuclei. To do so would be to make a farce in a well-organized model. In reality drawn into the realities of the struggle.

Hence it is that a change in the structure in the shop basis involves a change in the entire activities of the party.

In our territorial or language branches we are artificially drawn away from the center of the struggle, the work shop, and it requires a great amount of effort to get our comrades to function on this basis. Where there is no organized plan of active agitation of the party policies and program within the shops, and if we ever are to function as a mass Communist organization, it is unquestionably our task to win the support of the workers on the job.

The question of organization and re-organization on the shop nuclei or industrial branch basis is not an ever-night matter. It requires, first of all, a thoroughly organized body that

"All Very Good, But--"

The Workers Party has demanded the proposed investigation of the American Communist movement. It is not opposed to a congressional probe of its activities. This has been stressed in the numerous mass meetings held over the country, addressed by Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Engdahl and others.

It is taken for granted that the supreme statesmen would listen with pained patience to the Communist discussion of economic conditions thruout the country, to the Communist explanation of the great struggles between the workers and the farmers on the one hand, and the capitalists on the other, and the part played by the government in these struggles.

About this time in the investigation, however, one of the most irritable among the congressional investigators, would break in with the remark:

"That's all very good, but how about the force and violence you are going to use to establish the Proletarian Dictatorship?"

And even to that question the Communists would have their answer. The Communist Investigating Committee of the United States Senate would be told that during the four years that there has been an organized Communist movement in the United States, not a single Communist has been charged with, tried or convicted for committing an act of violence.

What Communists have been convicted of, imprisoned and deported for, is daring to state a historical fact. If the gentlemen of the United States want to know what that historical fact is, we would ask them to study the history of the United States.

When the northern manufacturers elected Abraham Lincoln, in 1860, the Southern slaveholders, whose economic interests were threatened, resorted to force and violence; they organized an armed insurrection to protect their economic interests.

If the great sages in the lawmaking industry at Washington, D. C., can assure the Communists, when the workers and their allies, the farmers, establish their rule in the United States and proceed to take from Mr. Morgan his railroads, and from Mr. Gary his steel mills, and from Mr. Rockefeller his oil wells, and from all other capitalists the mines, mills and factories they own, that they will give them up for use by the great majority which the workers' and farmers' government will represent, without resorting to force and violence, then there will be no reason for force and violence.

If, however, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Gary, Mr. Rockefeller and the other capitalists do what the Southern cotton planters did in 1861, the government of the workers and farmers will do what Lincoln did, use its Red Army to put down the rebellion.

And that's that!

Keep Up the Fight!

Five years after the ending of the world war, Washington has released 30 members of the Industrial Workers of the World, the last of the wartime prisoners. The liberation order issued by President Coolidge will not atone one whit for the brutalities heaped upon these class war prisoners, during the years of their arrest, conviction and imprisonment, and for the attacks upon the organizations to which they belonged.

Hundreds of class war victims sent to prison since the war still remain behind the bars. They are suffering under the lash of insufferable state anti-syndicalist laws, while congress, now in session, is considering the passage of a national anti-syndicalist law, an attack against all organized labor.

Labor's fight for its very existence is just as intense as ever. Labor's enemies are more active now than ever.

All labor must join in raising the demand for the liberation of all class war prisoners. Release the victims of the state anti-syndicalist laws. Release Mooney and Billings! Release Ford and Suhr! Empty the capitalist bastiles of California. Release Dolla, the victim of the steel barons in Pennsylvania! Release Sacco and Vanzetti, the victims of the textile kaisers of the New England states! Release Blankenstein, the victim of the Pittsburgh steel and coal czardom! The growing demand of the workers upon the capitalists and their government should be—I RELEASE THEM ALL!

If you are with us then join the Workers Party!

The Successful Business Man

Leo Koretz has disappeared. The Hearst press now refers to him as "Chicago's $5,000,000 Panama Oil Swindler." The police are on his trail. It is said he will be indicted, even in his absence, by a grand jury.

While Koretz was able to continue his "successful business man" pose, he had many friends. He had an entree to the best society. The dollar sign upon him was applauded everywhere.

But Koretz committed an unforgivable crime under capitalism. He failed to keep up his front. It dropped from him and he was revealed, for what every big business man really is, a plain swindler.

Koretz had no scruples. He took even the money of his own mother and brothers, even the savings of his own stenographer. The ladder to riches that he held up was crowded. But the ladder has fallen and the climbers are in a heap.

The pack is now yelling after Koretz, losing sight entirely of the rotten social system that makes these things possible. Loud lamentations among victims and in the kept press follow on this defeated hunt for dollars. The stories of Ponzi and Wallingford are told again. Yet Koretz only got away with $5,000,000.

The U. S. Steel Corporation took more than that in profits every week of the world war. John D. Rockefeller and Henry Ford milk the oil and automobile industries for that amount every few days. But Ponzi, Schrab, Rockefeller and Ford are big enough and powerful enough to keep up their robbery. Koretz was just a black-leg in the big business game. He'll go to prison of they catch him. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will continue to teach his Sunday School class on fashionable Fifth Avenue in New York City. Ford will continue to be boosted for the presidency.

January 13, 1924

New dates are being marked red on the calendar of time. The month of November stands out from the other twelve, including the days in which Soviet Rule triumphed in Russia. This coming month of January will live in history because it carries the anniversary of the martyrdom of Liebknecht and Luxemburg in the heroic struggle of the German workers for power. But there will also be another red letter day for this first month of the year. "January 13, 1924" has been definitely set as the date for the appearance of the initial issue of the first English-language Communist daily in the world, "The Daily Worker," to be published in Chicago.

The energy and enthusiasm displayed by the party membership and sympathizers, in the raising of the $100,000.00 fund, is now being duplicated in the drive for thousands of subscribers. It is realized on every hand that "The Daily Worker" must start with a loyal army of readers. Those who read "The Daily" will prove to be the connecting link between the advance guard and the great army of the American working class.

These days, therefore, call for renewed and redoubled activity on the part of every militant worker, everywhere. Complete the $100,000.00 fund! Get readers! Win the support of all the organisations of labor! These are the tasks of the hour—THE NECESSARY TASKS! Forward to their accomplishment!

Christmas Is Coming!

Throngs jam the great department store of Marshall Field & Co., these pre-holiday days, to do their Christmas shopping.

John G. Shedd, chairman of the board of directors of Marshall Field & Co. is not above handing out Christmas gifts. He has given $2,000,000 for an aquarium in Grant Park on the lake front.

At the same time Marshall Field & Co. advertises in the daily press for able-bodied men for $9 per week.

Better be a fish than a worker this Christmas.

The Quality of Capitalist Justice

The Fat Boys Behind the Old Parties

As We See It

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

If the monkeys entertain the prevalent misconception of the Darwinian theory they must feel peeved when ever a detective exhibits his stupidity in the press, and that is whenever he gets a chance. No other professional biped is so fond of publicity. Detectives get by with it simply because newspaper readers consider stupidity and detectives synonomous terms. Whenever a crime is committed, they will always have the culprit "within twenty-four hours," or "they know the whereabouts of the criminal but are holding back until a blond woman who was seen at 3:34 a. m. in a notorious dive gets out of her delirium tremens and confesses so that they will have a complete case." A week or two ago a young watchman was killed. A fellow with a criminal record was arrested and his alleged sweetheart was also taken into custody. The young lady was identified and the journalistic morons who cover murder cases had a figurative noose dangling in front of him. These degenerates gloated over the prospect of describing the last agonized moments of another victim of capitalist law. The girl driven to desperation confessed that she was with this prisoner when he murdered the watchman. It is true that she afterwards denied the statement. We have an idea of the brutal treatment the poor unfortunate suspect underwent in the efforts of the detectives to force a confession from her.

The original suspect may now escape the gallows unless the police feel that they have been cheated out of their legitimate prey and ignore the new development. This case throws a strong light on the methods used by American police to secure evidence and shows how little reliance can be placed on it. Undoubtedly, lawyers often refer to this case in defending their clients against so-called "iron-clad evidence" manufactured by the police. In their desire to make good, and secure promotion, some of these officers have no hesitation in sweating a human life. The "third degree" should be abolished.

The reporters forgot about the case and buried their noses in the next scandal until another police character, caught in a burglary, topped off a recital of criminal acts with a confession that he was the real perpetrator of the killing for which another man was being pushed toward the gallows. His wife was the female identified as the "tiger-woman" or whatever the name the Diamond Dicks called her. Oh, yes: The "Wolf-Woman."

The Importance of Industrial Registrati

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

Industrial registration is one of the most important tasks that confro the Workers Party today. Without complete party registration, kept to date; it will be impossible for our party to function upon an efficient ba and get major results from our activities.

Our experiences have taught us, that with only a limited part of party members really functioning within the trade unions, the results h been so great, that the reactionary Gompers machine has become so hysti cal, that they are persecuting mild progressives as Communists.

Our older and more mature sister parties, such as the Russian and G man parties, have proven conclusively that a Communist party that has developed an industrial basis, is only a communist party in theory and not in fact.

The branch industrial organizers are the root unit from which our party will grow into an efficient communist party, with a sound industrial basis. Upon their shoulders, to a great extent, rests the future growth of the party. The real significance and importance of the work of the industrial organizers, is not yet reen by a majority of our party members, which makes the work of the organizers more difficult.

Industrial registration is considered so important by the C. E. C., that a special department has been created to make this a regular function of the party. Any member who attempts to put stumbling blocks in the way of the registration, or who refuses to register, or to take part in the industrial activities of the party, their right to remain in the party will be seriously questioned.

The responsibility of registration rests upon the branch industrial organiser, this, however does not absolve the branch from their share of responsibility. The branch must enforce the power given to the branch industrial organizers upon every member of the branch. Members who do not attend the meetings, during the period of registration, will be compelled by the branch to either send in their registration card by mail, or to attend the meeting and register. No member will be exempt from registration.

Every member of the party must join the union of his or her trade. There are few instances where this is difficult, and a still fewer instances where it is almost impossible to join the union. All of these cases should be reported to either the City, District or National industrial organizer.

Branch industrial organizers should familiarize themselves with the laws of the various unions on the admittance of new members, initation fees, time and place of meetings, etc. They should stimulate the sale of industrial literature, by forming branch lite-rature committees to sell Labor P ralds etc. at all union meetings.

All members of the party must active in their industrial group U. F. L.) and their union. It is work of the industrial organizer check up on the activities of ev member of the branch, and to rep to the branch any member who not active in their industrial gr or their union. This information industrial organizer will receive f the City or District organizer, w are in close touch with the indust group secretaries.

A meeting of all branch indust organizers should be held once month. At this meeting the w can be stimulated by a discussion the problems that they are confron with, and plans laid out to perf the industrial work in the locality.

Where no industrial group (T. F. L.) exists it will be the duty the branch industrial organizer, conjunction with the City organi to form one. Trade industrial grou must be formed in the same manner. Each industrial organizer will ceive a list of the various Natio Industrial Group Secretaries, and list of the Industrial papers that a being published.

The importance of the work t the branch industrial organizers cannot be overestimat They are really digging the foun tion upon which the party will builded. The work of the natio district and city organizers dep upon the energy and efficiency of branch industrial organizers.

The work of the branch indust organizers will demand time, w industrial registration and indust activities of all members of our pa will be considered as an essential recognized fact. Then the ene time and ability that is now be used to educate our members to the necessity of this work, can utilized to further advantage amo the non-Communist workers.

Big Business Counts on Coolidge to Protect Its Interest

By JAY LOVESTONE.

Now that Congress is in session, the Big Business interests have decided that the best policy for them to pursue is to sit tight and leave it to Coolidge. The employers and financiers are not very much concerned over the outcome of the Sixty-Eighth Congress.

It is true that there have been congresses in the past which were more to their liking than the present one. Yet there are certain redeeming features about this congress in legislating "dangerous" laws against the railroads, banks and manufacturing interests because the most powerful committees were securely in the hands of loyal and trusted servants of the ruling class. As an example, there was cited the fact that Senator Reed Smoot of Utah was chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. This committee is the one that deals with such vital questions as tariff and taxation.

Bringing home his point, Mr. John Callan O'Laughlin, for ten years Washington correspondent of the "Chicago Daily Tribune" and former assistant secretary of state, put this question and gave this clear-cut answer to himself: "Has Big Business confidence in Smoot? I should say it has." This is frank talk, but the employers engage only in frank talk when members of their own class are in their audience. Shedding more light on this phase of the organization of Congress, Mr. O'Laughlin made the further point that: "The chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, which will consider the same subjects as the Finance Committee, will be William R. Green, of Iowa, who is a Connecticut Yankee emigrant, and he is not in tune with Brookhart." This former assistant secretary of state, who knows his business of serving the capitalist interests thru years of experience, clinches his case by admitting that "such stalwarts as George P. McLean, of Connecticut, and Lewis T. McFadden, of Pennsylvania, will be chairmen of the Banking and Currency Committees of the two Houses."

Democrats Are Harmless.

As to the Democrats, the biggest bankers and manufacturers aren't at all disturbed. Wall Street has not lost any sleep because of "dangerous" measures that the Democratic legislators might propose. There is no one who knows better than the agents of Lower Broadway that the Democrats, even if they could gain control on their past completely, are in a most uncomfortable position in the next session.

Despite the ardent desire of the Democratic members to harass the Republican machine, it is next to impossible that the policy of the Democratic party will be to line up with the Republican insurgents. For the reactionary Democrats to line up with the progressives would in some ways be tantamount to suicide. Effective co-operation between the Democrats and insurgents can be secured only thru an arrangement as to the election of committee members in both houses. No one in Wall Street seriously expects the Southern Democrats and their allies from the industrial centers of the East to take any steps to elect progressives to committees. By doing so the Republican insurgents "would remain to plague them should they (the Democrats) attain control next November."

What is more, seniority or no seniority, precedent or no precedent, it is certain that even if the Democrats would yield to such desperate policies the reactionary Republicans would go them one worse in order to maintain undisputed control of the strategic committees in the House and Senate. This was made clear the other day in a front page editorial in the "Wall Street Journal." Discussing the congressional outlook, this oracle of American finance declared: "The Senate will meet again next week from now, and one of the first questions which should come before it is the acceptance of La Follette as a ranking member of any committee. Let the Republican leaders take their courage in both hands and throw him off the Interstate Commerce Committee. They have no need to be deceived by labels, if the voter has so far been unable to help himself. Their present and urgent business is to justify their own labels." Here we have it: The pith of the decision of the High Command of our Big Business interests is this: Democracy to the winds! Precedent be damned! All must yield to "urgent business!"

"In Coolidge We Trust."

The slogan of the capitalists is: "In Coolidge We Trust." The employers know that Coolidge can be counted upon to deliver the goods. Coolidge is a politician who knows the game, every phase of the game, from practical politics to White House manipulations. Coolidge has been thru the toughest alleys and the most crooked byways of ward, municipal, state, and national politics.

Wall Street is glad that Coolidge doesn't talk much. Big Business doesn't live on talk. One of the political seers of our banking clique recently remind readers of his views at a banquet of financial wizards when he said that the best thing he knew about Coolidge was: "That he (the President) was a good listener."

And this capitalist prophet was right. Coolidge is the only politician who has his ears to the ground, but he is a capitalist statesman whose mind and ears are bent on the future of his class. Coolidge has listened and listened loyally to the demands of the owning class. Since his ascendancy to the presidency, Mr. Coolidge has appointed the reactionary lame duck ex-Senator Kellogg, of Minnesota, to be ambassador plenipotentiary to the Court of St. James —the messenger boy of J. P. Morgan and the errand boy transmitting decisions and agreements between Downing Street in London and Wall Street in New York. Silent Cal Coolidge has also shown his genuine interest in the welfare of the suffering farmers by appointing the well-known banker, Eugene Meyer, and the re-mudiated ex-Congressman Mondell, of Wyoming, to investigate farming conditions.

But the worst came the other day. Everybody knows that the Railroad Labor Board is packed with strike-breakers. Yet Coolidge turned around and appointed the discarded ex-Governor Edwin P. Morrow, of Kentucky, to take the place of Mr. Barton on the Railroad Labor Board. This Mr. Morrow, while Governor, did his best to crush the striking steel workers of Newport. Mr. Morrow, while Governor, sent tanks, and soldiers armed with machine guns to shoot down the striking steel workers who were fighting for the right to organize. So high-handed and treacherous was the conduct of Mr. Morrow that Congressman Walter Y. Thomas, of Kentucky, was compelled to send a telegram to Harding protesting against Governor Morrow's using soldiers to shoot down working people in his state. Incidentally it is interesting to recall that Mr. Morrow was the one chosen by the reactionary Republican machine to notify Coolidge of his nomination to the vice-presidency by the Republican convention in 1920.

Capitalists Count on Coolidge.

Summing up the expectations of the employing class from the Administration in the coming months, magazine of Wall Street proudly announced that "it (the Administration) will resist radical and destructive moves against Big Business and industry: Until the political clouds fade away, and the economic clouds grow more black—the Coolidge Administration is not going to perform any major operation upon you; if the result in Congress after minor operations upon the body politic, the White House is ready to apply an effective New England, Coolidge, anaesthetic. Finally, the whole issue is presented even more honestly and boldly in the magazine of the United States Chamber of Commerce: "There is formidable redoubt in the White House, commanded by Calvin Coolidge, by the grace of God, and directly of the American people. President of the United States. Mr. Coolidge's occupation of great office he holds, he has obtained the confidence of Business, not his acts, but by his lack of action and his eloquent silences. To be sure, profit and business is essentially neither that business be industry, agriculture, professional or commercial. . . . He sees, as the alternative of private ownership and control of his businesses and control broadly extended he finds this Communism."

Workers Party Charges Coolidge Administration Faked Letter Used in Anti-Recognition Campaign

The Workers Party, in a statement issued from its national office in Chicago, charges that the Coolidge Administration faked the letter issued by Secretary of State Hughes in his campaign against the recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic.

The letter, supposed to have been instructions from Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, to the Workers Party of America, is denounced as a vicious frame-up. The Workers Party demands an investigation of the origin of this letter and calls upon the progressive members of the senate and house of representatives to continue their fight for Soviet recognition.

The statement issued by the Workers Party in full is as follows:

Secretary of State Hughes is seeking to victimize the whole country with a vicious frame-up.

The Secretary of State has had published a letter supposed to have been sent by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, to the Workers Party of America.

The letter, from the first word to the last, is a falsification.

The Workers Party declares that it has never received such a letter. It asserts that no such letter was ever written by the Communist International.

The frame-up of the Secretary of State sets forth that the Communist International instructs the Workers Party to practice shooting and "sapper" work.

Any one at all acquainted with the position and activities of the Communist International knows that Zinoviev would never send out such foolish and childish instructions. The Communist International knows that there can never be a successful Communist revolution in the United States until the Communists win over the majority of the American working class.

The Communist International proposes, not shooting practice, but trade union practice; not "sapper" work on imaginary drill grounds, but the building of impregnable trenches for the working class on the political field in America.

The only armed shooting groups in this country are the gangmen, hired by the employers' private detective agencies and the Department of Justice to smash the labor and farm organizations. An army of over 6,000 of these highly armed special deputy marshals were mustered by the Department of Justice to break the last railroad strike.

The Communist International never sent out, and never could send out such stupid and assinine instructions. The whole idea was conceived in the brains of madmen. It was spawned by maniacs, who are professional spies, living off fake exposures of an illegal "Red Menace."

We publicly accuse the Department of State and the Department of Justice with having forged this letter to mislead the people of the United States.

We demand an immediate and thorogoing investigation of the origin of this letter, and of those responsible for its circulation.

We assert the Department of Justice and the whole Coolidge administration knows that this letter is an outright forgery. The only reason they can have for stooping to such desperate deeds is that they fear the rising tide among the American people, for the recognition of Soviet Russia.

The Administration knows that the masses of workers and farmers are ever more recognizing that American prosperity depends on the existence of the world market. No sound world market is possible without the complete recognition of the Soviet government.

The Workers Party calls upon every honest worker and farmer, regardless of his political opinions, to help expose this monstrous frame-up. We urge the progressives in Congress not to permit themselves to be stampeded by this reactionary attack.

We call upon the progressive congressmen and senators to demand an investigation of this fradudulent letter, and to continue their fight for the recognition of the Russian Soviet Republic.

Mexican Communists Reply to Slanders of Gompers, Wright & Co.

(Special to "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and his chief press agent, Chester M. Wright, are asked to retract false and criminal statements made against the Mexican Communist Party and its position in the present crisis here. The matter is set forth in a protest adopted by the Communist Party of Mexico, as follows:

"On December 13 the Confederacion Regional Abrera Mexicana gave to the press a telegram from Gompers, Wright and Vargas dated December 11, congratulating the confederation for its support of the present government of Mexico against the reactionary rebellion of Sanchez and Estrada and slandering the Communists by linking their name with the reactionary revolt. The telegram says textually: 'The democratic government presided over by General Obregon and which powerful reactionary groups are trying to overthrow, aided by the extremist group, typical of bolshevik communism. As a combination this is curious, but not surprising . . .

"It is difficult to believe that Messrs. Gompers, Wright and Vargas are merely misinformed as to the Communist attitude in this revolt. This is possible, but it is at least equally possible, that they are deliberately making use of the Mexican calamity to make anti-Communist propaganda. It seems incredible that Gompers does not know that the Communist Party of Mexico even before the revolt was supporting General Calles as against De La Huerta.

"If he does indeed not know, we inform him now that the first workers' organization to announce publicly its adhesion to the present government in its fight with the reaction in revolt was the Communist Party of Mexico, which public declaration he will find in 'El Mundo' of December 6. We inform him further that all unions under Communist (Bolshevik) influence have already declared their readiness to defend, arms in hand, the gains of ten years of revolution against the new reactionary attempt.

"We inform him further that Communist military units have already been formed and that the government welcomes their aid. If Gompers, Wright and Vargas were misinformed we expect them to retract their slander on Communism and the Communists. If they were not misinformed, we have no words to express our contempt for these men who are willing to use a national calamity as an instrument of their petty anti-Communist propaganda.

Hughes' Fraud Against Soviet Recognition Is Big Boomerang to Enemies of Workers' Rule

By JAY LOVESTONE.

Secretary of State Hughes' false charges against the Soviet Government have proved a boomerang to the enemies of Russian recognition.

The charge made by Hughes that the Soviet government has sent instructions to the Workers Party to organize shooting and "sapper" squads met only ridicule and repudiation the country over.

One would have expected some local, second-class, small town district attorney to resort to such assinine "exposures" at this stage of the Russian-American relations. But the sentiment for Soviet recognition has grown by such leaps and bounds that Secretary of State Hughes, a sworn enemy of Soviet Russia, whose days in the cabinet are numbered, was driven to the lowest depths of desperation.

The latest foul attack on the Workers' and Peasants' Government has only served to intensify the campaign for Russian recognition. Prior to the broadcasting of the Hughes forgery there was only one resolution in the senate by Borah and one in the house by Congressman Frear on the Russian question. Now, at least a dozen resolutions on the problem of resuming relations with the Soviet government have been introduced or are about to be introduced in the senate and house.

Millions of workers and farmers in this country are now in favor of trade relations with and recognition of the Soviet republic. President Coolidge has been forced to deal with this growing demand in his last message.

Instead of holding back this Russian recognition tide the Hughes frame-up, which is one of the most brazen lies in the history of diplomatic bluffs, has only brought chaos and confusion to the camp of the foes of Soviet Russia and given new zeal to the advocates of friendly Russian-American relations.

The Christian Science Monitor, one of the leading papers in the country, pointed out the confusion that has seized the anti-Russian clique in the following statement: "While inspired reports from Washington deny the existence of any difference of opinion between President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes regarding Russia, there is a marked divergence in thought manifested in the expressions of the President, as set forth in his message to Congress, and the views of the Secretary of State as expressed in his letter to George Tchicherin."

Of course the big bankers that have forced Hughes to resort to such unwarranted and unwarrantable assertions may soon lay down the law and every ounce of energy at the disposal of the Administration may soon be put at the disposal of our discredited Secretary of State to save his face. But the progressive congressmen and senators appear to be prepared to go thru the whole Hughes fraud and fiasco.

Senators Norris, Borah and Ladd have already introduced resolutions to this effect. This has caught the reactionaries reeling. The department of justice is promising and threatening to substantiate the charges in exactly the same fashion that it has promised and threatened in the past four years whenever it released other "red scare" detective stories.

But the real panicky feeling of the administration about the plan for a Senate investigation is shown very clearly in the latest Washington despatch to the effect that "Officials of the Department of Justice, including Attorney General Daugherty himself, it is said, are reluctant to press the Hughes charges by further disclosures of alleged activities by the Soviets against the American government.

Cleveland Endorses the C. E. C.

In the most successful district convention held by the Party to date the members of the Cleveland district discussed the agenda of the National Convention and elected delegates.

The following resolution, was presented for consideration and adoption: "That District No. 6, in convention assembled, affirms its confidence in the Central Executive Committee of the Party and approves of its policies."

An interesting and lively debate followed. The report and the resolution were then adopted unanimously by the convention. White, Shafter, Lerner, Severino, and Spaer were elected delegates to the National Convention.

In the Michigan District.

The Michigan District of the Workers Party, Dist. No. 7, voted to send its district organizer, Edgar Owens, and Herman Richter and Joe Finnila, delegates to the Chicago Convention of the Workers Party. The District Convention of the party, held at Detroit, voted unanimously for the Labor Party policy of the party's central executive committee. The industrial report of Delegate William Mollenhauer, after considerable discussion, also received the hearty support of the gathering.

Minister Wants Russia Recognized; Finds Soviet Industry Booming

"The present condition of Russia is one of peace and prosperity. The people are happy and contented. Industry is booming. Russia is a good country to do business with. Russia is strong from the economic standpoint. Russia is ready for trade relations with America."

That is the testimony of Alexander Gregory, Canadian minister to Russia, who has been in Russia for the past two years, and who returned to Canada in August, 1923, according to the Toronto Globe of Sept. 18.

Gregory declares that Russia is "the greatest undeveloped country in the world." He says that Russia is now "in the throes of a great industrial revival" and that "the country is full of engineers and industrial experts from all parts of the world."

Gregory's testimony is the more significant because he is not a friend of the Soviet government. He is a conservative who has been in Russia as the representative of the Canadian government. He is not a Communist. He is not a sympathizer with the Soviet government. He is not a radical. He is not a liberal. He is not a socialist. He is not a labor man. He is not a friend of the workers. He is not a friend of the peasants. He is not a friend of the Russian people. He is not a friend of the Soviet government.

He is a conservative, a capitalist, a friend of the capitalist class, a representative of the capitalist class, a friend of the capitalist government of Canada, a friend of the capitalist government of Great Britain, a friend of the capitalist government of the United States, a friend of the capitalist class of the United States, a friend of the capitalist class of Great Britain, a friend of the capitalist class of Canada, a friend of the capitalist class of the world.

Gregory is a friend of the capitalist class of the world because he is a capitalist himself. He is a capitalist because he is a member of the capitalist class. He is a member of the capitalist class because he is

Outlook Is Bright for Farmer-Labor May Conference

By JOSEPH MANLEY,
Secretary, Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

Since the great Chicago convention held on July 3d, which formed the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the labor party movement has taken on an entirely new significance. The latest developments thruout the country clearly point to this.

Washington the Farmer-Labor Party at its convention just held united with only three dissenting delegates to endorse the call for a national convention to be held at St. Paul, May 30th, 1924. One hundred and seventeen delegates were present, a majority of them from the Western Progressive Farmers, the rest equally divided between trade unions and branches of the Farmer-Labor Party.

The convention voted to cooperate with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, tho it had previously been affiliated with the old Farmer-Labor Party. The farmers got a vast majority of the militant trade unionists here for outright affiliation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. However, to prevent the faintest possibility of misunderstanding and at request of a few of the trade union delegates, the word "co-operate" was used in place of "affiliate," on which motion there were but two dissenting votes.

In Montana, October 23-24, a state farmer-labor party was launched. The statement of principles and program is word for word that of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

The action of the South Dakota Farmer-Labor in unanimously endorsing both the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the call for the St. Paul convention, has already been reported.

These events, and there will be more to follow, all point to the nation character of this movement, its agricultural strength and its type of leadership.

Previous to July 3rd most people looked upon the old Farmer-Labor Party as a national organization. Few realized how woefully it failed to function in this direction. It was because of its failure to function in this manner that the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, the most advanced state party of the country, failed to affiliate. To this day it has remained independent.

Those who live in the big cities of the East, or even the middle west, do not realize the tremendous political force back of the present situation amongst the farmers. How many know in years gone by, that the Socialist movement and the Socialist party itself, drew a principal support and had hundreds of branches containing thousands of farmers, scattered all over these northwestern states. Both the war period and the non-partisan league liquidated the Socialist party branches. The present economic ruin of the farmers is arousing once more this old revolutionary material, consequently we find the bankrupt northwest farmers making a clear cut demand for a class party.

The old Farmer-Labor Party failed because it never grasped the industrial and agricultural economic basis for this class movement. It failed because this is essentially a rank and file movement, and can only be led by those who not alone repudiate but are absolutely fearless of the Gompers' bureaucracy, and have a clear understanding of the bankrupt farmers' problems.

The Federated Farmer-Labor Party, from its inception, has grasped the fundamentals of this class movement. It has gone forth with all too limited resources to help build and give it national expression. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party gladly joins and co-operates with the efforts of the Minnesota group whose vision in this respect is similar. The coming convention, to be called by the Minnesota group, will be a rank and file gathering. It will draw tremendous strength from the bankrupt farmers, local unions and central bodies in revolt against the outworn Gompers' political program.

St. Paul, Minnesota, on May 30th, 1924, will witness another advance of the militant forces toward a great party of workers and farmers, and toward the ultimate goal—a workers' and farmers' government.

Workers of America Don't Be Fooled on Political Prisoners!

The commutation of the sentences of 21 "Federal" political prisoners, resulted from the strenuous "agitation" for AMNESTY for the last six years. This is a belated victory, but the subject of political prisoners is not ended.

The fight for the release of political prisoners will continue, as there are still 150 "State" political prisoners in the jails of Illinois, Mississippi, whose freedom has been abridged on account of opinions they held.

Their opinions are identical to those of the "Federal" political prisoners, namely, "EMANCIPATION OF THE WORKERS." Keep up the Drive for the release of political prisoners. The battle has not been won.

One hundred and fifty men are spending their holidays behind the steel bars—wishing themselves in the arms of those. 31 Federal political prisoners who have been concentrated upon in the "Release the Political Prisoners Drive," (Eric, Labor must go to President Coolidge and inquire what justice there is in "States" abridging constitutional rights of free speech, free press and free assemblage.

Federal political prisoners were nearly 5 years, while there are good many "State" political prisoners who have served from 8 to 12 years—some of them with life sentences.

Women and men, from 17 to 70 years of age—from worker to millionaire—from religious conservatives to radicals, have experienced no discrimination. All have seen the prison dungeons, sacrificed life, some have met death when they dared to use their judgment.

Greetings! Third National Convention, Workers Party

The Third National Convention of the Workers Party meets in Chicago, Dec. 30—Jan. 1, with the past 12 months full of party achievements and a bright future ahead.

The eve of this important gathering finds the Workers Party under attack by the Coolidge administration at Washington, D. C., in what appears to be the opening of an international offensive by world imperialism against the impending recognition of Soviet Russia by an increasing number of capitalist powers.

That they should be compelled to use a framed-up letter, a cheap and silly forgery, is testimony to the complete bankruptcy of the Wall Street politicians in the department of justice and the state department, at Washington, in their war not only on the American Communist movement, but against the First Workers' Republic.

It should be a matter of great pride to all American Communists that they are thus singled out for attack. It is a tribute to the growing strength and influence of American Communism, that challenged American capitalism this past year in the trials of Foster and Ruthenberg, at St. Joseph, Mich., and presses forward to greater victories.

Two great campaigns have been carried on during these months immediately preceding the assembling in Chicago of the nation's Communist spokesmen. The party is driving to success the effort to establish the first English-language Communist daily, "THE DAILY WORKER," and to win 10,000 new converts to its ranks. These efforts have been the dreams of the party's first two conventions. They are pending realizations as the third convention assembles.

At no time, during the two years of its existence, has the party been as unified as now. There is no serious disagreement with the Labor Party policy carried out by the Central Executive Committee, under unanimous instructions from the party's second convention. There may be some difference of opinion on minor interpretations, but the party's broad policy for the winning of the workers and farmers for independent class political action, is today better understood, and is being more enthusiastically carried out than at any time in the past. This insures the growing strength of Communist influence in the American political struggle.

The interest aroused by the question of the party's reorganization also shows that the membership is reaching out in an effort to expand its energies. The territorial form of organization has narrow limits that must be crossed if the party is to really establish itself among the broad masses of the workers. In this there can be no disagreement. Only in the working out of this policy can there be that clash of opinion that always results in the best policies being adopted and ultimately carried out.

It is only during this past year that the party has established definite contact with the workers on the land. Out over the rentertilled wheat belt of the Northwest, the farmers are flocking to the party's ranks, even as in Pittsburgh's industrial czardom. It is only when the industrial workers can rally the farm workers to their standards, that they can build a conquering power against their joint oppressors—the whole capitalist class.

It is, therefore, with unusual enthusiasm that "THE WORKER," on behalf of its tens of thousands of readers, greets the Third National Convention of the Workers Party, the vanguard of the American working class. We are sure that the decisions of the delegates will ably solve the big problems created by the new responsibilities being shouldered by our party. The Communist movement marches ever forward to greater tasks, to greater triumphs.

DO "RADICALS" HAVE BANK ACCOUNTS?

Through The Worker the Humboldt State Bank is asking this question. The Humbolt State Bank is under state and clearing house supervision, the only criticism ever made against it is that "the Humboldt State Bank will not take a chance." No prudent person wants to do business with chance-taking banks, and that is one of the reasons why the Humboldt State Bank is one of the safest banks in the United States. Its directors, Jacob Nilsen, Oliver M. Ulvestad, Chilton C. Collins, Soren T. Coryton and John B. Hessler, are men of integrity and can be trusted. Readers of The Worker will help its advertising department by mentioning this notice when starting accounts at the Humboldt State Bank, North and Fairfield Avenues.—Advt.

The Daily Worker "Sub" Drive

How great the need and the demand for a militant daily labor paper such as THE DAILY WORKER will be, is indicated by the response which has been made in the first week of the drive for subscribers to THE DAILY WORKER. In every part of the country, wherever there are militants, the drive is being carried on and from every part of the country the subscriptions are pouring in. The illusion that Americans don't know a good thing when they see it is being dispelled by the avidity in which they are grasping the opportunity to have a daily paper of their own.

The chief difficulty is going to be in taking care of the many orders for subscriptions. The business office of "The Daily" has made the request that all prospective subscribers send in their subscriptions at once so that they may be entered and the mailing list completed by the time of the first issue.

"In order to be assured of receiving the paper starting with the first issue, subscriptions should be sent in immediately," said Moritz J. Loeb, business manager. "Those who are expecting to secure the paper on news-stands, book stores, etc., will be disappointed, for The Daily Worker will find it impossible to establish connections with these for several months, except in Chicago. In the meantime, non-subscribers will have to do without their paper."

Drive for "Subs" for "The Daily Worker" Is Covering All Chicago

In Chicago the campaign to secure subscriptions for "THE DAILY WORKER" is taking on huge proportions. While several hundreds of party members and sympathizers canvassed house-to-house on the first Communist Sunday, Dec. 16, the turnout on Dec. 23, approached the one thousand number.

Thus unorganized workers, who have been outside the scope of even union propaganda and education, are already being reached with the class message of the workers, weeks in advance of the first issue of "The Daily." "THE DAILY WORKER" is being advertised in every part of Chicago and in many instances subscriptions have been taken.

Trade Unions Being Visited.

If the Communist Sundays have not yet attained a 100 per cent efficiency, it is expected that that mark will be reached on the one to be held Dec. 30.

The work of reaching the Chicago trade unionists has commenced in even a more energetic manner. Every union in Chicago will be visited by a speaker on behalf of "The Daily" before Jan. 18. Starting on Dec. 17, and continuing since that time, from 20 to 25 unions have been visited each night with the result that hundreds of union men have become charter subscribers. If other cities are doing as well as Chicago, "THE DAILY WORKER" will start in business with influence over a great part of the labor movement in America.

A Night in Scotland.

A night in Scotland is what the Progressive Building Trades Worker is presenting to the members of the Workers Party as a change in our musical diet. This is a treat that the members of the party have not had the opportunity to enjoy before. It has been made possible thru a group of over forty Scotch entertainers donating their services for the benefit of the Progressive Building Trades Worker.

The Chicago Highlanders, under the direction of Pipe Major E. S. Sims, will be one of the features of the entertainment. R. S. Sims and many of his band are considered amongst the best pipers in America.

The pupils of the Miss Minnie Dalglish School of Scotch dancing will prove another feature. These pupils, numbering about 25, including children of five years and adults, under the personal direction of Miss Dalglish, will present Scotch group dancing, sword dancing, the Highland fling, Sailor's Hornpipe, Irish jig, etc. These two features will be first-class concert in themselves. There will also be Scotch comedians. Come and have a Scotch night with the Progressive Building Trades Workers.

Here is a regular $1.50 concert for 50c. It will be held in the Wicker Park Hall Feb. 8th, 2040 W. North St.

Yes, Samuel Gompers Had to Listen to BILL DUNNE'S SPEECH

The Portland Convention of the American Federation of Labor

The speech is acknowledged by friends and foes alike as the most complete and fearless indictment of the "fat boys," the labor fakers, that was ever made. Delivered in answer to the motion by a reactionary official of the miner's union to unseat Dunne. This speech will go down in history, marking a new phase of the class struggle in America.

This Speech is Now Published in a Pamphlet Form

It is the most effective kind of educational work to distribute this widely among union men. This is the time when live wires are needed. It must receive the widest circulation throughout the country.

Who Owns Congress?

"Who Owns Congress?" is the title of an investigation now being completed by Jay Lovestone.

The findings will be published by the party as a pamphlet.

In this study the unity between the Stock Exchange and the White House is brought home by a presentation of authentic facts and unimpeachable data concerning the activities of the various departmenes of the government.

This investigation follows the plan of the "Government—Strikebreaker" and marshals an array of startling evidence showing how the big bankers and manufacturers own the United States government body and soul. The financial and industrial connections of the leading cabinet members, senators, congressmen, and other government officials are brought to light. An examination is made of the records of the leading figures in the house and senate proving that they are openly and covertly serving as agents of the capitalist class. Special attention is paid to some of the most advertised "progressives."

This study will prove an indispensable aid to the independent working class political movement. It will serve as a sort of an arsenal for the 1924 campaign and a general handbook on who is who in the American government for party members and workers and farmers in general.

The Campaign for Class Collaboration

By EARL R. BROWDER

By EARL R. BROWDER.

Since the days when Mark Hanna organized his "labor lieutenants" into the Civic Federation, collaboration with the capitalist class, the policy of Samuel Gompers in other words, has been the settled policy of the governing circles in the American Federation of Labor. The Civic Federation made an institution of the idea, and entrenched it within the highest circles of the labor movement. The baneful effects upon the development of trade unionism is a subject worthy of the efforts of a good historian. The militant sections of the labor movement revolted against it, to the extent that such an organization as the Union Mine Workers wrote a special law into its constitution prohibiting any officer of the union to belong to the Civic Federation. Any history of the American labor movement that does not deal fully with that body will neglect one of the outstanding factors in the influences of whichis hard for the uninitiated to realize.

Never has there been in the past, however, such an organized drive to establish collaboration with the capitalists as that conducted today in the name of "industrial democracy" as the dominant union function; (2) the epidemic of "labor banks"; (3) the Johnston "co-operation" scheme for making the unions into efficiency bureaus for capitalist production, and (4) the program of Gompers and Berry at the Portland convention of the A. F. of L.

Trade Unionism vs. Insurance Business.

Insurance departments in the unions have been an established feature from the beginning of the movement. It has been many years, however, since they have occupied more than an incidental position. They have been accepted as valuable auxiliaries to the unions, but not as the prime reason for the unions' existence. This has been changed in a group of the most important unions in America, however, within the past year. The railroad shop unions, with their disastrous strike dragging along and their entire fighting front broken up by the incompetence of their leaders, found the membership leaving the unions by tens of thousands. Instead of meeting the threatening situation by a renewed militancy and a program of solidarity, the officialdom resurrected the insurance society features as the basis for their appeal to the membership to rally to the unions.

"Insurance" became the watchword of the union organizers on the railroads. This signified the abandonment of the struggle. It was the beginning of the movement by the trade union leaders to open up relations with the employers. It threw a cold wet blanket upon the remaining militancy of the rank and file. It was the signal of surrender, and the membership understood it as such. The effect upon the railroad shop unions was a disintegrating one.

The effort to rebuild the unions as "insurance" societies brought no results. The workers would have nothing of it. Seeing their very jobs threatened by the loss of per capita taxes, the officials frantically began to cast about for schemes to bolster up their failing financial resources, and thus strengthen their hold upon and keep their grip on the organizations. One of the things that came to hand was that purpose was the idea of "labor banks."

Wildcat Banking Schemes.

An authority on labor banking made the statement (Freeman, N. Y., Nov. 28th), that 15 labor banks are now operating in the United States, and that 50 more are scheduled to begin operations within a few months. The figures give some idea of the rapidity of labor banks that is sweeping the official circles.

There are two distinct elements in the labor banking situation that must be carefully distinguished. First are those which are the result of the strength of their organizations, felt that they could venture into the field of handling the finances of their organization and membership, and make them the center of a profitable banking business without changing the essential functioning of their organizations. The second group consists of those who felt the ground slipping under their feet, and grasped at the idea of labor banks as a means of making an alliance with capitalistic interests, and at the same time tie up the affairs of the union so completely that they could not be removed from office without disastrous consequences. The first group started the labor bank idea as an auxiliary to the union; the second joined the movement as a means of keeping hold of their jobs. It is not clear that banking is a proper function of labor unions if their primary objects are not to be handicapped. Leaving aside that question there is a vast difference between labor banks organized as auxiliaries, and labor banks organized to give a new economic foundation to bankrupt unions.

The first group consists of the Locomotive Engineers and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The Engineers are a very conservative organization, while the Clothing Workers are known as the most militant and most progressive group of labor leaders in the country. The latter with great strategic power and a comparative surplus. Their bank did not originate in the desperate struggle of the union, after it practically had been completely disrupted by the combined forces of the Clothing Workers, because it is more of a militant body compared with American unions generally, and has trained many bonafide trade unionists for its members, did not take up the labor bank idea from weakness, but because they felt a strong enough to handle it. Their bank undoubtedly strengthened the conservative tendencies now within the union.

The second group of labor banks, however, do not clearly have such a clear cut basis in any instance, and in many cases they are definitely designed to bolster up a failing officialdom. That is their essential characteristic. They are instruments of class collaboration. They remove the unions further from the rank and file. They enormously increase the power of the bankrupt officials. They give the union helpless before the financial overspirit. They have no independent strength of their own at all. They are make-shift expedients to lengthen the tenure of officials of union leaders unable to make good in the wage and hour struggle. They are bound to become a tool of the capitalist movement, and are part and parcel of the campaign for class collaboration in the American unions.

The Johnston "Co-operation" Scheme.

But insurance and banking are mild measures in contrast to the drastic proposals of Wm. H. Johnston, president of the International Association of Machinists. He is installing a system whereby the unions become direct agents of the employers in all fundamental questions. He boasts that when his co-operation is established, not a railroad executive will ever again wish to get rid of the unions; he is sorry sort of boast. It would seem, which will mean, if true, that the workers will be the ones who wish to get rid themselves of the monstrosity that Johnston would impose upon them.

The Johnston scheme is already being touted as a great success on the B. & O. Railroad, where it is being tried out. The idea underlying our service to the Baltimore & Ohio," said Mr. Johnston, "may be compared to the idea which underlies the engineering service extended to railroads by large supply corporations which have contracts with these railroads to furnish, let us say, arch-brick, superheaters, stokers, or lubricating oils." The union, in short, is to become a supply corporation to the railroad corporations engaged in the business of selling labor power, which is the union's stock in trade. It will compete in the market like any commodity-selling corporation, and expects by doing more work for less cost than nonunion labor can deliver. That is the meaning of Johnston's "Industrial Democracy" a la Gompers.

At the Portland convention of the A. F. of L. the following resolution was given on the whole drive for systematic collaboration with the capitalist employers, John L. Lewis and Major Berry, the spokesmen, the first with his proclamation for "industrial democracy," the second with the open declaration that the unions "are committed to the claims of capitalist private property."

Fresh from battle in New York where he had crushed the Fresh-men's strikes on the daily newspapers, this doughty American Legionist walked into the A. F. of L. convention where he was hailed as a conquering hero. What was the meaning of Berry's acts in New York and the latter's enthusiasm of his welcome in Portland? Berry quickly disclosed it. He spoke, and the key-note of his speech was this:

"We stand for four great principles governing industry. These are the principles of prosperity, an adequate return on investment, an adequate sum allowed industry for the labor of destruction and that all workers, including managers, get proper compensation for what they put into industry."

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, was another key-note speaker in this official gathering of the collaborators with the employing class. Speaking after a period when the U. M. W. of A. had found its very existence threatened by the employers, the whole speech of Lewis was an appeal for the official program of collaboration. Lewis boasted of his destruction of the Kanawa Union, District 14, and the expulsion of Howat, the pride of himself upon assisting the British Steel Corporation to break the strike in Nova Scotia, and on his ground of sacredness of contracts, ignoring the fact that even his sacred contract was not violated there. He was another living symbol, thru his obedience to the order of BESCO in Nova Scotia, of the newly-consolidated program of collaboration.

Gompers' manifesto is more discreet than the utterances of his rough-neck lieutenants, but its meaning is just as definite. A few quotations will outline the entire policy which drew all these leaders together in these various chains in the campaign for complete coordination of the unions to capitalism. The following are key sentences from the manifesto:

"We feel that the hour has struck for a re-assessment of the aims of labor that shall more nearly express the full implications of trade unionism. . . . Industry has been undemocratic. . . . The close of the war marked for us a turning point in human relations and threw into bold relief the fundamental errors of existing forms and institutions. . . . Thru the muddling conflict of groups (workers vs. capitalist, Ed.) who still find it impossible to come together in co-operation we must look to a future that must have its foundation upon co-operation and collaboration. . . . Trade unionism must lead the way even at the cost of being branded as reactionary.

The superficial observer of events in the labor movement judges from the facts above recited and countless others of a similar nature, that the labor movement is becoming more reactionary, that the masses are being brought under the control of capitalism more completely than ever before. Such a judgment is mistaken indeed, for the very opposite is true. The basic reason for this concerned swing to the right of the officialdom, for this studied and systematic cooperation with all the varying forces and institutions of capitalism, is the fact that the masses are swinging to the left, are being disillusioned, are becoming radical. The reactionary officialdom cannot go along with the broad, sweeping radicalization of the masses, without making a clean break with their peaceful past. They are either corrupt agents of capitalism or are timid bureaucrats seeking nothing but a peaceful office life with a secure salary. In either case, their reaction toward the seething rank and file unrest is one of fear, and retreat to the protecting arms of the masters, the capitalist employers.

That the collaboration schemes will prove destructive of trade unionism there is no question. But that it will solve any of the fundamental problems of the present industrial order, only the politically feeble-minded can believe. The collaboration scheme is bound to fall as surely as water must seek its lowest level. In the meantime it must be combatted as the most dangerous and insidious enemy of the working class, and the one which will cost the greatest in working class sweat and blood to overcome. The collaborationists in the labor movement are the secret agents of the "open shop" capitalists, and the goal of both is the more complete enslavement of the workers.

Hughes' Fraud Big Boomerang

held by a number of the President's intimate advisers, that it would be unwise for more reasons than one to take up the program laid down by Hughes."

A Brazen Lie.

The Soviet government lost no time in denouncing the Hughes letter as a piece of outright forgery. The Soviet government has expressed its readiness to have the dastardly charges examined by an international court of arbitration.

The Communist International was quick to brand the Hughes outburst as another Sisson document.

The New Yorker Herald already shown the so-called instructions to be merely a frame-up. There is nothing that are even suspicious about them. A thoroguing investigation of the brazen lie hurled at us by panic-stricken enemies of the Soviet republic and their friends in the United States.

Senator Borah pointed out on the floor of the United States senate that the latest Hughes note was based upon "evidence collected by the department of justice that was at least three years old." He also went to show the ridiculous character of the monstrous allegations by the fact that there has not been a single arrest, conviction or imprisonment of any person, though the crimes attributed by the Hughes-Daugherty document clearly fall within the realm of treason and are punishable by capital punishment.

There is no doubt that Secretary of State Hughes, who is an experienced Standard Oil statesman, has had considerable experience in manufacturing diplomatic documents and serving the interests of the big bankers and oil magnates. One need but recall the way Mr. Hughes recently used his office to transact a loan by American bankers to Salvador against the people of Salvador and in behalf of Wall Street.

Because of this oily reputation of Hughes, Senator Norris, of Nebraska, immediately demanded "that there be printed in the Congressional Record, in parallel columns, that part of President Coolidge's message dealing with the Russian situation and the note of rejection of overture sent by the Soviet Foreign Minister Tchitcherin dispatched by Secretary Hughes on Tuesday." In authoritative circles in Washington it is said that Hughes has not dared publish in full the Tchitcherin reply to the Coolidge message. In his brilliant speech on the Hughes fraud, Norris further said that "in the history of diplomatic correspondence from the dawn of civilization down to this day there never has been so blunt a letter. It avoids even all pretense of courtesy." The senator from Nebraska characterized the whole Hughes forgery as "foolish on its face" and "the dream of some unscrupulous detective who knew just what was expected of him."

Big Bankers Behind Hughes Forgery.

It is common knowledge amongst those who are acquainted with Washington affairs that the Tchitcherin reply met the Coolidge message more than half way. But several big bankers immediately served notice on the administration not to go any further in the Russian negotiations.

The fact that "Hell-and-Maria" was to be appointed the head of the Reparations Commission to look into Germany's capacity to pay was known several days in advance in Wall Street. The bankers felt that this was a tremendous advantage to them in their campaign to turn Europe into a Coolie colony of the American imperialists. Under these circumstances they became more arrogant and decided to go the limit against Russia with the hope of driving a better bargain in some future year, and another and more terrible world war. In France the followers of the Communist International have for some time prevented the reactionary bloody hand of the militarist Poincare. In Germany the Communists alone have prevented the reactionary police of a military monarchy. In England the Communists have the greatest following amongst the miners, who are the backbone of the Labor Party which has checked the war plans of the British imperialists.

And in the United States, the Communists, the Workers Party, are not organizing shooting squads but are engaged in building up the political and economic organizations of the workers and farmers in order to make it impossible for our own capitalist imperialists to plunge the country into a new blood bath.

When the Standard Oil Trust Secretary of State Hughes insinuated that the Communist International and the Soviet government were the same organization he lied and he knew he lied. More than that he knew that nobody would take this ridiculous contention of his seriously. Senator Borah made it very clear the other day in the first debate on the Hughes forgery that there are at least 56 nationalities represented in the membership of the Communist International.

Can't Stop Russian Recognition.

But not even these financial bowlers can block the success of the Russian recognition movement. At most, even these powerful interests can only delay American recognition of the Soviet republic.

The workers and farmers, by the millions, want the United States to recognize Soviet Russia. Such tactics as those employed by Hughes and Daugherty will not halt the drive for the restoration of friendly relations between the United States and the Russian Soviet government. The friends of the Soviet republic should watch Hughes for his infamous attack on Soviet Russia. The stupid and fraudulent statement on "shooting groups and sapper practice" has made it certain that there will be a fight to the finish on the Russian question in congress. Had Hughes not come out with his frantic denunciation, the reactionaries would have easily succeeded in their original plan to sidetrack the whole issue. Today this can no longer be done. The Russians must now be faced and faced openly. The panic and despair which have overcome the enemies of Soviet Russia offer the best proof that the day of American recognition of the Soviet republic is close at hand.

Be Ready.

We ought to be more afraid of wrong than of being wronged, and the prime business of every man is, not to seem good but to be good, in all the public and private dealings. —Socrates.

Puncturing the Ford Bubble

Henry Ford has withdrawn from the presidential race. He ran out of gas at the starting pole, the recent state conventions, held at Pierre, So. Dak. The credit for putting the flivver magnate out of the running, thus early, and of exposing him for the reactionary that he is, may well be taken by the forces aligned with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

It was the Federated Party that went into South Dakota and fought the plan to have the Farmer-Labor Party merge with the Democratic Party in support of the Ford ticket. Some discontent among the farmers had crystallized about the Ford candidacy, Ford was hailed as the friend of the farmer and the enemy of Wall Street. He turned out flivver cars and flivver tractors cheaply, all that the flivver farmers could afford.

It was "South Dakota or Bust!" for Henry Ford. And his bubble boom busted. The South Dakota Farmer-Labor Party remained loyal to independent political action. A few of the Ford boosters went over to the democratic camp, but their influence was gone. The democrats nominated McAdoo.

All the charges made against Ford by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party are upheld by Ford's endorsement of the strike-breaker-president, the reactionary Republican Cal Coolidge, for re-election. Ford thus becomes an ally of the worst reaction. It is Ford who now supports Mr. Coolidge, the Wall Street candidate, who tells big business to organize against the workers and farmers, who tells the farmers they must shift for themselves and solve their own problems.

This development also unmasks the fake politics of William Randolph Hearst, who was an energetic booster of Mr. Ford, as a third party candidate. Mr. Ford's flop to Coolidge helps clear the atmosphere for the workers and farmers. They will be able to see better the need for the Farmer-Labor Party on a national scale. They must profit by this lesson by giving all possible support to the National Farmer-Labor Conference called for St. Paul, Minn., May 30, 1924. Mr. Ford has gone over to Coolidge. New masses of workers and farmers are going over to the class Farmer-Labor Party.

Getting on the Job

It is encouraging to note that no time is being lost in getting on the job to free the remaining class war prisoners. President Coolidge's release of the 30 members of the Industrial Workers of the World has only whetted the desire of labor to secure the liberation of the remaining victims of capitalist misrule.

It is hoped that all the interested organizations, the Central Defense Committee, the American Civil Liberties' Union, the Workers' Defense Union, and the rest, will build a united front and co-operate in achieving this task. Unity will bring an early and complete victory.

Telegrams have already been sent to governors of four western states, Hart, of Washington; Richardson, of California; Moore, of Idaho, and Trapp, of Oklahoma, demanding that they at least follow in the footsteps of the republican reactionary in the White House at Washington. These states have been the scenes of the greatest attacks on the I. W. W.

But effort should also be directed toward Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Massachusetts and Ohio, in the east, where the victims of the coal, steel and textile barons are held behind the bars, even as the timber, textile and oil workers in other states. There should be nothing short of a nation-wide united front drive for the unconditional liberation of all the class war prisoners.

The Ashes of the Dead

Fascism in Japan is helping keep up Fascisti standards in this and other countries. It has added to its many other crimes by inspiring the stealing of the ashes of one of its murdered victims.

The yellow press of this country tried hard to conceal the report of the robbery committed during the funeral of Sakaye Osugi, when Fascisti, with belching revolvers, entered the room where the urn containing the ashes was lying in state.

It will be remembered that "The Worker" published the story of the brutal killing not only of Osugi, but of his wife and child, by Captain Amakasu, while prisoners, charged with being radicals, shortly after the earthquake. Hundreds of other workers and sympathizers were similarly murdered, the excuse being that they were all radicals and that they planned taking advantage of the earthquake to start a revolutionary uprising. Short prison terms are being given the assassins, and they are taking advantage of this clemency by committing new crimes.

Congratulations on this latest achievement in degradation are now due the Japanese Fascisti from Benito Mussolini, founder of Italian and international Fascism, and from Judge Elbert H. Gary, of the United States Steel Corporation, one of Fascisms greatest admirers.

Coolidge's Message Is Blow at Children

By HARRY GANNES.

Child labor in the United States is much further away from any solution, since President Coolidge's message recently to Congress, than it ever was. Philanthropists as well as liberals hailed the strikebreaker President's declarations on child labor as a step toward the abolition of this recognized evil. But it is nothing of the kind. It is a clear evasion of the direct issue of. Should the 2,500,000 children now being employed in factory, mine and mill and on the farm continue to be exploited?

Coolidge, in his message, considers the question not from the point of view of the little children, who now are suffering under the blistering sun in the cotton fields, or who become mangled in mine machinery, or whose tender hands are ripped to pieces in the shrimp industries, but from the welfare of the employers of these children, the capitalists.

It is known that the United States Supreme Court has already thrown out two national laws seeking to prohibit children under fourteen from working on the ground that the United States government has nothing to do with the conditions of labor in the various states; that this was a matter for state legislation. Coolidge's brief statement on child labor to Congress can be interpreted to mean a rehashing of this subterfuge of the Supreme Court.

Taking his cue from the stone-age fossils of the United States Supreme Court, the president is of the opinion that the enforcement of any child labor law is largely a matter of local concern. This defeats the entire purpose of any action that might be taken by the federal government with a view of eradicating child labor.

It is well known now that even in states that have fairly good capitalist anti-child labor laws, these measures are either not enforced because of lack of facilities, such as insufficient factory inspectors, or that because of co-operation on the part of the state factory inspectors and factory owners, the purpose of the law is evaded.

With no other force than "public opinion" and moral persuasion as his remedy in the enforcement of any child labor regulations, the President obviously places himself in complete harmony with employers of child labor who recognize that reckoning in at hand and will agree that Coolidge's solution is to their best interest.

It is peculiar to note that Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has been working in close harmony with the pro-capitalist philanthropic organizations, and even with the outright counter-revolutionary Young Women's Christian Association, for the limitation of child labor, and that the efforts of this semi-labor misleader "Labor" resulted in precisely such action as that characterized by the recommendations of the anti-labor President.

If the millions of children now being exploited in the United States are to have any immediate relief there must be a united front of all working class elements in an unequivocal demand for the abolition of all child labor up to the age of 18 years.

Such an issue could best be advanced by a mass labor party and would find unanimous support among all the working class elements, as such a measure would be in the interest and for the good, not only of the children now condemned to live of the worst kinds of slavery, but to all workers, whether organized or unorganized.

Nothing can be expected by the child workers from the philanthropic organizations, nor from the capitalist government, unless the workers in this country, as a class let their voice be heard in loud protest against the violation of their children's rights as human beings.

To the Aid of the Revolutionary Workers and Peasants of Bulgaria

Workers of all countries! The Bulgarian workers and peasants, after a heroic struggle, have been defeated by the Tzankov government. The Bulgarian social democrats, arm in arm with the Wrangel bande and the Bulgarian capitalists and large land owners, are wading in the blood of the revolutionary workers and peasants of Bulgaria.

A wild government of terror is raging in Bulgaria. The White Guards are working destruction in the workers' sections. The villages of the revolutionary peasants are being restored to ashes. Thousands of rebel workers and peasants have already been murdered. Over 15,000 revolutionists have been thrown into the prisons of the Bulgarian fascisti. Thousands of others have been forced over the borders into Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Turkey, in the struggle. The bestial frenzy of the Bulgarian counter-revolutionaries knows no bounds. The White Terror is pitilessly raging thru Bulgaria. All Bulgaria is quivering under the fearful massacres instigated by the Wrangel hordes.

Workers of all countries! The struggles of the revolutionary workers and peasants of Bulgaria are your struggles. The sacrifices made to the fascist terror in Bulgaria are your sacrifices. It is your brothers and sisters who are breathing their last at the hands of the murderous bands in Bulgaria. Our Bulgarian brothers fought for your cause. Defeated by Bulgarian fascism, they are calling to you now for help.

Show Bulgarian fascism that behind the Bulgarian workers and peasants, united and determined, stand the proletariat of all lands.

Raise your voices against the bestial frenzy of the Bulgarian fascists.

Thru your united strength, call a defiant halt to the raging of the Bulgarian counter-revolution which has been let loose.

Come to the aid of your Bulgarian fighters, and begin immediately to make collections in their behalf.

Urged by Enthusiasm

Campaigning for subscriptions to "THE DAILY WORKER" has become an almost universal occupation for American labor in tants. The news that definite arrangements has been made begin publication of "THE DAILY WORKER," Jan. 18, 1924, received with great enthusiasm all over the country. To transla that enthusiasm into action for the support of "THE DAI WORKER" has been accepted by all live wires as the task of hour which takes precedence over all other work.

The answer to the call of "THE DAILY WORKER" manag ment for a concentration of energy to secure subscriptions "THE DAILY" has been encouraged beyond words. Those w dug down to provide their share of the $100,000.00 fund, to ma "THE DAILY WORKER" possible, do not hesitate long to s scribe, so that they may reap a personal benefit thru receiv the paper daily. But these are not resting on their laurels. is realized that those who bought shares of stock must be rel upon also to secure readers for "THE DAILY."

For those whose financial condition made it impossible for th to help in establishing "THE DAILY," the opportunity is n offered to do their share in making it a sweeping success. The are at least a million workers in this country who are anxious read a real labor daily paper instead of the filth they now m read illiru to get the news out of capitalist sheets. Out of million, at least 100,000 can be reached and induced to subscr for "THE DAILY WORKER" in the next three weeks. That quite a large task, but one which the militants have resolved accomplish.

So far the greatest response has been from the shops and t unions. It is in these where workers are most easily reached th the every day work is being done. But for the great mass workers with whom connections are difficult, the house-to-hou canvas must be conducted.

Communist Saturdaying became one of the most importa activities of the Communist Party in Russia during the cruc days of the bitter economic crisis after the revolution. There a crisis in the Communist movement in America. Not in the sen that disaster impends; it is a crisis of opportunity, an opportun to bring hundreds of thousands of workers under the influence the Workers Party, thru securing them as readers of "TH DAILY WORKER." That opportunity must be grasped now a that is the reason for the great American Communist Sunday which have been set for December 30th and January 6th.

On December 30th and January 6th, it is sure that every me ber of the Workers Party will be on the job with all energy in t knowledge that the securing of readers for "THE DAI WORKER," the selling of subs is the most revolutionary activi that can be performed at this time.

Hilferding Exposes Himself

From a speech by Rudolf Hilferding, Stresemann's Socialist fina minister, Oct. 8, at the Berlin District Convention of the United Social cratic Party of Germany. The speech appeared in Vorwarts on Oct. and is as follows:

"An unarmed working class stands opposed to the Fascists. Reichswe supported by organizations which are armed, well equipped and well l (Calls.) Let us have no illusions. We are the weaker ones, because at th ents, broad sections of intellectuals are today more courageous than working class. They are better led!" (Great disturbance. Calls: "And c leaders!")

The meeting which until then listened in silence to the speech of Co rade Hilferding was thrown into a wild uproar. Angry discussio among the delegates and auditors made it impossible for a time to go on with the business of the convention.

Comrade Hilferding comes forward, strikes with his fist on the speaker's stand and cries with great anger: "It is scandalous, the way you are behaving, and you are supposed to be functionaries."

Comrade Hilferding (continuing): "The influence which we have upon the masses has diminished. Our press is going down. (Calls: "If it writes like 'Vorwarts'!") No, even where our press is radical it is going down. The influence of the trade union press is also constantly decreasing. The trade unions themselves have been immensely weakened thru the disruptive activities of the Communists. We know that a great part of those who in 1918-1919 on returning from the war stayed out of the political movement to which they were indifferent, are today in the camp of the National Socialists.

"People have been told over and over again that the leaders are useless. How can there be any confidence in the leaders? That is the situation in the party and in the trade unions. Comrades, we do not want to create any illusions for ourselves. What you are now experiencing is no German phenomenon. Look at the rest of the world. You see everywhere the disintegration of the Social Democracy. Today there is no large country in which there is a strong Social Democratic party. In England the Labor Party after its electoral victory is hardly in a position to support a daily paper. In smaller countries the Social Democracy is stronger because these countries were less affected by economic crises, and because they can retain their unity there.

"When we are deliberating, the sharpest criticism, is not only acceptable, but under certain circumstances it is a duty. But it is necessary to show comradeship, to listen objectively and to advocate together the outcome of the deliberations. Even in t past it was wrong when we pounc upon another at the congresses of t party when Comrades Ledebur and Bernstein fought over a difference opinion. But at that time it was s comparatively harmless. At t time the Social Democracy was a strong morally. Then came the sp Constant fighting. More splits. A the result was that the working cl which returned from the war had longer any faith in the leaders and is now turning to the Nation Socialists."

Locheur, of France, and Stinnes of Germany, Play Grim Joke on the Worker

Note.—The author of this article lived for some years in Germany prior to the World War. In the course of the last two and a half years he has made frequent visits to Germany and has seen at first hand the steady and progressive growth of the misery and degradation to which the German workers have been forced.

By EDGAR T. WHITEHEAD.

The conditions of the working class in Germany have now reached such a pass, that by the time these lines appear in print everything will be in the melting pot.

Apart from the fact that the economic and political chaos which is engulfing Germany cannot fail to have a most serious repercussion on the workers of other countries, it is surely impossible for workers anywhere to remain merely passive spectators at this crucifixion of the most highly organized section of the working class in the world.

There are nearly twelve million organised industrial workers in Germany. It is upon them that the four long years of war fell with greatest weight, and they it was who suffered most in the terrible starvation years of 1917-18. No real recovery has ever been made from this period, and at no time during the last five years have real wages much exceeded $2 a week. Altho always in work their economic sufferings have hardly been less than those of the unemployed in our own country.

With a short breathing space in 1920-1921 conditions have since then steadily and rapidly grown worse with the catastrophic fall of the mark. Week by week and month by month prices have risen out of all proportion to wages, savings having disappeared like snow in summer. During my most recent visit to Germany the price of the 4-lb. loaf of bread on successive days was as follows:

Friday, Oct. 12.	160,000,000	Marks.
Saturday	13.	1,000,000,000 Marks
Monday	15.	1,200,000,000 Marks
Tuesday	16.	2,500,000,000 Marks
Wednesday	17.	7,000,000,000 Marks
Thursday	18.	12,000,000,000 Marks

Think of the plight of the worker who retained any portion of his Friday's wages to expend during the following week. The result, of course, was that huge queues for bread were to be seen at all the bread shops, most of which, however, were already in parlous state with their shop windows and fittings broken up by desperate workers. Attacks on food shops and bread wagons were of daily occurrence, even in the better class quarters of Berlin. Not only this but regular battles were taking place between gangs of starving people attempting to pillage the potato fields and the farmers. The following are taken from the small news within three days:

Schoningen, Oct. 25.—Three persons killed in hunger riots.

Braunschweig, Oct. 25.—250 arrests made in bread demonstration.

Hamburg, Oct. 26.—Three killed and 16 severely wounded in the bread riots.

Marienburg, Oct. 26.—Lootings and severe battles. Many wounded left in the streets.

Cologne, Oct. 24.—Six persons wounded in hunger riots of which two subsequently died. Also at Bermen, Pirna, Gleiwitz, Allenstein and Frankfort on Main, riots took place with loss of life.

Added to this state of affairs all over Germany, frightful unemployment now reigns, it being estimated that between four and five million are now unemployed and dependent on the tiny dole of the authorities.

Meanwhile the employing classes continue to oppress the workers' organizations with all possible force, and added to the state siege that has been declared all over Germany, Saxony, a state that had a workers' government, has now been occupied by General Muller and his troops and the workers' government forcibly dissolved.

But even figures and isolated facts like these in no way do the slightest justice to the actual position in which the German working class find themselves. To do this one has to know them as they were, to live their lives, to see their inner histories, and no description will ever do justice to the innumerable tragedies, degradations, loss of backbone and fighting spirit, that has fallen upon them.

It seems one of the ironies of fate that these miseries should fall precisely upon this class, a class which certainly holds no share of responsibility for the late war, for German railmen, miners or transport workers were as little enthused over war as were their comrades in all other countries—whilst those sections of the German nation which may be said to share a large part of the responsibility for the late war—the rulers and militarists—have escaped suffering all thru, indeed, in many cases with greatly added wealth, part of which is safely secreted in neutral countries.

The question naturally arises, what can be done to help the German proletariat in the desperate straits in which they find themselves? Surely, if the international solidarity of labor means anything more than empty words, it should manifest itself in deeds in a situation of this character. Workers' International Relief, which succeeded in bringing more than 50,000 tons of foodstuffs to the relief of the Russian famine, is organizing a similar great campaign for the relief of the German workers. All workers and labor organizations should support this campaign unreservedly, both to give the German workers heart in their struggle, and to do everything possible to relieve starvation and save life. There is no doubt whatever that already today death is claiming thousands of child lives in Germany who in normal circumstances would not succumb, and these deaths are likely to be increased a hundred fold when the rigors of winter close in, for fuel and coal is quite outside the purses of working class folk in Germany today.

Workers everywhere! should do everything to relieve the misery of this grey, silent, suffering mass of humanity which the decay of capitalist civilization has condemned such a fate. That is our first and most obvious duty.

Beyond that we have the politic duty of seeing that the working cla of Germany is no more made th scapegoat after all Allied and Ger capitalists and made to pay with the lives that fantastic "cost of the war" which the Allies enforce demand from "Germany," the German capitalists succeed in handing on the whole of this burden upon the "workers" of Germany." Even today every German pays from 7 per cent to 10 per cent in direct taxation on wages, whilst the share borne by the governing classes is absurdly small.

Capitalism being international, and the Lousheurs of France sitting down by jowl with the Stinnes of Germany this grim joke of "paying for the war" is being made into the most cruel weapon for the complete degradation of the working class the world has ever witnessed.

On, then, to the relief and support of the German workers.

Greeting of Communist International to the Third National Convention of the Workers Party Arrives

Workers Rallying Against Fascisti Revolt in Mexico

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.
(Staff Correspondent, Federated Press and "The Worker")

MEXICO CITY.—Federal troops are defeating the rebel armies on two fronts, altho three more generals have revolted and joined the Fascist counter-revolutionary ranks. Gen. Manuel Garcia Vigil, governor of Oaxaca, by his revolt has placed the state of Oaxaca in the hands of the rebels. Gen. Fernando Segovia, by his defection in Yucatan, caused the socialistic governor Felipe Carillo Puerto to flee.

The most serious loss was that of Gen. Fortunato Mayorita, who was in command of a division of Obregon troops, freshly equipped, and sent out to join in the attack upon Sanchez. This sudden disloyalty of a trusted general whose troops were not yet very far from Mexico City, imperilled the safety of the main body of the federals who had advanced as far as Orizaba and Esperanza on the two railroads running to the Vera Cruz port. Obregon, who was on the western front near Guadalajara, rushed back to the eastern front near Puebla. The minister of war also left the capital and the two of them are now personally directing the operations in the vicinity of Puebla.

The valley of Mexico is extremely strong, being a level saucer-like basin entirely surrounded by mountains and looking in military value of tremendous significance from the standpoint of generals. For that reason the president is taking no chances of further defection on the Vera Cruz, Puebla, Oaxaca front and has declared that Mexico City will not be abandoned under any circumstances.

But from a military standpoint, the western or Guadalajara front is much more important, as an advance of a few hundred miles to Iraputo by General Estrada would mean the cutting of the railroad line to El Paso and a further advance of about 50 miles or a little more to Celaya would cut the line to Laredo, thus cutting off communications with the United States and with the whole north of the republic. At present the entire north, much the largest portion of the republic, is in the hands of the government.

Thus the president and the loyal forces are under the necessity of fighting on two fronts at once, one for moral reasons, the other for military. On the Guadalajara or "railroad" front, they are slowly forcing Estrada back. Some of Estrada's own forces are going over to Obregon.

Meanwhile, the labor elements are not idle. General Calles, with many labor leaders, has left for the north of the republic to form workers' regiments. Other labor leaders have gone to San Luis Potosi for similar purposes. The Communist local of Mexico City in its entirety, less two men, have accepted recruiting commissions from Governor Toledo of Vera Cruz, the state in which they have most influence. Altho this state is in the center of the rebel forces, Tejeda and his band of agitators will enter at some northern point and rouse the peasantry who have benefited so greatly there from land distribution. In Puebla, General Gasca, Laborite, has recruited 2,000 armed workers and in Mexico City there is a workers' regiment that drills daily.

World War Vet Backs Mooney.

MINNEAPOLIS.—Visions of California as a land of barbarity and the inquisition will be removed if Governor Richardson releases Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings. The World War veterans have so informed the governor thru Jack Bradon, the organization's national president. Bradon recalls the conviction of Mooney and Billings on perjured and other repeated testimony after the San Francisco preparedness parade explosion. He urges Richardson to follow President Coolidge's example who recently freed the 31 remaining federal political prisoners.

It is natural that if the laws are made and enforced by capitalists they will be against the interests of the worker.

Another Blow at Hughes' Frame-Up

In startling contrast to the faked and forged letter of instructions, alleged by Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes to have been sent by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, to the Workers Party of America, we publish this week the greeting of the Communist International to the Third National Convention of the Workers Party.

This official greeting still further exposes the joint frame-up of the state department and the department of justice at Washington, in that it shows that the official correspondence of the Communist International to the American Workers Party is signed by Vasili P. Kolarov, general secretary of the Executive Committee of the Comintern, and not by its chairman, Zinoviev.

Against the silly and puerile fabrications of the Hughes' offering, the bona fide greeting of the Communist International, appraising the accomplishments of the Workers Party during the past year, and offering its advice for the future, stands as a mighty monument of practical political work for the whole working class.

This historic document, that will occupy a prominent place in the annals of America's workers, is in full as follows:

Greetings From the Executive Committee, Communist International, to the Workers Party of America.

Moscow, Soviet Russia, Dec. 7, 1923.

To the Workers Party of America.

DEAR COMRADES:—The convention of the Workers Party of America is taking place at a time when world reaction is preparing another blow against the international proletariat. Gathered like ravens over the bodies of the working class of Germany, the imperialist powers of France, England and America are making their plans to divide the spoils in Germany and reduce the working class to the position of coolies. The capitalists of Germany have established their military dictatorship and are ready to co-operate with the foreign imperialists, provided they are guaranteed part of the booty.

In several states of Europe Fascism holds the workers in its grip. Italy, Spain and Bulgaria are in the throes of the wildest reaction. The white terror rules in Finland, Roumania and Hungary.

In Soviet Russia alone, the rule of the workers and peasants is unbroken despite the many attempts that have been made to destroy it. The Soviet power is consolidating itself more and more and today stands invincible to the plots and intrigues of the reactionary capitalist governments and counter-revolutionary emigres.

American imperialism, with its surplus of war gains wrung from the working class, is utilizing the broken-down condition of Europe to make fresh conquests. In Europe it is directing its force once more against Soviet Russia, in the hope of undermining the Soviet power. The path to this new attempt is over the bodies of the enslaved German workers, who are to be bought with food furnished to the murderous Seeckt military dictatorship.

America Embroiled in Imperialist Adventures.

In Asia, American imperialism is penetrating further into the heart of China, where it is securing a strangle-hold on its resources and industries. The earthquake in Japan, which has seriously weakened Japanese imperialism, is opening up the door for American encroachments, which must surely lead to war.

In South and Central America and in Mexico, American imperialism is in the heyday of its expansionist policies, whose aim is the acquirement of large sources of raw material and the extension of fields of investment for Wall Street and American industrialists.

Now, fearful wars menace the whole world as a result of the machinations of American imperialism. It is the duty of the American workers to watch well the acts of their capitalists. They must prevent any interference with the struggle of the German workers to obtain their freedom. They must fight against attempts to embroil the American workers in new wars for the sake of capitalist profits. It will be their duty, particularly of the Communists, to mobilize the workers of the United States against the coming wars.

To perform this and the many other tasks confronting the party, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has rightfully conceived as the most important step the establishment of an English Communist Daily in the United States. This Daily must become the medium for reaching the widest masses of the workers and mobilizing them for militant action in protection of their rights and in securing final control of power. The struggles in the United States are among the bloodiest in the world. The power of the capitalist press is tremendous. The workers have no real expression throuout the country and hence are exposed to misrepresentation and distortion of fact, which is one of the methods that the capitalist class of America employs in order to crush the labor movement. The Communist Daily must become the organ not of the revolutionists alone, but of the WHOLE WORKING CLASS. Hence the whole strength of the party must be mobilized for the establishment of the Daily, which should be the forerunner of more revolutionary dailies in other parts of the country.

CONSOLIDATED PARTY ON SHOP BASIS

To accomplish this task and to put the Daily on a sound basis, the membership must be drawn into close relationship with one another. The language federations constituting the party are a necessity and yet are a hindrance to uniform action of the membership. The language federations are essential for propaganda among the foreign-born workers and must be retained for that purpose. Within the party, however, there should be created international branches comprising all the membership, regardless of language. Thus members of all nationalities and Negro workers will be grouped in uniform branches and work together on the problems confronting the party. This will produce greater mobility and lead to the inner harmony that is fundamental to all Communist action. In an industrial country

LETTER SENT ALL MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Washington Hears About Bona Fide Moscow Greetings

The letter of greetings of the Executive Committee of the Communist International to the Third National Convention of the Workers Party is being sent to every member of the United States senate and house of representatives at Washington.

In this way it is hoped to give the members of congress some real information on the relations between the Communist International and its American section. The letter accompanying the greetings of the international was as follows:

To the Members of the House of Representatives and Senate of the United States:

Dear Sirs—In view of the publicity given by the department of State to an alleged letter from Gregory Zinoviev, Chairman of the Communist International, to the Workers Party of America, which is denounced by both Zinoviev and the Workers Party of America as a forgery, we are sending you a copy of a letter from the Executive Committee of the Communist International to the National Convention of the Workers Party of America, which will be held in Chicago December 26 and January 1.

The letter, which will be publicly read at the Workers Party Convention, contains a clear presentation of the policies of the Communists, as contrasted to the ridiculous suggestions about "sheeting practice" and "sappers" contained in the forged documents.

Very truly yours,
C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary,
Workers Party.

Subscriptions for "The Daily" Begin to Pile up Big

As the date of publication of "The Daily Worker" approaches, the class conscious American workers who appreciate the importance of having a Communist daily paper are straining every effort to roll up a great subscription list. Thousands of Workers Party members are making a house to house canvass, visiting labor unions and soliciting subscriptions in the shops.

Morris Loeb, Business Manager of "The Daily Worker," declares that the volume of "subs" coming thru the mails has now reached over one hundred a day and that each succeeding mail brings a greater number than the preceding one. So far only subscriptions from individual readers of "The Worker," who are not members of the Workers Party, have come in this way.

The Workers Party branches have not yet begun to make returns. They are urged to send in all subscriptions at once as the management wishes to have the names of all those who have subscribed placed on the mailing list by January 13, so that the subscribers will not miss the first historic number.

Do not take a chance on getting your copy on the newsstand or by mere accident. The surest way to get your "Daily Worker" is to subscribe and do it now.

Hundreds of greetings are coming in to "The Daily Worker" office. And they are not mere empty expressions of "good luck" to the workers' daily. Each greeting is accompanied by a sum of money, anything from a one dollar bill up.

The greetings come from individuals, branches and locals. The Chicago City Central Committee sent in $25 as a token of its interest in "The Daily Worker."

January 13, will mark a red letter day in the history of the American working class. On that day they take a momentous step in the old struggle against their class enemies.

Greetings Across the World

Hughes and Lodge Had Better Get Rid of Their Whiskers

WASHINGTON.—Hughes' reply to Russia's offer of negotiations looks to Senator Norris (Rep. Neb.) like a propaganda move to prepare the country for another "orgy of deportations and red raids." Worst of all, the terrible raiders will get Charlie Hughes himself, "if he don't watch out." Why? Because, says Norris, the department of justice dicks usually begin their "red" raids by rounding up and arresting all men they can find wearing whiskers. But Norris sees a way out.

"I do hope the department of justice will notify the state department and the senate. Wouldn't it be a national calamity if Mr. Hughes and our distinguished leader, the senator from Massachusetts, Mr. Lodge, were to be picked up by the agents in the vicinity of one of the raids and shackled and handcuffed and deported to Russia!"

Chicago Plans Demonstration.

The Chicago Demonstration to greet "The Daily Worker," will be held at the Ashland Auditorium, W. Van Buren St. and Ashland Blvd., Sunday night, Jan. 13, with speakers including William Z. Foster, C. E. Ruthenberg, J. Louis Engdahl, Jack Carney and others.

The Liebknecht-Luxemburg memorial meeting in New York will be held Friday evening, Jan. 18th, at the Central Opera House, 67th St. and 3d Ave. A fine concert and tableau of the life of Liebknecht have been arranged. Admission is 25c. Tickets can be secured at the office of the Young Workers League, 208 E. 12th.

Detective Detected

By TIC TOCK.

Slumbering peacefully among the cobwebs of a certain book store was the makings of a hundred per cent Communist plot. Of all the places in the world who would ever look for such a thing in a radical book store. But surely to goodness there it was. And it might have been there holding communion with itself and the spiders until the year after the revolution but for the vigilant and watchful eye of that terror of evil doers, Albert Spolansky, chief of the Chicago branch of the Department of Justice's radical squad.

How this information came to The Worker nobody knows except those who know and they refuse to divulge the secret. Suffice it to say that Charles Evans Hughes, secretary of state for J. P. Morgan's principality can now rest in peace. The great plot has been nipped in the bud.

This is how it happened. But first let us tell you why it happened. Charles Evan Hughes published a letter giving the gruesome details of a plot to raise the Red Flag over the White House. The country took the story with a hee haw that got under Mr. Hughes' hide. Well, as you can plainly see the next thing to do was to go out and get the evidence.

Word was slipped to Spolansky to bring in the plot dead or alive and ship it C. O. D. to Washington. Nothing daunted, that gentleman walked out on a cold and rainy morning with his famous muffler around his neck and disguised as a human being he walked into a well-known book store and purchased a copy of the Theses of the Fourth Congress of the Communist International.

Watch out for the plot.

Full Report of the Party Convention in Our Next Issue

Owing to the fact that New Years Day follows almost immediately upon Sunday, this issue of "The Worker" went to press on Saturday, Dec. 29, on the eve of the opening of the Third National Convention of the Workers Party, in Chicago.

Next week's issue will contain a complete report of the party's convention with a thoro analysis of its achievements.

It is expected that the next issue of "The Worker" will be the last, the weekly being then merged into "The Daily Worker."

The sessions of the National Convention were planned to be held at the Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted St., Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 30, 31 and Jan. 1.

AMALGAMATED G. E. B. MEETS.

The fourth quarterly meeting of the General Executive Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America was held in the Morrison Hotel, Chicago, during the closing days of the year.

At the time of going to press only routine matters had been discussed but our next issue will carry a full report of the conference.

Food Workers Start Monthly.

The Culinary Times, a monthly published by the Amalgamated Food Workers, Chicago Hotel and Restaurant Branch, 214 N. State St., makes its bow with the December issue. Its policy is described by Editor C. H. Keller as bringing to the cooks, pastry cooks, waiters, waitresses and other workers in the hotels and restaurants real working class news of this industry; also to educate, agitate and organize for better conditions.

AUSPICES LOCAL GREATER NEW YORK WORKERS PARTY.

...men, Children Will Demonstrate for Lower Rents

The Second Conference held under the auspices of the Women's Co-operative League to consider the question of high rents and poor housing conditions in New York City, was attended by 30 delegates representing over 80 labor organizations, including local unions, Workmen's Circle branches, Workers Party branches, fraternal organizations, women's organizations, mothers' leagues, speaking for more than 60,000 working people.

The conference was greeted by Margaret Undjus, of the Workers Party, on behalf of the Lithuanian Progressive Women's Alliance, which sent ten delegates.

It was decided to hold a demonstration of working women and their children in the near future to protest against the high rents in New York City. It is hoped that the police will spare the women and children, and will not show their brutality to them as they did during the demonstrations when Mitchel was Mayor of New York City.

The chairman of the conference, Mrs. Diamond, new member of the Central Committee of the Workers Party, stated that mass meetings were held thruout the city, but that rents were still soaring, and nothing was done to lower them.

The aims of the conference are: (1) To unite the working men and working women to fight the high rents; (2) a united working women's protest organization to take up the fight of every class struggle side by side with the class conscious workers.

A central committee was elected, composed of one representative from each of the units represented at the conference. Katherine Ottlow was elected secretary of the central committee. Workers Party members are taking an active and prominent part in the mass united front movement of the working class population, showing thereby that the Workers Party does not hold aloof from the everyday struggle of the workers.

That the rent crisis is steadily growing worse is shown by the fact that the State Housing Commission appointed by Governor Smith to investigate the housing situation in New York City has handed in a report which gives a very gloomy picture. The report talk of exorbitant and constantly rising rents, low wages, houses out of repair, bad sanitary conditions, dark rooms, insufficient heating, over-crowding and a shortage of apartments.

Greetings from Communist International to Third Convention of Workers Party

the United States, the shops and mills are the centers of activity. It is obvious, therefore, that the shop must be the basis of all party work. Even though the factories are infested with spies planted there by the capitalists, thus rendering work difficult, the basic unit of the party must be the SHOP NUCLEUS. This will enable us to gather the workers on the job, where they feel most keenly the capitalist attack, the force of the movement.

The excellent work that has been done by the Communists in the Left Wing of the labor movement of the United States demonstrates that if all the comrades devote themselves to their work splendid results will be forthcoming. We must repeat the decision of the last session of the Enlarged Executive Committee, to the effect that it is the duty of all Communists to join the trade unions and be active in their work. The Communist Workers Party must take steps to get the comrades into the unions. This is one of its main tasks and one not to be neglected.

The propaganda that the Workers Party has conducted during the past year has been most effective. As a result, the ideas of Communism and the Communist movement are the center of discussion both among the workers and the capitalists. Despite the savage attempts of the American bourgeoisie to instill fear into the minds of American workers, the suggestion of Communism, and to point to the achievements of American democracy as the highest that mankind can aspire to, the actions of the American capitalists, class and the capitalist government in the past few years have opened the eyes of the workers. The strikes of 1922 taught them the true meaning of capitalist democracy; it also taught them that the Communists are fearless representatives of the class struggle because they are the most powerful spokesmen of the working class and the most valiant fighters in its interests.

The vast sentiment for Communism that the Workers Party has aroused must be crystallized. The Central Executive Committee acted right in inaugurating a campaign for membership. This campaign must be a matter of discipline. Each member of the party must be pledged to secure one or more members for the party. The Workers Party must increase its membership several times before it will become the factor in the proletarian movement of the United States that the Communists are destined to become.

FEDERATED FARMER-LABOR PARTY AND UNITED FRONT

The Workers Party has applied Communist tactics correctly in seeking a United Front of all forces to fight the capitalist system in the United States. It has sought a United Front not only on the economic, but particularly on the political field. That Gompers and the reactionary trade union officialdom oppose it because of their antiquated, treacherous policy of "rewarding the friends and punishing the enemies of labor" in the capitalist parties; that the Socialists, having renounced every revolutionary idea, are lined up with the reactionary forces of the country, also oppose it; and that a few so-called "progressive" trade union leaders of the Middle West have betrayed the workers and gone over to Gompers, that they denounce the ideas they once stood for and therefore also oppose the United Front—is creating the best basis for the United Front policy. This treachery has been and will remain one of the chief reasons why the workers of America still are the prey of the capitalist parties of America. This treachery, however, will show the workers so much the more clearly the necessity of the United Front. It will also demonstrate to them that the Communists, who are the only militant exponents of the United Front, are not their enemies, but their friends, but the only ones in the United States who understand the political needs of the working class.

The organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was an achievement of primary importance. The coming together of the militant farmers and workers for the attainment of political power against the control of the capitalist parties, revealed an awakening consciousness and a rising spirit no longer to tolerate political domination by the bourgeoisie. In the Federated Farmer-Labor Party are organized only a small portion of the militant workers and farmers. The United Front of all proletarian and farmer's parties and organizations for the fight against capitalism, is the demand of the hour. The Communists must spare no effort to bring this about.

This is all the more necessary in view of the presidential elections of 1924. The labor parties and farmer-labor parties that have been formed in 29 states must be consolidated into a United Front; they must put up joint proletarian candidates. They must fight as a united body against the reaction that is bound to set in after the election of the capitalist party to support this United Front with their economic power. The chaos in the working-class movement must be ended. This is the task of the Communists, a task they are striving to accomplish.

There is one problem to which the American Communists have not applied themselves with sufficient energy, viz., that of American imperialism. The huge profits from the war and the exploitation of foreign countries have enabled the American bourgeoisie to penetrate deeper into the Latin-American countries. The recent declaration of Secretary of State Hughes to the effect that the interpretation of the Monroe doctrine must be left exclusively to the discretion of America, is significant of dollar diplomacy. The recognition of Mexico is merely a trick to give American capitalists greater control over the resources of Mexico and, in case of "trouble," afford the American government an excuse for intervention "in protection of American property and interests." The conflict in Cuba, which will also probably end with an intervention, the continued military occupation of Haiti and Santo Domingo, the mauling of Nicaragua, Panama and Columbia, the loans to the numerous Latin-American states, the increasing economic exploitation of these countries, and the rising revolt in the Phillipines, indicate that American imperialism intends to conquer the western hemisphere and force the colonies under complete control.

IMPERIALIST WARS FACE AMERICA.

This is a problem of vital importance to the American working class. Fearful imperialist wars face the country. The bourgeoisie is making ready. The government is perfecting its military machinery; General Pershing is demanding a larger army. The Communists must sound the alarm and prepare the workers for resistance to these bloody schemes. The Communists must point out that the illegal organizations of the capitalist class, the spies, and especially the Ku Klux Klan and American Legion, are a product of the farsight of the capitalists and are openly sponsored by the government of the United States. The capitalists are prepared to crush any attempt to interfere with their plans.

These, comrades, are the vital problems that confront the party. To propagate them and organize the workers for action will demand the concentrated strength of the whole party membership.

We greet the third convention of the Workers Party and have confidence that the party will line up the workers of America with the revolutionary workers of the world in the struggle against capitalism and for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

With Communist greetings,

(Signed) EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL,
V. P. Kolarov, General Secretary.

A Communist daily in the English language will appear for the first time on American soil. This is enough to give the American capitalists an uneasy feeling and corresponding hope to the workers. Not alone do the communists sense the significance of the establishment of a revolutionary workers' daily but the great masses of the workers and exploited farmers who have been lied to and lied about, instinctively feel that the "Daily Worker" is their companion, that will support them in their daily struggles as well as lead them along the right road to ultimate victory.

The Workers Party therefore urges all workers to put their shoulders to the wheel during the short period between now and January 15, and help "The Daily Worker" to start out on its task of emancipation with thousands of readers.

MOSCOW. — New paper money notes are being issued, on which the inscription has for the first time been made in the principal languages of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, namely: in Russian, Small-Russian or Ukrainian, White-Russian, Armenian, Georgian and Turko-Tartarian.

Drive German Communists Underground.

BERLIN.—General von Seeckt's order dissolving the Communist party has had the effect of clearing up all party offices and confiscating such property as the military could lay hand upon. But as far as crushing the party is concerned, the general's order has merely had the effect of converting the legal organization into an illegal one. The Communist party executive has voted to move into a nearby country (much as the Russian revolutionists under the czar conducted all their propaganda from abroad, chiefly from Switzerland and Paris).

Nearing Lauds Canadian Workers.

MONTREAL.—"Compared with the average American worker, Canadian workers are considerably freer in discussion of matters of interest to them; they are less restricted in their critical utterances by a sense of obligation to the bureaucracy of their trade unions. Therefore, Canadian labor in the future is apt to develop much more militant and active movement than in the United States."

This statement was made by Scott Nearing when asked for his impressions of Canada. Nearing has finished the last of his three lectures on "World Economics" given under the auspices of the Montreal Labor College.

The worker and his product under Capitalism are soap parted.

To replace electrocution the state of Nevada has introduced a method to kill by gas.

This should be much cheaper. All they need do is to call in an old party candidate for office to make a campaign speech.

We are positive this is a sure way to kill. We once heard a part of Coolidge's speech over the radio.

Hey! What About Coolidge?

Secretary Weeks says Americans spend 8 times as much for luxuries, amusements and mild vices as for military preparations.

Acting on Secretary Weeks' suggestion something should be done. The Supreme Court is one luxury we certainly could do without. And Congress, after all, is a tiresome amusement. And mild vices?—well—we could, if necessary, dispense with Secretary Weeks.

Working daily—for the DAILY!

There are at least these two classes in America: The Capitalist class that works—and the Working class they work.

They Respect the Law and Order—From Their Bootlegger.

Upon the arrest of a ring of Washington, D. C., bootleggers, Assistant District Attorney Pressmont announced they had also secured a long customer list—including even cabinet members—which they would publish. A few days later this list disappeared secretly, preventing any action on this matter.

The District Attorney should have no trouble acquiring another list for the next batch. All he negd do is to let them down when the roll is called in Congress.

"About the only difference between the tyrants who lived in the past and those traveling under the aegis of Bolshevism is one of method—and the method is bad."—Chicago Daily News.

Though we don't agree—we listen with respect. For after all who has had more experience in bad methods —aye, even rotten methods—than The Chicago Daily News?

But we find something we can agree on. The Chicago Daily News tastily remarks: "In the year 1924 Congress can—and should—go to work."

"Them are truly noble words!" We agree. They should by all means go to work. On the ice wagon, moving pianos, tending bar—and give a chance to representatives who truly voice the wants of their constituents.

BUT—Can you have a Happy New Year without The Daily Worker?

Hell—No!

There are people who believe there is no hell. Those birds never came home late from a meeting and had their wife greet them!

A local paper headlines an editorial on prohibition: "Does Congress Want Real Prohibition?"

Well—Congress is probably willing to submit the question to the Supreme Court. For its decisions—and other things—Congress has always gone to the bar.

"People differ on Henry Ford's fitness to be President of the United States, but all must admit that he is a man of parts."—Little Rock (Arkansas) Gazette.

Yes, we must admit he is a man of parts—because we have often said he was "half-cracked."

Working daily—for THE DAILY!

Maybe the religious debate that is given so much newspaper space may not settle the question of the infallibility of the Bible—

But—

It will keep the workers from thinking about settling the question of the infallibility of Capital.

Wallace Again Saves the Packers

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace is again shedding crocodile tears over the plight of the Big Packers to allow the government to look after its business.

No farmer or workman need take Wallace's protests seriously. The secretary of agriculture has proved a tower of strength to the Trust Press in their campaign to break down the courage to resist the anti-trust provisions of the Packers' Consent Decree. Addressing the annual convention of the Institute of American Meat Packers in Atlantic City, last September, Mr. Wallace actually encouraged the packers to do what they are doing now.

According to the official organ of the packing industry, the National Provisioner, in its issue of Sept. 22d, Secretary Wallace said in discussing the difference between the packers and the government's interpretation upon which we have not yet come to a complete agreement is the matter of putting auditors into your plant with the view of informing ourselves as to your accounting and other various details of your business. Now, let me say that I appreciate fully the position you take with regard to that, and I am sympathetic with it. I realize the strength of the argument you make against it. On the other hand," said Mr. Wallace with a wave of his hands, "it might happen that the courts would perhaps hold that that was necessary.

"Now, if we can agree on that, when the final conference is held, if you gentlemen feel that your rights are invaded, if you then feel that we are exercising authority which is not given under the law, and want to contest that, I want you to feel perfectly free to do that, because I do not want you to do a thing that you believe to be an unwarranted intrusion on your business."

Mr. Wallace omitted saying was Forget the law. What is the law between friends anyhow? Had the secretary of agriculture spoken such plain words yesterday the farmers might have spared him the task of shedding crocodile tears today.

Deathly Silence for Mussolini

(Special Correspondence to "The Worker")

TURIN, ITALY.—The visit of Benito Mussolini to the great Fiat automobile plant was like a funeral. The duce (chief) came to Turin to participate in the celebration of the first anniversary of the so-called "March on Rome," when the little King Emmanuel invited the former red Benito to take charge of affairs of state.

Benito at that time was already prepared to become servant of the king, as he stated. When he met the king, Benito was no longer red, no longer dangerous, no longer Socialist, no longer a Communist, no longer Bolshevist, no longer for the Massinian republican ideals, but really a servant of the King and of the bureaucratic "oligarchy and autocracy of finance and landlordism. "Our" Benito was purged of all his past revolutionary ardor, was no longer the audacious leader of the Italian workers, was no longer the apologete for the Paris Commune, the exalter of the martyrdom of the Czar's victims, the aggressive anti-clerical, the man who declared that the workers of Italy in their struggle against the Pope, against the bureaucratic "oligarchy and autocracy of finance and landlordism. "Our" Benito was purged of all his past revolutionary ardor, was no longer the audacious leader of the Italian workers, was no longer the apologete for the Paris Commune, the exalter of the martyrdom of the Czar's victims, the aggressive anti-clerical, the man who declared that the workers of Italy in their struggle against the Pope, against the bureaucratic "oligarchy and autocracy of finance and landlordism, against all the institutions that keep the workers oppressed and ignorant. Benito was no longer the man who wrote in the history of John Huss, the revolutionary monk of Prague, burned at the stake alive by the order of the Pope and the Catholic emperor of Austria. Benito was no more the working class captain who led the workers of Italy in their demonstration against the execution of Francisco Ferrer, the teacher of the Spanish workers, murdered by order of the Spanish clerical Pope Pius X and His Catholic Majesty Alphonso XIII. No, Benito this time was not the Anafest Terrorist of 1911, when he was the guide of the workers in their general strike protesting against the infamous Libyan campaign, the little king was not so cordial toward "our" Benito, because his opposition to that war cost him many years in the penitentiary. Yes, much water has passed since then under the bridges of the Rubicon; the Pope has forgotten the many sins of "our" Benito, even that committed in 1911, when the Anafest was attempted to kill the king, and Benito praised D'Alba for that action. Now? The throne is safe, and Emmanuel has forgotten about the past.

But the workers of Italy have not forgotten! They remember the Rabagas (cheap politicians) who betrayed them. They remember and are still loyal to the class struggle preached them formerly by Mussolini. Yes, those workers, bleeding from their wounded body, like Christ on the cross, cannot forget the Judas, the deserter, the brigand who led the black shirt mob, the Pharisees of this capitalist epoch to crucify the proletarian soldiers.

Yes, those men and women who work and suffer, whose kin are in jail or have been assassinated, who have lost their halls, their newspapers, printing plants, co-operatives, clubs, theatres and all the fruits of half a century of labor and sacrifice, cannot forget the Judas who led the vandals in their orgies of destruction and assassination.

So, in their sorrow, in their silence of martyrdom they remember the brother Cain.

He, the duce (chief), came to Turin, one of the most industrial cities of Italy. He stayed in the city for two days, October 24 and 25. He made many official speeches, at the railroad station, at the hotel, at the city hall, at the headquarters of the newspapermen's association, and so on.

Commendatore Agnelli, the automagnate of Italy, thought that it would be a good occasion to invite the Duce to his plant, the Fiat, in order to deliver there a patriotic speech to the twenty thousand workers, to induce them to stop thinking of class war. Agnelli prepared for the event, and at noon all the workers were forced to go into the big yard of the plant. There was a platform for the speakers, the guests, and the cliqueurs (those hired to applaud).

The automobile carrying the duce passed thru the big mass of workers in their working clothes. The silence was that of the tomb. It seemed like a funeral. The air was tense, Agnelli and all his associates were yellow, and they could not understand the terrible significance of that silent protest of twenty thousand workers.

The spectres of thousands of workers murdered by the Fascisti, the flames and the smoke of the buildings destroyed by the black hordes, were passing in front of those bandits. Those spectres were speaking their last words, the words spoken by those who fell on the squares, on the roads, in their houses, battling for the freedom of the working class. And like the notes of sorrowful music the words were heard by all those thousands of workers: "Courage, brothers, he is the Judas, march on, the hour will come, our sacrifice was not in vain!

"Oh, glorious workers of Turin, with the solemnity of your silence, you have shown the determination of the Italian working class!

"Forward!"

White Terror in Germany

"The Worker" has just been notified of the supression of the International Press Correspondence at Berlin, Germany, in a statement received as follows:

To Subscribers to the International Press Correspondence.

The Military Commander-in-General von Seeckt, has, on November 23, 1923, prohibited thruout Germany the Communist Party of Germany, the Communist Youth of Germany and the Communist International. In this prohibition the International Press Correspondence was included. We are, therefore, obliged provisionally to suspend publication of the International Press Correspondence until such time as it is again possible for us to issue it as hitherto.

New Party Sub-district Organized

In order to strengthen the party organization in the Southern Ohio mine field the party branches in Belmont County and in neighboring counties have recently held a Sub-district Convention at which a sub-district organization was created.

Comrade Speher was elected the sub-district organizer and the sub-district will endeavor to enable him to give all of his time to the party work.

The sub-district organization was created in a territory including some of the most active branches of the Workers Party and will undoubtedly lead to creating an even stronger organization.

Most of the members of the sub-district are members of the United Mine Workers of America and work in the coal mines

War on Appeal of Ruthenberg in Michigan Trials

The official labor-baiters of Mr. Daugherty's "Department of Justice," stinging from past defeats have again turned their attention to Michigan and are now out to smash the appeal of C. E. Ruthenberg, which is about to be heard. The appeal was scheduled to come up in the Michigan Supreme Court during the January term. It was postponed. Announcement is now made that it will be on the docket of the April session.

Ruthenberg is today the central figure in the so-called "Michigan cases." The success or failure of his appeal will be of vital significance to the 23 other defendants indicted with him following the raid on the Communist Party convention in Bridgeman County, August 22, 1922. If the appeal is successful, it is extremely unlikely that the other cases will be brought to trial at all.

Appreciation of this fact has led the defense to concentrate on the appeal ahead. The Labor Defense Council, composed of non-partisan labor elements, which is backing the accused Communists, has sent out the slogan of: "Get Behind the Ruthenberg Appeal." Every effort will be made to fight the Ruthenberg appeal thru successfully. Workers are being asked by the council to contribute.

The first draft of a brief and argument for the defense has already been prepared. It is understood that the principal point put forward will be that nothing happened in the state of Michigan which would warrant conviction under the state anti-criminal syndicalism law. An ordinary political convention was held there and that was all.

Attorneys for the defense declare that if their appeal is lost in Michigan they will take the case to the United States Supreme Court. Expenses in connection with the Ruthenberg appeal have already begun to mount up, the Labor Defense Council announces. Funds are needed for legal fees, as well as for such items as printing of briefs, printing of the court records, etc., all of which must be taken care of before the appeal can be heard. Workers are beginning to "get behind the Ruthenberg appeal."

Big Majority in Congress Speaks for Rich

[illegible]

In the house there are 363 members. These are men who have, prior to their entry into Congress, gained their wealth by the exploitation of labor and service to the property owning class in the country. They are as much the representatives of that class as soldiers are the representatives of the standing army. They are as unconditionally, unreservedly politically. They two have an investment, seventy business men, eight bankers, eight lawyers, eight bankers, five insurance men, five merchants, three investment bankers, two publishers, two manufacturers, are either dependent on or part of the employing class outright.

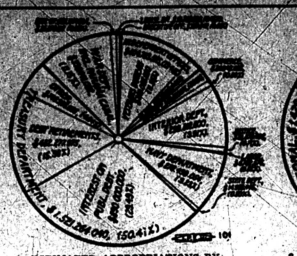
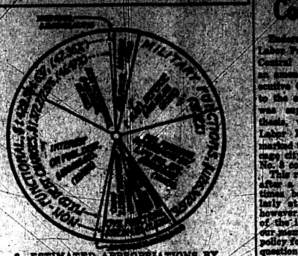
War Gets 83 Cents of Your Dollar



1—ESTIMATED APPROPRIATIONS BY ORGANIZATION UNITS
Total Estimated Appropriations $5,018,089,946



2—ESTIMATED APPROPRIATIONS BY GOVERNMENTAL FUNCTIONS
Total Estimated Appropriations $5,018,089,946

By LELAND OLDS.

Eighty-three cents out of every dollar paid to the federal government during the year 1924-1925 is already earmarked for the support of wars past, present and to come. That leaves a scant 17 cents for the running of the country, the making of laws, their execution, provision for public health, education, public works, labor and the promotion of industry and commerce. Five-sixths for war and one-sixth for peace. Evidently the chief business of the federal government is war.

This sounds like hot stuff, but it comes from the budget message of President Coolidge proposing $5,018,162,078 as the cost of government in 1925, and just to hammer this lesson home he thrusts it under your eye in the attached charts which show how small a slice of your dollar goes for anything which will benefit you as a peaceful citizen.

Briefly Coolidge says $2,500,000,000 for war and only $500,000,000 for making the country a decent place to live in during the intermission between wars. Are you satisfied?

Budget allowances on account of war are all figured in the hundreds of millions of dollars, $634,152,212 for the army and navy, $902,190,346 for military pensions and retirement pay, $390,000,000 for the annual interest on the war debt and $482,577,275 for the annual cost of retiring that debt.

Budget allowances on account of the country's peace time development cut a modest figure by comparison. Below are the tens of millions only $10,571,[illegible] for education, $16,169,224 for sci[illegible]e and research, $26,183,091 for the promotion of matters affecting labor, $18,182,062 for the promotion and regulation of commerce and industry and so on.

This means that where education gets about one-third of a cent of your tax dollar the army and navy gets 70¼ cents, or 50 times as much. It means that where education, public health, science and research combined gets less than 1¼ cents out of your dollar war gets 83 cents, or 60 times as much.

Coolidge was able to present this budget with such composure as to cause the New York Times to remark editorially: "He has a single topic to deal with and does it in a masterly fashion. Whatever the result it cannot be denied that he has come forward as a capable and fearless commander-in-chief. All loyal taxpayers are supposed to toe up their hats and cheer.

But if national budgets were ever passed on by the people you, as a taxpayer, might be struck with the fact that the cost of government could be reduced by a couple of billion dollars if the government of the world were taken out of the hands of the great financiers who profit by war. The workers of this country sull of other lands desire nothing more than peace in which to produce the good things of life for themselves and their families. Yet they continue to pay for capitalist wars not only directly with their bodies in battle, but also to all eternity in their hard-earned dollars which are demanded to meet such war-swollen budgets.

HOW TO GET BACK AT THE BOSS.

By G. M.

We need say nothing as to how the boss "gets at" you, but the following quotation from the "Manufacturers' News," Nov. 17, throws light on how the bosses deliberately set out to dope the workers with false propaganda, which they kid themselves into believing can be "plain statements of facts" answering the "wrong and erroneous conclusions" of the radicals:

"Employes in manufacturing plants read. They also reason out things for themselves. Unfortunately a good and therefore reads erroneous conclusions. That is why some employees are attracted by radical propositions.

"More factory managers should undertake to inform employes concerning the elements of industrial economics. It would be an excellent idea if the Factory Bulletin Board would have posted on it some convincing arguments with relation to economic laws, such as the following: Socialism vs. Individualism; Restricted Output Injures the Public Including the Wage Earners; Labor's Share of Increased Production; The Beneficiaries of Wealth; The Cause of High Rents; The Measure of a Real Wage; Is What a Man is Able to Buy With It, etc.

"Many articles on these subjects are to be found in the Manufacturers' News, and in nearly every newspaper. They can be boiled down and explained by some intelligent (? Ed.) member of the plant organization. They should not be too 'peachy.' They should be plain statements of fact, not merely propaganda." (Such as the capitalist newspapers are full of, etc.?)

Will you let the bosses beat you to it? If not, your duty as a class conscious worker is to "explain to" and "inform" all workers of the plain statements of fact by giving and selling them the leaflets, pamphlets, books, papers and magazines issued by the Workers Party.

Branches, organize your members for the systematic distribution of our literature and send in your orders.

Comrades, do your duty, see that every worker gets a chance to read what the capitalists call "the wrong things."

A Friend in Time of Need.

The other night I went down town and picked out a street corner well traveled by the unemployed. I had on my best: $60 tailored overcoat, $75 suit, $7 hat, $15 pair of shoes. To look at me you would think I owned a bank. Every now and then a man, poorly and sometimes well dressed, would stop, fool around, and then come up. But always with the same story. Some were new at the game. At the end of their story I said: "My friend, did you say you were hungry? Don't you know this is the land of plenty? Why should a man, willing to work, go hungry or be in need of a place where to sleep?" This they could not answer. Then I would say: "Did you not fight for your country?" and they said: "Yes." Well, then: "What did you do with your part of it?" "Or is this owned by some one else?" Then I said: "Oh, brother, you need more food for your head than your stomach. Here is a nickel and a copy of 'The Worker.' Stimulate your brains a little with a cup of coffee and read what 'The Worker' has to offer."—Your comrade, Rob K., Kansas City, Mo.

Extracts From Dunne's Speech to the Convention.

"In the capitalist courts I am not called an enemy to the trade union movement; rather do they say that I shall upon the workers to resist the attacks of the employers."

"Do you realize that only about one-seventh of the wage-earners of this great nation are members of organized labor and that the percentage of the organized to the total number of wage-earners is growing smaller all the time?"

"There is another reason for your desire to unseat me. You want to intimidate the supporters of amalgamation and a labor party because these two proposals are a threat to your privileged positions."

"We Communists do not care much for academic devotion to abstract principles. We realize that only thru organization can be obtained those things that make for progress."

Feed the Turkey if You Want a Good Thanksgiving Dinner

By ROSE KARSNER.

American business men and bankers are very philanthropic! In the name of the starving German people they are continually donating large sums of money. While they are conducting this humane work they are also negotiating with German industrialists. They are promising large loans.

What does it really mean? Simple enough.

To grind the maximum amount of work out of the German workers, they must first be fed. To make the American investment worth while, German industrialists must promise big profits. To make big profits under the present bankrupt state of affairs, the industrialists must abolish the eight-hour day and increase it to ten and twelve hours.

So it comes down to giving the German workers with one hand and taking back ten times as much with the other hand. Or, feeding the turkey before leading it to slaughter.

There are other German relief drives being conducted under other guises. Such as helping the German trade unions. But those also are only a pretext. The real object is to pit one class of workers against another. To feed one kind of trade unionist and to help kill another kind—so-called "red." To help the present German government in carrying out its policy.

I quote from the Chicago Tribune, under the date line of Berlin, Nov. 27:

"Turning Berlin into an armed camp today, the police snuffed out an attempt of the Communists to hold HUNGER DEMONSTRATIONS.

"Grim tanks with businesslike muzzles of machine guns protruding from the ports spurted defiance.

"Meanwhile, President Ebert, Socialist harness maker, turned over the rule of Germany to the Nationalistic parties, who are expected to control a majority in the Reichstag.

"As far as foreign policy is concerned, it will follow closely the lines of the Stresemann government. Regarding internal policies it will be more severe towards the Communists and Socialists. IT WILL DEMAND LONGER HOURS OF WORK AND IT WILL MAKE EVERY EFFORT TO RESTORE THE SUPREMACY OF THE INDUSTRIALISTS and enable them to reopen their factories in unoccupied Germany."

There is only ONE way of helping the German workers and their families. And that is to help ALL GERMAN WORKERS, regardless of their political faith.

Everywhere we must demand:

GERMAN FAMINE RELIEF WITHOUT CONDITIONS!

GERMAN FAMINE RELIEF WITHOUT POLITICAL DISCRIMINATION!

[illegible] the capitalist newspapers admit that the defiant words which Dunne flung into the faces of [illegible] and his reactionary lieutenants at Portland constituted one of the most remarkable speeches ever made at a convention of the American Federation of Labor. Dunne is a great speaker. Big, burly and aggressive, he bows straight to the line, and was the lone Communist in Portland convention last summer which he was accredited by the Labor Trades and Labor Council of Butte, Montana. Because of the able and courageous way in which he stood out against the machinations of the Gompers clique of "fat boys" [illegible]0,000.00 a year labor leaders, who became panic stricken and expelled him from the convention, although no one questioned that he was a duly elected delegate.

For many years "Bill" Dunne has been an active fighter in the forefront of the trade union movement. As editor of the nationally known Butte Bulletin, he has succeeded in winning the united support of the workers [illegible] the northwest, particularly the state of Montana, where he has taken a leading part in the big battle against the powerful Anaconda Copper Interests.

Dunne is a member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, under whose auspices these meetings are to be held.

DUNNE'S
SPEECH AT PORTLAND

William F. Dunne was delegate to the Portland Convention of the American Federation of Labor, representing the Silver Bow Central Labor Council of Butte, Montana.

Dunne is a Communist and Sam Gompers and the other labor fakers knew it. They conspired to have Dunne expelled from the convention, for no other reason, under no other charge, but because he is a COMMUNIST. He was expelled.

At that convention "Bill" Dunne made a speech in self defence. That speech is a masterpiece.

This Speech is Now Published in Pamphlet Form

It is the most effective kind of educational work to distribute this widely among union men. This is the time when live wires are needed. It must receive the widest circulation throughout the country.

Dunne said:

"Before a capitalist court, I would offer a defense and take advantage of every loophole, but before the lackeys of the employers, NO."

Greetings From the International

Every member of the Workers Party will read with pride the greetings from the Executive Committee of the Communist International to the Third National Convention of the Workers Party.

It is the custom of the International to be sparing with its praise. It strikes hard with its criticism. And annual conventions of the national sections of the Comintern are the times when the Executive Committee of the Communist International seeks to point out mistakes that have been made and to raise the danger signal against wrong tendencies, in order that a strong, unified Communist world-movement may result.

The greetings to the Workers Party, published in full elsewhere, is exceptional in the history of the Communist International. It is a document approving in glowing terms of the struggles waged by the Workers Party during the past year. No criticism is offered of policies adopted and tactics pursued. It is doubtful if any other section of the Comintern can boast of a similar endorsement of any year's endeavor.

The establishment of "The Daily Worker" is hailed as the party's most important step, the efforts at party re-organization approved, the work done by Communists in the left wing of the labor movement rated as excellent, greater efforts demanded in the membership campaign, while it is declared that the Workers Party has "applied Communist tactics correctly in seeking a United Front of all forces to fight the capitalist system in the United States."

The International declares that the treachery of Gompers, the treason of the Socialists and the betrayal of the United Front by a few "progressive" leaders, creates the best basis for the United Front policy.

The Communist International looks upon the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party as "an achievement of primary importance." It is pointed out that the ending of the chaos in the working class movement is the task of the Communists.

Greater energy is urged in sounding the alarm against the bloody schemes of American imperialism. This is recognized as one of the greatest tasks of American Communism.

With the definite endorsement of its policies by the Communist International, the Workers Party will press forward, in the words of the Comintern, "to propagate them and organize the workers for action." This is the next step in the forward march of American Communism, and it will demand the concentrated strength of the whole membership of the Workers Party.

Wall Street Journal Whistles

"That the people will use politicians and parties like Ramsay MacDonald and the Laborites to rebuke its governors at general elections is the ordinary method of British politics. But that the British electorate will turn over all property, public and private, for a group of children to destroy in play is a possibility not worth discussion."—WALL STREET JOURNAL.

* * *

Sounds suspiciously, like the small boy who whistled when going thru the graveyard—to keep his courage up. Wall Street is right in sizing up the role of labor reform parties as vehicles of popular protest rather than as machinery of fundamental economic and political change. But back of this labor protest is a grim revolutionary force slowly crystallizing itself into the British Communist movement. At present, while the masses are getting their primary grade lessons in working class politics, this

Labor Party Recognizes the Capitalist Dictatorships

The Labor Party conference in Berlin, the Second International reformists all met and—The militant Labor and Socialist parties of Italy, Germany, Spain, Hungary, Bulgaria and Greece are greatly outnumbered by Secretary Hughes, while the workers' dictatorship of Russia is turned down. The workers know the reason.

The Threat of Unemployment

All government findings tend to point to a steady and rapid increase in our army of unemployed. If the present rate of increase is maintained for a few months, early 1924 will bring misery and suffering to millions.

What unemployment really means to the workers is often lost in the shuffle of government statistics and investigations. But the findings of a study of unemployment and child welfare made by Emma Octavia Lundberg, for the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, tells a woeful tale of the unspeakable distress that unemployment brings to the workers.

Says the report: "The investigation made by the bureau shows that unemployment not only carries with it immediate deprivation and hardship but leaves a burden of debt and discouragement for the years to come. . . . . Besides, the deprivation of material needs, there is suffering that perhaps can be understood only by those who have themselves been the victims of the dread uncertainty and fear that besets a workingman's family when the father is laid off. The most important feature of unemployment is its effect on the family morale—the father idle about the house, unsettled, disheartened; the mother going out to work if she can secure it, and using up every bit of her strength in the double task of providing for the family's maintenance and caring for the household and the children; the children suffering from the depression and uncertainty of what the future may mean, which is even more to be dreaded than the discomforts of the immediate present."

Congress is preparing to dump $500,000,000 into the "pork barrel." In one day, Dec. 5, 118 bills were introduced in the House alone. Not a single one of these bills dealt with the problems of unemployment. About sixty of them were bills to dispense with the hundreds of millions of "pork."

Yet it is only a matter of a few months when unemployment in all its brutality will menace millions of workers. The miners, the clothing workers, the workers in the copper industry are already feeling the pinch. We need but keep the above picture of destitution in mind for a short while. Many of us will soon live it.

Living Cost Swinging Upward

A perusal of the latest figures on the cost of living issued by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics will dispel whatever illusions one might have about the direction in which the price of food stuffs is traveling.

From Oct. 15 to Nov. 15, 1923, there was an increase in the cost of living in 22 out of 28 cities investigated. The rise was as high as 3 per cent during the month in certain localities.

For the year ending Nov. 15, 1923, the bureau found an increase in the cost of living in all of the 28 cities. In the city of Chicago the price of food stuffs rose 8 per cent during the year. In the big industrial centers the workers are paying 50 to 60 per cent more for their food than they paid before the war. Rent and other items have risen even more rapidly.

At the same time, the farmers are up against it and getting more deeply into the slough of depression. Wage cuts are again becoming the order of the day. Only a few days ago the big shoe manufacturers forced their workers in Lynn, Massachusetts, to accept a wage cut of 15 per cent.

Naturally one might be prone to ask under the circumstances a rather pertinent question. The farmers are getting worse off. The workers are facing increasing unemployment and a wage cuts. But the cost of living is swinging upward steadily and swiftly. Who is getting the benefit of the increasing profits?

Perhaps the oil magnates, the bankers, the railway kings, and the coal magnates would volunteer to enlighten us!

From an Oklahoma Farmer

I think of the past of Spartacus who dared to lead a slaves' revolt against imperial Rome; of the six thousand crosses, bearing aloft as many heads, set up on the Apian Way as the terrible warning to all slaves who dared to strike for freedom in the future.

I think of another Spartacus and this friend, Otto Ruhle," who "alone among 110 Socialist deputies in the Reichstag disregarded the party discipline, destroyed the harmonious union with the centrists and chauvinists, and fought everybody"; of his brutal murder by a government largely in the hands of these "110 Socialist deputies"; of the 20 or 30 thousand of his loyal followers who with their noble leader could see "the golden dawning" of a better day and had the courage to fight for it and the devotion to die for it. I think of the Hungarian comrades, tortured and murdered by the most inhuman and barbarous methods that the minds of devils in human form could conjure up. I think of Francisco Ferrer who fearlessly opposed the Roman hierarchy in Spain and for that offense had his life snuffed out. His last words, as reported by "The Truth Seeker," still ring in my ears: "Alm straight, lads. Long live the Public School."

I think of "The Brotherhood Grave" and its five hundred proletarian occupants in the shadow of the Kremlin; of the ragged, red soldiers who died for me and for world liberty; and as I think of these things my eyes fill with tears and I wish that I might multiply the enclosed $10.00 by one thousand or one hundred thousand.

Changing the trend of my thought but not losing sight of the principle involved, I think of the oppressed proletarian farmer: of the narrow, selfish, suspicious life that he lives; of the ignorance, squalor and lack of modern refinement and conveniences in his home. And all this notwithstanding the fact that he could be bounteously supplied if he could only be induced to lay aside his one horse, antiquated tools and methods and employ modern scientific processes. But he is a philistine by nature and shall have to be eliminated in the same manner that the individualistic shoemaker was.

The ten dollars is for two shares of stock in The Daily Worker.

Yours for a better world and higher civilization.

Didn't Paul Lafargue say a few years when he wrote: "Wealth is the curse of labor, but the reward of idleness"?

Collective ownership and control of industry would furnish the greatest incentive toward human endeavor.

36,000 Local Unions

It is estimated that there are approximately 36,000 local labor unions in the United States. These are thousands of spots, big and little, where labor is striving to organize and build its power.

In the present crisis confronting America's organized workers every urge to progress should be utilized to the full.

It is inevitable that in time the workers in these 36,000 local labor unions will discover that "The Daily Worker," is their friend and champion. But that message must be brought to them NOW! They must subscribe for "The Daily Worker" from the date of the first issue, JANUARY 18, 1923.

Imagine the great power of "THE DAILY WORKER" if it had only one subscriber in each of these 36,000 unions. One subscriber means a dozen readers. One copy of "THE DAILY WORKER" will be like a speaker before an audience—reaching many.

What an achievement, therefore, to get only one subscriber for "THE DAILY WORKER." What an overwhelming triumph to get an audience in every one of the 36,000 local labor unions in the nation! Let every thinking worker join in this effort, NOW! Use the subscription blank to be found on another page, NOW.

Ford---The End of an Illusion . . . .

By John Pepper

Our political life revolves, rich and full of change as a kaleidoscope.

Yesterday Henry Ford was very seriously taken as a candidate for the presidency. Candidate of great masses of farmers, small business men and workers.

That was yesterday. And today Henry Ford has made a declaration denying his own candidacy and endorsing President Coolidge as the best candidate.

Of course it is not unusual for the world's richest manufacturer to endorse for the presidency the candidate of the big bankers and trusts. Such a fact does not require any elaborate explanation. But what is unusual and calls for explanation is, how was it possible that the richest manufacturer of the world could have become a serious candidate of struggling farmers, handicapped small business men and even of exploited workers?

The Man of Contradictions.

Ford's role is the most paradoxical fact of American political life. Here we see the greatest contradiction, seemingly impossible of solution.

The greatest manufacturer of the world—and his name is on the lips of thousands and thousands of workers.

The greatest single exploiter in the United States—but the platform of his followers said: "Government in the hands of a privileged class has become an agency for exploitation instead of a security for life, liberty and property. The land of the free and the home of the brave is fast declining into a land of exploiters and exploited."

One of the richest men in the world —yet he, thunders against Wall Street, and his name is a standard around which poor people rally.

Ford declared that he would not be a good president in normal times, but would be good in a crisis or in case of war, when he would not be bound by the constitution, when a dictatorship would be necessary—yet the followers of Ford are calling for the struggle "to save democracy to the United States."

Paradoxes and contradictions. But the paradoxes can be solved and the contradictions explained if we dig deeper, if we analyze not only party platforms and mass illusions, but the class relationships.

Those who would simplify capitalist society in such a way as to resolve it into only two classes, exploiter and exploited, will never understand the role of Henry Ford. We could not understand the role of the political life of the United States or of any other country if we tried to reduce Marxism to the wisdom which would have it that on one side stands the working class and on the other simply the compact, reactionary mass of the bourgeoisie. If this simplification were Marxism, politics would be the easiest thing in the world to learn, and the A B C of Marxian Communism would be identical with the A B C of the primary school.

Manufacturers Versus Banks and Trusts.

True, Ford is one of the richest men of the world. But his riches are qualified by the fact that he is a manufacturer. Ford is a manufacturer of finished products, and we must understand that this is something different from bank capital and railroad corporations and basic industries. Ford is one of the richest men of the world. But Ford is a manufacturer of automobiles. And that makes him different from Rockefeller, head of the oil trust; Morgan, leader of bank capital; Gary, the chief of the steel trust. Ford became big as an individual manufacturer, and not as the head of a trust. As the manifesto of his followers says about him: "Whatever virtue the competitive system has, this man has exemplified." Ford as a manufacturer of finished products has to buy steel and coal, must use railroads, must borrow working capital. His interests are against the interests of the steel trust, coal trust, railroad corporations and against the money trust of Wall Street. He is against the trusts because trusts mean monopoly and therefore high prices of steel and coal, high freight rates and high interest on money. This explains Ford's periodic thunderings against trusts and Wall Street. Ford wants to produce fertilizer. For this reason he wants to buy Muscle Shoals. But against this plan he finds the power of the fertilizer trust, and behind the fertilizer trust, the whole state power, the government and Congress. This explains Ford's crusades for cheap fertilizer and his accusation against the fertilizer trust and against the patron of the trust, the government. The contradictions between finishing and basic industry, the contradictions between manufacturers and bank capital, the contradictions between individual manufacturers and trusts exist, not only in the United States, but in every highly developed capitalist country. The whole present political development in Great Britain and Germany would be meaningless if we were not to take into consideration these internal conflicts within the capital class. Without these contradictions, the conflict between Baldwin and Lloyd George in Great Britain, or the fight between Stinnes and Stresemann in Germany could not be understood.

Ford, the Saviour of the Poor.

True, Ford possesses hundreds of millions, and exploits tens of thousands of workers. But his economic interests force him into the fight against Wall Street, and against the trusts of steel, coal and transportation. This links Ford with all those strata whose interests are opposed to those of the trusts and Wall Street. This condition serves as a bridge between Ford and small business men, farmers and class unconscious but boss-hating workers. Small business men hate the trusts which ruin them. Farmers hate the banker which chokes them with mortgages, they hate trusts which raise the prices of all industrial products thru high coal and steel prices, and they hate railroad corporations which by high freight rates, skim off for themselves the cream of their crops. Ford "fights" against the trusts and Wall Street. That is why small business men, farmers and class unconscious workers saw in him their leader and Saviour.

It sounds almost incredible! The richest man of the world and the saviour of the poor! But we must understand that the very reason that he could play the saviour of the poor was the fact that he is the richest man of the world. Ford, for the illusion-stricken masses, is like Prince Charming of the fairy tale. It is true he is the richest man of the world, but he was a poor mechanic. He is not a trust, but on the contrary, he became big in the fight against Wall Street. He is the personified victory of the "competitive system." Ford's career lives as an ideal in the hearts of the small business man, the poor mechanics, and even thousands and thousands of workers.

Ford and the Third Party.

Ford is no politician. He belongs to none of the political parties. But this fact also, does not act against him, but for him. The discontent breaking forth from the deeps of small business men, intelligentsia and farmers has found three mass expressions. The La Follette movement which has a western center, the Hearst movement, with an eastern center and the Ku Klux Klan movement with a southern center. Considered from a class standpoint, the La Follette, Hearst and Ku Klux Klan movements are various expressions of the same classes, farmers, small business men and intelligentsia. Politically they are, of course, very different from one another. The La Follette movement gives the dominant role to the farmers. Small business men determine the complexion of the Hearst movement. In the Ku Klux Klan, the most backward farmers, and especially the intelligentsia, dominate. The La Follette movement is one of farms, villages and small towns. The Hearst movement is mostly a political expression of big cities. The Ku Klux Klan represents the intelligentsia in the South; in Ohio and Illinois it represents the prejudices of the native-born workers; in up-state New York, the backward farmers. The La Follette movement wants an alliance with the exploited farmers and workers. The ideology of the Hearst movement is best represented in Brisbane's petty-bourgeois, pink Socialist editorials. The Ku Klux Klan wants to exterminate immigrant workers, destroy trade unions, crush international Jewry and international bankers. La Follette, Hearst and the Ku Klux Klan are produced by the same disease, but they have colored variously by the various strata of those classes which dominate in each movement, and by varying regional and historical traditions.

La Follette's overall provincialism, Hearst's evening suit Socialism, and the Ku Klux Klan tar and feather Americanism—only one man was able to unite in his person these three movements—Henry Ford. Henry Ford was the only possible candidate for president who could unite in himself all these elements on a national scale. He was the only one who, over the heads of the regional leaders, over the heads of La Follette, Hearst and the Ku Klux Klan could unite the masses of these three movements against the old capitalist parties. He is with the Ku Klux Klan in Jew-baiting, but the small business man pardons him this because of his attacks against Wall Street. He is for a strong army; but the pacifist farmers forgive him because he is for cheap fertilizer and cheap coal and steel.

Emperor Ford.

And the last paradox. The farmers' ideal is democracy. They hate the dictatorship of the big interests and centralized government, and at the same time their ideal is Henry Ford who declares that he is not a good president for normal times, but only for a period of dictatorship, when the constitution does not count. It is unquestionable that farmers are a democratic class; but history shows that the political form of farmer democracy is very often the rule of a dictator. The economic and social role of the farmers explains this tendency. The farmers live dispersed millions and millions of small units; and they can venture the fight against the overwhelming power of the centralised trusts, cities and banks only in the form of a centralized dictatorship. Napoleon was made emperor by the French farmers, against the bourgeoisie of the cities. As Marx once expressed it: The strongest Napoleonic idea was the solid peasant plot of land. A dictatorship of the farmers was the fundament of the Cæsarism of Napoleon III. From farmers originated the movement which sought to make Roosevelt lifelong president. If Ford's daydreams of dictatorship would be realized, it would be a farmers' dictatorship against centralized trusts, banks and big cities—and workers.

All these factors together explain how it came about that Henry Ford, the rich man and exploiter, became the idol of the poor and exploited.

Ford was the greatest and most formidable possibility for a Third Party on a national scale, and at the same time the greatest menace against a class movement of class conscious workers and exploited farmers. This shows the chaos and great confusion of American politics. It is the most serious symptom of the economic and political instability of our country, that the last of Henry Ford's dictatorship became a possibility. It shows the most serious illusions of the seemingly proud and sound American capitalism, that the dissatisfaction and indignation of the masses could turn Henry Ford. Henry Ford was narcotising dope for the bankrupt masses. What a world-dictator Ford! Henry Ford as dictator of 110,000,000 people! A man with the ignorance of a poor mechanic together with all the autocratic tendencies of a big exploiter. A man who believes that he stands above all class contradictions because he is prepossessed with all the class prejudices of the most narrow-minded petty bourgeois. A man of the coolest business calculation and uncalculated outbursts of rage, bordering on insanity. A man who in the whole United States has amassed wealth most quickly and on the greatest scale; and yet, thru superficial crusades against trusts has misled, millions of poor and exploited.

Thru his immense private property in Henry Ford is tied up with the general interests of capitalism. As manufacturer he is against the power of banks and basic industries. The Coolidge administration, the government of trusts and banks has almost bought out Henry Ford. Coolidge promised him Muscle Shoals. For the capitalist, has betrayed the masses who foolishly trusted him. Millions of farmers, small business men have become the poorer by the illusion.

We Communists must utilize the opportunity to make clear to the workers and exploited farmers the great lesson of Ford's betrayal. Only a strong personality, but a real

HALT MINERS' WAGE WAR TO LET CONVENTION PASS

Florida Resort to Be the Scene of New Conference

(Special to "The Worker")

CLEVELAND. — The bituminous wage conference here between the miners and operators of the central competitive field adjourned to meet in Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 11, which is after the annual miners' convention.

Standing behind the negotiations is the open threat of certain mine owners that they will force a strike on April 1 by refusing to renew the agreement. There is now a surplus of bituminous coal on hand, the operators have made big profits during the past few years, and their position is so favorable that they are ready to "go the limit" to break the hold of the miners' organization. No statement giving the results of the conference has been issued.

The mine owners and the U. M. W. A. executives agreed to come into a general conference comprising the entire field before taking any further move toward a strike or lockout. Two years ago the mine operators sharply refused to negotiate a new agreement with the miners thereby occasioning the brief strike which was terminated in August, 1922.

Coal Barons Muzzle Churches.

PITTSBURGH.—The word of God as dictated by the big coal companies is the only form in which preaching is permitted in many company towns in the mining districts. Churches looking for a bit of ground on which to erect their edifice, find the companies setting down in black on white that the land will be forfeited to the company if certain topics are discussed by the preacher in a certain way.

The Methodist conference of district superintendents made itself heard at Pittsburgh on the subject of the divine word as broadcasted by a mine company censor.

One superintendent at the conference declared, "I have met with a strange and not uncommon opposition from certain great coal companies that to me is ominous. When attempting to secure title to certain plots of ground for building churches we have found it impossible to do so. The deeds dictate what shall be preached and what is prohibited upon the property with the penalty of forfeiture in case of any transgressions of the conditions.

Hughes-Lodge Anti-Russian Attack Most Ridiculous Made By Grown Men--Brookhart

(Washington Correspondence to "The Worker.")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Rehashing all the state department charges that Soviet Russia is carrying on a propaganda campaign for the overthrow of the United States government, Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, spokesman for the administration, opened the debate in the Senate on recognition of Soviet Russia. Lodge's speech was prepared and supplemented with documents used by the state department in their campaign against recognition.

Senator Borah answered Lodge and said that the so-called "proof" of a plot to overthrow this government was of such flimsy character that it would not be admitted as evidence in any court.

Borah quoted interviews with prominent Americans including former Secretary of the Interior Fall, and former Governor Goodrich, of Indiana, in proof of his assertion that the Soviet government is stable.

He said that such changes as had come about in Russia recently were the result of the wishes of the people.

Senator Brookhart said the entire argument against recognition was childish. "The administration arguments are the most ridiculous I ever heard from grown men."

During the debate the galleries were crowded, showing the keen interest taken by members of Washington society in the question.

Hughes Chained Trotsky.

Secretary of State Hughes seems to think he needs more evidence to substantiate his charges that Soviet Russia is intent on overthrowing the United States government.

On instructions from Secretary Hughes agents of the department of justice in Chicago obtained a statement from Col. Jacques M. Lissovoy, former chief of staff of the white army of Russia, which force was destroyed by the Red Army. Lissovoy is an avowed enemy of the Soviet government.

Lissovoy said that in April, 1919, the white army under his command "almost captured Trotsky," but that he escaped.

Fifty German Soup-Kitchens

News has just reached the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany that fifty soup kitchens have been opened and are being maintained in Germany for the hungry. These kitchens are supported by French, Czecho-Slovakian and Dutch workers, thru the International Arbeiter Hilfe.

The first kitchen was opened by workers of Holland on October 25th. Up to Dec. 3rd, 95,000 workers were fed in those kitchens and 50,000 loaves of bread were distributed.

Of these fifty kitchens, France, Holland and Czecho-Slovakia maintain their own kitchens at a cost of $2,000 per month. Each kitchen has a sign board over it giving the nationality of the workers maintaining it, as illustrated.

Several other kitchens are about to be opened, among them one to be supported by the American workers.

A drive for fifteen thousand dollars by Workers First has just been started to care for the children of the unemployed in Germany.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE

WASHINGTON—Quotations from state department and treasury department files, dug up and published in Senate Document 86, 67th congress, 2nd session, some three years ago, show that the American invasion of North Russia at Archangel, from Aug. 1, 1918, until March 31, 1920, cost $13,12,0,000, of which nearly $2,000,000 went to the British army in payment for supplies.

The Siberian invasion from Aug. 1, 1918, until Aug. 24, 1920, is figured at $8,049,000 exclusive of supplies in kind. The latter item is not calculated, but at the rate shown for Archangel it should be $12,000,-000 to $15,000,000 more.

LONDON.—George Lansbury, former editor of the London Daily Herald (Labor) warned King George to be careful or he might lose his job. At a workers dance here he said that in the fight between Liberals, Labor and the Conservatives for the government the king would do well not to use his prerogatives and power to help the Liberals and Conservatives to power. "King George would do well to watch his step and keep his finger out of the pie. If he doesn't he may find himself taking a very keen interest in the unemployment situation."

Chicago Unionists Flay Reactionaries at Portland Meet

The Chicago Federation of Labor at its regular meeting on January 6 voted to "receive" the report of Frank McVey, its delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention, after a brief discussion which was participated in by several delegates.

The report was neither a criticism nor a commendation of the proceedings of the convention. It recorded the cruel and unusual punishment accorded to every progressive measure that came before that body. It was a matter of surprise that even the Ku Klux Klan suffered from the rod of chastisement with which President Gompers and his grand dukes flayed everybody who dares to move against the reactionary officialdom.

Amalgamation, a Labor Party, Soviet Recognition, all went down before the reactionary onslaught. Delegate McVey stated that on the question of a labor party many delegates without any solicitation on his part came to him privately to the vote on the resolution and informed him, that on a vive voce vote they would vote for it but could not afford to do so for political reasons if there was a roll call vote.

Losing Members.

McVey expressed the opinion that it was a waste of money for central bodies to send delegates to A. F. of L. conventions. Such delegates are referred to as "one lungers" by the international union officers. "Let the one lungers do the talking and we will do the voting" is the slogan of the per capita sharks. The term "one lunger" is derived from the fact that each delegate has one vote.

He brought out the significant point that since the British Labor Party engaged in political action the union membership in that country increased, while here in America within the past two years the American Federation of Labor lost over one million members.

The unseating of William F. Dunne, he said, was based on articles published by him in the Butte Bulletin, containing letters from John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois Miners' Union, in which they accused each other of having accepted money from the employers.

Despite abstinence in the discussion said that the he did not criticise the report on the ground of accuracy, he wanted to express his opinion on the important questions which were smothered under the reactionary Gompersian blanket. He charged that the attack of Gompers on the Federated Press was unjust. It was not a Communist, I. W. W. or A. F. of L. press service. It was fair and impartial news collecting agency giving every section of the labor movement equal treatment.

He charged that the action of the convention in defeating the motion for recognition of Soviet Russia did not represent the feeling of organized labor. He charged that the opposition to a labor party and the other forward measures proposed showed that the convention did not represent the rank and file but the officialdom. The articles printed by William F. Dunne, he declared, were simply the statements of Lewis and Farrington themselves and expressed the authoritative opinion of these gentlemen.

Facing Both Ways.

Christian Madsen made his usual "Good-God-good-devil" speech. He stood in woman's land and posed as the goddess of justice trembling lest he should wrong anybody. Then he proceeded to lay the heavy end of the stick on the raddish. Madsen

Workers Party Convention Approves Fight Being Made for the Class Labor Party

Unanimous support was given by the Third National Convention of the Workers Party to the Labor Party policies carried out during the past year by the Central Executive Committee.

Thus the most important United Front effort of the party, that is giving it the lead in the struggle for the class Farmer-Labor Party in the United States, has been approved by the party's authority.

This question came before the convention in the report on the thesis of Central Executive Committee on the Labor Party question. This was presented to the convention by the party's executive secretary, C. E. Ruthenberg. He made the following motions:

1. The convention approves of the work of the Central Executive Committee and congratulates the party on its achievements for our movement during the past year.

2. We adopt as the policy of the party the theses on "Political and Economic Conditions in the United States" and "The Policy of Our Party," submitted by the Central Executive Committee.

Resolution on Party Program.

We reaffirm the program of the party as adopted in the second national convention.

Delegate J. Louis Engdahl, on behalf of the majority of the political bureau of the Central Executive Committee, presented the additional motions:

1. That the November theses shall supercede all previous theses of the party on the labor party question.

2. That the National Convention adopts the November theses of the Central Executive Committee.

3. That the question should be referred back to the Central Executive Committee on the labor party issue.

4. The convention approves the action of the Central Executive Committee in the July 3d convention and the party's participation in the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

5. That the convention declares that the formation of a Federated Farmer-Labor Party on July 3d was a victory for the party and its labor party policy and opened the road for a broader united front.

Endorse Federated Party.

6. That the convention endorses the affiliation of the Workers Party with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

7. That the convention approves the action of the Central Executive Committee in helping to organize the Federated Farmer-Labor Party not only as a propaganda and an organizing body, but also as a real political party.

The signers of the supplementary motions were Ruthenberg, Engdahl, John Pepper, Jay Lovestone, Ben Gitlow, Max Bedacht and Robert Minor.

But, altho these motions were adopted unanimously, yet there was considerable debate on the whole Labor Party question, especially in carrying out this united front effort of the party in Chicago.

The most debatable phase of Labor Party problem, the question of the third party, was removed completely from the arena of the discussion by unanimous decision to refer this problem to the Communist International, before which all elements will be represented.

The Central Executive Committee's resolut on criticize the Chicago District Executive Committee for the manner in which it carried out the United Front with the leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor was defeated and a declaration by the District Executive Committee of Chicago adopted. The Chicago statement is printed in full in another page of this issue.

The debate on this resolution was the stormiest during the convention with the possible exception of that which preceded the election of the Central Executive Committee.

Comrade Foster in his report for the industrial department of the party analyzed the period of prosperity thru which we have passed and showed its basis unsatisfactory. While industry in most of the other capitalistic countries was on the decline in this country industrial revival was due to the great need for products in the home markets, particularly in the building and automobile industries.

Bosses Amalgamate.

This period was also marked by a tendency toward combination among capitalists in the key industries. On the other hand the organizations of the workers, the unions, suffered tremendously.

The bankruptcy of large masses of farmers was resulting in political upheavals in the agrarian states. The signs point to a rapid decline in production and an extended period of depression.

The failure of the trade union bureaucracy to cope with the situation has resulted in many workers losing faith in the unions. Class collaboration is now urged as a substitute for struggle. The growing left wing movement in the unions is bitterly fought by the reactionaries and one international union, a so-called Socialist union, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, expelled members of the Trade Union Educational League from the organization even the having to admit that they were good union members.

Farmer-Labor Relations.

Comrade Bedacht and Sapper reported on the agrarian situation. The conditions of the farmers were growing worse and worse and they were gradually turning to labor for assistance and common action in their extremity. The party during the year organized hundreds of farmers as members of the party. The Agrarian Report was adopted unanimously.

Jay Lovestone made a report on American Imperialism, which was received with enthusiasm. He showed the growing aggressiveness of our capitalists and their exploitation of South America and the Philippines.

Max Bedacht reported on Shop Nuclei. An amendment was offered by Jack Jarnopolsky, of New York, in favor of industrial branches. The amendment was voted down and the convention went on record in favor of Shop Nuclei.

During the election of the Central Executive Committee for the coming year vigorous criticism was indulged in. But after the balloting was over a majority and minority joined in expressing their intention to unitedly take power into their own hands, and of a few short weeks THE DAILY WORKER will already be exerting its influence over a tremendous portion of the American labor movement.

While the entire force of the class conscious workers is now being devoted to the most important activity that has ever confronted them, THE DAILY WORKER arrangements are already under way to establish a permanent basis and it will serve every day in the year to the task of maintaining and building up THE DAILY WORKER. Special instructions for the organization of this machinery have been prepared by THE DAILY WORKER business office and are being sent to all units of the Workers Party. Until the organization is effected, however, all members of the Workers Party and all class conscious workers everywhere are urged to carry on the campaign for subscriptions, and to send them to THE DAILY WORKER at the earliest possible moment, so that the campaign may begin to yield their paper with the first issue.

Contracts for the production and distribution of the paper have been let, and arrangements have been completed whereby THE DAILY WORKER will be published, as previously announced, the birthday issue to be sold at the celebration meeting Jan. 12th and 13th, and the first regular issue on Jan. 14th. THE DAILY WORKER has established permanent offices at 1640 N. Kedzie Blvd., Chicago, to which address all mail should be sent.

Protect the Foreign-Born with an Irresistible Front of All Labor

The resolution for the protection of the foreign-born workers adopted by the convention follows:

The millions of foreign-born workers are facing new dangers. The message of President Coolidge to Congress, and the plans of Secretary of Labor Davis here revealed, are the plans of the capitalists against the foreign-born workers. Congress will in the very near future consider bills on registration and finger-printing of the foreign-born workers. New special annual taxes and new discriminating measures against the foreign-born workers will come up before Congress in the near future.

This convention authorizes the Central Executive Committee and the District Executive Committees to immediately take steps to initiate a United Front with all organizations which are willing to join in such a campaign.

The Workers Party was the only political party, as far back as a year ago, in its last convention, brought to the attention of the workers these great dangers. We began a big movement for the protection of foreign-born workers.

The convention of the Workers Party pledges our party to carry on a big campaign in the next year, for the protection of foreign-born workers, and calls upon every worker to organize the united front of native-born American and foreign-born workers against the criminal plans of the Coolidge administration, Ku Klux Klan, and American Legion patriots.

The workers must recognize that the attack against the foreign-born workers is but a new attempt of the capitalist offensive against the supposed and ill-paid laboring masses of the basic industries.

The United Front.

Michigan Workers Campaign.

The Michigan labor campaign is, of course, by far the most important of the party bulletin campaign continued during the present month and the full results become apparent since the last convention.

In calling for a united front of all workers' organizations, for defense of the rights of free speech and free press and to secure the repeal of the criminal syndicalist laws, the Central Executive Committee applied the united front principle. Thru this campaign we drew to our support organizations of workers and large liberal organizations in all parts of the country.

It is a fact admitted by our enemies in the Michigan cases that our campaign resulted in turning the attention upon our party into a victory for our party. The connections which were established, the influence and reputation which we gained thru the defense campaign materially strengthened the party influence and aided in preparing the way for the Workers Party to become the openly functioning Communist party of the United States.

Foreign-Born Protection.

The second national convention adopted a resolution instructing the Central Executive Committee to begin a campaign for the protection of foreign-born workers. The Central Executive Committee during the early months of last year began to build a

In connection with the celebration of May Day, the Central Executive Committee launched the slogans, "Amalgamation," "A Labor Party," and "A Workers' Government" and endeavored to build up a united front May Day celebration on the basis of these slogans.

...ing the present economic situation and the outlook for the future. A general survey of the economic field is necessary at this time because of the fact that the present year (December, 1923) is the first year in which all strata of trade and industry have enjoyed a real measure of prosperity. During the intervening years, from the end of the world war to the present, the workers have suffered from the effects of a general economic disorganization, which has been reflected in the ranks of labor by widespread unemployment, wage reductions, and a general worsening of the conditions of life. Now, however, the workers are beginning to feel the effects of the new prosperity. Wages are rising, unemployment is decreasing, and the workers are beginning to enjoy a measure of the comforts of life. The present year, therefore, is the first one in which the workers have had a chance to feel the full force of the economic changes that have been taking place since the end of the world war.

claims to be a socialist. He said it was reported in Portland that the expulsion of Dunne was hatched by New York newspaper reporters who wanted a "story." Gompers realized their evil designs for a whole week, but Comrade Dunne, declared Madsen, went to Portland for the sole purpose of getting expelled, insulted everybody who were a white collar and tender-hearted delegates of the Madsen variety felt so generous that they could not turn down Dunne's silent plea for expulsion. Madsen believes that a man should sit down only with those he respects.

He thought the expulsion of Dunne was just as uncalled for as the expulsion of the five Socialist assemblymen from the New York legislature. But he very impartially distributed the blame for the Dunne expulsion on—Gompers and Dunne.

Fakers All Right?

Delegate Wright, of the Printers, did not think such extraneous matters as a labor party, amalgamation, Soviet Russia and other questions of the same kind had any place in a central body. Anything outside of Chicago, he intimated, should be handled by the secretary for foreign affairs. At the same time he had something to say about Dunne and Soviet Russia. He came to the conclusion that Dunne should not be at the A. F. of L. convention, the Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council or even in his local union. What was Dunne's crime? He published letters written by Lewis and Farrington in which they politely called each other thieves. Delegate Wright knew both of them. They are fine fellows. Of course, they got excited and when one called the other a crook the other had to clear himself by saying "you are another."

But this was a private affair and nobody else had a right to butt in, least of all a radical. One thing labor could can never forgive each other, Wright declared, and that was accepting money from employers.

His wrath was equally righteous against Soviet Russia. The rank and file were sick of hearing that name. A point of order nipped his speech in the bud and when a special order of business was disposed of, he was not present to conclude.

A delegate from the Photo Engravers concluded the discussion on the report by stating that three months before the Portland convention the capitalist press carried stories of plans hatched in the Gompers royal family for the expulsion of reds at the forthcoming convention. He stated that the convention was a step backward and not a step forward. He declared that Matthew Woll, the chief heresy hunter of the Gompers administration, is the international president of his union and the members have challenged him to expel them for being radicals.

O. S. Stapley, president of the Lake County Central Labor Union, addressed the federation and stated that Mr. Fowler, of the Milk Producers' Association came to him with the object of seeking closer relations between the milk producers and the milk drivers. He implied that he was under the impression that the milk farmers expressed a desire to join the American Federation of Labor. Fowler denies this and stated Stanley and Fowler to attend the next meeting of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor to discuss the matter.

The meeting voted to support the movement for German relief and also the officers of the Flat Janitors' Union whose sentence of from one to five years on a charge of conspiracy was recently sustained by the Supreme Court. A petition was circulated with a view to securing a letter from Governor Small. William Quasen, president of the Flat Janitors' Union, addressed the body and stated that they succeeded in raising the wages of the janitors and improving their working conditions thru their organization. "I will not say," declared Quasen, "that kid glove methods were always used. Sometimes there are situations where brains don't fit."

Second Annual Red Revel Coming.

Another day of the yearly cosmopolitan gathering, the Red Revel, is approaching and our comrades are busily engaged in polishing the hip boots and fastening the buttons of their new costumes. This year it is going to be a masque ball of some unusual attraction. Communists, socialists, methodists, capitalists and many other "ists," indicated by their costumes, will mix merrily. It will be a complete united front of enjoyment. Our most obstinate theoriticians have promised faithfully that they will bury the hatchet for that one day, but still some of them insist that this united front must be accomplished on a broad mass basis to be genuine. Again others say that only the left wing is ready for such a tremendous surprise.

The committee in charge has decided that the never failing class collaboration is quite in order for that day, and to make it possible has secured the internationally known Ashland Auditorium for the event. The committee is bearing in mind that this place has become the historical battle ground of recent years.

Henry Ford is expected to arrive in a tin Lizzie ready to throw his hat in the ring for the grand prize, concern which he could never make the run to the White House. But don't worry, Senator La Follette will be notified so you see nothing will be left undone to preserve a real cosmopolitan character at the famous Red Revel, Febr. 16th. The Proletarian Press Service has been leased for the period up to Febr. 16th. A staff of reporters are on the job who will bring the news, red hot, every week. Watch for further developments.

Free Speech in Newark, N. J.

William Z. Foster will speak in Newark, N. J., Jan. 11th, under the auspices of the Labor Defense Council in spite of illegal interference by the authorities.

The Labor Lyceum has been engaged, but so far the chief of police has refused to give a permit. A fight to see that Foster does speak in Newark is being put up with the help of the Civil Liberties Union.

Foster is also speaking in Bridgeport, Conn., and Paterson, N. J.

Scott Nearing will speak for the Michigan defense on the following dates:

Rockford, Ill., Feb. 2.
Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 5.
Chicago, Ill., Feb. 8.

Meetings are being arranged for Comrade Nearing in Pittsburgh, Feb. 3rd, and in Reading, Pa., Feb. 4. N. J.; Worcester, Mass., and other New England cities.

Our Industrial Work

The convention endorsed the industrial work of the Party for the past 12 months, and the program laid out for the coming year. In order for our industrial work to be a success, it is absolutely essential that the party throw its whole available force into it. Wherever possible, shop nuclei must be formed. The members of the party who work in the industries must join the trade unions and become aggressive participants therein in furthering the party work. In addition, the members must become active in the Trade Union Educational Leagues and give real support to its slogans of amalgamation, the labor party, organize the unorganized, recognition of Soviet Russia, affiliation to the Red International of Labor Unions, etc. They shall subscribe for and help circulate THE LABOR HERALD and other publications of the league. In each locality the local party organization will be held responsible for the organization and continuance of a branch of the Trade Union Educational League. The annual industrial registration of the party must be taken seriously and made as nearly as practical 100 per cent complete. The industrial organizers selected by the local branches must function regularly and see to it that the party is brought actively into the industrial work. The thoro carrying out of the foregoing measures will do much towards giving our party the grip necessary among the organized masses to enable it to function really and effectively in its true role of the advance guard of the proletariat.

Boost for Federated Press.

NEW YORK.—There are only two countries, the United States and Russia, in which the workers have established a news service on its own footing independent of the capitalist class," comments the New York Volkszeitung, the only German language labor daily in America. "The Federated Press is of course only a beginning but a mighty good and promising one. Through its many sidedness and scope it has already won a good reputation. It serves the labor press as an almost indispensable corrective to the 'great' lying news services of the employing class.

"But because the Federated Press reports labor events without bias and treats all of the groups of the labor movement objectively it has incurred the bitter enmity of Samuel Gompers and several of his lieutenants. The president of the A. F. of L. cannot understand a news policy that gives the same impartial consideration to the I. W. W. as to the A. F. of L. He cannot comprehend a point of view that keeps the Federated Press from outlawing the communist movement."

I. W. W.'s Held on Bomb Charge.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Homer Stewart and Pete Wilkinson, recently convicted of criminal syndicalism, are now out on bail pending appeal. The bail was acquitted at the same time on the same evidence, and this fact will be used in behalf of Stewart and Wilkinson. Ed Rhodes, Ed Mc-Grew and Sam Oberman are on trial on the same charge in Los Angeles for the same alleged crime. Rhodes and McGrew were also indicted in San Francisco, Rhodes was acquitted, the jury disagreeing on the rest. In the only county in which they are being tried separately from the rest.

The Third National Convention of the Workers Party.

Delegates and visitors to the Third National Convention of the Workers Party, held in Chicago, Dec. 30 and 31 and Jan. 1 and 2, agree that it was one of the most interesting conventions witnessed. Even Spolansky and McDonald of the "D. of J." found it so interesting that one could not even suggest that they celebrate the holidays at home, but they sat in the anteroom, adjoining the convention like mad, to the last.

During the recess they purchased several copies of the ABRIDGED REPORT OF THE FOURTH CONGRESS OF THE C. I. THESES AND RESOLUTIONS OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL AND several issue of the monthly magazine: The Communist International, and other Communist literature. Spolanski claims that he was once a member of the party movement several years ago, but evidently he agrees that the Communist literature is the best he ever read, and for that reason bought some to read. But how about you? Are you familiar with the literature as above? Are you acquainted with the theses and resolutions adopted by the Fourth Congress of the C. I.?

But there is something in store for those who could not be present at the convention and listen in. The report of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, including the report by W. Z. Foster on the industrial situation, THESES as adopted, detailed information about the different departments, resolutions adopted, constitutional amendments acted upon, etc., WILL BE PRINTED IN BOOK FORM, 28 pages, and will sell for 50c a copy. Readers of The Worker would act wisely by placing an order with the Literature Department for a copy at once. To read this book will be just like being present at the convention and better.

Moderasts vs. Fundamentalists.

Bishop Brown, Communist, is called "crazy" by some "fundamentalists." No person is better qualified to write or speak on the present controversy in the Episcopalean Church than the Right Reverend Bishop William Montgomery Brown. He knows the church because he is still a member of the House of Bishops. For a long time he was one of its leading members. His sermons attracted national attention. His first theological work ran into several editions. Today, candidates for the church find themselves compelled to study the works of Bishop Brown. Of course they do not study all the works of the Bishop. For instance, they do not read "Communism vs. Christianism." They say he is crazy holdeth.

Readers of "The Worker" who want to be fully acquainted with the nature of this controversy can find no work more up-to-date and authoritative than this work of Bishop Brown's. It sells for 25 cents per copy or six copies for one dollar. Read it and then pass it on to your friends. Or if you desire a copy for your library we have a few cloth bound copies for one dollar each.

Youth Activities Are Recognized by Workers Party

By HARRY GANNES

Conscious realization of the importance and utility of the Communist movement in the United States was recognized by the Young Workers League of America at the third plenary session of the Workers Party to which the Y. W. L. had three delegates, Max Bedacht, Alfred Wagenknecht and John Williamson, all members of the national executive committee of the American young Communist movement.

"Most outstanding of all the achievements of the Young Workers League of America," declared the secretary of the league, Martin Abern, "is the fact that the organization of the shop nuclei has enthusiastically been undertaken by the young comrades, and three shop nuclei have been established. This means the beginning of contact with the young workers in industry; it marks the initiation of the real campaign on the economic field. Nor have our trade union activities been neglected. The committee in the Trade Union Educational League can testify to the spirit of youth not only in the ranks of the workers, but within the reactionary unions."

The speaker for the league pointed out that another great advance of the Communist youth movement in the United States is the establishment not only of a growing and virile children's movement, based not on the principle of education and isolation from the political struggle, but on the recognition of the child as a member of the working class suffering along with their parents, as well as the future exploited workers of the United States.

The trip of Max Salzman on the copper range was highly commended, as was also by the league members, but by party delegates who had occasion to come in close contact with the organizer for the Young Workers League. The not successful in organizing shop nuclei—the prime organizational aim of the league—Comrade Salzman did carry the message of the Communist youth to vast numbers of farming and mining youth in the territory thru which he toured.

More than a hundred per cent growth of the league was noted since the second national convention of the league held in Chicago in June, 1923. Four thousand members are now following the lead of the Communist youth in the United States. The Detroit league received special mention for its rapid growth. Two papers are now issued by the Y. W. L.—the semi-monthly YOUNG WORKER, and the monthly children's paper, THE YOUNG COMRADE.

A complimentary resolution was adopted by the third national convention of the party. Fred Merrick, of the Pennsylvania mining and steel district, was very enthusiastic in his praise of the young comrades. A new phase of party co-operation with the youth was brought out by Comrade Bimbo, of the New York district, when he pointed to the fact that the foreign comrades within the party were neglecting their children and young comrades and while they were fighting within the Communist movement, their children could be found fighting while grand-parents.

On the military activities of the league, Comrade Abern declared not much could be shown, but that this was a question which would receive the attention of the league, especially in view of the intensive militarization campaign openly announced by the United States government. Participation in the Wankegan and Baltimore student conference was singled out as the major anti-military work of the league, while at the same time the national executive committee recognized that this could not be called thoro Communist anti-military activities, asks that more attention would have to be given to outright anti-military work in the citizen's military training camps, as well as in other solidly organizations.

Unanimous support to all the campaigns and activities of the league was pledged by the delegates and there is no doubt that the party membership will be found in the fights of the league in winning the militant working class youth to the banners of the Young Communist organization in this country—the Young Workers' League of America.

Bourgeois Intellectuals and Communism

By E. M. WICKS

In a recent issue of "The Workers' Monthly" Comrade Gold has given his observations of his on the subject of "American Intellectuals and Communism," and seems to resent the fact that Communists are not "admitted to full membership" in the circles of petty bourgeois intellectuals who constitute the so-called liberal magazines. Among these intellectuals with whom Comrade Gold would have us form alliances are Theodore Dreiser, Waldo Frank, Sinclair Lewis, Sherwood Anderson and H. L. Mencken. Imagining he sees symptoms of rebellion and even revolution in the intellectual products of these alleged liberals, Comrade Gold asserts: "These solitary artists and intellectual rebels are unconscious revolutionists; the Communist is a conscious one, however, and the difference is like that of adolescence and maturity in an individual."

By what sort of torturous reasoning the conclusion is reached that Anderson, Frank, Lewis or any of the lesser lights of this school of bourgeois moralists and sex anarchists have approached even the adolescent stage of the revolution is beyond the comprehension of a Marxist. When one reads the puerile twaddle of these writers of modern fiction it is not difficult to understand why there is no affinity between them and the Communists. These writers spend their time with their heads in the sewerage of bourgeois society. Their vogue lies in the fact that they preach contentment with sewerage, instead of creating a revolutionary implications that ought to follow a knowledge of the putrid condition to which capitalism has sunk. Comrade Gold imagines these people are potentially revolutionary in the adolescent stage in fact—because they

The Last Issue of "The Worker"

This is the last issue of "The Worker." As a weekly publication it has served the American Communist movement well. It has been the stepping stone to "The Daily," into which it is being merged.

"The Worker" was established in February, two years ago, out of the merger of "The Toiler" and "The Workers Council," when the Workers Party was created as the open expression of American Communism.

It has been the medium thru which the Party has spoken to the workers and farmers of the United States. It has been an instrument of education for the Party membership and sympathizers, to keep them in touch with the Party's developing policies.

It has long been evident that the greater struggles in which the Workers Party is engaging far outstripped the meager possibilities of a weekly publication. Thus the need of "The Daily" has become apparent to all, and it is now entering the arena of the American class struggle as the champion of Communism in this country.

All those who have given of their support to "The Weekly," will surely redouble their energies to make "The Daily" the power it ought to be. "The Weekly" is dead! Forward to "The Daily!"

Helping the Farmers

Perhaps no domestic problem has received as much public attention in the last year or so as the agricultural problem. It is not difficult to understand why. The conditions of the great mass of our rural population have grown more precarious daily in the last three years. No one denies today that the farmers are up against it. Every precinct politician and Wall Street statesman proclaims emphatically that he is for the farmers. A national election is approaching and the agricultural area will be the pivotal point whose votes will settle the issue. Hence the vociferous heralding of solicitude towards the farmers and the flood of quack remedies to relieve the distress of the rural masses on the part of the capitalists and their Washington lackeys and lickspittles.

The farm price of wheat is rapidly sinking to a point below the pre-war level. The purchasing power of a bushel is already far below. In July, 1913, the North Dakota farmer could buy a suit of clothes for 21 bushels of wheat. In July, 1923, the same farmer had to turn over 31 bushels for this suit of clothes. A wagon which cost him 103 bushels in 1913 costs him today 166 bushels.

Approximately 2,000,000 farmers are affected by this condition. Large areas of North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, Montana, Idaho and Washington are suffering from this collapse of the wheat market.

Further illustration of the financial hopelessness of the farmers is found in the declining of the average mortgage debt per owner-operated farms in the last decade, and in the fact that tax payments in some sections of the West are in arrears from one to four years.

The American farmers can well take a leaf out of the book of their Russian brethren if they desire to help themselves out of their present acute distress.

A Shocking Picture

New York City boasts of being the first city of the world. It is, in riches and misery.

In this great seat of financial and industrial prowess, side by side with the most resplendent display of wealth and luxury, there obtains a conditions of poverty and degradation, which defies description.

From the report of the State Commission on Housing and Regional Planning on the housing conditions of 8,000 families in Greater New York, the workers the country over can draw an inspiration to end the dreadful state of affairs and a warning that unless the working masses take matters into their own hands abject misery will be their sole lot.

Rents have increased from 40 to 93 per cent since 1920, with the lower paid workers as usual "spending a larger part of their income for rent." Factory wages show a decrease. Though the country is pictured by the commission in its report to the governor:

"We find in this investigation that the laundry operator pays a larger proportion of his income for rent than three or four years ago. The effect of this is shown in a definite lowering of standards in the matter of food or in educational opportunities for the children. It is frequently reported that increased rental makes it impossible to send the children to high school . . . In the small, dark bedroom, lighted and ventilated by a small opening in the wall, is a three quarter bed, in which sleep two boys of fourteen and ten and a girl of thirteen. To describe these conditions as 'detrimental to the public health and morals' is no idle phrase. The conditions mean being cramped in body and soul, they mean irritation and racked nerves, they mean contagion and infection."

This picture is the result of the findings of competent investigators, against whom the charges of being pro-working class, can not be made.

Through this whole period, in which the lot of the New York workers was growing more and more wretched, such "friends of labor" as Mayor Hylan and Governor Smith have been at the helm of the municipal and state governments. Neither administration has done a thing to relieve the distress of the workers. Both administrations have tacitly and openly aided and abetted the landlord-capitalists in their vicious practice of forcing high rents and intolerable housing conditions on the working masses.

Our Democratic Senate

The United States Senate has of late been receiving considerable attention in the press as an arena where great battles for democracy are being fought out. The leaderless progressives have been waging a bitter struggle to prevent Cummins from becoming chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee. In turn the press has begun an active campaign to denounce the Senate as a hothouse of radicalism.

Time and again these same capitalist mouthpieces have proclaimed from the political housetops the country over that the Senate is the greatest organ of democracy. Of course, no one took this talk seriously.

But it is very interesting to note how the capitalist forces of the country manage to maintain their struggle-hold on the Senate by manipulating minorities of the voters. More than one-third of the senators have been elected by a minority of the voters in their respective states. The exact number is thirty-four, including such stalwart champions of reaction as Hiram Johnson of California, Senator McLean of Connecticut, Senator Bruce of Maryland, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts and Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania.

Under these circumstances one finds it very hard to see where our much-vaunted rule by majority gets off at.

On Leaving the Church Alone

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Some middle-headed radicals object to discussing questions bearing on religion in the Communist press. "Leave the church alone," they say. We might as well say, "Leave the capitalist press alone" or "leave the capitalist movies alone." The fact is, of course, that the church is one of the props of the capitalist system and it is as necessary to expose it as such and thus rob it of a great deal of its ability to confuse and mislead the workers as it is our duty to show up the class nature of the capitalist press.

The ease with which churches go into the coffers of the capitalists for money is not surpassed even by the Goose Step universities which train the young American gosslings for service to capitalism. Most Protestant churches are supported by millionaire capitalists. The Catholic Church in America until recently depended for the major part of its revenues on its flock—a very appropriate term in the case of its followers.

But with the growth of radicalism and the degeneration of Protestantism into warring sects whose chief mode of recreation is casting doubt on the integrity and virtue of their alleged founders, the Catholic Church is coming to the front as the main bulwark of capitalist society. As a barrier to Communism it is even putting the A. F. of L. in the background. And men of great wealth, regardless of creed, now favor it with goodly donations.

In the city of Cleveland a new Jesuit College is out to raise the enormous sum of $3,000,000 in eight days That is exactly the amount our Workers Party was supposed (report) unfortunately unfounded) to have received from the Soviet treasury during this year. The clerical money collectors are making a drive to raise this fund within the time limit and Monsignor Joseph F. Smith, Administrator of the Cleveland diocese sent the following letter to possible subscribers:

"Ignatius College, an educational institution, is making an appeal to the citizenship of Cleveland for funds for the establishment of a university which will be called the John Carroll university.

"We are making its appeal to all classes, because of the firm conviction that the university will be of substantial benefit to the entire community. The Catholic population of Cleveland, embracing all nationalities, is 65 per cent of the total population. Catholic foreign element is more than one-half of the Catholic total.

"The future citizenship of Cleveland will be comprised, to a great extent, of this foreign population. They look to the Catholic Church for their religious and secular education; and they will not willingly accept any other.

"If the Catholic Church does not give them the higher education that is needful for their future as good citizens, they will be of the enemy of the elements that are the greatest danger to our country. Communists, Socialists and Bolsheviks are preparing to them in the labor unions and in their social organizations the wonderful blessings that will result from the acceptance of their doctrines, etc. The only organization that can save them is that will save them is the Catholic Church.

"Capitalists, bankers, industrial leaders realize to the fullest extent that their greatest security for capital, for prosperity and for the preservation of the liberties which we enjoy depends upon the influence of the Catholic Church with the great multitudes of these people."

Dead Weight—So to Speak.

Coolidge and Cabinet Favor Open Shop; Views Bolster Attack on Trade Unions

(Special to "The Worker")

NEW YORK CITY.—At the annual convention of the anti-union National Founders' Association, held at the Hotel Astor, here, William H. Barr, president of the association, advocated "the absolute necessity for the adoption of the open shop policy." He asserted, "That extravagant building costs directly governing ever-increasing rentals are brought about by the brigandage of the building trade unions."

In a vicious attack on the railroad brotherhoods, he declared, "The possibility of cheaper railway transportation is again jeopardized by recent demands on the part of the brotherhoods for an increase in wages, which if granted, would put them back on the unjustified and profligate scale of government-time wartime operation."

In its account of the convention, the New York Times makes the following comments: "At the dinner of the association stereopticon views entitled 'The Dawn of New Industrial Day' were shown. These revealed the opinions of prominent men, including members of the Cabinet, on freedom in industrial relations (another name for the Open shop). Those whose views were shown included President Coolidge, ex-President Taft, and Secretaries Hughes, Mellon, Weeks, Daugherty, New, Denby, Work, Wallace, Hoover and Davis. Prominent churchmen, educators and others were quoted as favoring the 'open shop' principle."

German Army Anti-Republican.

DRESDEN, Saxony.—A new conflict has broken out between the federal goverment of Germany and the government of the free state of Saxony. It arises out of the allegation made by the military dictator of Saxony appointed by the national minister of defense, that the troops of the federal army were being spied upon by agents of the Saxon government.

The working class minister of the interior of Saxony, Liebmann, does not deny the charge. On the contrary he justifies his action on the grounds that he has sworn to uphold the republican constitution, and that

Two years ago, he left the party, disgusted by the swing of the Menshevists to the right. After a silence of two years he is now publishing a book in the Ukrainian government publishing house which will appear soon under the title "The Lessons of the Revolution," and in which he makes a confession as regards the future" in a few weeks. Even Milyukoff, in his history of the second Russian revolution has to speak of the "weakness of the upper social strata which were so easily shaken out of their place and thrown aside by the movement of the multitude."

But we must go still further. If by democracy we do not mean the democracy of General Dyetkin, who termed himself a "Liberal Democrat," but if we mean rather the rule of the interests of the lower strata of the people, then we must admit that even the dispersing of the Constituent National Assembly was the act of genuine democracy, the same democracy which in the French Revolution also was not too greatly concerned with negotiations, which temporarily by invaded the council hall of the Convention upon which it violently forced its own will and did not even recoil from the execution of its members.

There can hardly be any more doubt that without the October "revolt" of the Bolsheviki the revolution would long ago have been down on the ground. The Kornilov adventure, as well as the entire sum and substance and all the acts of the "Directory" leave no further doubt that the Kerensky regime in its essence had become towards the end, nothing else than a means to prepare the way for the counter-revolution. It was indeed no accident that those forces which Kerenski could use against the October uprising—or to be more correct, could attempt to use—were precisely those forces which later on, also constituted the picked troops of the counter revolution.

There is no doubt that the Menshevizi—yes, even the Social Revolutsionists—in their policy during the revolution did not actually intend to play into the hands of the counter-revolution, but their intention was simply to assure a painless development for the revolution, "in a realistic manner," but this "realism" proved to be, besides other things, the purest policy of illusion. A painless revolution is an impossible thing. When facing the revolution, Menshevism pictured it "as it ought to be." Bolshevism expressed it as it is. Lenin already pointed out the difference between a hundred possible and a hundred actual dialects.

The old factional disputes over the actuating forces of the revolution and over the "two kinds of tactics" characteristics towards bourgeois liberalism or towards alliance of the working class with the peasantry against the capitalist class—was decided by history in favor of Bolshevism.

Bolshevism won its October victory precisely as the party of the working class, in alliance with the peasantry.

Six years went by. The Russian revolution has put only stood its ground against a hundred enemies, but has developed into a world power, into the only real support of the proletarian revolution in the international arena wherever at any time it may happen the point of victory.

But until this victory is achieved, those inner contradictions remain which history has not spared the Russian revolution, and tremendous difficulties will yet arise, frequently resulting in no less mistakes and digressions.

But what is the lesson? That the mistakes, the digressions must cease? This is a primary requisite and can in no way occasion any change in the line of principle followed by the revolution. Any line of principle, which stands in opposition to Bolshevism, necessarily requires that the political perspectives of the revolutionary power be harmonized with the economic basis (the capitalism newly developed through the new second economic policy)—that is, it calls for the giving up of power by the Bolsheviki which "Marxism" prescription would certainly compel all revolutionary power, the inevitable way to Socialism is represented, not by "Democracy" and "coalition," but by civil war and dictatorship.

The correctness of the viewpoint of "world Bolshevism" was proven lately with the greatest clarity through two developments: First, through Fascism; and second, through the whole evolution of the German revolution, whose individual stages bring to mind the zigzag line of our revolution between February and October, 1917.

The German Social Democracy succeeded in consummating the attempt of the Cirondist bloc of Menshevik and Social Revolutionists. And what did we see? We saw that in the precious historical moment when the bourgeoisie was disarmed and the working class armed, the Social Democracy, through the big and little Noskes, disarmed the working class and armed the capitalist class. This helped the capitalist class to form the Reichswehr whose Soldateska we saw marching into Saxony, with the blessing of Ebert and the Social Democratic colleagues of Stresemann, to destroy the Saxon workers' government and to strangle the German revolution.

The inevitable mistake of the International wing of the Russian Menshevik which in the decisive moment in October could not decide to stand under the traditional banner and join the advance guard of the revolution without vacillating, was repeated on an international scale and indeed with the same pitiful results.

The German "Independents," who at one time were even ready towards the Communist International, now dissolved into the official Social Democratic Party, and the Vienna International was absorbed by the Second International, although there can be no doubt that in case of a new world war the national sections of this International will place themselves again at the disposal of their own national imperialism in the very same way as in the year 1914.

With that alone the left Social Democratists have signed their own death sentence. For it will be impossible, after all the lessons of the revolution, to continue the policy of vacillation. It will surely be impossible, after the last bitter experience in Germany, to attempt once more to resurrect the party of the "Independents" or the Second-and-a-Half International, which solemnly burried itself with its own hand.

What remains?

This: To recognize frankly that there is no place for "centrism" wherever the alternative exists between democratic reform and Socialist revolution; to take working from the struggle for power and not also from Socialism—or revolution; by Marxism which, notwithstanding the contradictions of the new epoch which have grown a hundredfold sharper, has also to-day its clear lessons under the flag of social revolution, under the flag of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

BANKERS SEEK TO PROP TOTTERING GERMANY

Here Is "The Daily"!

In the first issue of the Weekly Worker, Feb. 3, 1922, we wrote, "This, the first edition of The Worker, is the advance agent of The Daily Worker."

Now, in this first issue of The Daily Worker, we join hands with the comrades of the Communist International in declaring that the Daily is but "the forerunner of more revolutionary dailies in other parts of the country."

Thus, from one advance position, we move forward to another next ahead. The Daily is here, and we turn a new page in the world story of labor's struggle. Another chapter begins for America's working class. The first English-language Communist Daily in the world has been realized.

Only the momentous developments of the not far future will reveal the tremendous significance of this present historic achievement.

* * * *

A giant is born! A new voice is raised, battling for the workers and farmers of America, carrying its promise of many more such voices; of many Communist Dailies to come!

Not only in Russia, in Germany, in Italy, in the Scandinavian countries, in Czecho-Slovakia, in France, in Mexico, and in a host of other lands, but in those countries where the English language dominates as well, the Communist message will now spread daily among the marching, militant hosts of the exploited in the cities and on the land.

* * * *

The Daily is born! It comes to fight! It comes to inspire and call the many to struggle! The Daily Worker is the voice of the whole working class!

* * * *

The Daily has already aroused its enemies. The labor lieutenants of the established order, joined with the big business interests, the bankers, the merchant princes, the landlords and other profiteers, in a declaration of the National Civic Federation, seeking to prejudice the workers and farmers against it.

Secretary of State Hughes, at Washington, has translated and published in the subsidized press of this country, an article appearing in Moscow, in the press of the Russian workers and farmers, voicing their joy that the English-language Communist Daily in the United States is to be. Thus Hughes seeks to prejudice American labor.

* * * *

But we have no fears. The bosses have declared The Daily their enemy, even before its first issue appeared. They know they have cause to fear The Daily. They know it will raise the standards of a real struggle against the few who rob and plunder the many, and keep them in submission. They know The Daily is a challenge to the continuance of their ruthless and bandit rule.

We have no fears because we know that the workers and farmers of the United States will rapidly rally in support of The Daily in increased numbers.

The Daily appears in Chicago but it is the expression of the oppressed workers and farmers of the whole nation. Its daily arrival in the shops, factories, mills and mines will be cheered by the workers because they will recognize in it their champion. It will be hailed by the agonizing tillers of the soil as their powerful weapon against bankers, landlords and the profiteers in the wealth they produce but do not enjoy.

* * * *

The Daily fights for the new Communist order, where all classes will vanish for the first time in the history of civilization. But it also fights for the shorter workday, increased wages to meet the rising cost of living, better working conditions, against child labor, against injunctions and other judicial attacks on the workers, for free speech, free press, free assemblage, against the efforts to divide and crush the foreign and native-born workers, for the liberation of all class-war prisoners and the wiping-out of all anti-labor legislation. The Daily fights for the organization of all labor and the strengthening of its ranks everywhere. It is for the organization of the unorganized and for amalgamation as two powerful weapons to prepare for the coming industrial depression and unemployment immediately ahead.

* * * *

The Daily raises the slogan "The land for the users of the land." Landlordism and tenantry must go. The Daily declares for a moratorium for all working farmers on their debts for a period of five years. It fights against the degradation of working farmers into peonage, against the creation of an American peasantry.

Tremendous struggles confront The Daily! It will not weaken before them! It will grow in the fight, because with each new struggle new masses of workers and farmers will recognize The Daily as theirs, and they will rally behind it.

* * * *

The Daily Worker belongs to all who labor.

It is the rich possession of all who toil. Workers! Farmers! Rally to The Daily! Make it strong, with the strength of your numbers. Make it powerful thru your will to struggle and conquer!

Long Live The Daily Worker! Hail the triumph of American Workers and Farmers!

DEATH FOR 40, INJURE MANY AT PEKIN, ILL.

Rockefeller Concern Smashed Workers' Organization

By TOM TIPPETT.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press and "The Daily Worker")

PEKIN, Ill.—Establishment of the open shop, criminal negligence on the part of the company and efficiency stunts are given by the survivors as the direct causes for the fatal dust explosion at the Corn Products Refining Company's plant here.

The main blow-up occured when explosive dust was lit in the dry starch department of the plant. This was caused by a minor explosion in the grinding room that shot a flame thru the spiral conveyor into the dry room, according to men who were at work in the pant at the time.

Between 35 and 40 workmen were killed in the explosion and 35 others injured so badly that many of them will die. There were no dust elimination suction fans in the wrecked building and no precautions against explosions were taken since the union in the plant was destroyed. During the war the plant, which employs 800 men was organized and won union recognition thru a decision of the War Labor Board.

In the general attack against the unions in 1919 when the Steel Strike was at its height the Corn Product workers' agreement expired. The company refused recognition and initiated a fight on the union which lasted many months. In a year the union was completely destroyed and the open shop established. This system here meant that every man with union affiliations or sympathies was summarily fired, an elaborate spy system installed and the "American Plan" of efficiency put into effect. Except for the 8-hour day all concessions won by the union were lost.

The starch plant operates 24 hours a day with 3 shifts, seven days a week. Explosions are not unknown in this kind of plants. This same company has experienced them in their works at Cedar Rapids, Ia., and Edgewater, N. J. The men worked in constant fear. The grinding room of the starch works here was built to accommodate explosions. The walls and ceiling were of glass. This explosion began in the grinding room where the walls easily gave way, the men who have since died in the hospitals were from this department. The dry starch building where the main explosion took place is connected with the grinding room by a conveyor which carries the starch to be powdered and packed for shipment.

It was in this department that the plant's production is measured and loaded for market. The building was an old one that was not made over in the re-construction of the plant. There were 35 or 40 men employed on its 4 different floors. The explosion spent its force here, completely demolishing the building as though it were an egg shell. Every man in the department was killed.

While the union was functioning one of its condition was that two men be kept at work in the dry starch building removing the dust. On Sunday, because of union double-time the plant was shut down, and this opportunity was taken by the dust men to "blow" the machines and clean the conveyors. Since the fall of the union no attention had been paid the dust and it had accumulated in deadly quantities thru out the entire building. The three shifts that pack and load the day's out put compete with each others for production records. Survivors say that the only consideration paid by the "efficiency experts" to the dust was a childish instruction to the men who sweep the floor to wrap their brooms with burlap.

The plant is a ghastly sepulchre of ice for the curious crowds that mill around the high steel fence of the plant. Ten miles away in Peoria's most luxurious hotel, federal and state officers are in conference to "investigate" the explosion. The Corn Product Company is a Standard Oil concern.

UNITED FARMERS IN BIG FIGHT ON THE MILK TRUST

Profiteers Can't Disrupt Producers' Unions

The milk supply of Chicago has been reduced 75% as a result of the attempt of the profiteering milk corporations to disrupt the Milk Producers' Association.

Until recently there were two associations of milk producers in the field and as is the case when there are two rival labor unions in the same industry, the bosses played one association against the other.

Recently however, the two organizations of milk producers united and decided to resist the efforts of the Milk Trust to reduce the price of milk to the producer.

All the plants of the Bowman Dairy company are picketed, and roads leading to them are watched by the farmers. Their language is taking on a progressive color, such terms as a "united front" and "solidarity" being heard frequently.

F. T. Fowler, president of the Milk Producers' Association declares that according to a statement issued by Secretary Pushkewicz of the city Cost of Living Committee the distributor now charging 14 cents a quart, could sell at 13 cents and still make a 21¼ profit.

The Milk Producers' Association has appealed to the Chicago Federation of Labor to assist them in getting a charter from the A. F. of L. This is the first time a producing farmers' organization has asked to join the A. F. of L. and the move is hailed as another link between the farmers and city workers. When the farmers get a charter it is expected that the milk wagon drivers' union will refuse to handle scab milk.

McAdoo Unmasked as Original Russian Recognition Foe While Hughes' Plot Falls by Wayside

(Washington Correspondence to "The Daily Worker")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—When the Russian Soviet Government, thru its foreign minister, George Tchitcherin, in reply to the obvious suggestion for diplomatic reapproachment contained in President Coolidge's address to congress, held out the olive branch for a joint conference to compose the outstanding differences between Russia and the United States, Secretary of State Hughes within 24 hours, with a haste unheard of in diplomatic procedure, dispatched a note to Moscow via Riga slamming the door in the face of the Soviet Republic.

But the closing of the door of recognition to Soviet Russia by Secretary Hughes serves as an excellent opening for the big fight for recognition by the progressive senators who have been collecting data on the

THE DAILY WORKER will publish a series of articles on the recent disaster at Pekin, Ill., and the conditions among the workers there both before and after the disaster. Daily Worker Sub Rates Cut!

Subscription rates to THE DAILY WORKER have been materially reduced. The new rates are set at $6 a year, $3.50 for 6 months and $2 for 3 months outside of Chicago. By carrier in Chicago the rate remains at $10 a year and $1 per month; by mail in Chicago prices have been reduced to $8 a year and $4.50 for 6 months.

With the new low prices asked for THE DAILY WORKER, it is expected that within the next few months it will have more readers than any other daily labor paper in America has ever secured.

For the Chicago readers and prospective Chicago readers, who may query why the rates are higher for Chicago than in other places, it is explained that due to the fact that second class mail privileges are extended only for mail outside of Chicago, mailing costs within the city are more than $2 a year higher than for outside.

Those who have subscribed for THE DAILY WORKER at the higher prices, will receive the paper for a proportionately longer period of time. THE DAILY WORKER business office announces.

...No sooner had Mr. Hughes disposed of the ...ogey Bolshevik menace than the latter turned itself as if by magic into a hornet's nest. Angry ...progressive senators began to buzz ominously around the secretary's ears. ...Senator Ladd of North Dakota introduced a resolution requesting the secretary of state to provide the senate with information concerning Soviet Russian policy, particularly with reference to any "secret agreement, confidential understandings, diplomatic arrangements or verbal contracts" existing between the State Department and foreign nations "with a view to prohibiting, restricting or regulating trade" between Russia and the United States. Editor Charges Forgery

M. Steklov, editor of Izvestia, accused Secretary of State Hughes of changing the sense of the article. "Mr. Hughes," he writes, "having extracted a few lines out of their proper context of the article, added several lines of his own, thus changing the sense. Despite the external coincidence of the separate words, I still categorically declare that by doing my words in the manner Mr. Hughes did, he consciously committed forgery."

M. Steklov continues: "As regards the material bonds between Soviet Russia and the Communist International, as contained in the November article, Mr. Hughes omitted the following phrase: "The matter at issue is not material assistance about which the bourgeois press is speaking, which is a myth, but bonds of a spiritually political nature."

Mr. Hughes in his willingness to obey the dictates of the international bankers who are fighting Russian recognition has apparently bit off more than he can chew. There is division even in administration circles. It is reported on good authority that even the department of Justice doubts its ability to furnish Mr. Hughes with the kind of documents necessary to make good before a senatorial committee the charges of Soviet plots in the before this country will enter into any negotiations looking to a resumption of relations went to the support of Soviet enemies.

"Secretary Hughes in his flat rejection of Tchitcherin's overtures said the spreading of propaganda in the United States was the "most serious" offense of the Soviet government. The Senate judiciary committee's inquiry unearthed a memorandum prepared by R. M. Leffingwell, then assistant Secretary of the Treasury, for the Secretary of the Treasury on December 10, 1917, a little over a month after the soviets overthrew the Kerensky regime, which contains these recommendations:

Real Plotters Exposed

"I think the present situation calls for large expenditures for propaganda and for relief, and that [illegible] and military supplies should be sent forward to Russia; that so far as money is in hand, here available, for that purpose, it should be used, and that so far as it is wanting the President's discretionary fund should be used.

"It is important also that the United States should decide promptly whether it will give aid to Kaledin and the southern Russians" (fighting the soviets).

The committee found:

"According to a partial report by President Wilson of the expenditures made by him under the $150,000,000 appropriation given him for the purpose of prosecuting the war, it appears he spent $15,816,523.17 for investigations, relief work, etc., in Russia in 1917 and 1918."

A Costly Campaign

The report includes $25,000 for a publicity campaign in Russia."

Former Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo suggested the policy which has been followed in the matter of nonrecognition of the soviet government in a letter to Secretary of State Lansing, dated January 17, 1918, two months and a half after the soviets came into power.

He demanded not only that all of the terms and conditions of the Russian debt be recognized, but that all of the transactions with Bakhmeteff be ratified.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, commenting on the publication of the Hughes' forgery, declared, "It is inconceivable that the President of the United States would have in his message to Congress, tacitly invited the Russian government to apply formally for recognition had either the Department of State or the Attorney General, had in their possession such information as Mr. Hughes now points to. I think it will be proved beyond question that the evidence which they have is a myth and the product of the unbalanced minds of some sleuth who for some time past a la A. Mitchell Palmer has been able to see long-whiskered bolsheviks hovering over the capitol here in Washington. In my opinion the detective dream will be exploded when it reaches the floor of the Senate."

McAdoo's Plan

The vendetta of Secretary Hughes against Russia is revealed as the brain child of Mr. McAdoo, Ku-Klux Klan favorite as presidential aspirant in the Democratic party. The in two different political camps they prove themselves loyal servants of the money power against the money power's common enemy. The son-in-law of Woodrow Wilson, the world's champion political mountebank will soon seek to rally the workers of this country to his banner, but the workers will remember the unholy alliance between McAdoo the Democrat and Hughes the Republican against the Workers government of Russia.

While Mr. Hughes and his masters carry on this crusade against the Soviet Republic the nations of Europe are vieing with each other in making trade agreements or political agreements with that country and while the Soviet idea is as repugnant to the European business men as it is to American capitalists the former have a sense of reality and know that whether they deal with Russia or not the Soviet idea is bound to win as it knows no barriers. And before long millions of American unemployed workers will be asking Mr. Hughes the well fed politician, why he continues to shut off the great Russian market from the product of America's factories thus shutting off employment from American workers.

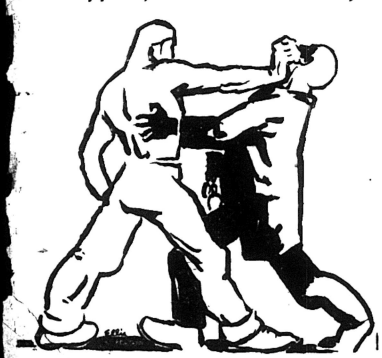
GET BEHIND THE RUTHENBERG APPEAL

This Appeal, Soon To Be Heard, Is The Cornerstone of Michigan Defense



To All Friends of Militant Labor:

The workers of America are faced with the menace of the Johnson Bill—a "Super-Blacklist" against alien workers, and the Sterling Bill—a national anti-syndicalism bill, so drastic that under its provisions the simple exhibition of a button or emblem denoting sympathy with Soviet Russia or workers' Germany might be interpreted as rendering a worker liable to five years in prison or $5,000 fine, or both.

Whether this Sterling Bill passes or not depends on the opposition labor puts up and to a large extent upon the number of convictions secured under the state laws. Thus, the Michigan anti-syndicalism law becomes the focus of attention—and the Foster-Ruthenberg defense paramount in importance.

The official labor baiters of the Burns-Daugherty "Department of Justice," stinging from past defeats, have now turned their attention to Michigan and are out to smash the Ruthenberg appeal, which is about to be heard.

The Ruthenberg Appeal is the cornerstone of the Michigan Defense—if the appeal is successful, it is extremely unlikely that the cases of the other 32 defendants will be brought to trial at all.

The Defense Council must have plenty fighting material and must not be obliged to leave things undone for lack of funds.

This makes it necessary for the defense to concentrate all its energies and resources on the period just ahead. The Labor Defense Council sends out the immediate slogan, "GET BEHIND THE RUTHENBERG APPEAL."

We ask that you come to the support of the Foster-Ruthenberg Defense—generously and NOW. Send your contribution and what you can collect from others on the contribution blank printed below.

You may have already in the past supported the Labor Defense Council and sacrificed for the defense of Foster and Ruthenberg. But the present situation is critical. Keep the Michigan defendants out of jail, free to lead the fight of the workers.

GET BEHIND THE RUTHENBERG APPEAL!

Clothing Workers Plan Drive on West Coast

The General Executive Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, in session in Chicago, voted $3,000 to the needle trade workers of Germany, who are now in a condition of extreme want as a result of the terrible state of that country brought on by the decline and demoralization of the capitalist system.

Sidney Hillman, General President of the Amalgamated, in a special interview to The Daily Worker declared that the organization was in a very satisfactory condition despite the depression in the industry.

Organization Drive Planned

A plan is being formulated for an organization campaign on the Pacific coast where the industry is newly established and rapidly spreading in the ready-made clothing business.

The report of the American-Russian Industrial Corporation, with recommendations that will further advance the Amalgamated's assistance to Soviet Russia, was adopted.

A large number of organizers will be placed in the field at once, declared President Hillman. Their activities will be mainly directed toward what are known as the out-of-town shops, where the attempt is made by employers to establish old sweat-shop conditions.

Big Fund on Hand

The Board decided to establish an Unemployment Insurance Fund, in the New York market along the lines now existing in the Chicago market. The Fund now held in the Chicago district amounts to three quarters of a million dollars.

Favorable condition in the affairs of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' two banks are reported. Their combined resources at the present time are in excess of five million dollars.

Secretary Hughes Continues To Spread Communist Propaganda

The latest eruption of the bewhiskered Secretary of State to come to our attention as we go to press is a letter sent to the Workers' Party of America by Gregory Zinoviev, Chairman of the Communist International, greeting the American party on its decision to start a Communist daily. A telegram to the same effect was printed in "THE WORKER", but the complete text of the article which appeared in the Moscow Pravda, Dec. 14, last, was translated by Mr. Hughes' retainers and sent out over the wires to the American newspapers.

We desire to acknowledge our excellent piece of Communist propaganda. His friend Gompers will not thank him for it.

"The American workers whose thoughts and ideas for many years have been dominated by Gompers and Hillquit are beginning now to bestir themselves and rally around the young American Communist party," the translation says.

"Whoever desires," the translation continues, "to aid the Communist party to become, not a guild organization defending only the narrow class interests of the proletariat, but a party of the proletariat, such a person must, after having established a workers' party, direct its attention also to the conquest of the peasantry.

"In this respect the American Communist first felt out the new path. The American Communists have founded the labor farmers' party (preserving to be sure their Communist proletariat party as an independent organization.).

"Let the American comrades with still greater energy labor to conquer before all the hearts of the American proletariat, to snatch the American indebtedness to Mr. Hughes for this working class and its labor unions out of the tenacious, dead embrace of Gompers and other agents of capital."

14 Washington State Politicals

SEATTLE.—There are 14 political and classwar prisoners in Washington state instead of nine, as previously reported. C. E. Payne, editor, Industrial Worker, lists eight Centralia I. W. W. defendants convicted. One was declared criminally insane. He is to be confined until a sanity board or physician of some kind declares him mentally responsible. The other seven are sentenced to serve 25 to 40 years each in the penitentiary for defending their hall in 1919 against an American legion mob.

AMALGAMATION IN AUSTRALIA

A movement is now on foot in Australia to amalgamate all the various unions in the government railway services of Australia into one powerful union. If this scheme is carried out it will make the railway union the largest on the Australian continent.

Exposes Despicable Fink In Employ of the Hotel Owners

Fulvera, joined the Hotel Workers branch last summer and immediately approached Miss Elster with the view to inducing her to turn over the names of the members of the union to the Hotel owners. For this work she was promised to pay her $15.00 a week and additional sums for such special services as she might be called upon from time to time.

Miss Elster informed M. Obermeier, Secretary-Treasurer of the organization, at once of the offer and the latter instructed her to appear disposed to accept the offer with a view of getting the goods on the fink. She gave him lists which she secured and these were secured from Obermeier. Fulver gave her $15.00 and a five dollar bill on Dec. 16.

The spy signed a document guaranteeing to pay Miss Elster the sum of $30.00 per week in the event of her losing her position as a result of her work for him. This document she immediately turned over to Obermeier.

The officers of the New York Hotel Workers' Union and particularly the young girl, Miss Elster, are to be complimented for their action in immediately putting the skids under this human sewer rat. He is only one of the many that infest the labor movement. And the fact that the trade unions, conservative as well as radical are their happy hunting ground bears evidence to the fear in which the unions are held by the employing class.

The unions are the first line of defence of the workers against their exploiters and the latter use every dirty method to smash the unions and expose their membership to danger. When a radical union such as the Hotel Workers exists, the bosses are still more willing to get rid of it because its officers are imbued not alone with the intention to improve the daily conditions of the workers but to reach far beyond that to the goal which will end all exploitation with the emancipation of all workers from wage slavery and the establishment of the Proletarian state on the ruins of the capitalist system.

Work Daily for "The Daily!"

The Workers' Daily

By ABRAM SAKIEL.

The Daily Worker comes into existence due to the remarkable efforts of thousands of workers of this country. It was on the funds subscribed to and contributed by thousands of workers that made it possible to begin the publication of the first Communist daily in the English language. And now that the Daily Worker is no more a dream but a reality, the workers must not cease to take the keenest interest in it.

It is up to the militant workers to boost the circulation of their daily among their fellow workers in the trade unions, shops, factories, mines and mills.

Every reader of the Daily must also become one of its regular correspondents. A Communist paper must reflect the life of the workers. This can be made possible only when the workers themselves write for the "Worker" about their every-day experiences. It matters little whether the articles and letters written by the workers for their paper are written in correct English or in polished literary style. It is the contents, the facts, that count.

The editorial staff of "The Daily Worker" will take care of the literary side of such articles and letters coming from the rank and file, from the thousands of wage-slaves who make "The Daily Worker" possible. Letters to "The Daily Worker" coming from the rank and file, even if not all published, serve as a source of inspiration to the editors, enabling them to get direct information about the needs of the workers in various parts of the country, of their bitter every-day experiences.

The workers have made the appearance of the Daily possible by contributing the necessary funds. They must now build its circulation among the broad masses of their fellow workers and must become part and parcel of its editorial staff.

Irish-American Workers Greet "The Daily Worker"

By THOMAS J. O'FLAHERTY.

With the signing of the treaty bringing the so-called Irish Free State into existence the movement for Irish independence in the United States went on the rocks. The capitalist politicians who graced the platform when the propaganda for an Irish Republic was at its highest immediately accepted the new order of things and the great majority of them boosted the imperialistic Free State just as ardently as they had formerly shouted for the Republic.

The Irish movement in the United States has always been the football of capitalistic politics. Radicals paid very little attention to it, being of the opinion that it is nationalistic and therefore untouchable.

Communists however not being petrified dogmatists who have swallowed the three volumes of Das Kapital but failed to digest them appreciate the propaganda value of the movement for the national liberation of oppressed peoples and are taking a lively interest in all such movements.

Nationalism in Ireland which takes on an anti-Imperialist character is serving the purpose of weakening British imperialism, therefore communists support the Republican agitation in Ireland and the Irish-American organizations that support the Irish republicans even though these organizations are minus a constructive program or accept the fact of the class struggle.

The rank and file of the Irish workers in America are in favor of the Republican movement in Ireland and are providing the finances with which De Valera and his faction wage the struggle at home. Many of them, however, are not satisfied with De Valera's leadership because he does not go to the bottom of things. The more radical among the Irish in America and the number is constantly increasing are becoming more and more anti-clerical. They see in the Roman Church one of the principal enemies of Ireland and attribute Ireland's unsuccessful struggles in the past to the Roman connection which enabled Irish priests to inform the British government through the confessional of any plots against the safety of his realm. Besides that, the Papal Bull granting the British king the power to rule Ireland for the consideration of one penny from each Irish house to the Vatican treasury gave British Occupation of Ireland, Papal sanction which to the ignorant Catholics meant divine sanction.

The progressive Irish workers in America believe that the capitalist system is the main enemy of the Irish workers as it is of all workers. But a concerted attack must be carried on against the Black International of Rome and against the British government. The radical Irish workers in America also cast in their lot with the revolutionary movement here. They know that their duty is to fight for freedom here in America as well as fight for Irish freedom three thousand miles away.

The Irish workers of America who hold the same ideal of a republic as was held by James Connolly greet the Daily Worker and pledge themselves to support it. They know from experience that the truth cannot be expected from the capitalist press.

FIGHT McADOO ALLY AMONG THE FARM-LABORITES

Minnesota Chairman Is Working for Democrats

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

ST. PAUL, Minn.—A bitter fight is being made by State Chairman F. A. Pike of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party to deliver the party to the Democrats in the event that William G. McAdoo gets the presidential nomination. This is clear from reports issued by the McAdoo headquarters at Chicago.

At the conference that was held here November 15, sentiment of the assembled delegates from all over the country was unanimous, that a call be issued by the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, for a great national nominating convention to be held at the Twin Cities, May 30.

The delegates present were astonished to hear Mr. Pike make a bitter and stupid attack upon the proposal to hold the May 30th convention. The only clear idea to be gained from his confused speech was that the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, of which he was careful to state he was the "legal" Chairman, should not join in a national Farmer-Labor movement until the other state Farmer-Labor parties showed more willingness to participate. His position was that nothing should be done on the matter of presidential nominations until after the old party conventions. He further stated as his own opinion that the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party should remain a state organization, and if one of the old parties nominated a "Progressive," the Minnesota organization should support him.

Now it becomes clear why he, the legal chairman of a state third party, was in favor of a nonpartisan stand nationally. Mr. Pike is a lawyer and a former democrat. He lost his standing among the democrats and joined the Farmer-Labor Party by having himself appointed state chairman, a very strategic position because it enables him to call, as he is doing now, hand picked conferences in the various state congressional districts. One of these conferences has just been held at which the only matters discussed was a series of resolutions written or inspired by Pike. Two of these resolutions are worthy of note. One authorized the state chairman to call a state conference and the other opposed the holding of the May 30th convention.

The conference was handpicked by Pike the resolution against the May 30th convention met with vigorous opposition. William Mahoney, who was present, led the opposition on the grounds that the delegates were wholly uninformed on the real issues at stake. Following the close cut argument of Mahoney, Mr. Pike made a wild and excited attack upon the idea of calling the national Farmer-Labor convention. He argued that if one of the old parties nominated a "progressive" it would be unnecessary for the Farmer-Labor Party to have a national candidate. In spite of the fact that Pike's conference was made-to-order, the resolution against the May 30th convention was only carried by a vote of 16 to 12.

Mr. Pike is not alone in this attempt to block the national convention. Thomas Van Lear, the business manager of the Minnesota Daily Star, has allowed himself and the paper to line up with the Democratic Party. It is at present engaged in a campaign to show that the Communists are behind the Farmer-Labor movement and the proposed May 30th convention.

Pike and Van Lear are typical, unscrupulous opportunist politicians. They are true representatives of the Democratic party and its economic interests. They are in politics for the spoils, they know little about and care less for the genuine Farmer-Labor movement. They will side track and destroy it if they can to serve the bidding of their masters.

Mr. Pike is now working to organize a state conference of the Farmer-Labor party representatives. No doubt his program will be to deliver the party to a proposition of endorsing a national democratic ticket.

In the meantime sentiment for the May 30th convention continues to grow. Every gathering of the various state Farmer-Labor parties held since Nov. 15, has endorsed the May 30th convention.

Russian Congress Opens

MOSCOW.—The first All-Russian Congress of Scientific Workers has been inaugurated here. Upon the reports of Gregory Zinovieff, President of the Communist International and Chairman of the Petrograd Soviet, Mr. Lunacharsky, People's Commissar of Education, and Mr. Semashko, People's Commissar of Health, the Congress unanimously passed a resolution to the following effect: the former cleavage between the scientific workers and the laboring class is, today, a thing of the past; those former dissensions have now been supplanted by an ever growing rapprochement in the process of one common work of restoration of the country's economic and cultural life.

Congratulations on the birthday of "The Daily Worker" and Camilla Classen's 60th birthday. January 13, 1924.

Week Daily for "The Daily"!

All Over The World

THE STRUGGLE IN GERMANY

The struggle in the German Republic against the monarchist reactionaries seems apparently to be ended by the victory of the Ebert-Stresemann government. But in reality, the only achievement of the reactionaries by the active collaboration of the social-democrats in this criminal move, the workers all over the country are joining the Communist Party. Since the days of the Kapp adventure, thousands of miners left the pits because of the discharge of a number of workers who refused to obey the order of Kahr. The only healthy result of this new traitorous act is the continued increase of influence and membership of the Communist Party and Young Communist League, which are growing daily in spite of their having been outlawed by Germany's dictator, General Hans von Seeckt.

Even the intellectuals and petty business men are now following the leadership of the Communists as the sole agent capable of regenerating the life of the nation by the actual setting up of a new system of society. At a meeting of intellectuals and students' organizations in Berlin, resolutions of agreement with the Communists were adopted and ten bourgeois youth unions declared themselves ready to join the struggle for the emancipation of the proletariat together with the communists.

The Rote Fahne, central organ of the Communist Party, altho suppressed by von Seeckt is appearing illegally, and being circulated in great quantities, under the name of the Rote Sturmfahne (red storm banner.)

Because of the suppressive acts, the executive committee of the Communist Party has voted to move to a neighboring country, from which the revolutionary activities of the working class will be directed until the attainment of power by the German proletariat which is conceded to be a matter of only a short time.

DEVELOPMENTS IN NORWAY

While the struggle goes on ever more sharply in Germany, France, Poland and other continental countries, the Labor Party of Norway has broken from the Communist International, a minority of the convention, which took place in Christiania a short while ago, forming itself into the Communist Party of Norway and immediately declaring its unreserved affiliation to the Communist International.

The fight in the Norwegian party is of long standing. The group of intellectuals, centering around the publication "Mot Dag," had done all in its power to break the party away from the international. Party comrades faithful to Communist principles were not permitted to voice their opposition to the tactics of the socialists. Many were expelled and the Young Communist League, which stood by the Communist International was gagged completely.

The fight centered around the decisions of the Communist International for a struggle for a workers' and farmers' government, the campaign against religion and the centralization of discipline. Besides this, the trade union leaders combined with the "Mot Dag" faction in a fight against the policy of affiliation to the Red Trade Union International. After a long struggle, both within the party and at international congresses, the splitters broke the party. The newly formed Communist Party is already issuing its own daily, the Kommunistblad.

• • • •

THE WHITE TERROR IN BRAZIL

At the other end of the globe, the Communists are being subjected to a reactionary suppression by the capitalists. The Communist Party of Brazil is having its most active comrades jailed upon the flimsiest excuses, and many cases without any reason being given at all. Comrade Candlas, delegate to the fourth congress of the Communist International, is in jail. So also are Comrades Peres, Silva, Brandac, the proletarian writer, Marcillo, Escobar, Dias and Persira, who published a prophetic pamphlet in March 1918, saying that the overthrow of German militarism would be accomplished by the bolsheviks.

Many comrades are being sent to convict prisons or deported and the protests of trade unions are ignored. One union was actually suppressed for such a protest.

• • • •

WITH AMERICAN LABOR

Labor is seeing the need for a daily press more and more. The support which has been given to the campaign of the Workers Party to establish "The Daily Worker" is one evidence of this fact. Organized labor in Alameda County, (Oakland) Calif., is piling up support for the publication of a local daily which shall be the organ of the working class as opposed to the reactionary capitalist rags which infest the western (and eastern) section of this country. A labor daily in Oakland will make the second one on the Pacific coast, the first being the Seattle Union Record, which has, unfortunately, degenerated into a mere sheet and used as an organ for the pushing of wildcat speculation schemes of certain labor faking politicians. Here's hoping the latter.

Definite proof that the organized labor movement is in favor of amalgamation is seen in the conference of the railway unions. Practically every state in the union has many provisions in their by-laws, resolutions, and decisions of additional endorsements come in every day.

Birthday Greetings to "THE DAILY WORKER"

From coast to coast, from the lakes to the gulf, the Birthday Greetings have been pouring in to "The Daily Worker". Thousands of workers, everywhere, have made their Birthday Gifts to "The Daily", 25 cents, 50 cents, $1 and up, and here are their names, the names of those who have joined in greeting "The Daily" on the day of its birth. Other lists will be found in other columns. Additional lists will be found in future issues of "The Daily". It isn't too late! Send in your list to "The Daily Worker", 1640 N. Amalgamation, New Leadership Needed to Check the Growing Demoralization of Rail Unions

By KARL FREYBOLD.

How can the railroad workers unions counteract the forces that have failed to organize the non-unionized, to raise the wage level, to enforce the demands and because of the failure of the "outlaw" shopmen's strike of 1922 the unions involved are steadily losing members and strength.

On whom rests there is not a shadow of organization left. The most who still belong to the unions have a feeling of indifference to the unions and lack faith in the present leadership of them. Most of the men see little hope for the future.

These are the facts gathered in talking to dozens of railroad workers employed on railroads centering in Chicago, America's greatest railroad terminal.

Gets Rank and File View

In order to find out what the rank and file of railroad workers thought about their prospects for 1924, and if it was true that the unions were losing members as a result of the shopmens "outlaw" strike of 1922 I hunted up railroad workers and tried to talk with them about conditions both in the transportation industry and the unions.

With the aid of a railroad shop worker I was introduced into the meeting place of workers from one of the lines that had signed an agreement with the union and avoided a strike.

"Yes, it's true that the unions involved in the 'outlaw' strike are pretty well shot to pieces. All sorts of reasons for that I guess. I suppose that when a strike is lost members usually drop out. Nothing can be done about it that I can see. Wait till things change and call another strike and then organize."

Members Lose Interest

"What's the good of a union if it has no power? I pay my dues but that's all. I've lost interest."

"Union? Union hell, its gone."

"We got an agreement from our road this time. But next time it will be a different story."

This is typical of the comment in this group of workers. Playing cards and smoking they would say a few words and relapse into silence. They were indifferent to their union and its fate. They were agreed that things had gone to the dogs but would not try to tell why. On the point of causes they seemed vague. "All sorts of reasons" was the usual answer to the question: "Why?"

Turning to Industrial Unionism

These men agreed that workers dropping out of the old railroad unions did not join other unions. Further west there were a few who joined industrial organizations. Several said the I. W. W. was gaining in some sections.

They were willing that I should use what they had to say but would not give their names. "Print it, but no names, remember."

Afraid that I had gotten into the gathering place of a group of malcontents who were not typical of the present spirit of the railroad workers I went to the entrance of a shop of another line where the unions had recently called off the strike. When the men began to come out after work I went up to one and asked him: "How's the union in this shop since the strike?"

"I don't know. I quit the union when the strike was called off."

"Why?"

"I don't want to talk. I suppose you are a reporter. Well I won't talk to you." And off he walked.

Thought Unions Would Come Back

The second man I spoke to had been secretary of a machinists' local. "We put up a good fight and we are not licked yet. You'll see the railroad workers come back strong."

Yes, he said it was true the unions were losing members. Quite a few but most of them would come back. He understood that in some districts as many as half the men had dropped out of the unions. Lodges had disbanded and turned in their charters. "But you've got to remember this, the union is the only thing that stands between the worker and the conditions of thirty or forty years ago. When the men realize that, then they will come back to the unions."

He refused to give his name but suggested that I go and see Peter Jensen, a machinist working in a railway shop and President of Lodge 492 of the International Association of Machinists.

The other workers to whom I talked at this shop were indifferent and unwilling to comment on either the strike or the union.

Jensen Had Program

I hunted up Jensen. Finally met him in a barbershop where he and other railroad workers were playing cards. He was a typical keen intelligent railroad worker.

"Is it true that the railway unions are losing members and strength?"

"It certainly is. Here in Chicago before the shopmen's strike there were fourteen lodges of the I. A. of M., today there are four."

"What is the reason?"

"The unions are unable to maintain wages and conditions. Men join unions to get benefits, wages, hours and working conditions and when the unions fail to get or keep those benefits the members cease to take an interest in the unions and drop out."

His answers were direct and to the point and delivered without any hesitation. It was plain he had thought about the problem.

Blamed Poor Leadership

"The cause for the failure of the shopmen's strike could be summed up under the head of poor leadership. When the injunction was issued, instead of the efforts of the unions defying it they laid down. And before that the Clerks and Maintainence of Way unions promised to come out with the shopmen in a solid body. They failed. In some places they came out and in some places they didn't.

"At the present time the members of the unions are sore at the union officials for calling off strikes without consulting them. The strike on the Burlington was called off over the protest of the strikers. On the Santa Fe, the Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Union Pacific, Chicago and Great Northern, the Nickle Plate Consolidated Lines and many others the strikes have been called off within the last six months."

"The efficiency plan of President Johnson of the I. A. of M. in force on the B. & O. is not at all popular, either or that line or with the men.

Coal At $2.50 a Ton

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—A coal mine owned and operated by the New South Wales state government, situated at Lithgow, produces coal at $2.50 per ton as against $5.40 per ton charged by private coal mine owners.

The government makes the same allowances for interest on capital, depreciation on plant, machinery, etc., and all other charges as made by private owners.

In addition the government pays its miners a full week's holiday annually on full pay, as well as further payment to all workers while idle because of accidents at their work. Yet despite this additional expenditure, the government owned mine sells its coal at a price less than half that charged by the private mine owners.

"Is there any hope?"

"Amalgamate!"

Amalgamation Is Urged

"Unless the leaders of the shop crafts come out with a program for amalgamation they will find that they have nothing left to lead."

After talking to Jensen I met Edward Hoskins, President of the American Federation of Railroad Workers.

"How bad is the situation among the railroad unions," I asked. "Everybody I have talked to seems to think it is bad."

"It is. Darn bad. The shopmen's strike is killing the craft unions."

"Are the men who are dropping out of the old unions joining different unions?"

"For the most part they are not. Some are. We are continually signing up men who are discouraged with the old unions. Ours is a democratic industrial union."

Brotherhoods Face Struggle

"For twenty years we have been preaching industrial unionism. We don't expect to make any huge gains in membership due to the present falling off of membership in the other unions."

"The workers are indifferent. Nothing seems to be able to stir them. They have lost faith in leaders and do not seem ready to take things into their own hands."

"The Brotherhoods are facing the prospect of the same sort of thing. The Engineers and Firemen have discovered in their negotiations with the New York Central that there is a concerted move on the part of the railroads to deny all the demands of the men. They are facing a fight. Time alone can tell if they are going to be able to withstand the pressure."

Amalgamation means strength!

PLAN WORLD WIDE PUBLICITY

An international farmers' news service has just been established by the International Farmers' Conference recently held in Moscow and attended by farmers' delegates from all parts of the world. William H. Green, of the Progressive Party of Nebraska, was elected to the presidium of the executive council; the other American delegate being Harold M. Ware of the United Farmers' Educational League, W. H. Walker of the Non-Partisan League of North Dakota, and member of the state legislature, and F. W. Smith of the Pennsylvania State Grange.

DEMAND RELEASE OF FOR 114 WORKERS HELD BY STATES

United Front to Free Class War Prisoners

By HARRISON GEORGE.

Although the long fight for the release of political prisoners languishes in the federal government, which was crowned with success because President Coolidge regarded the release of 32 I. W. W. from Leavenworth as politically expedient to capture liberal support in the next election, this fact leaves in bold relief the vicious persecution suffered by workers under state laws.

Many Politicals Held

There are 114 political prisoners held by the state governments who are political prisoners by every definition of the term, according to the American Civil Liberties Union. Most of them are members of the I. W. W. which has 97 of its members in California prisons as victims of the law against "criminal syndicalists." The Communists have four men in Pennsylvania prisons under the "liberal" administration of Pinchot, and no less than 32 prominent leaders of the Workers Party are yet in danger of ten years imprisonment under the "criminal syndicalist" law of Michigan. Senator Borah, who raised his voice for release of the federal political prisoners will, it is understood, be asked how he can longer keep silent on the persecution of workers in his own state of Idaho, where four men are serving ten years as "criminal syndicalists" merely for membership in a radical labor union.

Efforts are being made by the General Defense Committee of the I. W. W. to intensify publicity for the eight men who were victimized by the Lumber Trust and the American Legion when they defended their hall at Centralia, Wash., from a fourth attack upon it by henchmen of the Weyerhauser interests masquerading as patriots on Armistice Day of 1919. These eight loggers were sentenced to terms of 25 to 40 years after rank intimidation of their jury by armed Legionaries and state troops. Six jurors have sworn since that their verdict was unfair and made by them under duress. A group of A. F. of L. men, called a "labor jury" heard the case tried and reported to the Seattle and Tacoma Labor Councils that the eight men were innocent, yet they are still in Walla Walla prison.

Unions Fight Injunction

The state of California, disgraced by the continued imprisonment of Mooney and Billings after all sentiment against them was shown to be perjured, has also to its shame the vindictive persecution of migratory laborers who do the seasonal work of the state and who are members of the I. W. W. Witnesses appearing for their defense are themselves arrested and tried and a Sacramento judge has issued an unheard of injunction making it contempt of court to belong to the I. W. W. This may be used as a precedent against other unions and a campaign is being made by all labor organizations to defeat the measure, known as the Busick injunction.

While the I. W. W. has the bulk of all state prisoners, the Communists of the Workers Party have the second largest group and recently made an offer to the I. W. W. to unite upon the specific program of a campaign for all working class prisoners convicted in labor cases. While no reply has been received the work of unifying such action is going on locally and 1924 promises to see a vigorous attack on reactionary persecution of workers.

An advertisement published in the "Economic Review" (a London business paper) for Dec. 15, 1923, reads as follows:

London Agents:
Lloyds Bank Limited,
Barclays Bank Limited,
Westminster Bank Limited,
J. Henry Schroder & Co.
Arcos Banking Corporation Ltd.

This completes the advertisement, with the exception of one phrase. Here is the Russian Soviet Government, advertising a full-fledged banking business in the heart of the London financial district, having as its agents some of the strongest and best established of British banks, and having, in addition to the five already listed, "Guaranty Trust Company of New York, 32 Lombard St.,"—the London branch of one of the most powerfully connected of all American banking institutions.

Should Mr. Burns investigate the Guarantee Trust? Should Mr. Hughes write another essay on the connection between the Russian Government and the Third International? Or should the American Government wake up to the fact that the Soviet Government of Russia has become an integral part of the economic life of post-war Europe?

The peasants and poor farmers of every country in the world have continued in degradation as long as they left political and economic power in the hands of the capitalist class. In only one country in the world have the poor farmers taken the political and economic power out of the hands of the exploiting class. That country is Soviet Russia. Only in the Workers and Farmers Republic of Russia are the poor farmers steadily improving their condition.

"Janet March" Suppressed

Joab Banton, district attorney of New York, read a copy of Floyd Dell's latest novel, Janet March, and was inexpressibly shocked. His moral hair stood on end and he immediately went to see the publisher, Alfred Knopf. Mr. Knopf, after confering with the pious Banton and after another conference with his attorney, decided to discontinue the sale of the book and withdraw it from circulation.

Mr. Dell, while defending the tone of the novel, which is, in delicate language, "the story of a girl's experience," stated that he appreciated the attitude of Mr. Knopf and would rather have the book suppressed than have it pushed into a big sale by the sensational publicity that a lawsuit would entail.

So it stands. If you are a worker, your morals are guaranteed. If you happen to be a fat lady with lots of money and a lap dog, or a tired business man, you will soon get a chance to buy the book from a literary bootlegger for the juicy price of $20.

But let us hope that you are only a common worker. Then you will be able to go down on your knees and thank the gods that there exist district attorneys and societies for the suppression of vice who take upon themselves the weighty burden of protecting your delicate morals from corruption by the terrible books which are written nowadays for no other purpose, so we are told, than to inveigle the people of this glorious country into an orgy of rape, murder—and thought.

Gunboat Diplomacy

The flag follows the dollar. When workers strike at home against low wages and intolerable conditions of employment, the flow of dividends into the coffers of the employers are menaced and the flag soon follows the dollar. With very little diplomatic ado and a dose of hypocritical cant about the interests of the dear public the various Governors or the President forthwith dispatch troops to safeguard the interests of the capitalists and to crush the strikers.

This strikebreaking policy at home is translated into an iron heel policy abroad when the class interests of our capitalists are in danger. The United States pursues as vigorous a strikebreaking policy abroad as at home. It is happening right now in the Far East. America is at present committed to the "open door" policy in China. In practice this means the tightly closed fist policy. The other day an international force of nearly a score of cruisers and gunboats, armed with soldiers, landed at Shamen, the foreign section of Canton, to help the bought-and-paid-for Peking government of Dr. Sun Yat-Sen. The latter has steadfastly refused to sell out to the foreign imperialist powers who have done their utmost to keep the country torn by civil war with the hope of getting a better hold on the wonderful resources of China.

An American naval commander led the procession of gunboats and other armed craft under the guise of helping the weak Chinese people maintain their national integrity. Not a word was said by the American naval commander about the need of protecting Yankee investments in China. Machine gun democracy at home is always coated with the palatable talk of "public interest." Gunboat diplomacy abroad is usually given the same treatment. Stripped of their dishonest verbiage capitalist democracy and employing class diplomacy stand out as clever devices to enslave the workers of all countries.

Lenin and the Working Class People

By GEORGE HALONEN,
Editor, Finnish Daily, Tyomies.

About 23 years ago the Russian Labor movement faced a situation which in many respects can be compared to the present turning point of the American Labor movement. There was to be seen, especially among the industrial proletariat, an awakening toward the political struggle. The workers political party, however, was weak, decentralized and the revolutionary workers were compelled to work either underground or in exile. The big question arose, how to build a party to answer the new needs.

The organization question was not without controversies. Much was written on this subject, the fight being led by Nikolai Lenin. Lenin, first of all, emphasized the importance of a workers' organ, of a paper, which was to be, not local, but national in order to unite the whole Russian Labor movement, to guide the comrades in their work wherever they be working.

"Where to begin?", asked the little sheet "Iskra", edited by Lenin and other exiled revolutionaries, and answered, "In our opinion, as the starting point and the first step for the party organization, as well as the guiding principle to help us to develop, to deepen and to extend our organization, we must make the establishment of an All-Russian newspaper, because without a political organ, systematic and many-sided agitation and propaganda work cannot be done. This work, which, especially at the present time, when there is an awakening interest in politics and socialism among the wide masses, is the most important and continuous task for our organization. And this paper must be national, not local."

"The essential point of the whole question", wrote Com. Lenin, "lies therein, that strong political organizations cannot be developed otherwise than thru the help of an All-Russian organ. . . . The establishment of an All-Russian organ must be the principal guide which enables us unflinchingly to develop, widen and extend the revolutionary organization, and which organ is always ready to support every protest and expression of dissatisfaction against the present political system. The newspaper should at once the general lines, the extent and nature of the work and calls attention to the greatest faults and defections in our national activity, shows in which localities the propaganda work is not properly done, which parts of our movement are not satisfactorily connected with the working masses, indicates to the different party organs their right places in our big common machinery and teaches them the best way to fulfill their duties as parts of this machinery. . . .

The American Communist movement has now, on its part, taken the first fundamental step. "The Daily Worker" is established. And at the same time we find in America the first steps of an awakening of the great working masses. True, this awakening is not yet based on class consciousness. It is an instinctive struggle for something better, manifesting itself vaguely sometimes in some kind of a "Third Party" movement, "LaFollettism", "Magnus Johnson-Farmer-Labor-partyism" and more or less in a class Farmer-Labor-partyism. All this, however, indicates clearly that the present time is ripe for Communist propaganda and agitation. This work, however, cannot be done and our party made a strong political organisation without "The Daily Worker". Lenin's advice of the importance of a working class newspaper, given more than a score of years ago, is today, more than ever, fit for the American movement as an incentive to lead us forward. Our Daily Worker will direct our activities, show us the general lines, the scope and nature of our work, and unite the local activities, the local organs into a strong organization.

In our present struggle, "The Daily Worker" must be that ferment which enables the American workers and farmers to rise from the instinctive, weak struggle to the level of a class conscious movement. "The Daily Worker" must be the beacon which points light upon the darkened understanding even of the poorest and humblest, giving them knowledge of their rights.

Every class conscious worker must work for "The Daily Worker", find ways and means that it can be distributed everywhere, from the darkest alleys to the industrial and agricultural districts like leaves on the four winds of heaven. If we succeed in the distribution of "The Daily Worker", and succeed we must, then our dreams of a great, class conscious working class movement in America are not in vain. We must reach thousands upon thousands who hold themselves aloof from our movement and transform them into zealous, active partisans of the order of things that is to be. This is now the most energetic work of all. To work for THE DAILY WORKER!

The German Working Class Cannot Be Cheated of Its Victory

By GEORGE ZINOVIEV,
President, Communist International.

A figure is emerging from the enveloping mists—a strong man destined to save bourgeois Germany, a sole dictator who will embody the will of the nation—in a word, a German Supreme Ruler. A German Koltchak has appeared on the scene. His name is General Seeckt. Of all the pretenders to the claim, and they are many, he is the one who stands most chance. Many are called, but few are chosen. Seeckt apparently is the chosen one. It must be admitted that the probability of Seeckt becoming the dictator in the very near future is a serious one. Hitler and Co. are German Purishkeviches if. They have a certain backing among the nationalist petty-bourgeoisie, but their program will not bear examination, and they themselves are more like buffoons than serious active counter-revolutionaries.

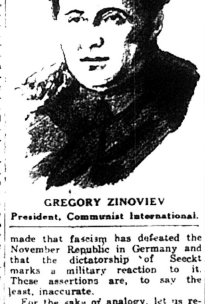
But General Seeckt is another proposition. His movements are secret and cautious. He has mastered to secure the backing of both the prudent section of the German social-democrats and of the big bourgeoisie headed by Stinnes. His policy is to consolidate the big bourgeoisie throughout the country and to create a solid bourgeois constitutional regime. To this extent Seeckt constitutes a most serious menace to the German revolution.

What is the relation between German Koltchakism (Seeckt) and the "November Republic"?

The November Republic is personified by President Ebert, the social-democrats and the more "freedom-loving" section of the bourgeois democrats. Koltchakism is personified by General Seeckt, who for some time has been playing a prominent, and indeed a decisive role in every German democratic government.

We are again hearing the assertion made that fascism has defeated the November Republic in Germany and that the dictatorship of Seeckt marks a military reaction to it. These assertions are, to say the least, inaccurate.

Heads World's Workers



GREGORY ZINOVIEV
President, Communist International.

For the sake of analogy, let us recall how Koltchakism developed in Russia.

Koltchakism in Russia was begotten by "revolutionary democracy" itself. The revolutionary democrats, forced to the wall by the revolutionary proletariat, themselves handed power over by instalments to the military reaction. Did not Kerensky himself, the famous leader of revolutionary democracy, hand over power first to General Kornilov and then to General Alexeiev? Did not the revolutionary democrats, in the person of the Siberian so-called revolutionaries and mensheviks, call Admiral Koltchak to power, who then as was only to be expected, turned upon the revolutionary democrats and rent them?

Something similar is now taking place in Germany. What we are now observing amounts to this: the German November democrats are handing over power by instalments to General Koltchak, General Seeckt.

With the first German revolution (November 1918), power passed entirely into the hands of the social-democrats, who set up the first "revolutionary" government of "national representatives" consisting of social-democrats and independent social-democrats. Five years have elapsed since that period. During these five years the German social-democrats and independents have been employed in handing power over by instalments, first to the bourgeoisie and then to the reactionary militarists. German social-democracy "begat" the November democracy. November democracy "begat" the German Koltchak, Seeckt.

German Koltchakism, like Russian Koltchakism in its time, is the logical development and consummation of the idea of revolutionary democracy, or, adapted to Germany, of the idea of the November Republic. One cannot therefore assert that any distinction or contradiction exists between the November Republic and the dictatorship of Seeckt. Seeckt is the child, the legal heir, of the November Republic, as Koltchak was the legal heir of the revolutionary democracy of Kerensky.

The revolutionary democrats are unable to bridle the communist proletariat, and therefore a Koltchak or a Seeckt inevitably comes to bridle revolutionary democracy. That is the logic of things. The German proletariat having shown that it is as yet unable to exercise its dictatorship immediately, the November Revolution must in its logical development lead inevitably to the dictatorship of General Seeckt. General Seeckt has not defeated Ebert. As a matter of fact, Ebert needs General Seeckt much more than Seeckt needs Ebert. It is very possible that when Seeckt finally established his dictatorship, he may think it advisable to make the social-democrat Ebert his president. Why not? In a big affair like that, a social-democratic president would be a very useful asset. But Ebert, on the other hand, could not remain president for a day without the support of General Seeckt. Seeckt and Ebert are the two sides of the coin. On the front are the words, "The November Republic" and on the back the words "The Dictatorship of Seeckt."

An Industrial Kaiser

HUGO STINNES
Germany's Ruler Today.

Similarly it would be just as incorrect to assume that a fundamental antagonism of interests exists between General Seeckt on the one hand and German fascism on the other. It is is true that General Seeckt and the official organizations are not one and the same. But even Admiral Koltchak, in the first period of his activity, was in favor of the Constitutional Assembly and not of a "united and indivisable Russia," and certainly not in favor of "autocracy, orthodoxy and nationalism." If we talk not of trifles but of serious matters, i.e., the victory of the bourgeoisie over the proletarian revolution in Germany and the consolidation of the bourgeois dictatorship, then the fascisti, Seeckt, and Ebert are engaged in one and the same business, in which a certain amount of division of labor has been arranged. Seeckt, Ebert and Nosko are merely different forms of fascism.

Instead of encouraging the German workers with talk of differences between General Seeckt and fascism, instead of basing our calculations upon such differences, it would be far better to study the facts carefully. Let us recall recent happenings. The Bavarian fascisti effected a coup d'etat. What did General Seeckt and the social-democratic President Ebert do? They took advantage of the fact in order to declare a state of siege throughout the whole of Germany. This was done so skillfully that considerable sections of the social-democratic workers were at first deceived by the manoeuvres of Seeckt and Ebert, and seriously believed that the state of siege was declared, not as a measure directed against the revolutionary proletariat, but in order to deal with the coup d'etat of the Bavarian fascisti.

Again let us take Red Saxony. While General Seeckt, with the approval of the social-democratic President Ebert, was concentrating 60,000 troops of the White Reichswehr in Saxony, it was given out that the concentration was directed against White Bavaria. But when the concentration was complete, the mask was discarded and the White Reichwehr overthrew the workers' government of Saxony.

Kolchakist in Germany

GEN. VON LUDENDORFF
Militarist Ally of Stinnes.

Take again Thuringia. The fascisti were concentrating their well-armed forces on the frontier of Thuringia, where also a workers' government was in power. The whole social-democratic and democratic press raised the alarm that the fascisti were about to occupy Thuringia, whereupon General Seeckt, in order to save the situation and with the blessing of Ebert, sent his republican Reichswehr into Thuringia. Thanks to the efforts of the social-democratic press, many social-democratic workers regarded the occupation of Thuringia by the Republican Reichswehr almost as a victory for the German proletariat. If the Reichswehr did not occupy Thuringia, they said, the fascisti would. While the right social-democratic leaders are terrifying the workers with the spectre of Hitler fascism, they are in fact setting Seeckt on the fascist throne. In short, the keynote of the November Republic, the German social-democrats, are handing over power to Seeckt by instalments. The thirties of German Koltchakism are springing up thickly in the flowerbeds of German social-democracy.

Will this go on for long? It is hardly possible. There can be now little doubt that Germany will have to pass through a period of White Terror. There is also little doubt that the path of the German proletariat will be a difficult one and that many and heavy sacrifices will be demanded of it. It is now certain that the storm of the German proletariat revolution will be much more painful than we at first believed. But the fundamental factors which are dragging Germany to the edge of the abyss, and which are leading to a revolutionary crisis, viz., international politics, the financial crisis, the food crisis, etc.—are still operating and are steadily becoming more acute.

The German working class will have to pay a heavy price for its victory, but nothing can cheat it of that victory. Koltchakism will be a no more permanent phenomenon on German soil than it was on Russian soil. The German workers are being tested in the fire of painful experience, and are acquiring the qualities of steel—most of all, consciously, a fighting temper, distrust of the social-democrats, and military preparedness. Revolutionary determination will be hammered under the blows of Koltchakism.

The American Revolutionary Movement Grows

An Analysis of the Many Achievements of the Third National Convention of the Workers Party

By C. E. RUTHENBERG

Seventy-two hours of intense work, during which most of the delegates did not secure more than ten hours of sleep, was the record of the Third National Convention of the Workers Party of America.

The Convention summarized the achievement of the Party during the previous year and restated its policies for the coming year's work.

The report of the Central Executive Committee submitted at the opening of the Convention, brought out vividly the differences between the Workers Party of a year ago and the Party of today. A year ago the Party had not yet made itself felt as a political influence in the United States. It was still in the period of preparation for work rather than having a record of achievement.

At this Convention the Central Executive Committee was able to report that the Party, thru its work during the year, had achieved a place as a political influence in the lives of the workers of this country and that this influence was continually being strengthened and extended.

The United Front

The report of the Central Executive Committee showed that it was thru the application of the United Front policy of the Communist International that the Workers Party had made the progress. United Front campaigns had been carried on for protection of the foreign-born workers, for defense of the Communists arrested in Michigan, and in the struggle for a Labor Party. The latter campaign, which had its first culmination in the July 3rd conference at which the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was organized and which is now in its second stage with the May 30th convention of the Farmer-Labor Party organizations at St. Paul, as its expression, had brought the Workers Party, the leadership in the struggle for a class Farmer-Labor Party in the United States.

The second major achievement submitted by the Central Executive Committee, in its report, was in the form of the statement that the Communist Party of the United States had at last consolidated its forces and that the period of splits and factional struggles was over and there was no longer danger of the Party flying apart into various sections as had so frequently been the case in the years from 1919 to 1921.

Organizational Achievements

During the course of the year the Workers Party added 2,000 members to its ranks. It extended its work into the agricultural section of the country, carried on a successful campaign for the establishment of a daily Communist newspaper, established the first of a series of book stores for the sale of Communist literature, began the work of producing a Communist literature in the United States by the publication of eight books and pamphlets, and maintained a press service in which some 500 labor papers were furnished with material on the Communist movement and the campaigns of the Workers Party in the United States.

The comment on the year's work of the Party was submitted in the form of a letter from the Communist International which thus summarizes the work of the Party during the year:

"To perform this and many other tasks confronting the Party the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has rightfully conceived as the most important step the establishment of an English Communist daily.

"The excellent work that has been done by the Communists in the Left Wing of the labor movement in the United States . . .

"The propaganda that the Workers Party has conducted during the past year has been most effective . . .

"The vast sentiment for Communism that the Workers Party has aroused must be organized. The Central Executive Committee acted rightly in inaugurating a campaign for membership . . .

"The Workers Party has applied Communist tactics correctly in seeking a United Front of all forces to fight the capitalist system in the United States . . .

"The organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was an achievement of primary importance . . .

"There is one problem to which the American Party have not applied themselves with sufficient energy, viz., that of American imperialism . . .

New Policy

Together with the report of the Central Executive Committee there was submitted a thesis containing a declaration of policy for the year 1924. This thesis contained a new proposal in the form of a statement of the policy to be followed by the Workers Party in relation to the existing tendency for the formation of a Third Party and toward such a party when it is organized. The thesis declared that it was correct Communist strategy to endeavor to promote a split of the Third Party group, containing the middle class elements, from the Republican and Democratic Parties and if such a split was achieved that the Workers Party could, thru a Farmer-Labor Party, enter into an alliance with such a Third Party for certain specific purposes.

The problem of the Third Party became a tactical question of immediate policy in view of the possibility that the May 30th convention of the Farmer-Labor Party groups may be dominated by the middle-class progressive-La Folette elements and not by those groups which stand for a class Farmer-Labor Party.

The discussion of issues before the Convention in the various District Conventions which elected the delegates to the National Convention had centered on the Third Party question. In all of the District Conventions in which a vote was taken the Central Executive Committee policy was upheld. It was expected that this question would be the storm-center of the Convention proceedings, as there were in the Convention a bloc of some fifteen delegates out of the total of 53 who opposed the Third Party policy.

However, upon the opening of the discussion on this question, Comrade John Pepper made a statement to the effect that the Party membership had not been sufficiently prepared for the adoption of this policy. There existed, he said, still a large section which believed that a Communist Party should be a mere organization for propaganda and education and the organization of revolutionists into a Party, and not an organization which maneuvred in the political struggle of this country for the purpose of securing the leadership over wide masses of workers.

Under these circumstances it was inadvisable for the Convention to force the issue of the Third Party policy and he recommended that the Third Party section of the thesis of the Central Executive Committee be withdrawn and the question of the correctness of the policy contained therein be referred to the Communist International for decision. This motion was adopted by a vote of 43 in favor and none against, ten delegates not voting.

The United Front in Chicago

Since the Party activities during the year on the political field had been carried on under the United Front policy, it was natural that the question of the correct application of the United Front should be a major question before the convention. The issue came up in the form of a discussion of the United Front as it existed in the city of Chicago.

The Central Executive Committee submitted a resolution in which acknowledgement was made of the value of the United Front arrangement between the Party in Chicago and the progressive leaders of the Chicago Federation of Labor in helping to launch the Party policies on a nation-wide scale but which criticized the Chicago District Organization for its failure to carry on an independent campaign and build the independent power of the Workers Party.

Against this resolution there was presented a resolution of the delegation from the Chicago District which emphasized the value of the Chicago United Front to the Party on a national scale and charged that if errors were made in carrying on the United Front in Chicago the Central Executive Committee was responsible, in view of the fact that it had directed, or at least been in close contact, with all the facts in regard to the situation in Chicago. The opposition resolution acknowledged the correctness of criticism of the C. E. C. on some minor points of policy of the District Executive Committee.

The debate on these two resolutions in which all the facts were brought out lasted for many hours with the final result that the Chicago resolution was adopted by the Convention.

This debate and both resolutions will have a greater value to the Party than the issue of responsibility and the character of the errors made which were the dividing point in the convention. What was said on both sides should help to clarify the Party membership generally on the question of the United Front and its limitations and the necessity for maintaining the independent position and building up the independent power of the Workers Party during any United Front action.

The Policy for the Coming Year

After the elimination of the section devoted to the Third Party policy of the Central Executive Committee, the thesis it proposed was unanimously adopted by the Convention.

The resolution adopted declared that the Convention thesis was the only statement of policy by the Party and enumerated certain definite achievements during the year, and specifically approved each. The thesis as adopted simply carries into the work of the new year the policies which governed the Party work during the past year. The affiliation of the Workers Party with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is approved and the Central Executive Committee is instructed that it should aid in organizing the Federated Farmer-Labor Party as a Party and at the same time should propose that the Federated Farmer-Labor Party act as an organizing instrument to bring into existence a greater United Front and Farmer-Labor Party. The policy of participation in the May 30th convention was also approved.

Industrial Report

The report of William Z. Foster on the industrial work of the Party for the Party showed substantial progress in the work among the labor unions. The report reviewed the situation developed in various aspects of this work and proposed certain concrete organizational steps to strengthen the Party in this work.

This report became one of the storm centers in the Convention. A resolution was offered from the floor proposing a series of new policies, such as an aggressive campaign for organization of the unemployed, a campaign to organize industries not organized at the present time, and similar measures.

The counter-resolution from the floor of the Convention was actually a criticism of the industrial work of the Party in the form of a proposal of new policies. The Convention viewed it as such and referred the proposals to the incoming Central Executive Committee for its consideration, adopting the report of the Industrial Department as submitted to the Convention.

Agricultural Work

This Convention of the Workers Party was the first Convention which gave consideration to the situation among the farmers of this country and the relationship of the Communist Party toward the workers on the land.

During the year the Party had extended its work into the agricultural field and had organized some 200 farmers as members of the Party in North Dakota and this work is being conducted in other agricultural sections of the country. The reporters in this connection emphasized the fact that a profound unrest and dissatisfaction among the farmers of this country and the opportunity for organization which this situation presented.

The Convention adopted a series of proposals of relief of the farmers and endorsed the work which had been done and authorized the continuance of this work.

American Imperialism

The Communist International, in its letter to the Convention, had criticized the Workers Party only on one point; that is, that it had not carried on a sufficiently aggressive campaign against American Imperialism. This question, however, had been placed on the agenda of the Convention by the receipt of the letter of the Communist International, and a program of action had been drawn up by the Central Executive Committee for approval by the Convention.

The resolution presented was adopted and the Workers Party will, during the coming year, launch a nation-wide campaign of exposure of American imperialism in the West Indies, Central America, South America and the Philippines, which it will endeavor to extend to the workers of these countries and the various colonies and possessions of the United States. Particular interest will be given to the campaign for independence of the Philippines. The Party will demand the immediate and complete independence of the Philippines and will endeavor to extend its propaganda work among the people of the Philippine Islands to arouse them against the imperialist domination of their country by the American capitalist concession countries.

Protection of the Foreign-Born

The Second National Convention of the Party adopted a resolution instructing the Central Executive Committee to carry on a campaign against exception laws directed against foreign-born workers. This resolution was re-affirmed and the Central Executive Committee instructed to take immediate steps to launch this campaign in view of the pending legislation before Congress.

Speaker after speaker in the Convention arose to state the importance of this campaign and the possibility of launching a great national movement which will include both foreign-born and native workers against the attempt to enslave the foreign-born workers and thru them the native-born workers, which is behind the proposed legislation against the foreign-born.

Party Re-Organization

The proposal to re-organize the Workers Party on the basis of shop units which was submitted as part of the agenda of the Convention, is an indication of the growth of the Workers Party and the fact that it is preparing itself for greater struggles against capitalists of this country.

The Communist International has laid down the principle that Communist Parties must be organized on the basis of the shops and factories, in place of purely territorial branches.

For the Workers Party the problem of effecting such an organization is complicated by the fact that there are some seventeen language sections within the Party and the branches of the Party consist largely of language groups. The Convention of the Party faced this problem squarely and decided that during the next year shop units should be organized as an organization alongside of the existing Party structure. Thus, during the work of building the shop units during the present year, there would be no interference with the present branches, each member maintaining his relationship to the branch of which he is at present a member.

The Convention left to the next National Convention the question of extending this work, feeling that the experiences of the year would prepare the way for new developments in organizing the Party upon a new basis.

The New Leadership

During the year 1923, the Central Executive Committee of the Party consisted of twenty-nine members. This large committee was the result of the consolidation of the former underground Communist Party with the Workers Party. The Committee proved a very unwieldy instrument thru which to carry on the work of the Party and it was generally agreed that the Third National Convention would reduce the size of this Committee. The Central Executive Committee recommended a Committee of thirteen members and this recommendation was adopted.

In the election of the Central Executive Committee there developed a bitter struggle. A caucus had been formed of a group of delegates who differed with the former Central Executive Committee majority on the question of the Chicago United Front and who had been in opposition to the policy of the Party in relation to the Federated Farmer-Labor Party prior to the November meeting of the Central Executive Committee. This group was under the leadership of William Z. Foster and James P. Cannon.

With this group there united some fifteen odd delegates under the leadership of Ludwig Lore who opposed to the Third Party policy of the former Central Executive Committee majority, altho the group referred to above was in favor of this policy. These two groups composed two-thirds of the delegates of the convention and elected the majority of the new Central Executive Committee.

Summary

The work of the Third National Convention does not represent any new departures in the policies of the Party. Rather, the Convention was a study of the year's application of policies already adopted, the drawing of lessons from these experiences, and the re-statement of the policies for the purpose of consolidating the Party behind these policies for the next year's work.

The application of the United Front policy in the struggle for the formation of a mass Party of farmers and industrial workers remains the central point of the Party work for the coming year. The campaign for protection of foreign-born workers, the campaign against American imperialism, and the agricultural work of the Party all have been undertaken to some degree in the past, and the decisions of the Convention will result in more aggressive work along these lines. The program adopted by the Second Convention was re-affirmed.

On the organization side, the Party begins its first steps towards sinking its roots in the shops and factories thru the organization of shop units, as it has already sunk its roots into the trade unions thru the support of the work of the Trade Union Educational League.

The impression of the Convention was of an organization that had gone thru its experimental stages and had got down to hard, practical work. The year 1923 had been a year of such work. The year 1924 promises to be a greater year of achievement for the Communist Party on the road to its final goal, the Soviet Republic of the United States.

AN ELECTION DAY WITH THE RULERS IN NEW RUSSIA

Workers March Winners to Soviet Meeting

By GERTRUDE HAESSLER.

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

MOSCOW.—Early in the afternoon elections are daily being held for representatives in the Moscow Soviet of certain of the institutions in the "Chinese City." Elections have been going on for over a week all over the city and will continue another two weeks or so.

Amid cheers and shouting and stamping of feet, the results are announced in the large hall where the union is holding the election. And, true to Russian nature, the newly-elected delegates are called upon to give speeches to the crowd that has elected them. Of course, the Russians enjoy that—making speeches or listening to them, is their chief amusement.

But the real fun is yet to begin. The six elected delegates are still to be marched to the Moscow Soviet and presented to it by those who have elected them.

Down the slippery ice-covered streets, marches the boisterous procession. Banners wave on high—beautiful red banners with gold lettering and gold emblems on them. Some of the banners announce what institution it is that is marching along in such a hilarious spirit. Others ask the challenging question, " 'Germany, where is your October?' " And one announces the slogan which has become the favorite of Russia at present, "Russian Bread and the German Steam Hammer will Guarantee Peace to the World!" These banners are very precious to the workers. They are the gifts the non-communist workers in the institutions presented to the communist nucleus on November 7 in commemoration of the revolution which ushered in the government of the workers, for the workers, and by the workers.

Now and then the procession is forced to halt, to let the cross-wise traffic proceed. This is the opportunity the enthusiastic youths are lying in wait for. The delegates are seized and tossed high into the air, and dexterously—caught again by brawny arms. Circles form and while the band—the workers' own institutional band, be it factory, bank, or State-retail shop—plays a rollicking tune, the younger men and women dance folk-dances on the slippery cobbled road.

The signal to proceed is given. The band changes to a marching tune and the workers fall back into the ranks. Toward the end of the procession, where the workers can't hear the band music, they sing their own accompaniment as they march vigorously forward to their destination.

The regiment, dressed in beautiful warm fur coats and hats, respectfully wait for the procession to go by. It doesn't pay to antagonise the new rulers of Russia. The workers also have warm fur coats—a good many dogs have been sacrificed recently to keep the workers warm this winter.

Now the procession has arrived at the square in front of the red and white building which is the home of the Moscow Soviet. The new delegates are carried on the shoulders of their "constituents" so all may see what fine fellows they have chosen. And now on the narrow balcony of the second story of the building, as the daylight fades, and the lights begin twinkling on the snow, a representative of the out-going Soviet appears. He speaks to the crowd, welcoming the new delegates who have been presented bodily to the Soviet. And when the cheering has died down after the speech, the band strikes up the International. Heads bared, the workers listen in silence. The cab-drivers stop their horses and wait to the end. The nepman, in his beautiful warm fur coat and hat, with an expensively but badly dressed woman on his arm, stops as he nears the crowd, and respectfully removes his hat. When the music has finished, the people disband in all directions, humming or singing the International.

PUT ON YOUR DANCING TOGS!

"Eat, drink and make merry, tomorrow you may get fired" will be the slogan of the Food Workers and Metal Trades Groups of the T. U. E. L. on Saturday evening, Jan. 19, at Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd., on the occasion of the first annual dance given by that body.

The tickets cost 50 cents which includes what you must contribute to J. P. Morgan for defeating the Kaiser and giving France the hegemony over Europe. That is if you buy your ticket in advance. If you DON'T the ticket will cost you 75 cents, which means that you must pay Morgan a bonus of seven cents. This you will readily admit no good Communist with Marxian understanding would do. The music will be cosmopolitan. Everybody will understand it.

Launch Nation-Wide Drive Against Bosses' Attack On The Foreign-Born Workers

What is probably the boldest attempt of the employing class of the United States to enslave the workers in the basic industries of this country, is exposed in bills introduced in Congress. They call for all forms of exception laws against foreign-born workers, who are to be registered, photographed and finger-printed, like criminals, in an effort to enslave them and make it impossible for them to take part in the struggles of the working class for better wages and working conditions.

Coupled with the laws directed against foreign-born workers is this country, there are proposals made particularly by Secretary of Labor Davis for the selective immigration law which will still further strengthen the employers in their drive against the workers' organizations of this country.

Under the proposed selective immigration law, industries needing labor will present their demand to the Secretary of Labor, and workers will be brought from Europe for the specified industry, bound to work in that industry, and under the absolute control of the masters in that industry.

DANGER TO ORGANIZED LABOR

While seemingly these measures are directed against the foreign-born workers, there is in them the greatest danger for the labor organizations of this country that they have faced. If the employers of the United States can direct exception laws against forein-born workers and a contract labor law enslaving the foreign-born workers who are already here and provide for a new supply of slave labor, they can destroy every labor union in this country.

The American employers are trying to do what no other capitalist group has been able to do; that is, to create a class of intimidated, oppressed, enslaved workers, held down by laws, unable to organize and resist their exploiters. If it is able to succeed, it will mean that not only the foreign-born workers, but the whole American working class will be under the iron heel of the capitalist.

FIGHTING THE EXCEPTION LAWS

The Second National Convention of the Workers Party of America, held in December, 1922, when the proposal for these laws was first made, recognized the danger to the labor movement in these proposals and authorized its Central Executive Committee to launch a campaign to unite all workers' organizations, native and foreign-born, in a struggle against these laws.

The Third National Convention of the Workers Party, which has just closed its session in Chicago, reiterated the former declaration and called attention to the fact that the threat against the workers of this country which the Workers Party pointed out a year ago has now materialized in definitive laws pending before Congress. President Coolidge in his message to Congress demanded a law for the registration of the foreign-born workers.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party is instructed by the National Convention to begin immediately a campaign to unite all workers' organizations in the fight against these laws. This struggle will begin at once.

Under the program of action adopted by the Workers Party, Councils for the Protection of the Foreign-Born will be created in every city of this country. The Workers Party has within its organization some seventeen language groups and is thus in a favorable situation to reach the workers of the various language groups in this country. Each one of these language groups will form a local Council for Protection of the Foreign-Born.

A. F. of L. AGAINST EXCEPTION LAWS

At the Portland Convention of the American Federation of Labor a resolution was presented calling attention to the character of the proposed exception laws against foreign-born workers and was adopted by that organization.

With this precedent the labor unions in every part of the country are expected to give their full support to the organizations which will be created for the struggle against reducing American workers to the plane of serfs without any power to protect themselves against the employing class which exploits them.

Paris Fabrications Are Unmasked by Truth

(By Route to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW.—With reference to a report appearing in the Paris paper Le Journal des Debats alleging that the "Centrosoyus" (Central Union of Co-operative Societies) is passing thru an acute crisis, and that its bills of exchange have been protested, and also that the Paper Trust is not able to get payment for its bills from State enterprises which it supplies with its products, and, lastly, that all the other Russian Trusts are in a similar plight—the Rosta News Agency learns that all these allegations are void of foundations.

Reports Unfounded

Mr. Hintchuk, who has been recently re-elected Chairman of the Board of Directors of the "Centrosoyus", declares emphatically that there has not been a single instance when bills of exchange of the Combine were protested. Its goods turnover has been steadily growing and there is ample ground for hoping that a partial crisis in the selling branch, which was looming during last summer, will be liquidated within the nearest future.

As for the Paper Trust, Mr. Styrman, a Director of the concern, declared that the settling of accounts between the Trust and State Enterprises was being effected quite normally, and no financial difficulties stood in the way of the Combine's activity. The above-mentioned allegations of the French press Mr. Styrman ascribes to an attempt to undermine the credit of the Russian Trus's abroad, which has been steadily growing, as well as to the irritation caused among some French industrialists, whose offers were rejected by the Paper Trust on the ground that there exist no treaty relations between France and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

SENATE REPORT BARES RED CROSS AS ANTI-SOVIET

WASHINGTON — Basil Miles, state department attache during the Wilson administration, now representing the U. S. Chamber of Commerce at Paris in a memorandum written in 1897 and now made public by Senator Borah analyzed the huge fund, borrowed from the United States by the Russian regime and suggesting a propaganda campaign and the use of supplies in Russia obviously to overthrow the Soviet government.

"Generally speaking," said Miles, "it is believed that the United States should, through the Red Cross, and perhaps with the aid of the president's discretionary fund, engage immediately, actively, but unofficially, with works of relief and propaganda in Russia; that it should not sanction the dissipation of the fund in the City Bank by the Russian supply committee for purposes which may well be regarded as inimical by the Russian people. . . . With respect to the specific question of silver, it is a grave responsibility to direct the City Bank to pay $500,000 for silver to be sent through the British to Kaledin. This involves a question of state."

Kaledin was the first of the counter-revolutionary leaders to be backed by the allies, and to be destroyed by the soviet government forces. The propaganda to be worked through the Red Cross, under this plan was carried out in part by Edgar Sisson with part of the president's discretionary fund, during the winter of 1917-18 in Russia. Sisson then bought the forged documents which were made public here in September, 1918, which have made his name a synonym for faked evidence.

Spanish Fascist Chieftain Beats Hughes and "Bill" Burns At Faking "Red Uprising"

The Madrid correspondent of the Federal Press, U. S. agency, "red plot" with all the earmarks of an American publicity production, hatched in Primo de Rivera's mental incubator, the president of Spain. This plot was turned loose on Spain, Christmas eve, and thousands of communists, labor leaders and anarchists were arrested in all the industrial centers.

The opportunity for pulling off this new fangled revolution was an international football game between Spain and Portugal in the city of Seville, on Dec. 28. Disguised as football players and acting under orders from Lenin and Trotsky, the communists were to capture Spain, plunge their poisoned daggers into the noble and patriotic heart of de Rivera and then of course devote the rest of the year to looting, burning and ravishing a la the American Defense Society thesis on how to produce a 100% communist revolution.

After the young communists had glutted their revenge and waded in the gore of the Spanish bourgeoisie they were to wind up with Portugal according to the imaginative Fascist leader. The Dictator dropped a hint to the Portuguese government that it had better put up its storm windows and turn the dog loose. The latter however did not want to get too serious around Christmas so all hands went on a spree and Portugal yet stands—as it has always stood.

What worries Primo de Rivera is that plots to overthrow him are growing like mushrooms and he feels that his head is none too secure. A large part of the Spanish army is ready to use force and violence on the dictator and the labor elements are quite anxious to dispose of him and so are the intellectuals whom he has treated with rigor.

Add to all these opposition forces the discontent of the professional politicians of the big political parties, the discontent of the regional autonomy elements of Catalonia, Andalusia and so forth, and the growing intensity of the feeling against the further waste of men and resources in the Morocco campaign, and it is easy to understand why Primo de Rivera tried to turn the forthcoming storm into a faked Communist uprising and presented Spain and Portugal with the Christmas present of a hearty laugh.

SPY CAUGHT IN MOLDERS' UNION QUICKLY OUSTED

"Jim" Cronin Placed in the "Rogues' Gallery"

By JOE CARROLL

"Guilty!"

When this verdict was pronounced last month by the trial committee of the International Molders' Union, in the case of its member long popularly known as "Jim" Cronin, it placed definitely in Labor's "Rogue's Gallery" one of the most dangerous and brazen of labor spies.

A "Confidence Man"

This "Jim" Cronin, now 35 years of age, has been an active member of the Molders' Union almost since boyhood. He was elected as President of the Philadelphia Central Labor Union when but 24 years old. Quickly gaining the confidence of the ruling republican politicians of the state, he was chosen a member of the Pennsylvania Industrial Commission, of which body he was chairman until May 15th last. He also enjoyed the confidence of the international officials of the union, and was delegated to represent the international office on many commissions of importance. But indisputable evidence brought out at his trial showed that for some time he had been in the pay, not only of the state and his own union, but also of the employers themselves, for whom he was operating as a spy, on the payroll of a detective agency. As is so often the case, it was only thru an accident that these facts became known and the resulting investigation fully exposed his treachery.

This investigation disclosed, among other things, that the Bureau of Industrial Relations was in fact an anti-labor detective agency, with the purpose of shattering labor organizations generally, reducing wages in certain large industrial plants, and increasing the working hours wherever and whenever possible. In this they were quite successful—thru "under-cover men" who were mostly union officials. By various methods the morale of the workers was lowered to a point where more hours of employment and the acceptance of less wages could be forced upon them.

Drew Large Salary

The evidence gathered also showed how a man high in the ranks of Philadelphia labor circles was paid $200.00 weekly by this employer. And the United States Department of Justice was clearly shown up as a "feeder" of spies and strikebreakers to the private field covered by such agencies as the "Bureau of Industrial Relations." So that during the course of this trial the Department of Justice was quite properly referred to as "the United States strike-breaking agency."

The International Molders' Union has done a great service to the labor movement, in thus courageously facing the issue and purging its ranks. From the facts brought forth in this case, other unions will be advised of how to proceed against labor spies within their own ranks. The disclosures made have lifted the veil hiding the workings of the "under-cover" spies in labor unions. It seems almost beyond belief, that men who have risen from the ranks of the workers, and know the injustice and oppresion suffered by them, can so vilely betray their fellow workers. The method of traitor-making remains the same—only the price has been increased—since the days of Judas Iscariot and his "thirty pieces of silver."

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

Working Youth Greet the "Daily"

The Communist Youth of the United States, the Young Workers League of America, enthusiastically greet the appearance of this mighty weapon of ALL the workers—THE DAILY WORKER.

We know that the organized young workers of the entire world, under the banner of the Young Communist International, will find this an occasion for rejoicing for they know that this first English language Communist Daily published will be on the forefront in the battles, not only of every section of the American working class but likewise in the interest of the international proletariat.

We shall strive to reach the masses of the American working youth with and through the DAILY WORKER, and it shall never be said that the Communist Youth of this country ever lagged in the support of this greatest of undertakings of the American revolutionary workers.

NATIONAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE OF AMERICA
By Max Bedacht, Sec'y.

THE STRUGGLES OF THE YOUNG

As the fighting organ of the American working class, the Daily Worker is concerned with and will represent every section of the toiling masses in this country.

With six to seven millions of young workers in industry in the United States; 100,000 in and about the mines; 8,000,000 on the farms (most despicable of all, among all these are to be found 2,500,000 children ranging from the age of 5 to 15), the Daily Worker recognises that it must deal with the problems and struggles of the masses of exploited youth. Therefore, a special department, to be known as With the Young Workers and Children of the Working-class, is to be a regular feature of this paper, and is to be conducted by the Young Workers League of America.

Here you will find, in as much detail as possible, the struggles of the young workers against the master class on the job, the shame of child labor in this land of "democracy," the gross distortion of the mind of the children in the capitalist public schools and through such organizations as the Y. M. C. A., boy and girl scouts.

To Carry On Anti-Military Work

The militarization campaigns now being carried on particularly affect the working class youth. Throughout the world, the revolutionary young workers are known as the most ardent fighters against militarism as a class issue and not as a pacifist diversion.

Karl Liebknecht relied mainly upon the revolutionary youth movement of Germany, when the whole rotten fabric of the Socialist organization completely failed at the outbreak of the world war; and the youth were not wanting when it came to fighting in the interest of the working masses and against the imperialists.

In the United States, the Young Workers' League, as the recognized co-operating organization of the Young Communist International, takes the lead in the anti-military campaign of the workers, not only nationally but on an international scale.

The efforts to organize the vast number of indifferent working youth into the trade and industrial unions now existing was initiated by the Y. W. L., and is being sabotaged by Samuel Gompers because he is afraid of the virility of a fighting revolutionary organization which will act in the interest of all the workers within the labor movement.

Has Children's Organization

The Y. W. L. maintains that even the children of the workers should be organized to fight and struggle against the capitalist system because they contribute in good measure to its victims.

In the schools the worker's children are pumped full of lies about their father's unions, about the rights of the workers to organize politically and seek to wrest better conditions and ultimately political power from the hands of the capitalists. Patriotic bunk and a glorification of war and militarism, though not stated in the curriculums, are part and parcel of all of our public schools.

Knowing that merely to teach the children counter arguments against those advanced in the school is futile, the Y. W. L. has organized what is known as the Junior Section, which takes all the children of the workers from the age of 5 to 14.

The Junior Section is not a school; it is a part of the political movement of the revolutionary vanguard of the working class, the communist party, and as such, it seeks to draw the children into the struggle against their worst enemy, the capitalist system. In their particular sphere, the children agitate against the injustices and brutalities of the capitalists—in the schools, on the streets, everywhere that they meet other worker's children.

To Carry Latest Youth News

For the latest news of the conditions and activities of the young workers in all industries, on the farms, in the army, and wherever the working class youth congregate you will have to come to the Youth Section of the Daily Worker. This will be the only workers' daily that will carry the true news of the international youth organization, the Young Communist International and its various sections.

The Daily Worker Youth Section supplements the excellent semi-monthly official organ of the Young Workers' League, The Young Worker, issued on the 1st and 15th of every month. The Young Worker is published exclusively in the interest of the exploited young workers, and an endeavor is being made to build up a mass circulation among the American toiling youth.

It will be in this section that the young workers, League members or no, will be able to express themselves and write of their life in the factories, in the mills, in the army or wherever the bosses' whip has driven them.

Even the children are invited to contribute to this corner of the paper.

The Youth Section of the Daily Worker, will from time to time, afford its readers exclusive labor news pertaining to the youth, through its special correspondents in over 60 cities throughout the United States. These are not paid pen prostitutes such as write for the capitalist dailies, but young, enthusiastic workers, who recognize the class struggle and are aiding in every possible way to bring it to its successful termination.

We invite you to become a regular reader of this exclusive feature of a labor Daily.

(All communications for this section should be addressed: Youth Section, The Daily Worker.)

Youth Vision

By HARRY GANNES

The Fathers of Today are looking up to their sons as the super authority. To capitalism this is a vital threat.

A school man thinks-up by Walter W. Head of Omaha, Neb., which he calls the "Father-Son through-the-year plan." Head complains that fathers have been losing contact with their boys and as a result you have disobedience which, carried to its logical conclusion, is fatal to the existing order. His scheme was destined to obscurity. The business Babbits are too busy during the daytime with extracting profits from their workers and at night in getting over what tired feelings that are present in the company of some female devotee of Terpsichore. The workers are only too glad to get some sleep after a 12 hour workday to be bothered listening to the righteous grumblings of a couple or a dozen of impoverished lads.

President Coolidge has a son, and he saw possibilities in the father-son plan—to capitalism—so he endorsed it, in a letter to Head.

We can favor the plan, applied to the workers. What can be more revolutionary agitation among the masses of young boys than to have their proletarian fathers tell them of the blessings of a goading foreman, of long hours at a health-destroying machine, of the factory spy who makes life miserable, of the black despair of unemployment, of the fear of old age under capitalism, of low wages and unorganized masses of workers competing with each other for a crust of bread?

But the plan will not succeed. The proletarian fathers have no time. Too much of the day is taken up in making a living. When he is unemployed, the worker is not in a mood to adopt the recommendation of Coolidge, that the plan "is also intended to encourage," the boys, "to accept in a larger way their responsibilities as citizens."

Workers' Children in Jail Get Brutal Treatment

The commotion aroused when one of the boy inmates of the Chicago Parental Schoool (a prison for boys) was beaten to death has not yet died down.

An investigation of the treatment of the children in these institutions who, without exception, are children of the workers, reveals brutality comparable with the slave-like exploitation of the six year old children in the mills and on the farm.

Every state in the United States has one or more of these boy and girl prisons that have no other excuse for existing than to make life miserable for those children of the workers whose condition is the most unbearable under capitalism. A great percentage of the offenders of the capitalist law that comprise the child prisoners tell gripping tales of poverty and want. Thrown into the vilest sort of institutions, these children are trained for a life of crime and shame.

Military drill and utter subservience are part of the training of the children in penal institutions; and a great section of the gunmen in the United States got their first lesson in such parental and reform institutions.

It is almost impossible to ascertain the true nature of the base treatment of inmates (even though children) of these prisons as they are threatened with the direst punishments when some fake investigation is forced upon the ward-healers in charge of all of the state governments.

The number of child and youth offenders is growing at a rapid rate. All of these child institutions are overcrowded, thus adding to the already animal-like condition of the youthful prisoners. Child labor is one of the evils that is part of many of these prisons.

It is a regular procedure of the capitalist local authorities to initiate an investigation when some child is murdered by the inhuman monsters in charge, but nothing comes out of it as capitalism must have these institutions as part of its system.

SENATE REPORT BARES RED CROSS AS ANTI-SOVIET

WASHINGTON — Basil Miles, state department attache during the Wilson administration now representing the U. S. Chamber of Commerce at Paris in a memorandum written in 1897 and now made public by Senator Borah analyzed the huge fund borrowed from the United States by the Russian regime and suggesting a propaganda campaign and the use of supplies in Russia obviously to overthrow the Soviet government.

"Generally speaking," said Miles, "it is believed that the United States should, through the Red Cross, and perhaps with the aid of the president's discretionary fund, engage immediately, actively, but unofficially, with works of relief and propaganda in Russia; that it should not sanction the dissipation of the fund in the City Bank by the Russian supply committee for purposes which may well be regarded as inimical by the Russian people. . . . With respect to the specific question of silver, it is a grave responsibility to direct the City Bank to pay $500,000 for silver to be sent through the British to Kaledin. This involves a question of state."

Kaledin was the first of the counter-revolutionary leaders to be backed by the allies, and to be destroyed by the soviet government forces. The propaganda to be worked through the Red Cross, under this plan was carried out in part by Edgar Sisson with part of the president's discretionary fund, during the winter of 1917-18 in Russia. Sisson then bought the forged documents which were made public here in September, 1918, which have made his name a synonym for faked evidence.

Work Daily for "The Daily!"

Spanish Fascist Chieftain Beats Hughes and "Bill" Burns At Faking "Red Uprising"

The Madrid correspondent of the Federated Press tells of a comic opera "red plot" with all the lurid trimmings of an American Hearst dry revelation, hatched in Primo de Rivera's mental institution, but pretended to be that of communists, labor leaders and anarchists everywhere arrested in all the industrial centers.

The opportunity for pulling off this fine, fanged invention was an international football game between Russia and Spain at Seville, Spain, Dec. 28. Disguised as football players and acting under orders from Lenin and Trotsky, the young communists were to capture Spain, plunge their poisoned daggers into the noble and patriotic heart of de Rivera and then of course devote the rest of the year to looting, burning and ravishing a la the American Defense Society thesis on how to produce a 100% communist revolution.

After the young communists had glutted their revenge and waded in the gore of the Spanish bourgeoisie they were to wind up with Portugal according to the imaginative Fascist leader. The Dictator dropped a hint to the Portuguese government that it had better put up its storm windows and turn the dog loose. The latter however did not want to get too serious around Christmas so all hands went on a spree and Portugal yet stands—as it has always stood.

What worries Primo de Rivera is that plots to overthrow him are growing like mushrooms and he feels that his head is none too secure. A large part of the Spanish army is ready to use "force and violence" on the dictator and the labor elements are quite anxious to dispose of him and so are the intellectuals whom he has treated with rigor.

Add to all these opposition forces the discontent of the professional politicians of the big political parties, the discontent of the regional autonomy elements of Catalonia, Andalusia and so forth, and the growing intensity of the feeling against the further waste of men and resources in the Morocco campaign, and it is easy to understand why Primo de Rivera tried to turn the forthcoming storm into a faked Communist uprising and presented Spain and Portugal with the Christmas present of a hearty laugh.

with the workers of Germany.

$500 initial outlay for equipment and $2,000 monthly will care for an American Soup Kitchen. American banking and business interests contribute and collect large sums for German relief. At the same time they make big loans to the industrialists who will exploit German labor in order to pay back big interests with these loans.

Gompers collects for German relief for the purpose of helping trade unionists in Germany who hold a certain political point of view.

Arthur dear, it already is—just that. Thanks to the abundance of specialists in our government, America holds all records of mental flights. The people are almost continually up in the air.

Treasury experts figure the "war to end war" cost the American taxpayers to date $40,000,000,000.

Wasn't it worth it? Since it ended we have had no wars, except a little trouble in a few scattered places like Germany, Greece, Turkey, Poland, Ireland, China, Hungary, Mexico, Chile, Siberia, Africa, Spain, Morocco, India—and the Episcopal Church.

PREDICT LABOR GOVERNMENT IN ENGLAND JAN. 16

Fog Clears in British Parliamentary Battle

By W. N. EWER.

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press and "The Daily Worker")

LONDON.—The fog, which as a fitting symbol of the political situation, settled down over London on the evening of election day, has lifted. Literally and metaphorically the atmosphere has become clear.

Liberal Plans Laid Bare

It is now—barring accidents—certain that on Jan. 16 the Conservative government will be defeated in the house of commons and that on Jan. 16 the king will ask Ramsay MacDonald to form a Labor government. That has become certain, because we now know what the Liberals intend to do. The clearer sighted among the political prophets have known all along. For there was no alternative open. But the Liberals themselves did not see so clearly. They thought that since they hold the balance of votes in the house they held control of the situation.

A section of the Conservative party, headed by Lord Birkenhead and made loudly vocal by the Rothermere press, called on them to form a coalition or at least an entente with the Conservatives and so establish a "barrier against socialism."

Alas for their calculations, Lloyd George's followers nearly all lost their seats. The "united" Liberal party is almost solidly "Asquithian." Asquith, not Lloyd George, is its leader. And Asquith detests the Tories almost as much as he detests Lloyd George.

Asquith's Scheme Explodes

His plan was to come to a bargain with the Labor party by which, in return for keeping them in power, he would, in effect, dictate their policy.

But the Labor party curtly declared that it would make no bargain with anybody. Whereupon Asquith's chief newspaper became threatening in tone. If the Labor party would not make terms, it must take the consequences. The Liberals, it reminded Labor, would by abstaining from voting, enable the Conservative government to carry on for weeks or even for months.

The Liberals in fact have suddenly realized that their strength is precisely their weakness. A Labor government would be dependent on their votes. But they cannot use their power except by transferring it from Labor to the Conservatives. And the moment they do that they split their party from top to bottom.

See Labor Party in Office

So philosophically they will make the best of things and vote with the Labor party—though they will probably as a consequence lose half a dozen of their members and a bunch of peers who will transfer their allegiance to the Conservatives.

We shall probably have a Labor government kept in office, tho without any bargain or coalition, rather as the Liberal government was kept in office from 1910 to 1914 by Labor and Irish votes.

Obstacles to Labor Control

Whether a Labor government can last as long is another matter. I doubt it, for there will be constant and complex intrigues to bring about a situation in which the Liberals would of necessity desert them. But I also think that the prophets who give MacDonald three months and foretell an election in the late spring are likely to be disappointed.

THE NORTH-WEST ENGLISH BRANCH

Workers Party, Local Utica, New York, Sends Greetings to the First English Language Communist Daily.

The Leader In the Struggle

The Communist International Greets the Appearance of "The Daily Worker."

Declaring that "The Daily Worker" among the workers and farmers of America, the Executive Committee of the Communist International, One of its secretary, W. Kolarow, has sent a greeting to "The Daily Worker" as follows:

MOSCOW, Soviet Russia, Dec. 11, 1923.

To THE DAILY WORKER.

Dear Comrades—The Communist movement has long waited for the appearance of a Daily in America in the English language, and at last we see it realized thru the efforts and sacrifices of the American comrades. Altho the Party has many newspapers in foreign languages, it could not expect to reach the great American working-class except thru the medium of an English Daily.

The issues confronting the Workers Party and the American workers and farmers are so great that THE DAILY WORKER must become a power. It must become the expression of all the oppressed workers and the rebellious farmers in the country. It must be the leader in the struggle against American capitalism, which is consolidating its forces for fresh assaults on the working-class. It must rally to its banner the revolutionary farmers, who thruout American history have fought for their rights.

THE DAILY WORKER must take up the struggle in the trade unions and force the reactionary union officials to fight for the interests of the workers and against their further degradation. It must fight against the open shop drive, which the American employers will soon renew with increased vigor. It must unceasingly demand the freedom of the press, speech and assemblage. It must fight for the protection of the youth of the country and against the exploitation of child labor, which is a disgrace to the American workers. It must mobilize the women and mothers of the working-class of America against the shameful robbery of their toil and that of their children. It must conduct an unremitting struggle against the capitalist press, which is a powerful weapon in the hands of the employers. It must expose the sham of the church, which is a tremendous force in America. It must unflinchingly raise the flag of the class struggle on the economic and political field and rally the workers and farmers to the struggle for the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of a WORKERS AND FARMERS GOVERNMENT in the United States.

THE DAILY WORKER must mobilize the working-class of America against the new plans of American Imperialism. After gaining the hegemony of America by intrigue, plot and military intervention, American Imperialism has turned its face to China, which soon will feel the power of American gold and American arms. Europe is to be the next victim: Germany, bleeding and broken, her workers impoverished and enslaved, is to be reduced to a wheel in the big American machine of plunder. The Workers Party and THE DAILY WORKER must call on the American workers and farmers to prevent this savage act. For in the background stands Soviet Russia, which American Imperialism once more would attack in the foolish ignorance of the fact that today the Soviet Power is impregnable.

THE DAILY WORKER must be the organ of the whole membership of the Party. Every Comrade must work for it. He must take it into the factories and mines. He must furnish it with the news of the daily struggles and the life in the shops. The workers and farmers of America must feel that the COMMUNIST DAILY WORKER does not fear to tell the truth and to fight for the interests of the producers, despite the will of the oligarchy of Wall Street.

ALL SUCCESS TO THE DAILY WORKER! MAY ITS POWER GROW TILL IT BECOMES A GIANT RANGED BESIDE THE MIGHTY ORGANS OF THE COMMUNIST PARTIES OF SOVIET RUSSIA, GERMANY AND FRANCE!

With Communist greetings,

Fraternally,

International Committee Executive Committee of Communists

W. Kolarow

Executive Committee of the Communist International.

To the DAILY WORKER
You have well come to help us and others in making the world safe for the workers.

DEFENSE COUNCIL STARTS DRIVE FOR RUTHENBERG PLEA

Declaring that the splendid defense of William Z. Foster and Charles E. Ruthenberg in the Michigan Criminal Syndicalism cases "resulted in the strengthening of the working class and of the Party in particular," the National Convention of the Workers Party, held recently in Chicago, called upon all Labor militants to rally to the support of the Labor Defense Council. This unqualified endorsement comes at a time when the Council is launching upon a campaign to raise funds for the Ruthenberg appeal. At its offices in the Federation Building, 166 West Washington St., Chicago, there is an atmosphere of bustle and expectation.

By its persistent campaigns, the Labor Defense Council has been able to save 32 staunch fighters of the working class from prison. But it has done much more than this. It has carried on a defense which was at the same time an attack, making use of the Michigan emergency to create a united front of labor against the vicious agents of the employers.

Raised Large Sum

Organized scarcely a year and a half ago, the Council has raised close to $100,000 for the defense of the accused Communists. Over 90 per cent of this money was contributed by working people, in small amounts.

What is this Labor Defense Council that is defending the Communists? It is not a Communist organization, but a non-partisan body endorsed by the Detroit Federation of Labor, the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly, the Milwaukee Trades Council, the Butte Trades and Labor Council and various other central labor federations. At its head is Robert M. Buck, editor of the New Majority, official organ of the Chicago Federation of Labor. Eugene V. Debs and Rev. John A. Ryan, D. D., are vice-chairman. Others on its national committee are Rogers N. Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union; J. G. Brown, national secretary of the Farmer-Labor Party; John Haynes Holmes, of the Community church, New York; Max S. Hayes, nationally known leader of the Typographical Union, and Hoiet M. Wells, of the Seattle Central Labor Union.

The Famous Raid

The resolution just adopted by the Workers Party recalls vividly to mind the famous Michigan labor trials of 1923, which grew out of the raid on the convention of the Communist Party of America near Bridgman, in August of the preceding year. The trials were among the most spectacular in American labor history. Foster and Ruthenberg were the central figures, and they refused to budge an inch from their principles.

But the real reason for the raid was that the Communists had been taking a prominent part in the struggle of the workers against the capitalist "open shop" drive. The coal miners' strike and the railroad shopmen's strike were being fought out at the time, and Spolansky himself declared to some of the defendants later on that if these strikes had not been in progress the convention would probably not have been raided.

The trial of William Z. Foster began March 12, before a jury consisting of nine farmers, one grocery clerk, one non-union railroad man and one housewife, whose husband is a factory superintendent. No person was allowed on the jury by the prosecution unless he first said under oath that he believed the "criminal syndicalist" law of Michigan was a good law and should be enforced.

Notwithstanding innumerable obstacles placed in the path of the defense, Foster was not convicted. The jury divided, six and six.

In the Ruthenberg trial, which came next, the prosecutors had a more favorable opportunity. Ruthenberg was admittedly a member of the Communist Party. His conviction was secured by an appeal to the prejudice of a hand picked jury.

Basis of Appeal

An appeal is now being taken in the Ruthenberg case. The outstanding point in the appeal is that nothing illegal happened in the state of Michigan, and that its criminal syndicalism law could not apply to the formation of an organization in another state where no such law exists.

If the appeal is won, it is extremely unlikely that the other Communists indicted with Foster and Ruthenberg will ever be brought to trial. If it is lost, the final decision will be in the hands of the United States Supreme Court. The Ruthenberg appeal thus becomes the cornerstone of the whole defense in the Michigan cases.

In view of this central fact, the Labor Defense Council, which is badly in need of funds now, is carrying on a Ruthenberg Appeal Drive to secure money to meet the expenses of the appeal. Letters are being sent out to labor organizations, as well as to individuals interested in preventing the railroading of 32 aggressive labor men. The slogan is: GET BEHIND THE RUTHENBERG APPEAL.

Of the money realized in past campaigns, 70 per cent has gone directly into legal expenses. Administrative and propaganda expenses have taken 30 per cent, but of this 15 per cent went into the printing of literature and appeals for help.

All Hail "The Daily Worker"

From ROBERT STEWART,
Member of the Profintern, Communist International.

It delights me to wish "The Daily Worker" success. It is the loud and vibrant voice in support of the Workers Party which will ere can and must be made the Daily's organs always and everywhere at the service of the Party.

Its roots must be dug deep in factory, field, workshop and mine. It must become necessary to the worker as the air that he breathes.

The worker must see himself and his struggle mirrored (not distorted) in its pages. It will be the fighting leader in every struggle against capitalist aggression. It will be the rallying-point in the fight against the treacherous yellow leadership of the Gompers fraternity.

Fierce and violent struggles lie ahead of the Workers Party of America. U. S. prosperity is once more on the decline, and a declining capitalism always breeds greater ruthlessness on the part of the boss. The Daily Worker will be a sharp weapon in the fight for Communism in America and its speedy success will bring a great intelligent body of readers, a powerful Workers Party with a growing organized Communist militancy into the fight against the centre and citadel of World Capitalism: the United States of America.

3 BANKERS SEEK PROP FOR CHAOS SINKING EUROPE

made the other day by the noted banker, Bernard M. Baruch: "Until the reparations problem is settled abroad, there can be no return to the normal conditions of production and saving of which the world stands in need. The world is like a village of thatch-roofed cottages; one is afire, and we must all help put it out or have our houses burn too."

Fear German Revolt

The presence of the "Big Three" bankers in the Paris conferences marks a positive step towards open American participation in European affairs. The gravity of the situation in Germany with its menace of working class revolt constantly looming up has forced America's hand. The Coolidge has not officially appointed the three delegates, he has approved of their nomination by the Reparations Commission and has co-operated with them.

This re-entry of the United States into the European conclaves is a prelude to more serious and complicated entanglements. The "Big Three" morrow arrogated to themselves, with the President's approval, the right to speak for millions of workers and farmers are notorious open-shoppers and have only their own capitalist class interest at heart. In the whole affair we have the voice of Coolidge but the hand of Morgan. The President says his soft diplomatic "yes" and Morgan does the hard financial wire-pulling and manipulating.

Create Basis of New Wars

The Paris conferences have in store for the German workers economically only what the Versailles sessions have brought to them politically—enslavement. Today, Wall Street, thru the White House, is sending over three bankers to help save European capitalism from ruin by increasing and strengthening America's hold on Europe's finance and industry. Tomorrow millions of workers and farmers will be rushed by Wall Street, thru the White House, to be maimed and killed on the battlefields of France and Flanders in order to enforce the arrangements made by Brigadier General Dawes and the Colonels Young and Robinson, and to protect the European investments of our capitalists.

The Oldest to the Youngest.

The Daily Worker is the happy recipient of a warm message of greetings from the editor of another one of our Communist daily newspapers. Our Communist press is growing because it holds together, because the editors of our Communist press work hand in hand. The message of Ludwig Lore, editor of the New York Volkszeitung is no empty formality, it is a promise of cooperation and aid, and we are happy to print it below.

CHICAGO LABOR HEARS PORTLAND DELEGATE REPORT

A lively, the best discussion took place at the last meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor when Frank McVey, the central body's delegate to the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor, made his report.

Delegate Jack Johnstone, speaking on the report expressed the view that the Portland convention did not fully present the sentiment of the American labor movement on such questions as Amalgamation, the labor party and recognition of Soviet Russia.

He commended the Federated Press which was denounced by Gompers as biased in favor of radical propaganda as an important news service.

William Quesse, President of the Flat Janitors' Union, addressed the body and solicited support for his organization whose officials are sentenced to indeterminate sentences from one to five years imprisonment for alleged conspiracy to boycott. Assistance was promised.

O. L. Stanley, President of the Lake County Central Labor Union was given the floor and stated that Frank Fowler, President of the Milk Producers' Association desired to affiliate his association with the American Federation of Labor and join hands with the milk drivers' and milk handlers' unions against the big distributing companies. Negotiations towards that end are proceeding.

A motion to assist the movement for German relief was carried unanimously.

Report the Little Entente Plans to Recognize Soviet

LONDON — Information that the little entente has decided to recognize Soviet Russia has been received from the Greek Government. Detailed plans for recognition and relations with the Soviet government, have been worked out by M. Girsa, Czech under secretary of foreign affairs and M. Nintchitch, foreign minister of Jugo-Slavia.

The entire matter was submitted to the little entente conference recently held in Belgrade.

It is believed that this step on the part of the little entente will be used to advantage by the U. S. Senators now favoring recognition of Russia by the United States.

Wells on the Labor Party.

LONDON.—The anxiety of the Labor Party to get into office will result in their getting into office but not into power," according to H. G. Wells. They will find that they cannot put their program into effect without losing Liberal support and will be compelled to compromise if they wish to continue in office, Wells said.

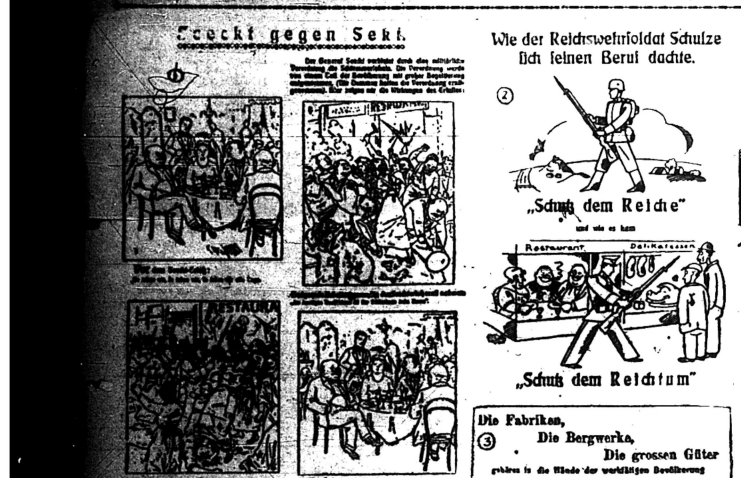
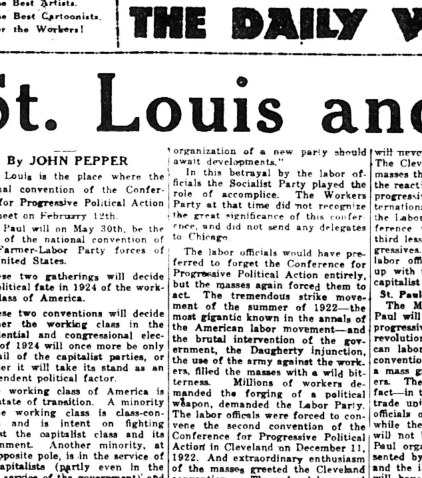
They Can't Stop Communist Propaganda in Germa





Above are reproductions of illegal leaflets and throwaways being spread by the German Communist Party in spite of attempts by the over-zealous police to suppress the revolutionary movement.

The first is a leaflet in pictures and is entitled, "Seeckt (the general) against champagne," and telling about a military decree issued by the general, forbidding officers to drink champagne (Schlemmerleben). Some officers took the decree seriously and invaded the swell restaurants, but the police took a hand in the matter. And the outcome was that things went on as before.

No. 2 is the throwaway using what the Reichswehr soldier Schulze imagined his duties to be, namely, protection of the Reich (the empire), and what they really turned out to be, namely, protection of Reichtum (riches).

No. 3 is a throwaway reading, The factories, the mines, the big estates should be in the hands of the working population.

No. 4—The political prisoner cries "It's enough now!", while the people stand in vain waiting for a chance to get some food.

No. 5 shows the accomplices of Poincare. A workingman is on the ground, and over him are a French general, a German general and Stinnes.

The Class Struggle versus Charity - - - - - -

By LUDWIG LORE

Now that the end of the war, the German population of the Ruhr has been contributing, in every possible way, to the support of the needy in their fatherland. There have been endless collections, subscriptions for every conceivable thing by every conceivable organization. It is impossible to estimate how much in food-stuffs and in wearing apparel has gone over to Germany, for the benefit of the destitute victims of the Germans in this country.

We have encouraged or supported these collections. We have favored the sending of supplies by workingmen on the other side, because we felt that the morale of nations as well as that of individuals, is raised by charity. Now we are convinced that it was a crime for the working-class movement to cover up the patent fact of the new republic, which makes it possible for German employers to pay starvation wages in order to be able to compete with the cheap or better paid labor in the rest of the world.

We answered the appeal from the Russian Soviet Government for assistance in the hour of need. Our comrades, no one knows better than those who were engaged in raising funds at that time among the first to come to Russia's assistance. They refused to listen to the suggestion that the millions to be raised among the workers here for the suffering comrades in the Volga-Germans. More than they incurred the wrath of the Socialists who call themselves "social-Germans, for helping the workers of Russia when they had refused to help the needy in their own country. In spite of the bitter opposition that often arose from the German-nationalist elements in the German-speaking working-class movement in this country, we always stood by them, that did not come nobly to the support of the sufferers in Russia, because our comrades were there to support the Russian Revolution.

Today we appeal to you to support the Friends of Soviet Russia in its appeal for help for the German working class. For that part of the working class needs our help most urgently. We must help those who will not receive food and clothing from the bourgeois organizations that are distributing their bounty through ordinary channels. We must help those men and women who are discriminated against in the industries because they are known as "trouble makers," and radicals. We must give for those who cannot count on the support of their labor organizations, because these are under the control of labor leaders who use their prestige to betray the working class into the hands of the present dictators of Germany. We must help the women who are going without the most elementary necessities of life in order to pay party dues and to support their party press.

This is not charity. It is a part of the class struggle, in which we the great and influential Wheat must all play an active part. It is a part of the great, world-wide fight for the liberation of the working-class.

This is not charity. For it will strengthen, not weaken, the morale of the men and women for whom this help is intended. Nothing will keep up their fighting spirit more successfully than the certainty that the comrades in America are with them. Nothing will make them more determined in the fight for a working class government, than the certainty that, whatever may happen, there are comrades across the seas who will stand behind them, who will take care of their children and will support their families.

The government of the United States is preparing now to send food and give credits to Germany, not because our rulers love the German people. It is the fear of the dictators of Germany. We must help the German workers to prevent this fear of desperation may bring, a powerful impetus toward revolution in Germany. That will give the communist cause all over the world, heart and power, that is what drives them to Germany's assistance. Beside that gamblers of Wall Street are not at all averse to selling their surplus for good American dollars, to be paid for by the American tax-payers, in the name of humanity.

Just as surely as giving to Soviet Russia at the time of the famine was the duty of every revolutionist the world over, just as surely as the German comrades helped out of their own need, took from their own hungry children to feed the starving Russians, just as surely as Russia stands ready today to come to their assistance, just as surely as the revolution in Germany wins or loses with the growth or delay of the revolutionary movement in Germany,—just as surely it is our duty to help to the utmost, to keep the fires of the German revolution burning.

Do your duty by the revolutionary movement of Germany. Send a contribution to the Friends of Soviet Russia, 32 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Do this at once. Send a pledge to make a number of contributions from now till the first of May.

St. Louis and St. Paul

By JOHN PEPPER

St. Louis is the place where the national convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action will meet on February 12th.

St. Paul will on May 30th, be the scene of the national convention of the Farmer-Labor Party forces of the United States.

These two gatherings will decide the political fate in 1924 of the working class of America.

These two conventions will decide whether the working class in the presidential and congressional elections of 1924 will once more be only the tail of the capitalist parties, or whether it will take its stand as an independent political factor.

The working class of America is in a state of transition. A minority of the working class is class-conscious and is intent on fighting against the capitalist class and its government. Another minority, at the opposite pole, is in the service of the capitalists (partly even in the direct service of the government) and it does its utmost to obstruct every independent political action of the working class. Between these two groups—between the organized class-conscious minority and the organized lackeys of the capitalists, the labor officials—we see those millions of American workers not as yet class-conscious, but struggling towards class-consciousness.

The Convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action in St. Louis, will be nothing else than an organised effort of labor officialdom to maintain the old state of things, and to preserve the workers as the political serfs of the capitalists. The St. Paul convention of the Farmer-Labor Party forces will be in substance an organized effort on the part of the class-conscious minority to lead the great masses upon the road of class-consciousness.

St. Louis—The Retrogressive Progressives

The Conference for Progressive Political Action has undergone a remarkable development. Its name still remains Progressive, but its policy has gone a step backward with every one of its actions. The first national convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action took place on February 20 and 21, 1922, in Chicago. The Conference was convened by the high officials of sixteen railroad unions. Not less than eighteen international unions belonging to the American Federation of Labor sent delegates. Seven big railroad unions outside of the American Federation of Labor were represented. The Conference was called by the mighty international officers of the official labor movement who, in contrast with Gompers and his gang, were of the opinion that it was impossible to continue the traditional policy of the American Federation of Labor of "rewarding the friends and punishing the enemies" in the old capitalist parties. These officials, Johnston or Keating or Lewis are themselves nothing else than capitalist agents in the ranks of labor. But they were forced to act because the discontent of the masses exercised a tremendous pressure upon them. The deep-going industrial crisis of 1920 which began in 1920 and reached its depth in 1921, the misery and discontent of over five million workers forced the reactionary officials into political activity. Millions of workers demanded an independent party of workers, and the labor officials had to place themselves at the head of this movement if they would hinder the masses from organizing the Labor Party under a new, militant leadership. The workers harbored great expectations, but the labor officials did not organize the Labor Party. This February conference in Chicago stated in its manifesto: "The conference agrees that the time is ripe for progressive political action, but that the organization of a new party should await developments."

In this betrayal by the labor officials the Socialist Party played the role of accomplice. The Workers Party at that time did not recognize the great significance of this conference, and did not send any delegates to Chicago.

The labor officials would have preferred to forget the Conference for Progressive Political Action entirely, but the masses again forced them to act. The tremendous strike movement of the summer of 1922—the most gigantic known in the annals of the American labor movement—and the brutal intervention of the government, the Daugherty injunction, the use of the army against the workers, filled the masses with a will bitterness. Millions of workers demanded the forging of a political weapon, demanded the Labor Party. The labor officials were forced to convene the second convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action in Cleveland on December 11, 1922. And extraordinary enthusiasm of the masses greeted the Cleveland convention. Through labor and farmer officials no less than three million organized workers and farmers were represented in Cleveland.

The convention was completely dominated by the officialdom, and it was therefore inevitable that it should turn into an enormous betrayal. A shilly-shally center—the Chicago Federation of Labor, the Farmer-Labor Party, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, waged a feeble fight, but it was simply steamrollered. The left wing, the representatives of local unions and the Workers Party were not admitted. The motion to form a Labor Party was defeated by a vote of 64 to 52. The Socialist Party was once more the most useful accomplice in the burial of independent political action of workers. But the Workers Party appeared for the first time before the whole working class as a dauntless and aggressive advocate of the Labor Party idea.

The same high officials of international unions who called the Chicago and Cleveland Conferences have called the third conference for St. Louis. This St Louis conference will not even play with the idea of a Labor Party, but will openly declare for the support of the Democrat McAdoo, that is, the support of a candidate of an out and out capitalist party. The Chicago and Cleveland conferences were born out of the demand of the masses for a Labor Party, but they were convened by the labor officials to prevent the formation of a Labor Party. The St. Louis conference will be the closing act of this drama of betrayal and deception. The St. Louis conference has nothing to do with a party any more. It is obviously nothing but the political machination of the labor officials to sell out as many hundreds of thousands of workers as they can to capitalist politicians. But these conferences have not been in vain. The Chicago conference taught the masses that the Gompers clique will never organize the Labor Party. The Cleveland conference taught the masses the other lesson that not only the reactionary, but also the so-called progressive labor officials of the international unions, will not organize the Labor Party. The St. Louis conference will teach the masses the third lesson, about retrogressive progressives. It will show that all these labor officials are hopelessly bound up with the capitalists and with the capitalist parties.

St. Paul—The Advancing Radicals

The May 30th convention in St. Paul will be a gathering of all truly progressive, truly radical and truly revolutionary elements of the American labor movement. The St. Paul convention will at the same time be a mass gathering of exploited farmers. The entire story is told by one fact—in the St. Louis convention the trade unions are represented by the officials of the international unions, while the delegates of local unions will not be admitted at all. In St. Paul organized labor will be represented by delegates of local unions, and the international unions as such will have five delegates each. St. Louis will be the field of betrayal by labor officials. St. Paul will be the field of battle of the rank and file. The aim of St. Louis is to bind the workers more closely to the capitalists. The idea of St. Paul is to organize the workers for independent political action, against the capitalists.

May 30th, 1924, in St. Paul, would be impossible without July 3rd, 1923, in Chicago. The July 3rd convention and the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party denoted a declaration of independence of the American working class, meant the beginning of the formation of a national political party of workers and working farmers. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party contains today only a part of the militant workers and farmers, but it is a legitimate child of revolting masses. It was born of the discontent created by the crisis of 1920-21. It was born of the militant spirit and bitter struggle of the summer of 1922. It was born of the frightful bankruptcy of the farmers. It was born of the disillusionment which followed the betrayal by the Cleveland conference and the failure of the Non-Partisan League.

The May 30th convention will be the continuation of the July 3rd convention. It will take up the idea of a Labor Party on a national scale and will continue to build it up, with larger masses, opening up greater possibilities. The historical significance of the May 30th convention will be that it will be an organization on a national scale for a nation-wide action. Without a national crystallization, the sectional and state Labor Parties are doomed to disintegration. The history of the American labor movement is full of tombstones of local Labor Parties which died a premature death.

There Are Compromises and Compromises

St. Louis will be the compromise of labor leaders and labor aristocracy with the capitalists. The St. Louis Conference—if all signs are not misleading—will decide to support McAdoo as candidate, that is, to support the party of Wilson, the party of the world war, the party of the raids of Palmer.

But the St. Paul convention will also not be a pure class gathering of workers and exploited farmers. The May 30th convention will be a conglomeration of Third Parties and real Farmer-Labor Parties. There will be on the one hand representatives of workers and exploited farmers, and on the other hand, representatives of well-to-do farmers, small businessmen and intelligentsia. The St. Paul convention will not create a real class party of workers and exploited farmers, but a Third Party of all the above-mentioned elements. But this new party will have within it the Federated Farmer-Labor Party which is the beginning of the class party of the laboring masses and which will rally around itself the workers and exploited farmers.

But even the representatives of small businessmen in St. Paul will be different from the Democratic or Republican Party. The small businessmen and well-to-do farmers who remain in the old parties accept them by the political leadership of the capitalists. Discontended and revolting small businessmen and farmers manifest by their break with the old capitalist parties and their entering a Third Party that they no longer accept the leadership of the capitalists, that even with all their characteristic hesitancy, wavering and half-measures, they nevertheless want to combat the capitalists.

We Communists must understand this difference clearly, the difference between counter-revolutionary and revolutionary compromise. It is counter revolutionary compromise when the labor aristocracy concludes an alliance within the old capitalist parties to conserve the existing social order. But it is a revolutionary compromise when Communist workers enter into the May 30th convention to form the united front with militant workers and desperate farmers, even though these masses do not as yet see clearly the difference between themselves and well-to-do farmers and small businessmen. It is a revolutionary compromise when Communists seek and accept the alliance of farmers or Third Party forces even if these elements are in revolt against the two-party system and wish to fight against ruling big capital. A comprise which creates allies for the working class for weakening and undermining the present social order is a revolutionary compromise. When Secretary of Commerce Hoover, the most conscious representative of the interests of the capitalist class says that the two-party system is the best guarantee for the present social order, Communists must understand and retard the revolutionary significance of a Third Party When Gompers, the capitalist agent within the ranks of labor, recommends the policy of "Rewarding the friends and punishing the enemies" within the old capitalist parties, Communists must understand the revolutionary significance of independent political action of the working class. When the whole capitalist press with united forces, day by day "proves" that the labor party is [illegible] from those of the workers, Communists must understand the revolutionary significance of the alliance between farmers and workers. When yellow Socialists yell that the Communists have become opportunists because they remain with the masses of workers and farmers, though these are not as yet class conscious, Communists must understand the revolutionary significance of the compromise between the advance guard and the rear guard of the working class.

Murphy Hopes Daily Worker Becomes Worthy Companion of Pravda and the Rote Fahne

J. T. Murphy, member of the British Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions, sends his greetings to "The Daily Worker" and hopes it will become a worthy companion of Pravda and the Rote Fahne, the famous Communist dailies of Russia and Germany. He writes as follows:

West Ealing, London, England, Dec. 14, 1923.

To: Workers Party,

Dear Comrades: I am delighted to hear of the progress of the Workers Party of America and your innovation—The Workers Daily.

Here's to "The Workers Daily". May it become a worthy companion of the great dailies, Pravda and Rote Fahne, in the great revolutionary movement of the workers.

May it become as dear to the workers of America as a valiant champion of their will to victory, as these other great papers have become to the workers of Russia and Germany.

Yours fraternally,

J. T. MURPHY.

COUNTRYMEN - - - By S. SYDNEY WYMAN

"WHERE you from, Shorty?" Big Bell looked down at the little man who moved into a stool beside him at the red and white checkered table, while his elbows stood out as though to mark his personal boundary lines.

Mercy Hirko glanced at him, an odd little dignity in his manner, and answering the query reached for a piece of bread. It happened that Big Bell reached at the same time and both men grasped and snatched at the delicacy—the smaller man, Matty looked at him again and said softly as though to reassure him, "You countryman of mine."

"Ho-ho-ho," roared Bell so that all the table heard and the rapidly moving forks stopped while the eyes turned toward him. His brute strength caught all the men unwilling for this big giant could be a devil without warning; he therefore gave a dog barking and snapping at his heels.

"Ho-ho-ho," he roared. "Ho-ho, countryman he says. Country-man little runt. Ho-ho-ho—little pollywog—toad hopper. Hump."

Another word did he say until he reached the meat when he arose and with a sweeping gesture knocked between his teeth, and then drove Matty to restart as he would him a whack across the head. "You woman eat? Polly-woggy woman eat?"

And Matty Hirko grinned, only knowing whether to laugh or cry from many years of evening a bad name for his small body and a little ground with any one who spoke his language; for he had come to work in the smelter and had been set to the hardest labor. He entered the hall by way of the kitchen from the rear door, a timid figure led to a shack by a woman from the front room, who had noted his timidity and his foreign appearance. Matty ordered a bowl of beer and a bottle of wine, but Matty didn't know wine; it was bitter and when he couldn't find good whiskey he left the drink alone. Not so with Bell who came up to him, pulled a flask from his pocket and offering it ordered, "Drink, countryman."

And that Matty would have refused, but Bell's eyes compelled him to drink. Then Bell drained out a portion and offered it again, but this time Matty refused. "No, no," Bell leered into his face. "You no drink. Gog damn, I make you drink," and he tripped up the little man and poured down him on the floor around the bottle between his teeth and poured half the contents down Matty's throat.

"So," he roared when he straightened up and looked at the bottle. "So pollywog—you get one damn good drink, eh?"

And Matty did not fight; i ste d his puny strength or the consequences. But the tussle ended in a moment; Bell caught him about the waist, lifted him bodily, flung him across the pool table and spanked him while the men gathered about to roar with delight. Finished, Bell leaned back against the bar and waited while Matty scrambled from the table. He would have seized a chair, but a friend pulled him away toward the rear saying, "You know You no fight hem—she strong like bull."

Hunger

J. J. Lankes

and Matty did not fight; instead he remembered that night and the next day, and every day after that when he met Big Bell at the boarding house, at the pool room, or on the street. Generally he dodged away, but sometimes the giant caught him and laughed in his face, or twisted his ear or his nose. Once he landed a kick which turned Matty's face white with pain, but he said nothing, hoping that the imitation and persecution would soon be over. But it wasn't; something in the small man, something about his fine delicate mustache, his large sparkling eyes, the tilt of his derby felt hat always baited Big Bell and induced some re mark, a pinch, a squeeze, or a slap.

Matty remembered all these insults; he made few friends for his pride was hurt and instead of being gay and happy as was his custom, he worried.

Then he bought a dog, a little frisky pup to which he brought bones from the butcher shop or tid bits he took away from the table. He kept it at home for two weeks, but one night he took it along to the boarding house; he walked very erect and proud, for now he had a friend, a companion, a sympathizer. Just a pup, but it was enough. Big Bell was waiting at the porch when Matty rounded the corner, the pup frisking at his heels.

"Ho-ho-ho," roared Big Bell, "Look—my countryman. Look—two little dumplings—yallow dogs."

Matty stopped before him. He didn't exactly understand what "yallow dogs" meant but he knew it implied scorn.

"You take back what you say of my dog," he cried. "You take hem back."

Big Bell only grabbed his collar, turned him about and gave him a kick. Then he caught the pup an other blow in the ribs which sent him yelping up the street. Matty watched the little pup a short way, and then went inside to sit at the red and white checkered table. He drank two cups of coffee, and went home without stopping at the pool room as h usually did. He walked with his head bent forward as he had seen the little dog do.

Next morning Big Bell was pouring milk on his breakfast food and slopping it over the dish onto the table cloth when Matty came in. Instead of walking to his regular place at another table, he stopped opposite Big Bell rose grating his chair. coat pocket, pointed it at the giant and ordered with short burning little words, "You take back what you say —my dog—you 'pologize what you do—you take hem back."

Big Bell was astonished, surprised for the first time in his life, but once more he laughed. "Ho-ho-ho, countryman—two yallow pups—two."

He seized a knife and rising to get at this little man, this little runt who dared challenge him, him, Big Bell boss of the pool hall, boss of the boarding house, boss of the smelter. Big Bell rose grating his chair.

Matty stood still, watching, waiting.

Then he pulled the trigger once, twice. And Big Bell sat down heavily against the chair, for the first but let out his heart.

An hour after they found Mercy Hirko in his room with his little frisky pup. When they took him he said simply but proudly, "He bark my dog once—he no keek hem two time

THE COMING MINERS' CONVENTION - - - By WM. Z. FOSTER

On Jan. 22nd the United Mine Workers will hold their Convention in Indianapolis. Once again the organized coal diggers of the United States and Canada will meet to legislate on the conditions of their industry. It will be one of the most important conventions in recent years. Its outcome will be of the greatest consequence to the whole labor movement. The eyes of organized workers everywhere are turned toward it.

For many years the United Mine Workers has been one of the most progressive organizations in the labor movement. They long led the revolt against the Gompers machine. Every where its cause was looked upon for support. This was in the hey-day of the strength of the Socialist Party. But in recent years the organization has lost much of its militancy. Especially is this the case amongst the leadership which, for general incompetency, autocracy, and corruption, will now compare with the most reactionary unions in the A. F. of L. The real condition of the organization is that the rank and file are genuinely militant, while the officialdom are reactionary to the last degree. It is an anomalous situation. Practically all the unions in the American Federation of Labor show a somewhat similar division of opinion between the officialdom and the rank and file, but in no case is this so marked as in that of the United Mine Workers of America.

As the years go by the collisions between the progressive rank and file and the reactionary officialdom grow heavier and more intense. At the coming convention many of these fights will come to a head. One of the most important is the Howat case. That is a cancer in the heart of the Miners' Union. Howat was brutally and illegally expelled. All the intelligent rank and file members realise this and they are demanding a square deal for him. Throughout the whole organization Howat has been given a rousing reception by the rank and file wherever he has gone to make known his case. At the convention this sentiment in favor of him will surely register itself despite all that Lewis can do to prevent it. Another collision between the rank and file and the officialdom was had in District 26. The manouvres there of John L. Lewis in smashing the strike of the coal and steel workers at the behest of the British Empire Steel Corporation were among the worst exhibitions of treachery known in the history of the Miners' Union. Desperate efforts will be made to purge the organization of the disgrace and rid it of the men guilty of such a crime.

Many other grievances will be aired by the rank and file. They will see the organization falling to pieces and nothing being done by the officials to prevent it. They will demand a reckoning of the crooked leadership. In the past couple of years the wave of discontent in the thousands of locals has begun to develop the first rudiments of organization. These are to be found in the Progressive International Committee of the United Mine Workers of America. This is more than an organization; it is a cause. It is the one hope of the rank and file to have some say in the organization, the one means by which they will be able to turn it to their advantage and away from being merely an instrument for corrupt officials to power. The fight will be intensified by the fact that the bituminous agreement expires this spring and the fate of the miners' standards of living is in the balance, with the prospect of a great strike to defend them looming up.

The factors are present for a great rank and file fight in the Miners' Union. Discontent is rife in every district. And upheaval is long overdue. The only way it has been prevented up till now is by the use of the iron fist by Lewis. The wave of discontent that is sweeping many unions manifests itself even more strongly in the United Mine Workers of America. In the Moldens' Union the membership in the last convention, demanded a general revision of the policies of the organization. In the Maintenance of Way convention they went much further and swept out of office the whole reactionary gang of officials led by the unspeakable Grable. In the Miners' Union the discontent mounts still higher and Lewis will have the job of his life trying to choke it back at the coming convention. There will be a bitter struggle between the forces of progress and of reaction.

What happens at the Miners' Convention will be of the utmost importance to the whole labor movement. The workers are demoralised and helpless everywhere in the unions. Craft unionism is discredited. A great renaissance is needed. This can come only through a great shattering blow dealt at the old bureaucratic machine. If the miners will take the lead in this movement at the next convention, workers in the other industries will be encouraged to follow. When the big revolt took place at the Maintenance of Way Workers' Convention a year ago, a quiver ran through the whole labor movement. But this organization was on its last legs and the revolt dissipated itself. If the miners take the bit in their teeth, as well they may at the Indianapolis Convention, the story will be a different one. The old reactionaries in the labor bureaucracy will find themselves confronted with a real struggle. On the other hand, if the Miners' Convention is a reactionary one, it will throw still more discouragement into the ranks of an already dangerously depressed labor movement. The coming Miners' Convention marks a turning point in the labor movement.

Separating the Chaff from the Wheat

By ALFRED KNUTSON

Within so-called farmers' and workers' movements, like the Nonpartisan League and several state Farmer-Labor parties, there have not been, heretofore, hardly any distinction between the make up of their membership. In the Nonpartisan League, for instance, it was usually felt that hired men on the farms, the tenants, the small farm owner, the well-to-do farmer, the small banker and the small business man, had common economic interests. The enemy of all these was thought to be "big business", and for that reason they were urged to unite their political forces, in order to administer a death blow to this one monster—the exploiter of them all. Such was the talk of League organizers in the northwest.

However, with the advent of more acute economic conditions, we are beginning to witness a different line-up between these various elements. At the recent Nonpartisan League convention, held at Bismarck, N. D., when such fundamental matters as recognition of Soviet Russia", "land for the users", and "a five year moratorium for working farmers", were brought to the attention of the delegates, the officialdom of the League, the lawyer-and-banker-leaguer, showed their disapproval by refusing to consider them at all, while some fifty or sixty honest delegates, hard pressed financially, manifested their sympathy with these necessary demands of the farmers and the workers.

Just recently R. W. Fraziер (one of the prominent old-time leaguers), chairman of the republican party in North Dakota, announced that, "for the sake of harmony" he was in favor of the candidacy of Coolidge. This is a brazen betrayal of the real interests of the rank and file of the farmers and the workers in North Dakota, and supremely serve to separate still more the petty bourgeois elements from the class conscious workers in both town and country.

In South Dakota this same filtering process between the classes is in evidence. The so-called minority group in the Farmer-Labor party have omitted from their platform, the two most important planks adopted by the Pierre convention, namely, "land for the users" and "a five year moratorium for the working farmers".

Batcheller, the leader of the Farmers' Union in South Dakota, comes out in the press and states that the farmer is made to look like a criminal by his insisting upon these obviously necessary measures. Beck, the agent in the state of the reactionary Gompers, talks pompously about how "fundamental democracy" is endangered by such a "radical" program. Bates, Bartling and others who have been prominent and "good" leaguers and Farmer-Laborites in the past, express themselves in a similar tone.

The guns of the opposition are trained against Tom Ayres, the South Dakota farmers' and workers' candidate for United States senator. To the discomfiture and dismay of the pussyfooters and politicians in the state, Ayres is insisting upon a moratorium and land for the users. He could hardly have thrown a bigger bombshell into the camp of the reactionaries than by thus fearlessly giving expression to the vital needs and demands of the exploited farmers.

The struggle in South Dakota is interesting and of the greatest significance to the farmers and the workers of the entire country. Here, in embryo, we witness the separation of the chaff from the wheat,—the petty bourgeois philistines and middle-class philosophers are slowly, but surely, losing their grip on the masses.

FAMINE

A Bunch of Live Wires - - - By Earl R. Browder

THE livest bunch of live wires to be found in the trade unions of this country, is in the Trade Union Educational League. The center of discussion wherever progressive policies are being advocated. All over the country the trade unions are being stirred into new life by this band of militants, with their uniform program of progress, and their fighting spirit directed against the employers and their agents. The T. U. E. L., the left wing of the American labor movement. It is the one outstanding promise of a bigger and stronger labor movement in the near future.

Central and important in the work of the T. U. E. L., is THE LABOR HERALD, monthly magazine of the league, which has been published for the past two years. The magazine has established itself as an authority on trade union problems in America, as well as the guide and inspiration for the fighting left wing militants. Interesting and well written, in contains from month to month the most fundamental information and analysis of the working class movement in America and of the world. Even its enemies read it, which proves that THE LABOR HERALD is an established institution.

Grouped around the Trade Union Educational League are the left wing organizations in the various industries. Some of them, such as in the needle trades, are sections of the T. U. E. L. Others are independent, and the members of the League work with them along with many non-members in that industry. Such industrial committees, directing the left-wing on a national scale within the broad scope of each industry, are functioning in the Railroad, Metal, Needle Trades, Printing Trades, Food and Leather, Textile, Marine Transport, Tobacco, and Coal Mining Industries. Around each committee is being built up a larger group of workers who propagate and organize for industrial unionism, the labor party, militant leadership, and the other phases of the League program.

These left-wing live wires are also building up their own press in each industry, as well as backing the general publications. Thus the Railroad Committee publishes the RAILROAD AMALGAMATION ADVOCATE; the Needle Trades Committee publishes the NEEDLE WORKER; the Metal Trades Committee issues the AMALGAMATION BULLETIN; the Printing Trades Committee is responsible for THE INDUSTRIALIST; the Building Trades Committee has launched the PROGRESSIVE BUILDING TRADES WORKER; and the Mining Committee publishes in seven languages the PROGRESSIVE MINER. A complete network of organization and press is thus being woven throughout the labor movement, consolidating and centralizing the left wing movement.

The Trade Union Educational League has also published books and pamphlets covering all phases of the labor movement, national and international, in the Labor Herald Library. Nine publications have been issued, the circulation of which have run into hundreds of thousands. Th s library constitutes a arsenal of facts and arguments for militants, arming them for the struggle.

Every city and town has its local general group of the T. U. E. L., where the militants gather from all sections of the labor movement; each industry in each center has its industrial group working with its international committee; and in each union the League militants co-operate to carry on their vital educational work. There is a place for every live wire and militant, and a task for each one to carry out. The Trade Union Educational League is thus made the most interesting and active section of the labor movement.

In Chicago the general group of the T. U. E. L. meets once a month, on the fourth Wednesday, at Wicker Park Hall, 2040 West North St

Every progressive, militant, and revolutionary worker in Chicago should be interested in getting into the work of the Trade Union Educational League. Such a bunch of live wires, electrifying the labor movement and charging it with new life, will naturally draw to itself all the other live wires in the movement.

THE NEGRO IN POLITICS - By LOVETT FORT WHITEMAN

TODAY the Negro masses are yet in the clutches of the unscrupulous politicians of both Races. From year to year he votes on the simple faith that the goodness or badness of the candidate is sufficient force to improve his social conditions. There is something pathetic in the child-like way the Negro voter looks at politics. The entire Race is without any political ideals. Its professional politicians are solely interested in politics only in so far as they may derive graft and lucrative jobs. The platform or program of a candidate is never considered, but the extent of his power to purchase votes.

Nevertheless, there are manifest here and there among the younger men and women against this condition. They make up as yet the few who are able to understand that politics is but a reflection of economic conditions, that government today is but an instrument in the hands of the rich or capitalist class, and that its laws and policies are envolved primarily in the interest of its class.

The Negro who advocates among his people the necessity of breaking away from the old-line parties faces much opposition from the present set of Negro leaders. A simple explanation of this opposition is that the majority of recognised Negro leaders in some way or other live on the bounty of the white capitalist class. Most Negro higher schools and colleges are supported by the contributions of white philanthropists; also the Y. M. C. A. and a number of other institutions either of an ethical or non-descript character. The Negro heads of these institutions are the accepted leaders of the Race. They dare not support labor unionism among Negroes, they dare not advocate other than a capitalist ticket in politics. The Negro leader has sold out the soul of the Race.

Yet slowly but surely we of the working class are coming to see that the Negro cannot be a man and a beggar at the same time.

1924? A MILITANT'S PREDICTION By WM. F. DUNNE and other organizations are combined.

The middle West and West will see the wage-earners and farmers in politics with a class party as their weapon. 1924 will mark the beginning of the entry of the farmers and wage-earners into the political field as a separate entity, a political force that American capitalism must reckon with from now on.

Recognition of Soviet Russia will be an issue before the present session of Congress.

The soulless acts and utterances of Secretary Hughes, ably assisted by the feeble viciousness of the Daugherty Department of Justice, has put Soviet Russia's enemies on the defensive. Mr. Gomper alone stands unshaken; to him the recognition of Russia means a personal defeat—a major defeat. Should recognition come before the next A. F. of L. convention it might even contribute to his defeat. To the A. F. of L. lobbyists will fight with the Wall street bankers, who hold the czar's bonds against Soviet Russia, that the prestige of Gompers may not be impaired while he is still of service to them.

The Convention of the United Mine Workers to be held this month is, in many ways, of more importance to Labor than the A. F. of L. Convention next fall. Should the Lewis machine be defeated or even badly shaken, it will be evidence of the growing strength of the left wing movement, and more than one international union official will begin to break out of his flag locker an ensign of a somewhat more lively hue.

As for the A. F. of L. Convention itself, a safe prediction would be that it will do nothing except to tighten the lines against the "reds."

It will meet at a time when the unemployment situation will be critical but no sane person will expect the Convention to propose any remedy not approved by the Civic Federation and the Chamber of Commerce. It is likely that unless the unemployed invade the Convention hall the subject will never be mentioned on the floor.

In 1924 and perhaps for several years following, the economic power of the Labor unions will decline. Jobless workers cannot strike and those who are lucky enough to have jobs do not want to strike.

The Labor unions will turn more and more to the political field and even by the end of 1924, there may be a high and increasing level of consciousness among the masses of American workers engendered by the political thinking they have been, and will be forced to do.

* * *

In the educational and organizational work designed to speed up the left wing activities in the Labor movement, to give the new tendency toward class mass political action, a militant working class character, the Workers (Communist) Party of America is in the lead. It has, in fact, little, if any competition and the growth of the W. P. of A. in 1924 will be an accuarte guide to the progress made by the American working class as a whole.

THE KEY

They led him to a cell,
This too-great lover of freedom.
The gate clanged to, the jailer left:
The bars bent not,
The he pressed at them with all his strength.

Here is something stronger than argument,
Mightier than the clenched fist,
Closing with a metallic shudder,
unchangeable, final,
Not to be moved by a race on its knees,
by the hoarse shouts of a million,
by Odes of men.

Your faith in freedom, in brotherhood,
in the flaming goal,
Shakes and crumbles . . . .
Are they all a mockery,
Beautiful to dream, dying like drowned waves
under stiff cliffs of granite?

Do not waver, lover of freedom:
The gate will swing wide
As surely as it swung narrow:
something near you, a little something.
A little idea, maybe, will be the key to all barred gates,
Will melt at last all chains and prisons forever.

Editor's Note.—In sending in the above contribution to the first issue of The Daily Worker," Clement Wood encloses a note wishing the Daily "Good Luck."

Hokum

By WILLIAM L. KRUSE

Hokum is a term applied to the sentimental stuff that is used in the movies to make the audience weep. The hokum is usually dished out in the last reel, after the audience has been worked up to the proper pitch by a series of events which have little or no connection with the hokum.

The hokum is the moral of the picture. It is the part that is supposed to show that crime does not pay, that the villain is punished, that virtue is rewarded, that the wage-slave is really happy in his position, that the boss is a good fellow, that the strike is a crime against society, that the workers should be grateful to the employers for the chance to work, that the United States is the best country in the world, etc. etc. etc. ad infinitum.

Hokum is a big factor in the movies. It is the part that is supposed to make the picture "uplifting." It is the part that is supposed to make the picture "educational." It is the part that is supposed to make the picture "instructive." It is the part that is supposed to make the picture "inspiring." It is the part that is supposed to make the picture "elevating." OUTLOOK OF FEDERATED PARTY

By JOSEPH MANLEY

This will be a Federated Farmer-Labor Party year. . . . The Federated Farmer-Labor Party in 1924 is very much in the last months of its existence. It is rapidly losing the leading force in the "third party" drive—Labor. It is rapidly losing its roots among the small of the economical and political life of the farmers. . . .

Labor is not very much on its work among the farmers. Even among the industrial workers, among the foreign-born workers, it will also work effectively. It will also work for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party unless it puts in the national nominating convention of the Farmer-Labor Party at St. Paul, May 30th, a militant program and militant candidates. . . .

A stock raiser sold three four year old farm horses. In Kansas City he received $2.40 for each of them. Becoming disgusted with stock, raising he shot 7 horses and used them for bait to poison coyotes and made $7.00 from each horse by selling the coyote pelts, of which there is a bounty.

A farmer sold two cows in Portland, Ore. They were good and fat. He received for both a total of $11.50. When out of this he paid $5.00 drayage and $1.25 commission he had $5.25 clear profit.

The answer to the condition that these facts illustrate, coming from the politicians of the Republican and Democratic parties is: "diversified farming", "economy", "less demand for education" and other phrases. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party will not attempt to meet the farmers with such nonsense.

The mission of the Federated among the working farmers during the coming campaign will be to drive home the necessity for fundamental changes in the present marketing and owning methods and the necessity of close solidarity with the city worker. It will rally to the fight for a Labor Party the militant section of the trade union movement.

In the campaigns to be conducted by the various state parties that are fast lining up with the Federated a new note will be struck. In South Dakota our land program was adopted and the Farmer-Labor Party is now entering a campaign for the primaries with the slogans: "The land shall belong to the users of the land". "A five year moratorium for all working farmers". In that state this is already having the effect of separating the wheat from the chaff. When one of these states elect a U. S. Senator, he will strike a new note in Washington, when he talks about: "Occupational, proportional representation".

The chief task of the Federated is to organize for the coming national convention at St. Paul. This will tax all our energy and support. The May 30th convention must be made a success. In the coming months of the new year it will be the task of the Federated to overcome the inertia of the masses brought on by the domination of the rank and file of the unions by the bureaucracy. Hundreds of branches of the Federated must be set up in every state in the union. 1924 is for a political year. People will think of political problems. Their economic distress must be given the correct analysis. The Federated is the only national organization that faces this problem and its complex economic problems with a broad and comprehensive program that makes for the unity of the militant section of the farmers and workers organizations. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party greets the New Year with high hope, and confidence that out of this year's struggles will come a great mass movement of exploited farmers and workers; organized permanently for the greater task that leads to a workers and farmers government.

The Giant and the Torch

(A Fable)

By M. OSSAYE J. OLGIN

The giant lay in a stupor, the giant was weary, the mind of the giant was in a haze. The pigmies crept to them selves "This is our opportunity." The pigmies got busy. They twisted ropes with which they fastened the giant's long hair down to the ground of the cave he lay in. They sharpened tacks with which they tacked to the ground his hair. The giant stirred in his sleep. The pigmies proceeded to do their ugliest mischief. Some perforated his skull with tiny running instruments and cut a multitude of winding paths through the protective skin, while a group of their kin, black-robed and oily-faced, sang a hymn of heavenly justice and love and beauty on earth.

The pigmies then put sand into the chambers of his heart on an array of pipes through which they pumped with cleverly constructed machines. Meantime, while another coterie of their folk, bespectacled and armed with folio parchment, chanted soothingly a song of co-operation and harmony and peace. Still others dug flies through the skin and the muscles of the giant and sawed pieces of his bones, sinews and tissues, while their brothers in dark attire suavely purred a lovely tale of equality and fraternity and freedom for all. The giant got restless. The giant sighed. The hymn-singers put more honey in their voices, more oil in their tunes. The giant stirred. The parchment-bearers brought new mountains of learned material, put more emphasis in their lullaby-chants. The giant groaned. The uniformed brethren redoubled their mellow tale. The giant raised himself. All the time the pain-cutters and blood-pumpers and bone-sawers kept on busily doing their work. The giant writhed. His bulky body became tense.

The friends of the giant were scattered throughout the cave. The friends of the giant sought to wake him up. The giant was still overwhelmed by his slumber. The voices of the hymn-singers and peace-chanters kept him asleep. The oldest friends said, "Bring in the torch." In they brought the blazing torch. Right between the eyes of the giant they planted the torch. Piercing rays of light struck the giant's eyes. He woke up. He looked around. He perceived the pigmies. He shook himself with all his might, he loosened the fastenings that held his limbs. He lifted a hand and "Bang," the blood-pumpers ran away in fright. "Crash," and the bone-sawers dispersed in every direction. "Clang," and the giant rose to his feet, the giant opened his mouth and the first word he said was "Soviet." The giant left the cave, and went into the wide, open world to live and enjoy the light of the sun.

BEFOGGED

By CHARLES OLUF OLSEN

ONCE I saw an old laborer [illegible] His face had a look of spirited blankness that reminded me of schoolboy's slate—a thing soiled, with half-obliterated scrawls on it. I regarded him; he looked his wear to time, and this is what they said to me:

"I work because I must. This factory is fearful to me. I do not enjoy it, for I do not know the use of it really; it has no interest for me. I am always trying to get away from it, by reading books. When I have no place to sleep and it is cold; when I am hungry and have no food; when I am sick and have no money to pay for it, and pay my way into torture, drives me to the lesser torture of work.

"However, as the sum of my wages increases the torture of work becomes lighter, for I can buy more things, and the picture of being a wage slave grows dim. When the sum of my wages is big enough, to enable me to go back to the land, I will buy my self free for a time. If you don't shall stay for a time and work night and whenever I can, and the people who have bought me will pay freedom to me. Then I shall be free to do as I please.

"I KNOW some men LIKE work. What is the use in it that I cannot see? I don't understand. It was [illegible] when I felt real well—a day or two—I really liked work that I was doing. But I could do every [illegible] that if I could go away [illegible] and work and eat, and sleep when I felt like it. I've been [illegible] my books for a long time and think I could solve the question."

THE CAMPAIGN FOR "THE DAILY" . . . .

By JOHN J. BALLAM

Sunday, January 13, 1924! This date will be remembered in the history of the American labor movement as a red letter day. For on this day there comes into being the first Communist daily newspaper printed in the English language.—The Daily Worker.

Last August, 1923 the Workers Party of America announced the opening of a drive to raise $100,000 to establish an English language daily. This announcement was received with some scepticism by old and experienced newspaper men who said that it simply could not be done. But the 20,000 members of the Workers Party went quietly to work. Committees were organized in sixty cities thruout the country. The militant rank and file pledged themselves to buy at least one $5 share of preferred stock each. The Workers Party maintains a press in various languages spoken by the working class of America, with a circulation of over one hundred thousand copies. Recognizing the need of one English-language daily, our people went to work with a will and inspired by their example drew into the campaign thousands of militant workers and exploited farmers who out of their little have given much.

Of the $100,000 fund $90,000 has now been raised, and the balance is coming in with every mail. Thus in the short space of four months a little band of determined fighters in the proletarian cause brought into existence a powerful machine with which to aid the working class to fight its battles against its ancient enemy.

The Daily Worker owes its origin to the devotion and sacrifice of thousands of silent and unknown heroes of the working class of America. It is born out the loins of the exploited and oppressed workers and farmers of this country. It is bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh. It comes to marshall the hosts of labor in the social revolution which shall create in America—the American Republic of Workers and Farmers.

"I am on my death-bed," writes one disabled soldier in the industrial war, "but I am sending you $10, which is all I possess, to help you to start your daily paper to continue the battle for economic and political freedom in which I have given my life."

"I want to subscribe for 12 shares of stock in the Daily Worker for my children and nephews and nieces," said one office worker who desired her name to be kept secret for fear of losing her job, "because I want them to own a share in the organ of labor's emancipation."

"Here are twenty iron boys for The Daily Worker Fund collected by me from the slaves in the steel mills of Youngstown, Ohio. May The Daily Worker soon appear and expose the hellish conditions under which we work and die."

From the coal fields of Illinois and Pennsylvania came back the lists tattered and smooched with the grime of the toilers, filled with the record of the dollars and dimes of the coal diggers, and carrying in broken English the message of the solidarity of the miners and their pledge to support the Daily Worker and to carry on the fight for a government of the workers and farmers of America.

From the textile mills of New England; from the clothing workers of New York; from the sailors in port and at sea; from the railroad shops; from mill, factory, mine, farm and field came the response of the workers to establish their paper—The Daily Worker.

Where others have failed we will succeed; for The Daily Worker grows out of the needs of the workers. It is their paper. It is their voice. It is the instrument of their emancipation. For they have paid for it; and the workers and farmers of America will support and cherish it. The Daily Worker is built upon the hearts of the working class. Every page and line will be filled with their spirit. It never will, it never can desert or betray them. For the Daily Worker is the child of the workers and farmers of America.

The capitalist press depends for its foundation and support upon the capitalists, the big business men of this country. The capitalist press will not desert or betray its masters—those who furnish the money for the maintainance of the big English dailies.

The Daily Worker was founded by the workers—it appeals for the support of the workers; thus created and thus maintained. The Daily Worker belongs to the working class and will lead them into battle for the final overthrow of capitalist society which is built upon their misery and degradation.

The successful outcome of the Daily Worker Campaign Committee's drive for the $100,000 is a real achievement. The Committee congratulates all those who participated and co-operated to bring about the birth of The Daily Worker. The next task—the building of our daily —50,000 subscribers from coast to coast—150,000 workers receiving the glad tidings of a new day and the report of the advancing proletarian three hundred and sixty-five days in the year.

Let us, by working for The Daily Worker in Chicago, at the same time work for the establishment of workers' daily in every industrial center in the country, until at last, the workers realizing their power and their slavery, unite to end forever the exploitation of the working class and to establish in their place a Workers' and Farmers' Republic.

LONG LIVE THE DAILY WORKER!

The Next Crisis in Germany

By LUDWIG LORE,
Editor, N. Y. Volkszeitung.

Motto:—Society has but one alternative: Either forward into Socialism, or reaction into barbarism.—Frederick Engels.

To that part of the international labor movement that took its revolutionary ideals seriously Germany has been a series of heart-rending disappointments. It is the great tragedy of the modern working class movement that its German leaders, after an era of peaceful adjustment to the capitalist world, broke under the strain and were carried along in a whirling current of national hatreds. The German Social-Democracy deserted the working class in its hour of greatest need, and stood behind the bourgeoisie at the moment when world capitalism stood at the zenith of power.

1918, discouragement, defeat, and revolution in Germany. Once more a desperate working class stood at the parting of the ways, and again the leaders, instead of taking a potent step to wrest the workers of Germany out of the power of a weakened and shattered bourgeoisie, chose the path that led to capitalist reconstruction against proletarian revolution.

Five years have passed since the founding of the German republic, and the German working class is staggering on the downward path to ruin. Its political influence, in spite of a Socialist president, is dead. Its social institutions have long since succumbed to financial ruin that has emptied the nation's coffers. Its labor unions, in the face of an era of unemployment, have lost all possibility of aggressive action.

In this tragedy of annihilation there is only one hope, the growing power and strength of the German Communist movement. From the outset it has struggled hard, sometimes in open rebellion, for the most part patiently, in a determined effort to educate the working class to an understanding of its mission. More bitter than its capitalist opponents have been the leaders of the Social-Democracy on the political field as well as in the trade union movement. Yet Communism grows apace. Even stronger than the words of Communist agitators, recent events have opened the eyes of the workers. They see capitalism once more in undisputed power. They are starving and suffering in the face of ravishing luxury. They are tiring of leaders who have no hope, dread the victory of the Communist movement, and make a last, desperate effort, by suppressing it and forcing it underground. But just as the Social-Democracy grew in the Bismarck era of exception laws, so the revolution will grow now despite persecution. In 1918, the German working class could be hoodwinked. The next revolutionary crisis will find a sadder but wiser working class.

We will strike at your audacity,
We will know you by your spiked helmets.

Your gold braid will not save you.
We will drag you from your horses.
On that day there will be no pity.
We will trample upon you.
We will throw you into the canals
As you did with Rosa Luxemburg.

We are hungry,
But we are still strong.
Look to your weapons,
For we have need of them.
For our children,
For ourselves,
For a piece of bread.
We will strike at your audacity.

Enough of war,
Enough of suffering,
We fight for freedom,
And you fight for gold braid.

The rich, the nobles and the generals have leagued
To put their heels on our necks.
Because you had your heels on our necks.
And because you took our bread,
We will drag you from your horses,
And we will stamp on your faces
with our heavy boots.

Your audacity does not frighten us.
We have a greater audacity.
We will know you by your shining boots.
Your regalia will not save you.
We will pursue you into your mountain fastness.
We will strike at your audacity.
What can you do against the millions?
From the factory [illegible] the farms,

ABOUT LABOR BANKS

Editor of The Daily Worker:—You may be interested in the conclusions of a worker on labor banks and banking. I have thought about it a good deal and what I want to know is this: If the workers only kept one-third or less of the country's wealth, how will it help them to put what they can save away in labor banks to fight the bosses on the investment field?

I think too much fuss is being made about labor banks and too many workers are thinking and fussing about the overthrow of capitalism.

RUSSIAN RECOGNITION UP TO CONGRESS

War on Unions in Philadelphia

MILITARY RULE IS ESTABLISHED IN QUAKER CITY

Policemen, Firemen Are Under Fascist Dictates

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

PHILADELPHIA.—General Smedley D. Butler of the Marines has received a year's leave of absence from President Coolidge to serve this city as Director of Public Safety. This department has control of the Bureaus of Police, Fire, Electrical Signals and Lighting, Building, Boiler and Elevator Inspection.

General Butler's assumption of his new duties followed the installation of a new city administration which was elected last November. The new administration promised to "clean up the city."

Flaw in Smith Union.

Pennsylvania is famous for a "progressive" governor, its Cossack state troops and Directors of Public Safety who recognize no law but their own wishes and those of the corporations they serve.

Mr. Butler did not leave the public long in doubt as to what his rule would be for workers. He called the police chiefs into his office and "laid down the law" to them. He snapped and barked in true Hall-an'-Mario Daywes fashion and was hardboiled as the Grand Kleksrd of the Ku Klux Klan when about to tar and feather an old lady of 80.

Their General Strike.

Butler will treat industrious rough is indicated by the following statement delivered to the police heads:

"I hear there is a union in the police. That must be wiped out, too. The federation of firemen, which I understand exists in the fire bureau, also must go."

The Director announced that he has formed a secret squad of 800 to check up on the doings of policemen.

Follows in Coolidge's Footsteps.

General Butler probably remembers that President Coolidge worked his way up to the White House by brushing the Boston policemen who went on strike in 1920. The bosses fear the police who are recruited from the working class and while the policemen are used to do the dirty work of breaking strikes for the bosses and beating up the strikers they learn that whenever they request better conditions the bosses treat them in exactly the same manner as the industrial workers are treated. That a consciousness of this fact is growing among the police is indicated by the various attempts made in several places to form unions.

The workers and farmers of Pennsylvania are not lacking in object lessons on the need for independent political action. While they allow themselves to be deceived by fake progressives like Governor Pinchot and fooled by Gompers reactionary "reward and punish" policy, they must expect mounted Cossacks, spies and hardboiled dictators.

Labor Shows There Can Be No Peace Under Capitalism

The Bok peace plan which won the Edward J. Bok $100,000 prise is the subject of much criticism among workingmen and women in Chicago.

The text of this scheme of which the author's name has not yet been made public proposes the immediate entry of the United States into the permanent court of International Justice and unreserved cooperation with the league of nations under specified conditions. The project also envisages the ultimate membership of the United States in the league.

O. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, said:

"The Bok peace plan is another attempt at the impossible to prevent war under an industrial system that breeds war.

"The higher the development of capitalist production the greater the danger of war. This development brings with it a sharper struggle for survival between the national groups of capitalists."

"The Bok peace plan cannot solve its contradiction. The end of war will come only with the establishment of the international soviet."

THE GOAL OF ROCKEFELLER WELFARE WORK

The Lesson of Pekin, Illinois.

What Will the Winter Bring?

When one analyzes the last official authentic reports on the economic conditions in the country he gets a chill. The winter ahead has nothing but wintery prospects for the working masses.

An analysis of the production figures should make every worker sit up and think—and act. According to the latest findings of the Federal Reserve Board the production of basic commodities and factory employment decreased in November.

Production in basic industries decreased about 2 per cent.

In December the production of pig iron fell 2 per cent.

The number of active cotton spindle hours is today about 700,000 less than a year ago and fell over 300,000 in November alone.

In terms of plant capacity and steel-sheet production, according to the Department of Commerce, in November stood at 87 per cent as against 77 per cent in October and 91 per cent a year ago.

The production of automobiles, pneumatic tires, southern and western pine lumber, face brick, and the number and expenditure fo building contracts awarded in 27 Northeastern States all decreased in November.

With the fall of production unemployment is increasing.

The shopcraft workers are being dismissed by the thousands.

The number of factory employees and the wekkly pay roll are falling in New York State.

An examination of the last reports compiled by the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia and the Department of Labor and Industry, Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is especially instructive.

These reports indicate that out of 681 plants in 39 industries of the great manufacturing State there was a decrease of 1.7 per cent in employment, a fall of 3.4 per cent in the total wages, and a drop of 1.7 per cent in the average wages in the month of November as compared with October.

In 46 separate industrial cases, wages showed 31 decreases.

And in the last Babson Report we find the following significant statement: "Unemployment may lower wages. Reports received from State and National Employment offices generally indicate an increasing demand for jobs and a diminishing number of jobs to be offered to applicants. Unemployment is developing. The outstanding industries are: Textiles, railroad shops and building in localities where the winter has set in."

The workers have not yet forgotten the serious crisis of 1290-21. Then millions of workers were walking the streets, out of work and out of hope. Starvation was the lot of many. The fierce open shop drive followed. Wages were slashed to the bone. The unions were smashed.

Now is the time for the workers to get together to organize and prepare against the misery of unemployment and the degradation of smashed labor organizations. The workers must help themselves. Organized power is the only language to employers, who have all the governmental and financial resources at their command, understand.

ENGLAND FACES RAIL STRIKE AND RULE BY LABOR

Complicated Situation Faces British Workers

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

LONDON.—The British Labor Party is on the anxious seat. With the King's address from the throne two days away the Labor Party has no idea of the attitude the Liberals will take toward their assuming office. Unless the Liberals are willing to back Labor, J. Ramsay MacDonald cannot become premier, and the threat of a possible railway strike looms on the horizon. All the London papers say that until the question of the railway strike is settled the Liberals and Conservatives should act together.

The National Union of railway engine drivers and firemen are said to have issued a secret call for a nationwide strike to take effect next Saturday.

Tuesday the King will deliver his address from the throne. Then Labor will move an amendment, probably on unemployment, and if the Liberals do not move a further amendment it will mean that they will have decided to give their support to Labor. Then the address from the throne will be debated, the debate probably lasting all of a week. When a vote is taken, if the Labor amendment is carried the Baldwin government will resign and the King will call on MacDonald to form a government.

Since the threat of a railway strike has been made, it is not known definitely, what attitude the Liberals will take toward a Labor government. Until after the address from the throne all bets are off. Until the threats of the railway strike came up the newspapers were becoming reconciled to the idea of a Labor government, especially in view of MacDonald's repeated statements that he had no intention of being "Red." But they do not feel sure enough of his exact hue to trust him with the railway situation.

The political dopesters say the following is the inside information on the proposed cabinet:

The state:

PRIME MINISTER AND FOREIGN SECRETARY — J. Ramsay MacDonald.
CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER—Philip Snowden.
MINISTER OF LABOR—Sydney Webb.
POSTMASTER GENERAL — Robert Ammon.
LORD OF THE PRIVY SEAL and leader in the house of commons—J. R. Clynes.
LORD CHANCELLOR—Lord Parmoor.
MINISTER OF EDUCATION — Lord Haldane.
SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA—C. P. Trevelyan.
SECRETARY OF STATE FOR HOME AFFAIRS—Arthur Henderson.
MINISTER OF WAR — J. H. Thomas.
FIRST LORD OF THE ADMIRALTY — J. C. Wedgwood.
ATTORNEY GENERAL—Patrick Hastings.
SOLICITOR GENERAL — Robert Blasser.
MINISTER OF HEALTH—Margaret Bondfield.
MINISTER OF MINES—Vernon Hartshorn
PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF TRADE — Frank Hodges.

Mr. Thomas, who is slated for the job of Minister of War, is the head of the National Union of Railway Men, who have settled with the employers on the terms the engineers threaten to strike against.

FOSTER MEETING STOPPED THIRD TIME IN NEWARK

Civil Liberties Union to Fight Ruling

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

NEWARK, N. J.—William Z. Foster was prevented from speaking at the Labor Lyceum here. This is the third time Foster has been prevented from speaking in this city. The American Civil Liberties Union under whose auspices Foster was to have spoken, said that it has by no means ended the fight for free speech in Newark.

Foster had barely mounted the platform when a police officer took him into custody and escorted him to police headquarters, where he remained for an hour arguing his case with the police captain.

Foster is on a speaking tour of the East and will speak in Bridgeport, Conn., and Paterson, N. J.

No Overtime in Russia

The railroad department for the protection of the workers, in Russia, reports that overtime had been regularly worked on the Moscow-Kazan line. One Altdorf, head of the commercial department of the line, was responsible for this. He was therefore brought before the People's Tribunal and condemned to one year's imprisonment.

Laugh at the KKK in the South Seas

BY W. FRANCIS AHERN
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press and "The Daily Worker")

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—The Ku Klux Klan has made its appearance openly at Sydney before a huge gathering of people who openly ridiculed and jeered at the comic opera behavior of the night-shirt brigade.

Those responsible for the launching of the Australian branch evidently hadn't the courage to openly proclaim it as the Ku Klux Klan, but named it the Anglo-Saxon Klan. However, they admitted it "was adapted to Australian conditions from the Ku Klux Klan of America," and that it would have an imperial wizard, kluds, kleagles; nightly meet at taverns, sing klodes, hold klanversations, and read extracts from the Kloran.

Senator Lynn Frazier has joined the Mayflower Society. He cruised down the Potomac on the president's yacht. Politics was taboo. It is reported that fertilizer was under discussion. The North Dakota senator is on his way to the political dung heap via the Mayflower route.

Hearst Commission Makes Very Favorable Report; Workers Party and F. S. R. Launch Big Drive

After seven years, since the Russian Revolution in 1917, the United States government is now face to face with the vital question of the recognition of and the opening of trade relations with Soviet Russia.

The effort of the Coolidge administration to divert the demand for recognition into an hysterical attack on the American Communist movement has failed.

The state department under Secretary Hughes and the department of justice under Attorney General Daugherty have not been able to prove their frame-up nor to make good on their forgeries.

The committee that will investigate the question of Russian Recognition will have a friend of Soviet Russia, Senator Borah, as its chairman. Simultaneous with the beginning of this probe the unofficial American Congressional Commission, sent to Soviet Russia by the Hearst newspapers, has made its report and declares for the opening of trade relations with the Russian nation.

While this struggle is going on in Washington, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has called for nation-wide mass meetings to be held February 3d, demanding Russian Recognition, while similar demonstrations are being planned by the Friends of Soviet Russia for January 27th.

The Friend of Soviet Russia, thru its local organizations over the country, has also launched a nation-wide petition to congress, demanding recognition.

The situation at Washington, with the whole Coolidge administration on the defensive on this question is quite different from the days when the Wilson regime brusquely ordered the deportation of Ludwig Martens, the Soviet representative in this country.

The most recent, and a very important development, in the rapid succession of big events in the Russian recognition campaign, is the report of the Hearst Commission, just made public.

This Commission, all of whom signed the report, was made up of:

1. United States Senator Edwin F. Ladd of North Dakota, formerly governor of that state, educator and agricultural expert and most prominent representative in office of the Non-Partisan League.

2. United States Senator William H. King of Utah, conservative Democratic leader in the Senate and member of the Senate judiciary committee, and formerly attorney general of his state, who doubted the validity of the Soviet form of government.

3. Representative James A. Frear, progressive Republican leader in the house, from Wisconsin, right-hand man of Senator LaFollette, and lawyer, who went to Russia with an open mind as to the Soviet government.

4. Albert A. Johnson, formerly director of the New York State Institute of Applied Agriculture, practical managing expert in solution of labor and farming problems, who personally knows the officials of the Soviet government, and whose last trip to Russia was his fourth.

Thoro investigation of the whole Russian question with the ban of secrecy will begin, Jan. 21, when the special sub-committee appointed by Borah will open hearings on Borah's resolution that the Senate advise the President to recognize Soviet Russia. Secretary of State Hughes will be the first witness called.

The Administration forces are entering this investigation unwillingly. In the departments of state, justice and commerce there are many divergent and conflicting views on the Russian problem. At first the standpat senators, Willis and Pepper, tried to have the Foreign Relations Committee prevent the holding of public hearings, but they were voted down.

GET 1,000 NEW 'DAILY' READERS IN FIRST WEEK

Work Hard to Get New Names on List

Thirty-six hundred dollars for subscriptions were taken in by the business office of The Daily Worker during the week ending Jan. 12th. Approximately one thousand new readers were put on the mailing list.

Moritz Loeb, Business Manager, expressed his enthusiasm in glowing terms. With such a record during the first week of the subscription drive the prospects for a big mailing list look exceedingly bright.

Fight Against Delay.

One of the chief difficulties confronting the business department is to get the names on the mailing list in time so that subscribers will not experience delay in getting their papers. Comrade Loeb wishes our subscribers and subscription hustlers to take the present rush in the office into consideration before kicking about a possible delay.

With the appearance of the first regular issue of The Daily Worker the drive to send its circulation soaring into hundreds of thousands begins in real earnest. Members of the Workers Party, the Trade Union Educational League, progressive labor unions and other working class organizations are determined that the first Communist daily in the English language will establish a new circulation record for labor papers in this country.

Get Support of Masses.

The Daily Worker will be the leader of the workers in their struggles against the capitalists. It will support them through thick and thin. It is the workers own paper; it does not pretend to be anything else. It will be born in the dens of the capitalist class. Their mouthpieces have already greeted it with hostile statements.

The National Civic Federation and the Journal of Commerce condemn it as an organ of a class. The Daily Worker glories in the charge. It is the organ of a class, the only class that contributes anything to society, the working class. As the capitalist press speaks for capital so will The Daily Worker voice the demands of labor.

High Spots of the Hearst Commission's Report

"It is not improper to remark that many foolish, stupid and inaccurate stories appear in American and European newspapers, with reference to conditions in Russia. Indeed, many of these emanations are absolutely false and seem to have been coined by persons to whom veracity is an utter stranger and mendacity a pre-eminent qualification."

"During this entire period the members of the Party travelled without mishap, upon regular schedules, and with the utmost freedom, and, so far as they were able to determine, free from espionage."

"... There is an increase in the exports and in the imports, the aggregate for the year 1923 being approximately $100,000. The heavy industries, owned and controlled by the State, while still languishing and with greatly reduced production from the pre-war output, show signs of revival and will yield in 1923 an increase over the production of 1922."

"Twenty nations have entered into trade relations or diplomatic relations with the Soviet Government."

"In view of these trade conditions, members of the party believe that a TRADE AGREEMENT between the United States and Russia would be of importance to the Russian people and increase the affection which they feel towards this Republic. . . It would facilitate trade and commerce and promote amity between their respective peoples."

WINITSKY FREED AFTER LONG WAR IN N. Y. COURTS

Governor Smith Ends Case With Pardon

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Benjamin Gitlow, former member of the Executive Committee of the New York Jewish Communist Federation, was granted a pardon today by Governor Alfred E. Smith, following the Appellate Court of New York State had upheld his conviction on a charge of criminal anarchy.

Harry Winitsky was convicted in the spring of 1920 on the charge of violating the Criminal Anarchy Act of the State of New York. He was charged with having organized and being a member of the Communist Party of America, during the fall of 1919, and sentenced to serve from five to ten years in New York State prison.

Pending Since 1922.

After two years in Sing Sing, Auburn and Comstock prisons, the New York State, Winitsky was finally granted bail pending appeal to the higher course in the spring of 1922. The case has been pending in the Appellate Division since that time.

Upon taking office at the beginning of 1923, Governor Smith pardoned all of the Communists charged with Criminal Anarchy in New York State prison, but this pardon did not extend to the cases of Harry Winitsky and Benjamin Gitlow, altho pardons could have been secured in these cases if the court proceedings had been dropped. The defendants, however, with the concurrence of the National Defense Committee decided to further test the Criminal Anarchy law in the courts before accepting pardon.

The Winitsky case was decided about two weeks ago and the sentence affirmed, and Governor Smith has now extended a pardon to him as in all the other Criminal Anarchy cases.

The case of Benjamin Gitlow is now pending in the United States Supreme Court, where a decision is expected within the next few weeks.

Gitlow Case Important.

The Gitlow case is of national importance in that there is involved in it an issue which will test every Criminal Anarchy and Criminal Syndicalism law on the statute books of this country. The defense contends in this case that to punish the utterances of doctrines or belief without any relationship to the circumstances or the possibilities of some one acting upon the utterances, is unconstitutional. This contention is along the lines of the decisions of the Supreme Court in all cases during the war period, the court having held that unless there was imminent danger of some overact resulting from the utterances of a doctrine, that such doctrine was not punishable.

If the court follows its own decisions, it will have to declare the New York Criminal Anarchy law unconstitutional and with it some other laws of a similar character. That the Supreme Court is pondering what to do about the Gitlow case is indicated by the fact that the case was heard in April of last year, and after arguments and briefs were submitted, the court restored it to the calendar and asked for new arguments which were submitted in November of this

Borah Will Give U.S. Senate Letters Showing That Hughes Has No Soviet Plot Facts

(Special Washington Correspondence to "The Daily Worker")

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Department of Justice counsels that it is the sworn duty of every citizen to help suppress the wild and woolly charges of conspiracy against the Soviet government of Russia, and to cooperate with the United States government and hoist the red flag over the White House, if by that means it is a fact that the alleged conspiracy is proved, charged Senator Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, today.

The members of the anti-Russian section of the administration's cabinet are set for the public hearing on Senator Borah's resolution demanding that the state department submit to the senate foreign relations committee all documents relating to the alleged plot.

Borah has never been confronted with such a united front as confronted public, senate and house that came to the aid of the Oil Trust, Charles Evans Hughes, should rise the exposure of his chicanery without even a scrap of paper to cover his political nakedness.

The gross receipts of radical bookstores throughout the country have suddenly mounted as the result of the army of government agents which has been turned loose under Hughes' order to bring in some evidence, dead or alive, that would save him from landing on the vaudeville stage as the biggest political joke of the decade.

But even Department of Justice agents are obliged to laugh at the "raising the red flag over the White House" letter out of court.

Ex-Federal Agent Robert J. Brandman of New York, once an active stool pigeon in the ranks of the Communist Party, admitted in a statement published in the New York World of Jan. 6th, that "The idea of the Communist Party of America engaging in shooting practice and 'raising the Red flag over the White House' by armed insurrection is a farce."

The Department of Justice, thru John W. H. Crim, Assistant Attorney General gave the Department's official position on the matter in letters issued in reply to inquiries as to why the government took no action against violation of the Logan Act and the criminal code by the many alleged perpetrators of criminal correspondence with the governments of Russia.

The Evidence Is Lacking

One of the letters was written by Everett P. Wheeler, New York lawyer and student of international affairs who wrote an article contending that there was ample law to reach these persons. Every W. Burnstead, secretary of the Massachusetts Civic Alliance, also asked the department why the government did not act. In reply, Mr. Crim explained that the power of the law was ample to reach such individuals. All that was needed was the individuals. In other words, Mr. Crim's reply to his questioners was the challenge "Bring on your individuals."

Here Are the Letters.

The following letters to Mr. Burnstead and to Mr. Wheeler, are now in the possession of Senator Borah for use in the coming foreign relations committee investigation:

"Department of Justice,
"Washington, D. C., Nov. 13, 1923.

"Eben W. Burnstead, secretary, Massachusetts Civic alliance, Box 1335, Boston, Mass.

"Sir: I have your letter of November 2, with respect to the enforcement of the Logan act. There has been a great deal of 'slush' coming to my attention with reference to this act, but not one single person has submitted a concrete statement of facts, to have I in any way be able to get a statement of facts to show violation of the Logan act. If you have the data in your possession which indicates a violation of the Logan act, please forward it to this department, or, better, take it to the United States attorney at Boston.

"Respectfully,
"For the Attorney General,
"JOHN W. H. CRIM.
"Assistant Attorney General."

Wheeler Asked for Facts.

The letter to Mr. Wheeler reads:

"Department of Justice,
"Washington, D. C., Dec. 4, 1923.

"Everett P. Wheeler, Esq., 27 William Street, New York City.

"Sir: I have your letter of November 30 inclosing a copy of your article reprinted from The American Journal of International Law and note the data in your possession with respect to the interpretation of section 5 of the United States criminal code. Both your letter and your article are interesting, but what this department needs, and what it has never had, is some evidence to act on. No names of American citizens alleged to have offended this section have been submitted to this department. No verbal or written correspondence has been submitted to this department. No facts constituting intercourse have been submitted to this department.

"If you will submit detailed evidence giving the names of the citizens, the correspondence or intercourse, the message or conduct of the foreign government, the dispute in controversy, which are necessary to be pleaded in an indictment this department will be, as it always has been, glad to take appropriate action.

"All that it has ever had from your association is letters as to the general character of your letter of November 30, which amount to no more than academic discussion of section 5 of the criminal code. In such letter you state:

"'I know that you have under consideration the question as to whether the act of Congress, section 5, of the criminal code applies to private correspondence with a foreign government which has not been recognized by the United States.'

Society Can't Fail, to Stand Up

"Without submitting one single fact showing any criminal correspondence, you then proceed to discuss a number of cases with which you feel throw light on an interpretation of this law. The fairly definite complaint was made to this department before I came here and the Attorney General held that the facts indicated did not constitute an offense.

"Your society can render a very much greater service if it will submit detailed facts as to the conduct of definite individuals, rather than general discussions of whether or not the law ought to be enforced. Of course the law should be enforced, but it can not be enforced without knowing at least the name of some one to prosecute. Respectfully,

(Signed) "JOHN W. H. CRIM,
"Assistant Attorney General."

KU KLUXERS GOIN RULE IN HERRIN IS UNCHALLENGED

Klan Private Detective Leads Raiders.

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

HERRIN, Ill., Jan. 2.—The Ku Klux Klan rules Williamson County. Open defiance of violence. Only the presence of State troops called in by the entire Federation of Labor, and the Illinois Federation of Labor, under the direction of the Treasury Department have given the lead to the Klan under the direction of which the raids on bootlegged were carried out.

Internal Revenue Agents in Herrin. Not since the bombing days of May, 1922, when the make in the strip mine precipitated a riot was this county plunged into such fear as now. Then the dominators of race hatred and religious discord plunged this county into anarchy.

The smoke from burning cottages reminds one of the early days of Fascist activity in Italy. Before the black shirt brigade marched on Rome. Thoughtful people here see in this Ku Klux Klan, Prohibition, anti-foreign and anti-labor combination the advance guard of Fascism in America.

Klan Flouts Law.

The Ku Klux Klan refuses to disarm, yet William J. Burns does not ask for a federal appropriation to save the government. Law and order is flouted by the leaders of the Invisible Empire, yet they dare do not open their doors for the lawbreakers.

Sam Stearns, exalted Cyclop of the Klan, is in open conflict with Sheriff Galligan, elected by the miners of Williamson County after the Herrin riot. The Sheriff represents "law and order." Assistant General Black, who came under the fire of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce because of his favorable attitude toward the Herrin miners after the affair of his at the strip mine, is here in charge of the militia. He arrived at the request of Sheriff Galligan. The Ku Klux Klan and the prohibition agents who are in league with the Klan want to get rid of Black and his forces. The Sheriff is willing that the latter should leave provided the Klan chief agrees to disarm his army.

Majority of Arms Rule.

This, Sterns refuses to do believing that the faction that can flash the greatest number of artillery pieces stands the best chance of victory in a democratic country. A peace conference between the Klan chief and the Sheriff resulted in a draw. Both sides talked with their fingers on the triggers of their guns.

Sheriff Galligan charges the federal authorities and their Klan allies with having abused women and children in making the raids and also with having looted the homes of citizens. The Klan denies of course. Glenn Young, private detective for the Klan, is also leader of the prohibition raiding forces.

The sixth house to go up in smoke during the week was a roadhouse situated between Marion and Herrin. Most of those arrested in the raids are foreigners. The dictatorship of the Klan is believed by some to be a sequel to the Herrin affair and the anti-union elements in combination with the religious maniacs and mine owners who have not forgiven the union miners for their former victory.

Cold Snap Drives Poor Into the Open to Hunt for Food, Shelter

The cold grip of the winter is tightening here Chicago and the middle west.

While the city's business men and their wives were being inconvenienced by a taxi shortage and forced to ride on the elevated and surface cars, the city's poor were suffering from lack of food, fuel and proper clothing.

Social settlements all over the town were appealed to by the poor in need of aid. From the settlements they were referred to various charitable agencies. The United Charities of Chicago reported that all their branches were busy, but that nothing much could be done for the poor. The county agents who receive the bulk of the requests for coal and shoes for poor children, refuse to leave out aid "without stopping to investigate if the people who asked it were really in need."

* * * *

While the very poor were frankly asking for charity the less poor were asking for jobs. Both Chicago Sunday papers carried a record number of "Situations Wanted" ads. Ads such as the following bid the tragedy of the unemployed:

SITUATION WANTED — Middle aged man, business and legal experience, clerical duties, all around workers; references; living expense basis.

West Madison Street, the wandering ground of the homeless jobseeker, was the scene of keen suffering. The municipal lodging house and police stations in the district were filled with "boes" who did not have the price of a bed.

"Society" was appealed to in the society columns of the Sunday papers to aid the Illinois Children's Home and Aid Society. Amid the accounts of weddings and balls, teas and dinner parties, the society editors told of the work done by this charity who described as "appealing and interesting."

More Babies Put to Work.

NEW YORK — Children two and three years of age are put to work by parents who take work to their homes. The idea that home work is the mainstay of wages is not borne out by the facts. Conditions among home workers are as bad today as they were 10 or 15 years ago. Goods that later sell for high prices in the city's best stores are worked on in homes for starvation wages. No home workers make more than $500 a year in spite of the fact that whole families assist in the work. People suffering from all sorts of diseases do home work.

These facts were testified to before the New York Child Welfare Commission during a hearing held in City Hall. The Commission was considering recommendations for legislation to abolish home industries.

AMALGAMATION OF SHOE WORKERS BRINGING UNITY

Consolidation Results in Biggest Shoe Union

BY FEDERATED PRESS

HAVERHILL, Mass.—The consolidation of the Shoe Workers' Protective union and the United Shoe Workers of America make the S. W. P. U. the largest shoe workers organization in the country. A committee is also negotiating with the Amalgamated Shoe Workers of America and it is expected that they will come in, in the very near future.

The S. W. P. U. with general offices at Haverhill and organizations in Boston, Lynn, Beverly, Wakefield, and Marblehead, Mass., and Williamsport, N. Y., has about 27,000 members. The U. S. W. of A. has locals in Rochester, N. Y., St. Louis, Lynn, Newburyport, and other Shoe manufacturing cities as well as Chicago, Cincinnati, San Francisco and many smaller places.

In 1919 the executive council of the S. W. P. U. created a committee for the purpose of finding a method whereby shoe workers could be united, and after meeting representatives of other bodies a conference of New England shoe workers was established, sponsored by the latters' union of Lynn, a local of the U. S. W. of A. This conference broke down after a few months, due to different ideas as to what kind of organization should be established. Then a second conference was instituted by the National Cutters' council. But at the October, 1921, convention a constitution was adopted declaring for a policy of arbitration and conciliation and the S. W. P. U. and some locals of the U. S. W. of A. would not accept it so that the effort at that time proved a failure.

The S. W. P. U. is the oldest shoe workers' organization in the country, having been established by the turn shoe-workers about 1888. In 1916 the cutters were admitted to membership and from that time until 1919 the various parts of the industry were organizing in Haverhill and joining the S. W. P. U. In 1919 the United Shoe Workers of Haverhill, a small organization of the making room employes, joined. Some of the Haverhill factories are controlled by the Boot and Shoe Workers' union, A. F. of L.

The S. W. P. U. has also organized the three classes of workers who make the wooden heels. It also has the workers who make the wood and paper boxes in which the shoes are packed as well as the teamsters and lumpers who handle the lumber out of which the heels and boxes are made.

The shoe workers are much elated over the merger.

Oppose Loans to Germany.

The Cheyenne Valley Central Labor Union of Cannonsburg, Pa., has passed a resolution protesting against American interference in European affairs. The resolution declares that loans made by the United States Government to Germany will merely be the preliminary step to American interference in German internal affairs.

JOLIET WORKERS HEAR THE LABOR PARTY DISCUSSED

Manley and Rodriguez Give Views to Council

Joseph Manley, for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, and William R. Rodriguez for the Illinois Farmer-Labor Party, were invited to speak before the Central Trades and Labor Council of Will County, at Joliet, Ill., at its last meeting.

The meeting was a crowded and successful one. Manley opened up by presenting the case for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in a comprehensive and non-controversial manner. He cited fact after fact in proof of the steady growth on a national scale of the Federated Party.

Rodriguez followed, with a rambling statement couched in high brow, legal terms on the status of the Illinois Farmer-Labor Party. He took occasion to air his differences with John Fitzpatrick, Jay Brown and Robert M. Buck on the calling of the July 3rd convention. His whole talk was a repetition of the charges against the Federated and the Workers Party as agents of Moscow.

Rodriguez displayed a woeful lack of knowledge of the needs of a class party of the workers and farmers when he stated: "South Dakota and Washington as a political force in the country are a joke." He then admitted that the farmers of the west were more radical than many workers in the east, but again said that their movement was of little consequence as compared to the great industrial centers to be found in Illinois.

Following his tirade a delegate asked him about his statement that the Illinois Federation of Labor backs the Farmer-Labor Party. Rodriguez sidestepped the answer but the delegate supplied it by saying: "that the action of the Decatur convention, in endowing the Gompers non-partisan political policy, was a virtual repudiation of the Farmer-Labor Party."

This meeting was one of the most successful ever held in Joliet, and will mark the beginning of a real interest in the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

WHO IS YOUR DELEGATE?

The miners of the entire country have, by this time, elected their delegates to the Indianapolis convention of the United Mine Workers of America, Jan. 22, and now that you know who is going to represent you, you should find out where he stands on the various issues that will come up for consideration. There will be the customary battles, of course, but the question is, where does he stand on such issues as will be brought in by the militant miners under the leadership of the Progressives, to-wit:

Reinstatements of Alex Howat and the Kansas Miners.

Reinstatement of Jim McLachlan and the restoration of autonomy to Dist. No. 24.

Nationalization of the coal mines.

Establishment of the Labor Party.

Election of organizers by the membership. Six-hour day and five-day week.

Alliance with the railroad workers.

Organization of the unorganized fields.

Industrial unionism and amalgamation.

Nullification of the pay-roll votes in conventions.

Recognition of Soviet Russia.

International affiliation with world labor movement.

Honest and efficient leadership.

These are 13 definite issues that must be thrashed out, and each and every one is of vital importance to, not only the miners, but also to the entire labor movement. Make it your business to see the one who has been elected as delegate from your local union, and ask him where he stands on these questions. Take it up in the next meeting of your local union and see to it that your delegate is instructed to support these issues and the Progressive Program in its entirety.

BLANKENSTEIN GREETS DAILY WORKER FROM PENNSYLVANIA PRISON

If "The Daily Worker" started without greetings from the inside of a prison it would hardly be complete. Here is a greeting from Israel Blankenstein, who has been in for several years and unless the workers get him out will stay there a few more. The $3 which Comrade Blankenstein sends should come others, who are much more fortunate, to action. Three dollars from a prisoner is a real sacrifice. Blankenstein writes:

Dear Comrades: Congratulations on the appearance of The Daily Worker. Believe me, the event is a source of joy to me, temporarily disabled as I am. With the W. P. membership, I am proud of this accomplishment. The appearance of the Call and the Milwaukee Leader was made possible only after six years of effort. The Daily Worker is launched scarcely six months after the issuance of the call for funds. And the one hundred thousand dollars were subscribed not by lawyers and realtors, nor from union treasuries, but by men and women of the shops, factories and mines.

The Daily Worker has a glorious mission to perform—to unite, cement, to point the way to the workers of America. But it will have to fight against tremendous odds and it will be a long time at best before it will become self-sustaining. I, therefore, Comrade Manager, move that you start immediately "The Daily Worker Sustaining Fund" and I second the motion with three dollars (which you will send under separate cover as required by the rules of this prison). I have no doubt that the devotion and determination of the militants which made possible the launching of The Daily will assure its continued existence. THE DAILY WORKER shall live and grow.

Faithfully for the cause of the Working Class,
ISRAEL BLANKENSTEIN.

BANKERS' GRIP TIGHTENS ON U. S. FARMERS

States in Central, West Scene of Suffering

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The United States Department of Agriculture has just completed a special inquiry into the conditions of the farm population in the 15 corn and wheat producing states. The survey shows that more than 814% of the owner farmers in 18 corn and wheat producing states lost their farms with or without legal process between 1920 and the spring of 1925. Besides, more than 15% of the owners were in fact temporarily insolvent but held on through the leniency of their creditors.

The investigation shows that in this area, the upper Mississippi valley, 2800 owner farmers lost their farms through foreclosures or bankruptcy; 3,000 lost their farms without legal process, and 16,400 farmers held on through the leniency of their creditors.

At Creditors' Mercy

Applying the percentage of losses obtained in this inquiry, to the 1920 census figures for owners and tenants in the states covered, it is estimated that out of a total of 2,289,000 owners and tenant farmers more than 108,000 lost their farms or their property through foreclosure or bankruptcy; over 182,000 lost their property without legal proceedings, and nearly 373,000 retained their property merely through the leniency of creditors.

The loss of farms by owners was relatively more numerous in Montana, North Dakota, Colorado, and South Dakota. In the East North Central States, the farmers were not so hard hit. Losses of property by tenants were also relatively more numerous in the western states.

Russians Want to Learn.

MOSCOW.—The workers of Moscow wants to learn foreign languages. There has been a great demand for instruction in German, English, and French, that a special commission was appointed in November to formulate plans to meet the need.

The commission has been investigating among workers' clubs and educational circles, and is ready to report to a conference of various bodies, such as the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions, the Russian Communist Party, the People's Commissariat for Education.

Milk Farmers' United Front with the City Workers Is Held To Be Significant Development

Frank Purdy, official spokesman for the Milk Producers of Lake County, an organization representing approximately 15,000 milk farmers in an interview given to The Daily Worker declares that the gigantic movement of the milk farmers to unite with the consumers, and with the organized workers of Chicago is one of the most significant movements of our time.

That the milk farmers have reached between rural and city labor are fast disappearing before the bitter blows of bewildered farmers is the body who follows the rapid growth of this tendency toward a farmer-labor alliance against the capitalists who fatten on the sweat of the producers.

Farmers' Importunate Cryers

When O. E. Stanley, president of the Lake County Central Labor Union, addressed the Chicago Federation of Labor, Jan. 6, with a message from the milk farmers requesting permission to organize a picket and unite with the milk handlers' organizations, one could not help but think up this incident with the farmer rebellion in the great northwest against the capitalist political parties, the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in Chicago on July 3rd and the inspiration it gave to this movement.

The importance of the farmer as a factor in the American revolutionary movement is growing daily. His economic deterioration is proceeding at a pace that is nothing less than startling. It is now reaching the point where the farmers implore the bankers to take their farms and let them work on them for wages.

The present milk strike is more significant than a mere struggle between the distributors and the producers. Its resemblance to a labor union struggle is so striking that even the terminology is similar.

You hear such words as "solidarity," "united front," "picketing," fall from the lips of the farmer strike leaders. The industrial worker fights an attempt on the part of the boss to reduce his wages or the price at which he sells his labor power. The milk farmer produces milk. It is his means of making a living. He must sell it a certain price in order to make a living; that is, pay all the expenses involved in producing the milk and leave something over to feed, clothe and shelter himself and his dependants.

Who Gets the Profits?

And just like the industrial boss, the distributors who sell milk to the city dwellers seek to cut down the price to the producers to as low a level as possible. The lower he cut-s it, the higher his profits mount. But a reduction in price to the producer is not passed along to the consumer. No, it is passed along to the distributor in more profits which means more automobiles, pleasure yachts and other luxuries. If the interests of the working farmers and the city workers are not indentical they are so close to being so that there is no fun in it—for the farmer. The city worker sells his labor power to a boss and when he finds no boss he faces starvation. The working farmer has a piece of land to play with. He sells his product to the handler, but the distributor controls the price of the product and the farmer is left holding the bag, which empty.

That is the situation that is basally correct. The milk farmers were receiving $4.70 per hundred pounds for their milk until 1920. Since then they have been compelled to accept a cut of $2 per unit bringing the price down to $2.70 a hundred pounds. But you say "surely this is where the consumer gets his." Not in the least. Every time the cutthroat raised a quart of milk to his lips it cost him 14 cents the same price he paid when the farmer was getting $4.70 instead of $2.70. The cost of living went up since for the milk profiteers, as they held more profits. What better justification do they need in capitalist society? If you think that farmers and workers have any rights you had better buy another pipe, you are dreaming.

21 Per Cent Profit.

And now about profits. Secretary Rushkewicz of the City Cost of Living Committee, stated that as a result of his committees investigation they arrived at the conclusion that the distributors now charging 14 cents a quart for milk could sell the lactal fluid for 13 cents and STILL MAKE A 21 PER CENT PROFIT.

Chicago distributors are a particularly greedy aggregation of profiteers. The following table published by the Federated Press shows how the price paid to the producers by distributors in other large American cities and the price to the consumer, compared with Chicago:

	Producers' price per 100 lbs.	Retail price per quart
San Francisco	$3.11	$0.14
Denver	2.60	13
Washington	3.72	13
Louisville	2.87	13
Baltimore	3.42	13
Boston	3.43	13½
Detroit	3.00	13
St. Paul	2.90	12
St. Louis	3.00	13
New York	3.21	14
Milwaukee	3.00	11
Chicago	2.76	14

The cost to the farmer of producing the milk, according to the Pearson formula, amounts to $2.86 a hundred pounds allowing the farmer only 40 cents an hour for his work. This formula was accepted by the federal milk commission of which the farmers who are now insisting on a price of $2.60 a hundred were members. It is recognized as a correct basis of price determination by the U. S. government as well as by agricultural colleges.

The distributing corporations already get the lion's share of the consumer's dollar. Out of every 14 cents paid by a mother for a quart of milk, Bowman & Co., or any of the other dealers, gets 7.3 cents while the farmer only gets 2.9 cents. Freight charges absorb the remaining four-fifths of a cent.

Secy. Joseph Rushkewics of the Chicago high cost of living committee says that the dealer's profits amounts to at least 3½ cents a quart after all costs in the way of bottling and distribution have been paid.

In other words milk dealers are making approximately $40,000 a day off the 1,120,000 quarts distributed to the people of Chicago. This would mean annual profits running to over $14,500,000.

The Executive Board of the Chicago Federation of Labor in its session of Jan. 9, voted to recommend the affiliation of the Lake County farmers to the American Federation of Labor. The distributors express optimism as to the result and the milk farmers express determination to continue the fight until victory rests on their banners. The milk barons are sending out inspired statements to the press to the effect that an agreement is about to be effected but as they stand pat on their proposal for a reduction from $2.70 to $2.60 per hundred pounds and the farmers stand pat for the current rate, no peace is in sight until one side or the other quits. And it look as if the farmers are not quitters.

U. S. DREYFUS CASE IN TRIAL OF CAPT. HIBBEN

Dangerous Boomerang Likened from Attack

BY FREDERICK KUH

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press and The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—The government's attempt to expel Capt. Paxton Hibben, Chinese Reserve Corps, from the army on charges of being a dangerous subversive character, Hibben is undergoing trial by special board of officers on charges of advocating a doctrine toward Russia different from the official views of the state department.

Photo disclosed at the first hearings at Governor's Island, New York, under the presidency of General Summerall, show that the records and files of the U. S. military secret service are being abused for private propaganda purposes. Official secrets of the military intelligence department are being placed at the disposition of ordinary civilians who have an anti-Russian axe to grind. This is causing bitter indignation.

Liberalism Only Crime.

Hibben's affair threatens to rival the historic Dreyfus scandal, which was originally intended to ruin an innocent officer and ended by discrediting the French government and French statesmen.

Because of his liberal views, fellow army officers testify, his mail was regularly opened and read by army spies. When he served with the Near East Relief in Armenia and Russia and later came here to beg congress to appropriate funds for famine relief in Russia he was looked on as a dangerous man.

In a statement to The Federated Press, Hibben contended that holding a commission in the Reserve Corps does not deprive the officer of his right as an American citizen to disagree with the policy of the administration or criticise cabinet officers other than the secretary of war. In reply to one of the charges levelled against him, namely that he had placed a wreath upon the grave of John Reed, American journalist and Communist, Hibben said he and Reed had been college friends and had worked together at war correspondents. That act, he said, was purely personal.

Hibben Visited Russia.

In 1922, Hibben visited Russia as a member of an unofficial commission of five, and compiled a report, describing the gradual economic revival of Russia, the growing strength of the soviet regime, and recommending measures of American relief for the famine stricken areas. Herbert Hoover took exception to Hibben's findings, because Hoover was determined to retain control of all American relief and to dictate what American opinion towards Russia should be. Two days after Hibben's release from the Boston Transcript published a violent attack on him in the course of its "anti-red revelations."

Striking enough, the "disclosures" made at the recent session of the board of officers, now deciding whether Hibben should be ousted from the army, coincide in every vital detail with the material published in the Transcript.

I am sure they will want to be part owners of it. The drive for the operating fund for The Daily is the greatest drive conducted by our party and must make it a success," Ballam said in his final appeal.

THE PARTY AT WORK

Membership Is Informed on Big Problems Confronting the Party

Detailed information on the immediate political struggles confronting the Workers Party have been sent to the party membership in a letter directed to all party branches by the party's executive secretary, C. E. Ruthenberg.

The work outlined will be carried on under the direction of the City Central Committees and District Organizations where such exist. The letter covers such questions as the Recognition of Soviet Russia, the campaign for the Protection of the Foreign-Born, the Labor Party Campaign and the Membership Drive. It is as follows:

* * * *

RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA.

The discussion in the Senate of the United States and in the capitalist press of the address of Secretary of State Hughes on Soviet Russia and the Communist International has aroused general interest in the question of Recognition of Soviet Russia.

The Central Executive Committee of the Party has determined to take advantage of this situation to build up favorable sentiment for Soviet Russia and as a means of doing this, all CCCs of the Party are directed to arrange public meetings on Sunday, February 3rd, which are to be devoted to the question of RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA meetings. A Committee should be elected by each Party organization at once for the arrangement of such a meeting. The hall should be secured and the National Office notified and a speaker will be assigned immediately.

The advertising for these meetings should contain the slogans RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA and THE WORKERS PARTY ANSWERS SECRETARY OF STATE HUGHES.

It should be possible for our Party to arrange at least fifty mass meetings on Feb. 3, and fifty mass meetings on a single day on this issue will be a triumph for our organization and will strengthen the support for RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA. Prompt action is required for this work and must be undertaken. The meetings should be well advertised both thru leaflets and in announcements in the local newspapers.

Campaign for Protection of Foreign Born

The Third National Convention of the Party reaffirmed the declaration of the Second National Convention, pledging the Party to carry on a campaign for the protection of foreign-born workers against exception laws. This campaign becomes of immediate importance in view of the fact that President Coolidge recommended in his message to Congress that all foreign-born workers be registered and legislation to this effect is now pending in Congress. There is also pending legislation which proposes that immigration to the United States in the future shall be on a contract basis; that is, that workers shall be brought from European countries under contract to work in certain industries.

Both of these proposed laws represent a great danger to the whole working class movement of this country, native born and foreign born and it should be possible to rally wide masses of workers in protest against these laws.

To organize the opposition against these laws, the Party has decided to initiate organization of Councils for the Protection of Foreign-Born Workers. The method of procedure in organizing these councils locally should be as follows:

A. The Local Party organization should bring into existence a temporary committee representing the trade union movements, foreign-born organizations, and workers' political organizations. This committee should send out a call for a conference to organize the opposition against the exception laws above described. All trade unions, fraternal organizations, and organizations of foreign-born of every kind, and workers' political parties should be invited to send delegates to this conference. At the conference a representative Executive Committee should be elected which will conduct the work of fighting these laws thru mass meetings, circularization of literature, resolutions, etc.

B. At the same time that this temporary committee is organized and proceeds with its work, each Federation of the Party represented in a given city should organize at once a conference of all organizations of their language group in their city. That is, the Russian, German, Jewish Party Branch or Party Branch of any other language section should surround itself with all the existing organizations of that language group in a language section of the local COUNCIL FOR PROTECTION OF THE FOREIGN-BORN. The language section thus organized should then send delegates to the general city conference.

These will be sent to City Central Committees and District Organizers with this letter a proposed manifesto to be issued by the temporary committee in your city as the basis of organization of the local council for protection of foreign-born workers. This manifesto should be mailed to the various organizations invited to participate and printed in leaflet form for general distribution among the workers of your city.

The campaign for protection of foreign-born workers offers a great opportunity to build up a mass movement, but in order to take advantage of this opportunity we must act quickly, as the legislation may come before Congress any day for adoption. The whole Party strength must be thrown into this campaign immediately if we are to make a success of it.

Our Labor Party Campaign

The Third National Convention of the Party approved of the work of the Central Executive Committee during the previous year in aiding to bring into existence a Farmer-Labor Party in this country and specifically approved the July 3rd conventions and the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

The immediate task before our Party, to carry further the Labor Party Campaign, is of a two-fold character. It is to strengthen the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and to build up the Party membership.

A. According to the decision of the National Convention, our Party must assist the Federated Farmer-Labor Party in the work of organizing itself as a real political party. This means that in every place where a branch of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party can be built up without dividing the workers who are for a Farmer-Labor Party, we should immediately initiate a movement for the organization of such a branch. It means further that our Party membership should, in all organizations of which they are members, raise the question of affiliation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and secure affiliation or endorsement of that Party by the respective organizations to which they belong. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party has already secured the affiliation of close to 200,000 workers. If our Party throws itself aggressively into the work of strengthening the Federated Farmer-Labor Party we can quickly double the number of affiliated workers, and this is one of the chief immediate tasks of our organization.

B. The Federated Farmer-Labor Party has united with the Farmer-Labor Parties of Minnesota, South Dakota, Washington and other organizations in calling a National Convention on May 30th at St Paul Minnesota, for the purpose of nominating candidates for President and Vice-President and adopting a national platform. This Convention will be one of the most important events in the history of the labor movement in this country. Estimates of delegates likely to attend this Convention range from 1500 to two or three thousand. However, the Convention will not only have representation from workers' organizations and organizations of exploited farmers, but there are likely to come to the Convention representatives of middle class groups, such as small business men, professional men, etc. The question whether the Convention will represent the interests of the exploited farmers and industrial workers will depend upon the strength of the group in the Convention. Our Party stands for a class farmer-labor party and not for a Third Party dominated by the petty bourgeoisie. We must help to carry on the work which will bring to the St. workers' and farmers' organizations in such numbers that their ideas will be written into the decisions of this convention.

The call for the May 30th convention will not be issued until February but we can now begin our work of propaganda to build up favorable sentiment for this Convention. While the question of election of delegates should not be raised until the call is actually out, we should create interest in the Convention by raising the question, emphasizing the need of a class Farmer-Labor Party and thus building up sentiment favorable to its organization.

The Campaign for the May 30th Convention also offers the most favorable situation for the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

The Farmer-Labor Voice

Beginning with the month of January, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party will issue a monthly paper each month under the name "The Farmer-Labor Voice." Our Party has transferred to the Federated Farmer-Labor Party the "Voice of Labor" and with the change of name as indicated above this paper will become the property of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and its official organ. The "Farmer-Labor Voice" will be the medium to carry on propaganda and organization work for the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and in support of the May 30th Convention.

The Party units and Party members are urged to give the organ of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party their support by subscribing for it and circulating it among the workers and farmers everywhere.

Membership Drive

While the above are the immediate political tasks of our Party, there is one campaign which must not be overlooked in taking up this work, and that is the drive to increase our Party membership. With the publication of the Daily we will have a new instrument thru which to carry on this campaign.

If our Party is to fulfill its great task we must add to our Party membership. At the Convention, the Central Executive Committee reported that the figures gathered showed 25,000 members on our Party rolls, altho per capita payments have not reached that amount. Each branch must see to it that every member pays dues regularly, and every branch must organize itself to add to its membership. In the letter received from the Communist International, the C. E. C. of our Party was congratulated on having initiated the drive for new membership and the Communist International emphasized the need of building the Party organization for the great work ahead of us.

The Membership drive must be one of the first tasks of every Party unit. New ways and means of bringing members into the Party must be found. The Communist International said that every member of the Party should at least bring one new member into the Party. If we could achieve that goal we would immediately double our Party membership. We must gain at least ten thousand new members and the drive for new members must go along from month to month alongside of the political campaigns of our Party.

Comrades: The Third National Convention of the Party has prepared the way for new achievements for our Party organization. The work outlined above constitutes the first task of the new year to strengthen our influence and build up our Party organization. The whole Party must immediately mobilize its strength for these campaigns and carry them forward successfully.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. RUTHENBURG,
Executive Secretary

NOTICE TO ALL PARTY UNITS

All Party units are again reminded of the fact that the Industrial Registration Blanks are to be returned to the National Office without any further delay. Only one third of the branches have so far carried out the instructions of the Central Executive Committee which were since approved by the National Convention of the Party. The City Central Committees which have not yet reported to the National Office the names and addresses of their Cite Industrial Organizers must do so immediately.

DEPENDENCY NO MONOPOLY OF AGED.

Cold weather in Chicago, revealed a particularly significant feature of the decadence of American capitalism. Whereas heretofore the majority of the inmates of the Municipal bunking houses were old men, this year found most of them under 35, and a great number in the very prime of youth.

To see able-bodied young men reduced to the lowest position of degradation moved even certain city job holders to a burst of protest and a warning was issued to stay away from Chicago. "No more jobs; unemployment is increasing."

What is the reason for the decline in age of the down-and-out proletarians? The main one is the rapid movement from farm to city. The young leave first in search of bread. In other, smaller cities the rapid disappearance of the much-heralded prosperity forces first the young to migrate in search of an exploiter. Then, the ex-soldiers never were entirely absorbed into production; and the former are disabled and, more specially, unable to compete with the more healthy ex-soldiers in greater than the American Legion has seen fit to advertise.

Too add to this mess, General Hines has been training 71,000 war vets in semi-skilled trades and they are being thrown on the overloaded labor market by the thousands.

Can Gompers still overlook the necessity of organizing the youth into the trade unions?

FOSTER TO SPEAK FOR YOUTH ON LIEBKNECHT.

William Z. Foster never overlooks an opportunity to reach the young rebels and the young revolutionists never miss a chance to hear Bill Foster. Foster has always placed great reliance in the youth movement, and it will be an unusual treat to hear him talk on Liebknecht—the Pioneer at the International Liebknecht Day celebration in Chicago, to be held Saturday, January 29, at 7:30 P. M., Prudential Hall, North Ave. and Halsted Street.

Then there will be Robert Minor who was in Germany at the time of the Spartacist rebellion; Max Bedacht, Editor of Soviet Russia Pictorial who will speak on "The Revolutionary Situation in Germany"; John Edwards and Peter Hard for the Young Workers League. Such special features as a play by the Studio Players, music selected for the occasion, and other attractions should have no doubt in your mind but that it will be there. Be sure to attend.

Lithuanians Hold Successful Meet

The Lithuanian Federation of the Workers Party held a meeting in Brooklyn on Dec. 27th, which was attended by about 1,500. The meeting was addressed by members of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, Jakira, who spoke on the resolutions adopted by the Communist Party of Lithuania at the recent Fifth Congress held in Moscow. Comrade Jakira was also elected Central Executive Committee member.

Thomas Myerscough made a very interesting report on the situation in the United States and on the activities which center within its ranks among Lithuanian workers. The report was accepted unanimously.

The question of the Daily Worker was made a special order of business. It is to be remembered that the Lithuanian comrades have for the last few months shown a splendid spirit in support of the campaign for The Daily Worker. The Convention adopted a resolution pledging itself to continue in its efforts to make "The Daily" a success.

The question of the Federation press was given most careful consideration. The policies pursued by the Federation press for the last year were approved and the new Bureau was instructed to continue in its policies of bringing the Federation press in closer contact with the party as a whole.

The convention adjourned with the election of a new bureau of seven members as follows: Boy Misura, secretary of the Federation; V. Andrulis, editor of "Vilnis"; Frank Buch, J. Gaduuas, J. P. Zaldokas, B. Vashis, P. Zalpis, all of Chicago. Misara was re-elected secretary by the new bureau.

Real Live Wire Writes How He Boosts "Daily"

What a real live wire can do when he puts his heart and his energy into the task of making THE DAILY WORKER a power, does a large circulation, as shown by the accomplishments of Albert Harvitt, of Toledo, Ohio. This comrade has sent in to THE DAILY WORKER $177.75 in payment for 47 subscriptions, a share of stock and a greeting to the Daily.

How Comrade Harvitt made such a magnificent record is best shown by the letter which he sent with the money. If the militants all over the country will set themselves to the task in the way Comrade Harvitt did, it wil be only a matter of a few weeks until THE DAILY WORKER will establish its power in the labor movement and in the political and industrial life of this country in a way that will shake the capitalist world to its foundations. IT CAN BE DONE IF THE MILITANTS WANT IT DONE. Comrade Harvitt's letter is printed in full to prove it:

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 4, 1924

Dear Comrade: I am sending in a list of names for THE DAILY WORKER. Some of these subs are entirely new and never took the Worker before.

A good many prospects said they could not take the Worker because they did not have the money, but they could not get away with that with me, because I said, well, I have got about $60.00 that's been working in a capitalist's bank at 3½ per cent and you can borrow enough to pay for your WORKER as long as you want it, so they could not turn me down on that proposition, so I got their sub.

I consider this money working in this way is worth much more than 3½ per cent interest as a couple of dollars of it may help to make a rebel and they are worth more than 3½ per cent.

I would have liked to send more than I did on the greetings, but I had to spend a good bit on car fare chasing up these subs and had to carry about $40.00 on the sub list for a while, so I was just about strapped when I got thru.

Please let me know how much you are going to charge for bundle rates, as I am not working at present, and am going to try to put THE WORKER on the street for a couple of weeks and see how it sells along with the prostitute press.

As secretary of the Workers campaign committee, I introduced a motion to have the local members go out on the street for one Saturday night and sell The Worker on the corner, then I told them I would continue to sell it on the street till we got it introduced to the public, and they can see what it is.

As the comrades do not seem to get results on the house to house canvass I thought we could sort of psychologize the mass in this way and they would know THE WORKER was here in Toledo.

There had not been anything done on sub lists when they were handed to me as the new secretary. I hope I can get the local members on the job and we will try to get results on new subs.

Long live THE DAILY WORKER
Yours in Comradeship,
ALBERT W. HARVITT.

P. S. I am sending you an application for one share of stock in THE DAILY WORKER and $5.00 payment for same. Please take care of this as soon as possible.

N. Y. BUILDING WORKERS WIN, OTHERS SUFFER

Workers Have Banks But Little Cash

By SELMAR SCHOCKEN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY.—Where is the labor movement of New York City headed for the opening of 1924? You can find out a lot, if it headed in every direction.

Its strength and the prosperity of its members, vary by degrees from the peak wages and labor shortage of the building trades to the great unemployment and suffering in the needle trades.

The unions in the building industry were able to compel the employers to sign a two years' contract at a basic wage of $10.50 for mechanics and $8.50 for helpers. This agreement does not include bricklayers, masons and plasterers whose basic wage rate is $12. Several unions, like the marble workers have agreements calling for wages of $11 and more.

The increase in wages comes on the eve of the termination of an ultimatum giving the unions connected with the old Board of Business Agents to February first, to join the new Building Trades Council of New York, chartered more than a year ago by the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor. Up to the present the old board, organized by the notorious "Boss" Brindell has gone on functioning as the representative body even tho its charter was revoked and it consisted only of Business Agents "who are elected for at least three years and receive a salary of not less than $75 a week. A recent conference of International officials ordered their local unions to immediately join the council organized by the District Council of Painters, Plasterers, Marble Workers and several other unions. Substantial increases were also gained by the unions in the Printing Industry.

Conditions in the Metal Industry are rather slow. R. Hoe & Co., the largest manufacturing plant of printing presses found the time opportune, to announce the abrogation of their agreement with the International Association of Machinists and "reorganize" the plant with radically reduced wages.

Food Workers Organize

In spite of bad conditions in the industry the Amalgamated Metal Workers are conducting an enthusiastic organization campaign. This is also true of the United Automobile Workers Union which has gained several hundred members within the last few months. In the food industry, the Amalgamated Food Workers, are at present conducting organization campaigns in all directions.

The struggle of the rank and file in the needle trades against the union bureaucracy is becoming ever more intense, resulting in great suffering to those who dare challenge the rule of the incompetent and self-seeking officials. Hence rule, autocracy, self-determination, of local unions are nowhere to be found in those International Unions which are ruled by so-called Social Democrats. Executive Boards are appointed by the international president, as in the case of Waistmakers Union No. 22. Executive Board members who have the confidence of their fellow workers are deposed and if even then the membership will not "learn," strong arm methods are employed as in the Furriers Union, resulting in the serious injury of members of The Trades Union Educational League.

"Aide" the (Capitalist) Agent

One such demonstration occurred when B. Gold, an active member of the Trades Union Educational League and of the Furriers' Union, was released from Court after the reactionary officials had him first severely beaten and then charged with assault. Several hundred Furriers marched to the Forward Building and "honored" Abe Cahan, the American Gustav Noske, with a demonstration which left no doubt in the minds of many Jewish workers who witnessed it, about the grand betrayal of the Jewish Daily Forward.

The needle trades are going thru a severe crisis. Unemployment and part time employment is rampant. Very few tailors have steady employment.

The keen competition among The Labor Banks is as interesting as it is sometimes amusing. The Central Trades and Labor Council, owner of the Federation Bank, is preparing resolutions, telling the world about the utter worthlessness of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, because this big organization of tailors is not affiliated with the A. F. of L. On the other hand, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers instructed its salesmen to advise the business world that they are "one of the most conservative unions, have never participated in a sympathetic strike and are staunch supporters of the open shop." So that's that. You may choose now, where you want to deposit your money with the "outlaw union," with the A. F. of L., central body or with the supporter of the open shop. But this New York workers need now, is the money. For, with the exception of the five thousand workers in the building trades and a few thousand more in the printing trades, wage workers have little left, to deposit in "their" banks.

In ever increasing numbers the exploited workers of New York City are understanding this and, joining the Workers Party. The rank and file workers of the Socialist Party are becoming disgusted with the reactionary policies of their Party in supporting labor for the reactionary Gompers, without the labor union movement.

Ted Goes to the Country.

By ELSIE GRAY.

Ted never knew when it was going to be a good day. Some days when he was very young he would wake up in the morning and find that it was a holiday. Ted listened to his parents' happy talk, even before he was fully awake, and found out that they were going to spend the day in the country. Then Ted sat at home before and after school, stringing beads or running errands in fancy pieces of leather; and he could see that the good paying job his mother had kept her slipping little crosses on glittering chains.

This little boy's father worked in one of those long red buildings which shoot out so many dirty streams of black smoke; where men and women and children rush into in the morning, and struggle out of at night. From the long and sometimes bitter quarrels that passed between his mother and father, Ted learned that his father did not get enough money to support his sister May, twelve, and his little baby brother, nor to pay for the medicine and doctors his sick mother needed.

In all his young life, only once that Ted could remember, was he in the country. He and everything about it, the trees and running brooks, and the flowers were in real about which he dimly remembered he used to romp along

It came a day when Ted's father told his mother that the boss was laying off men. Of course it was all right for the summer, but what about the winter? A man had asked him to work the whole family along. Imagine how happy Ted felt on that early afternoon when, after a two mile ride-ride and a long walk they were out under the blue sky and under a bunch of bare-like buildings one of which Ted was told would be his home. His father did not work that afternoon, and that night in his crowded sleeping quarters, Ted dreamed of endless games in the greenfields and around and under the trees. In his dream, he had just stretched himself out on the grass, exhausted after long playing and was gazing up into the deep green trees, when a loud, gruff voice called, "Five o'clock, get up! You'll find your tools downstairs." Ted's mother turned to him and said, "Wake up May. We must all be out in the field to work in half an hour. Do hurry, Ted."

GREETINGS from San Pedro Executive Committee of Workers Party.

To the Many Greetings!

Many greetings have come to The Daily Worker. They have come from all parts of the United States, from all parts of the world. They have come from the isolated comrades, in the lone places, carrying on the struggle against capitalism. They have come from the Communist Parties in many lands. They have come from the Communist International itself. All greetings of encouragement. All expressing a great hope for the future of the English-language Communist press.

To all of these The Daily Worker sends back its Communist greetings. The Daily Worker and its staff sends greetings to all Communists everywhere. It will strive to the utmost of its strength to carry out its true Communist mission by struggling for the whole working class. In this historic struggle it will march on to victory with the whole world-wide Communist press, with the Communist movement everywhere.

The Gangsters and the Press

Elections are either being held or are just over in Chicago unions and the seasonal activity of the gunmen and sluggers is at its height.

There is a fine show of indignation in the local capitalist press and the usual moral relative to the criminal character of the trade union movement is being drawn.

No group of the American workingclass is more opposed to the activities of the criminal element that has fastened itself on the labor movement than the Workers Party of America; we consider that the degenerates who serve the most reactionary and corrupt section of the trade union movement as gunmen and sluggers constitute a cancerous excrescence of which the labor movement must rid itself; in that task however the left wing of the labor movement will seek no aid from the capitalist press.

The Communists know that the same gunmen—and their employers—whom the capitalist press berates when it sees an opportunity of discrediting the labor movement, are used without compunction when the bosses and the corrupt officialdom of the unions unite in a holy war against the Communists and the left-wing of the labor movement—of which they are the most active section.

The only reason that the capitalist press, at the instance of its owners who live by the violent suppression of the workers, attacks the gangsters of the labor movement, is the purely opportunist tactics used by employers' organizations. Rotten as the administrations of many Chicago unions are, there is still some measure of resistance to the encroachments of the employers. To break this resistance by casting suspicion upon all forms of union activity is the motive behind the denunciations of violence in the labor movement on the part of the capitalist press.

Outside of this diversity of interests there is close co-operation between the capitalists, the capitalist press and the devotees of thuggery in the labor movement.

No more illuminating instance of this offensive and defensive alliance of labor crooks and grafters and the employers and politicians has been seen lately than the gathering at the funeral of Thomas Kearney former president of the Building Trades Council. This crowd of parasites to which the capitalist press gave much space is proof aplenty that to rid the labor movement of crooks and gangsters is the last thing in the world the employers want to do.

The labor movement will purge itself of this blight. When it does it will be the Communists and the left-wing bloc who will be responsible for the needed change. They will, however, do the job in their own time and in their own way, without any assistance from the capitalist press, the capitalist police or any other agency of the capitalist system.

That capital is fleeing from France in dread of the falling currency was the warning hurled at the French government by a Socialist in the chamber of deputies. Another deputy declared that the occupation of the Ruhr is costing France $98,000,000 annually. M. Herriott urged a resumption of relations with Russia as a necessary step toward restoring Europe to just the late president of the U. S. would call "normalcy."

In the race between the soldiers bonus and the reduction bills the latter is likely to be first to the winning post. The soldiers have done the fighting anyhow. They have shown a good deal of patience and can be depended on to remain patient until the next war.

Forward—But Backward

An historical event of paramount importance has just transpired in the Senate. When the Democratic insurgent senators broke away from the leadership of LaFollette, went over to the Democrats and voted for their candidate Smith, of South Carolina, as chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, another page in the breaking up of present party lines was written. The action of LaFollette will tend to precipitate the growing tendency towards an organizational rift in the republican party.

The from the point of view of disrupting the reactionary republican machine this vote is a step forward, yet from the angle of the fundamental political, class conflicts, the acceptance of the democrat, Smith, by the "progressive" LaFollette is two steps backward.

The insurgents threw away two splendid opportunities in voting for Smith and not acting thruout the proceedings as a distinct, independent group separate and apart from the democrats and republicans. First of all, in voting for Smith the progressives actually assumed responsibility for him before the very mass of voters in whose eyes they did not want to appear as responsible for Cummins, the reactionary republican. Senator Smith is a "regular" democrat of the rankest sort. LaFollette very well knows that the film between the democrats and republicans has long ago disappeared and that the two will undoubtedly get together against the insurgents in a pinch. The preservation of the Esch-Cummins Act guaranteeing a bonus of hundreds of millions of dollars to the railway corporations is a matter of first-rate import to the capitalists and they will not permit any tampering with it. On the eve of a national election, the democrats will not be fools to endanger campaign funds by antagonizing the railway interests or to throw away one of their best campaign issues by taking off the statute books a law publicly proclaimed by them as objectionable at a time when their political opponents, the republicans, are in control of the government. Thus the election of Smith, as chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, does not enhance the chances of repealing the Esch-Cummins Act and does not save the progressives from responsibility for its continuance.

Secondly, by voting for Smith, the LaFollette forces threw away the chance that comes once in a political lifetime to a minority insurgent group to establish itself as an independent, vigorous force for action. Had the LaFollette forces continued to vote independently they would have forced the democrats and republicans to unite on Cummins, or some other reactionary and thus would have exposed the two parties before the masses as really one gang serving the interests of the panic profiteers and manufacturers. Such independent action would have gone a long way towards making the progressives a real force in American political life. Thus, by voting against the reactionary republican, Cummins, the insurgents took one step forward. But by voting for the reactionary democrat, Smith, they took two steps backward.

This weak conduct and wavering policy are characteristic of the vascillating, unclear, programless center group in all class struggles.

MacDonald Is Safe

American capitalists are worrying over the rise to power of the British Labor Party. Many of them fear—actually fear—that on the very day J. Ramsay MacDonald becomes premier of Great Britain and The Irish Free State he will order all capitalists deported to St. Helena.

The wise heads among the American plutocracy do not fear any immediate revolution in Britain. They know the present leaders of British labor. They know that a labor government existed in Sweden, Germany, parts of Australia and New Zealand and nothing very detrimental to the capitalists occured. Somehow or other under the rule of such labor leaders the capitalists manage to get by. With Communists it is different.

But even the wise heads are not entirely satisfied with developments in England. It is true they do not fear Ramsay as a leader but they are not so sure of some of his followers. The rebels from the Clyde who are rather close to the Communists for instance! They support MacDonald just now but they meet by themselves and plan a course of action within the Labor Party parliamentary group which may not be to the liking of MacDonald or the British capitalists.

Lord Beaverbrook, a prominent figure in British politics and the owner of a number of influential newspapers thinks there is no reason for getting excited. MacDonald is a gentleman, declared the Lord, and then went on to tell the following squib by Carlyle which may explain to the Lord's anointed why Ramsay is in such ungodly company.

A man was astonished to see some one he knew following a riotous mob, and when the latter was asked how on earth he came to be running after such people, he replied, "What else can I do? I'm their leader."

The capitalists need not worry about J. Ramsay MacDonald and his lieutenants. But some day MacDonald's present followers will give them cause to worry, when they have leaders that lead and do not merely keep at the head of the procession.

The display of capitalist brute force in China, in the Philippines, or in South America is only another form of the display of millitary brutality in strikebreaking in the coal fields of Pennsylvania, the railway strike in Missouri and the textile strike in Rhode Island.

The official stamp for the Coolidge campaign will be "Keep Coolidge." Many a good business sardine.

A FIGHTER FROM THE START

Our Cartoonist's Conception of the Birth of "The Daily."

How the Farmers Fight

By. W. F. DUNNE.

The meek and lowly farmer of fiction and vaudeville is passing.

North and South Dakota, in Idaho and Montana, a fierce struggle is in process between town and country that resembles in many respects the peasant revolts of the later feudal period. The hatred aroused by the tax-gatherers of the kings and barons is today the portion of the agricultural machinery agents, the chattel mortgage sharks and the local bankers.

At best the lot of the farmer in the West is a precarious one; a homesteader, so the saying goes, bets the government that he can live for three years on the land allowed him; sooner or later he either gives up the struggle or is forced to negotiate a mortgage on which he pays interest for the rest of his life. If he is a settler brought to the land of promise by the rosy prospectus of the railway land agent, he purchases his land at an exorbitant figure and pays the ruinous freight rates that prevail in all newly settled districts. One crop failure gives him a handicap that he rarely overcomes. Living in isolation, without any of the conveniences of the city-dweller, living a life in which the simplest pleasure is a rarity, he is forced to exploit his own wife and family to manage a bare existence.

I have driven, during the dry season, 260 miles in one day without seeing a blade of grass or a drop of water fit to drink. In this great desert—it was nothing else—were the shacks of the ranchers, bare, frame buildings, racked by the wind into strange shapes. The farmers and their families seemed to have had every drop of moisture in their bodies evaporated by the dry and heated atmosphere. In the winter snow and cold make life a constant and still more bitter struggle.

These people have been victimised by the merchants, millers, railroads and bankers until the world appears to them to be composed solely of grasping hands and hard eyes. During the Non-Partisan League activity in the war days, in many districts the active leaders of the farmers were hunted and hounded like wild animals by the small-town chambers of commerce, commercial clubs, rotary clubs and other middle-class organizations. The viciousness of the campaign showed conclusively that this element had interpretated the farmers' movement correctly—as a revolt of the hitherto docile and exploited rural toilers.

When the bottom dropped out of the wheat market two years ago, thousands of farmers gave up the attempt to wrest a living from the land; thousands left their crops standing in the fields, hitched up a team loaded a few household goods and left the country, leaving the best of their belongings to whoever cared to take them.

Others decided to stay and fight foreclosure by the banks and among this group has developed a sense of solidarity that is an entirely new feature in agricultural life; the American farmer has been the backbone of American individualism and the abandonment of this as a guide of conduct is of deep significance.

In more than one county in Montana there is new a quiet but well-organized and effective campaign of sabotage against the holders of farm and chattel mortgages. Quite often when a farmer knows that the agent of the bank is about to foreclose on his stock he drives the horses and cattle into the hills where it may take weeks for the mortgagee to round them up and at a cost that eats up all profit in the transaction.

The Farmer Is Learning How to Fight the Vultures Who Prey Upon Him.

Another promising fact I found was the farmers were learning how to fight. In Montana, a farmer who had been dispossessed by the sheriff at the behest of the bank, was given a chance to buy back his property at a fraction of its value. He refused. Instead he and his neighbors gathered at the sale and bid in the property for the original owner. Not a single bid was made by any one except the farmer who had been dispossessed. The sheriff was helpless. The farmer got back his property for a song.

Farmers near Plentywood, Montana—and described with a great deal of approving laughter—were to refuse to bid on a neighbors' goods at a forced sale. To those who know the love of the farmer a shrewd bargain this means that the world is coming to an end.

I heard of a crowd of farmers who deliberately refused to bid more than $5 a head at a mortgage sale of heavy work horses and latter cut their bids down to $2.50 per head when they found that their bids would purchase the stock. From most of these forced sales the banker does not get enough to pay the sheriff's fees.

When it is washinery that is to be sold, kindly neighbors take the good machinery to their own homes and bring—for the purpose of the sale—old and outworn machinery that could not be sold even for junk. Upon this the bank is allowed to foreclose. In many districts, with the sympathy of sheriffs elected by the farmers, the banks have never been able to serve papers at all and the farmer is still in possession of his land.

The result of this widening of the breach between the exploited farmer and the parasitic professional and business elements of the small towns has created a situation without parallel in American history. It is in these hard-hit rural districts that is being laid the ground work of a nation-wide political upheaval of the formerly mild and inoffensive tiller of the soil.

He is no longer the butt of cheap vaudevillians—at least not to the country banker and merchant in whom he personifies the Wall Street octopus. To those who have lived on him for years he seems to be a new individual—one whose new militancy puzzles them and of whom they are more than a little afraid.

MENTIONING THE MOVIES

By PROJECTOR.

"Germany Today" Misnamed.

Two hours of beautiful but lifeless scenics are strung together under the title "Germany Today", by W. J. Ademe at a one-night stand at Orchestra Hall. The film gives the impression of a slightly animated album of picture post cards. Buildings, parks, statues, and empty streets make up most of the picture. Photography is universally good, the camera man shows himself a genius in picking artistic settings and surrounding them with the proper atmospheric frame. But the titles! To be effective they must be read as they were written—with a strong German accent.

Not a trace of social understanding is displayed in the entire picture. The only glimmer of life is found in the unique Wendish setting of the Spreewald and in the "Meisterturnk" celebration at Rothenburg on the Tauber—both distinctly medieval survivals. The only industrial touch is a short picture showing the making of Dresden china.

A part of the audience had a chance to show its political leanings by applauding every reference in the titles to the former rulers, and its opportunities were very numerous. The statues of Frederick the Great and of Bismarck got the biggest hand, while the Hohenzollern stables got a better reception than the Reichstag.

The picture should be named "Germany Yesterday" and the musical motif should be changed to "Sie kommt nicht mehr, nicht mehr".

"Man from Brodneys"—Chiefly Bromide.

Bromide story, bromide direction, and bromide star. Add a touch of pro-imperialist poison and you have Vitagraph's new thriller, "The Man from Brodneys". J. Warren Kerrigan is the impossibly handsome dress suited matinee idol of a hero who ought to be passed by this time. Did the book call for him? Well, the book has been gathering dust for a long, long time.

A young American diplomat (the handsome Kerrigan) loses his job for swindling a Crown Prince with a cane. So he is sent to an Indian island to keep the natives from handing out "force and violence" to a couple of reposition heirs who covet the ruby and sapphire loaded isle. The will provides they must live on the island six months and get married within that time. But the man is already married. Still one wife more or less is a small consideration as against all the wealth of Japan, so there is a native uprising. Of course the natives are wrong. They always are, in the movies. The natives are subdued by the brave man from Brodneys and an American torpedo boat. The loyal regular wife stops a bullet, her husband decides on a citizen wife is too high a price to pay or even Japan, so the natives, under safe and sane leadership, offer to divide up the riches and everybody is happy. Only seven Turkish princess who sometimes her throne for the brave Mr. Chase.

Some fine scenes in the mob scenes. Otherwise bunk and blah. And imperialist propaganda.

AS WE SEE IT

Ireland is getting free. Not even the Free State can stop the grass from growing there. According to a capitalist report, the hay crop is making the best showing in years, and hundreds of thousands of tons of the annual amount of wheat grown, 99 per cent of the land used for the breadstuff is given up to grain. Ninety-three per cent of the Irish agricultural exports are cattle and dairy products for the British market. The bullock is taking the place of the agricultural worker in "free" Ireland.

He that pays the piper should call the tune. The American bankers will not loan any money to save the Greek refugees who are dying like flies until a stable government is established there. "Profits first" is the slogan of capitalism.

A young Boston lad who at the age of eleven astonished the hard-boiled professors at Harvard University with a lecture on the fourth dimension is now trying to live on $23.00 a week punching an adding machine in New York City. If the boy had in his early boyhood discovered a new bogich recipe or a better method of fleecing the workers the capitalist class would no doubt have something better for him than punching an automatic machine. Brains do not always bring a high material reward, neither does a willingness to serve society. Our readers, may remember reading in the bible that Jesus at the age of twelve confounded the doctors of his day and yet they hanged him on a cross for his pains.

Leland Olds, Federated Press Industrial Editor, predicts an 18% reduction in the amount spent for building activity during the year 1924. This is spite of the fact that there is a shortage of homes and a surplus of workers. Capitalists are never so happy as when they have a plentiful supply of workers competing for jobs on the labor market.

BURN HOMES OF WORKERS AT HERRIN

Nation Greets First Issue of "Daily" at Great Mass Meetings

KLAN TERROR REIGN WAR ON ALIEN LABOR

Hard-boiled Fascist Has Army Record of Brutality

BY TOM TIPPETT

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

HERRIN, Ill.—With two companies of State Militia stationed at Marion, and one at Herrin, Williamson county is again in the limelight. The trouble this time is a booze war, coupled with a religious and racial persecution prosecuted by the Ku Klux Klan, assisted by federal prohibition agents.

Underlying it all is a continuity of attack against Williamson County because of its noble defense against the invasion of a coal mine owners' private army in the coal strike two years ago.

The troops are here by request of Sheriff George Galligan, elected by a sweeping majority last year on the labor ticket. Their presence is objected to by federal agents, the Klan and many other groups in the county. Hundreds of alleged bootleggers have been arrested while on the other hand warrants have also been sworn out for Klan members and the chief prohibition agent.

The homes of four foreign families have been burned to the ground by the raiders, and a member of the Royal Italian Council at Springfield is here investigating the high handed methods used against the Italians by the vandals. The situation is tense but since the raids have been called off no trouble is expected.

Homes Fired; People Beaten.

According to Sheriff Galligan, whose wife and baby are very sick in a hospital and who himself is confined to bed with a combination of an attack of mumps and tonsilitis, he called the troops on Jan. 7, only after homes had been fired and many people beaten and robbed by the raiders.

He did it, he says, to prevent bloodshed. The soldiers were immediately sent by Governor Small. The sheriff's office is not objecting to federal agents enforcing prohibition, Galligan claims, but the manner in which the raids here were conducted necessitated his action.

The present "clean up" campaign commenced here two days before Christmas when federal agents, augmented by nearly 1,000 alleged klansmen, initiated a simultaneous raid campaign thru the county. The county officials were not notified by the federal authorities that such a move was to be made.

The recent trouble began last summer when a public meeting was called in Marion by an un-named organization that admitted it was the "better element," to declare public opposition to the sheriff's office, which was accused of being in league with bootleggers in the county.

This assemblage announced its intentions of "cleaning up" Williamson. Business men, preachers and various reformers identified themselves with this gathering. The Ku Klux Klan League who attended an American Legion pro-bonus meeting at the Garrick Theater. He passed out anti-militarist leaflets to the service men who attended and says that the leaflets were given a more cordial reception than the speeches delivered from the stage.

"When the speakers were against something the audience would cheer. Their invitations to join the American Legion in order to get the bonus were met with silence. A couple of speakers whose sentiments were safe were planted in the crowd to get up and speak as rank and filers. Even their speeches were not very cordially received.

"The ex-service man is sick and tired of all the talk of the politicians. He is against war. His sentiments are against militarism."

The Farmer Feeds the Cow

But the Milk Trust Gets the Milk.

MILK CRISIS GROWS WHILE TRUST FIGHTS

Farmers' Daughters and Wives in Demonstration

The battle between the milk producers of Lake County, Ind., and the Chicago distributors is reaching an acute stage. The Milk Trust expresses its determination to cut the price to the farmers. The latter are equally determined not to budge an inch from their position. The slogan of the farmers is "$2.75 a hundred pounds or we will fight until Tibb's eve."

Mass demonstrations of farmers are being held all over the strike area. The temper of the producers is rising as the profiteers disregard the interests of those who produce the milk and the people who consume it. They are out for more and more profits.

Demonstration at Elgin

The farmers' wives and daughters are now taking a hand in the fight. In Elgin, Illinois, a parade of the Milk Producers' Women's Auxiliary was held. The parade was followed by a huge mass meeting in a downtown theatre with E. C. Rockwell, secretary of the Producers' Association and others as speakers.

The Bowman Company, the largest concern affected, threatened today to revoke the premium paid farmers of the inner belt and even go elsewhere for its milk permanently unless the strike was called off. Spokesmen for the company stated that pasteurizing machinery has been dismantled at the Dundee and Barrington plants and moved to Chicago.

Frank T. Fowler official spokesman for the Milk Producers' Association in a statement to the Daily Worker declared that the Milk Trust knew it was beaten. During the first days of the tieup, considerable milk was shipped from Detroit and Cleveland, but these districts are now barred. Producers in nearby states have given their word to the Lake County strikers to cease shipments of milk to the Chicago Milk Trust.

The milk supplied to Chicago is dwindling daily according to Mr. Fowler. One thousand, two hundred McHenry County farmers, numbering 1,200 voted unanimously to stand by the association.

While the producers are endeavoring to get the state government to intervene in an investigation of the milk strike, the Milk Trust has trotted out its best legal minds to secure an injunction prohibiting the farmers from picketing the plants of the Bowman Dairy Company, the largest milk distributing company in Chicago.

Farmers' Enemies Meet

The milk farmers are now experiencing the same treatment as the city workers. They are now getting a valuable lesson on the theory that the interests of the farmers and the capitalists are identical. It is the awakening on the part of the farmers that is responsible for the frenzied attempts of the big capitalists to prevent the farmers and the workers from making common cause.

While the progressive workers of Chicago are assisting the milk farmers to win their strike, Mr. John M. Glenn, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association was delivering the following gem at a national farmer-manufacturer conference in the congress hotel. "The farmer and manufacturers," declared Glenn, "have everything in common. Neither has anything in common with the labor. Both farmer and manufacturer are employers, both are capitalists, both are producers, both are investors."

The Daily Worker challenges Mr. Glenn to walk into the strike headquarters of the Milk Producers' Association in the Sherman Hotel and make that statement in front of any one of the representatives of the farmers of Lake County. If the interests of the capitalists and the farmers are identical, why this deadly quarrel between the farmers who produce milk and the capitalists who take the farmers' produce and sell it to the consumer at a large profit? Can Mr. Glenn answer this question?

ANTI-MILITARISM GETS RESPONSE FROM WAR VETS

Ex-Soldiers Jeer, Hiss Coolidge and Mellon

Veterans are more interested in anti-militarism than they are in the bonus. They don't think either Coolidge or Mellon is their friend. They will not be too anxious to enlist in the next war and will fight conscription unless wealth is also conscripted.

Those are the sentiments of the ex-service men as gauged by a member of the Young Workers League who attended an American Legion pro-bonus meeting at the Garrick Theater. He passed out anti-militarist leaflets to the service men who attended and says that the leaflets were given a more cordial reception than the speeches delivered from the stage.

"When the speakers were against something the audience would cheer. Their invitations to join the American Legion in order to get the bonus were met with silence. A couple of speakers whose sentiments were safe were planted in the crowd to get up and speak as rank and filers. Even their speeches were not very cordially received.

Alabama Convict Miners Revolt; Fight Against Brutal Conditions

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Convicts who are leased by the state to mine owners to work as miners have rebelled at the Thomas Weller mines in Shelby County. They are barricaded in mine buildings and have dynamite with which they threaten to blow themselves and guards to bits if the guards attack them.

L. A. Boyd, head of the State convict board, said that reports that the convicts had done damage to property is untrue. Sixty-six miners are in the revolt.

According to state officials no reason for the revolt was given but it is generally understood that conditions are so bad among convicts who work in the mines under the lease system that they have plenty of cause for desperation. Mine officials bewail the fact that no notice of the revolt was given by the rebels. The usual investigation is promised.

MARYLAND COAL MINERS RECOVER FROM BIG STRIKE

Jailed Union Men Now Returning to Homes

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

FROSTBURG, Md.—The miners' union in the George Creek and Upper Potomac mining regions is slowly recovering from the effects of the recent strike.

The miners who were sent to prison for short terms as a result of rioting last August, are getting out one at a time and returning to work. The rioting resulted from the murder of a union miner by gunmen of the Consolidation Coal Company a few days before. This treatment is contrasted with the treatment accorded a negro strike breaker who shot and wounded several union miners and a town policeman who was not even arrested. Another strike breaker who was arrested the night of the riot and charged with carrying concealed weapons was found not guilty when tried.

When the gunmen who had killed the union miner were finally tried at Hagerstown they were found not guilty.

Among the miners much criticism is directed against the leaders of the union who did not take a clear cut stand on the issues involved in the strike and the court cases growing out of it.

Work Daily for "The Daily!"

Souvenir Edition Main Speaker; Great Enthusiasm in Chicago; Toilers Everywhere Pledge Aid

The appearance of the first issue of the first Communist daily in the English language, was the occasion for monster mass meetings thruout the United States where thousands of workers gathered to express their joy over the establishment of a militant defender of labor and a guide toward the goal for which labor is headed, the Soviet Republic.

In every important industrial center in the United States the workers congregated to greet their paper. They listened to speeches, good speeches, but the great attraction was "The Daily Worker." At last the Communist movement in America was getting on its feet, it was developing its voice so that it could speak loud and often to the exploited workers of America.

"January 13th" was, indeed, a red-letter day for the American workers, and they demonstrated by their enthusiasm, at the hundreds of meetings held thruout the United States, that "The Daily Worker" has the most priceless asset and publication could have, the hearty support of the progressive men and women in the American working class.

Chicago's meeting was a huge success. Thousands of workers crowded Ashland Auditorium, bought the souvenir edition of "The Daily and listened to speeches by party officials and representatives of the business and editorial staff of "The Daily." The workers of Chicago who had helped to make possible the Daily were out to celebrate, and they did.

Speeches were listened to and applauded, but the center of interest was the first edition of "The Daily Worker."

When Earl Browder, managing editor of the Labor Herald, began the auction of the first copy of the first English-language Communist daily, the crowd "snapped into it." Bids came thick and fast. Browder was forced to put a time-limit on the auction and announce that the highest bid at the moment of closing would take the paper.

Jacob Cohen, a member of the North West Jewish branch of the Workers Party of Chicago got it for $35. J. Louis Engdahl, Editor of "The Daily," generously included the reading of the letter of greeting from the Communist International. When the letter from the International was included with the first copy of "The Daily," Bob Minor, editor of The Liberator, seemed anxious to get it, but Cohen soon managed to run the bidding beyond the range of an editor.

C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of the Workers Party, in delivering the first speech of the evening, said:

"The Communist International has in organ in America. It is a worthy voice for a mighty organization. Soviet Russia has an effective defender here in The Daily Worker."

They'll Put It Across.

From the manner in which his remarks were cheered it was plain that sooner you will fail." I answered that people told the Bolsheviki of Russia the same thing in 1917. They succeeded in their revolution. We are succeeding with our paper."

First of Many Dailies.

"The first number of the Daily Worker marks a turning point in the Communist movement of this country. It is our biggest achievement. It marks the beginning of many more big achievements. It is merely the first. More are sure to follow."

James P. Cannon, chairman of the Workers Party, acted as chairman of the meeting. Max Salzman brought the greetings of the Young Workers League. He aroused enthusiastic applause when he told what "The Daily" could do for the youth of the

"The Daily" in Milwaukee.

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—The first issue of "The Daily Worker" was distributed to the entire audience at the regular Workers' Party Open Forum meeting here Sunday night. Carl Haessler, managing editor of The Federated Press, of Chicago, spoke on "The Stimulus to Radicalism," showing how the radical as he looks over world tendencies and the trend toward a communist organization of society gets a kick out of life while the reactionary looks to the future with fear and foreboding.

The Russian film, "The Fifth Year," will be shown at the Pabst theater Saturday, Jan. 19. A large advance sale of tickets is reported and the daily papers are giving the film good publility.

Watch the "Daily Worker" for the first installment of "A Week," the great epic of the Russian revolution, by the brilliant young Russian writer, Jury Libedinsky. It will start soon.

Carpenters and Coppersmiths in Greetings to "The Daily Worker"

Among the first American Federation of Labor local unions in Chicago to send in greetings to The Daily Worker, are Local No. 51, of the Sheet Metal Workers' Union, and Local No. 1367, of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America.

4,123 Desert U. S. Navy in Five Months in San Francisco District

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

SAN FRANCISCO.—Life in Uncle Sam's navy is not all that it is cracked up to be if desertions from this district are to be taken as an index. According to figures issued by the 12th district naval headquarters there have been 4123 desertions during the past five months. Of these 1978 are still at large.

A glance at the list of reasons given by officials in explanation assert which are "misrepresentation of navy life and insufficient cruising," would indicate that something more than alluringly written "join the navy and see the world" ads are needed to make steady sailors out of green country boys.

confounded by his office in its law enforcement work.

He was considerably handicapped in his work, too, he says, because of the opposition to his office by the Klan, and because the board of supervisors only saw fit to allow him two deputies for the entire county.

At this juncture Glen Young appeared in the county and organized the raids that precipitated the present situation. Young is the storm center of the trouble. What his legal status is is difficult to ascertain. It is reported here that during the war Young was a Department of Justice "dick" who rounded up 17,000 army deserters in the Carolinas. He then became connected with the federal prohibition enforcement agency.

He has killed in his various activities more than twenty men, so a story goes that is not denied by Young. In fact, he boasts of being "hard bolled."

In 1921 he was dropped from the federal prohibition service the next day after he had been acquitted for the murder of Luke Vicovic, who was killed in a raid engineered by Young in Vicovic's establishment in Madison county.

The Holy Trio at Work.

The federal authorities will not claim Young as their own, but neither do they deny that he has been deputized by them to carry out his plans here. The truth is that Young and the federal agents as well as the Klan, were synonymous in their raiding activities.

The first raid on the county occurred Dec. 23. The federal agents, together with some 800 men, spoken of here as Klanmen led by Young, carried out an organized drive on alleged bootlegging joints simultaneously thruout the county.

Many homes and business houses were searched and the jails filled with men and women. In these raids furniture was smashed, property was stolen and women as well as men were beaten. The chief of police at Carterville was badly beaten by raiders. When the burning of homes commenced the troops were called.

These offenses are denied by the raiders, of course, but no amount of talk can disprove that homes were burned, since their ruins are still smouldering here. And in the Ly Mar Hotel, from where the Italian councillor is conducting his investigation, all sorts of other incriminating evidence was collected. Frightened Italian women bared bruises and brought mutilated pictures of the Madonna and broken bits of sacred vessels that had contained Catholic holy water on the walls of their homes.

Wild stories were afloat to the effect that pregnant women were mauled and kicked about. When their delicate condition was pleaded the answer was "there are too many hunkies here already, so it won't matter if these aren't born."

While considerable evidence was available to substantiate such rumors their truthfulness does not in any way alter the fact that their circulation greatly contributed to an alarming situation. When the burning of homes commenced the danger was great indeed.

Italian Council Complains.

The Italian council, John M. Picco, says the county will be held responsible for the damage done his people. The Italian embassy at Washington will insist on compensation, he claims. Picco's version of the raids is:

"The methods used by the raiders were repulsive. Federal agents, and their assistants, whomever they were broke into homes in early hours, threw women and children out of beds, robbed them of their money and burned up their homes. Their conduct was the conduct of a mob. If they had picked out only the proper sumed law violators there may have been some explanation, but no discrimination was practiced. Some of the most representative citizens of Herrin were among the raided. They were insulted, beaten and dragged off to jail like criminals. Many homes were wrecked where no liquor was found and no arrests made."

The organized labor movement here as such is not directly involved in this trouble.

It understands, however the real purpose of the raids. Representatives of it ask why Williamson county should be singled out for such treatment.

Illicit liquor exists here, they admit, and there is seen on the streets once in a while a drunken man. But is this not also true of every other county in the state, they ask. Neither is violation of the 18th amendment confined strictly to foreigners, they point out, and add that many a fortune has been made by illicit booze in 100 per center circles.

No one here defends booze but on the contrary are anxious to do away with it, but they resent, and rightfully so, the barbarous methods employed here ostensibly to bring this about—by legal representatives of law and order.

For Murder of Mexican Workers, Slain by Counter-Revolutionists

Carrillo Assassin Is Sought by Mexican Police

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY.—Felipe Carrillo is dead! He was shot in a prison yard in Chapultepec, where he was being tried by a military court for treason. The Mexican proletarian has lost a champion. With a shock you read the report as it ran around the capital. Carrillo, the agrarian reformer, the idol of his friends and admirers have ended in this awful certainty. Felipe Carrillo, labor leader of the Yaqui, organizer and president of the League of Agrarian Communities of Yucatan, is dead. Long live Carrillo!

I pick up Excelsior, organ of the Catholic reaction, the landlords, and foreign capitalism. How can it find anything for Carrillo but slanders and libels, when he was a three-hundred-pounder reactionary and a streamer headline all across the page. What has it to say of him now?

Owing to the radical politics of Governor Carrillo there rose up against him a veritable wave of hatred on the part of the elements of society (dic) and especially among the landowners of Yucatan who were losing their henequin estates some of which were divided up among the workers and others administered directly by a Socialist commission depended by the government. In (state of Yucatan) organization . . . It may be considered as very near to perfection, even though naturally, due to the radical form in which it was installed, it was the cause of the biggest capitalists being ruined."

Had Only Capitalist Enemies.

In the time I have been here I have heard accusations against every one of the Eight leaders from the lips of rank and file workers—against every one save Carrillo. He was not a Communist, yet I have never known a Communist who did not praise him. He was not an Anarchist, yet never have I heard an Anarchist say one word against him.

The workers recall how he organized the Ligas de Resistencia in Yucatan under the government of Gen. Antonio I. Villareal. How Carranza removed Villareal, dissolved the league and put Carrillo in prison. How he escaped and returned that very night to disarm the prison garrison of eight men and persuade six of them to go out into the hills with him. That was the beginning of the revolution in Yucatan which ended with Felipe Carrillo becoming governor of the state and Obregon occupying Mexico City. Now there are stories clustered about him. Soon there will be legends.

Jailed By Landlords.

When the present million broke out in Vera Cruz, the big land owners of Yucatan bought the commander of the local garrison and imprisoned Carrillo. The finance commissioner of Yucatan, Manero, escaped with the government funds to New York, and then tried to buy the life of Carrillo from the rebels. Rumor says he offered a million pesos. Manero has telegraphed to President Obregon: "I exhausted whatever resources and arguments could be humanly employed to secure the liberty of Felipe Carrillo . . . But the big land owners of Yucatan thought the blood of this hated man who symbolized the slow but inevitable socialization of their land, was worth any price, so they murdered him."

Governor Carrillo was about to be married, when the rebellion broke out to Miss Alma Reed, California author and liberal. She had saved some Mexican prisoners under 21 years of age from the death penalty in California. The Mexican government had sent her a gold medallion and invited her to be the guest of the nation. It was on her trip as the nation's guest that she met Carrillo.

Revolution Will Continue.

The land owners of Yucatan are mistaken, if they believe they can end the revolutionary movement there by shooting him. The Mayan Indians of the peninsula have never been subjugated. Until Carrillo there has been no real peace there since the Spaniards first landed and tried to root out the primitive communist of the Mayas. Even Diaz never had it thoroughly subjugated. Madero left it alone. Against Huerta and Carranza it was in open rebellion. The Mayas will fight until they have found a new leader of the genius of Felipe Carrillo.

The whole nation is prepared to acknowledge his greatness now that he is dead. From the presidential palace comes the following tribute: "The assassination of Felipe Carrillo brings sorrow into the homes of the proletariat, . . . Don Adolfo de la Huerta will understand the magnitude of his crime when he receives the burning protests that the proletariat of the entire world will direct against him for the assassination of Felipe Carrillo . . . Every drop of blood of Felipe Carrillo is the testimony of the apostasy of Don Adolfo de la Huerta."

Syndicalists Decide to Abandon Neutrality

By BERTRAND D. WOLFE
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY.—After a session marked by indignation, the Confederacion General de Trabajadores (anarcho-syndicalist unions) abandoned neutrality in the present revolutionary crisis and adopted resolutions denouncing the Vera Cruz Fascisti.

The special session to consider the Fascisti rebellion was called when some of the members escaped from the state of Vera Cruz and brought with them the news that the Fascisti government had executed by the firing squad eight of its labor leaders, including Jose Fernandez Cos, general secretary, Vera Cruz local. Others executed were Ballezo, Carasoa, Lira, Climerco, Ramirez, Rodriguez Clara and Peres. According to the same informants, some of the slogans being used by the Fascisti in Vera Cruz are "Death to Unionists, and the like.

In its manifesto, the Confederacion General also attacked some of the false leaders in Mexico City who pretend to be anarcho-syndicalists and "reds" in order to disseminate the falsehood that the Confederacion is pro-de la Huerta. All of these so-called leaders, who recently formed the fake Partido Socialista Mayoritaria Rojo, pro-de la Huerta, are expelled unionists who were formerly affiliated either with the Mexican Federation of Labor or the General Confederation of Workers. Every one of these leaders has a history of abuse of trust or misappropriation of funds behind him.

Boycott U. S. Goods.

The annual convention closed with the election of officers and a special committee to carry out the decreed boycott against all European and American-made goods. The boycott committee includes Enrique Flores Magon, still recently a political prisoner in the United States and brother of Ricardo Flores Magon who died ("was murdered" say some) in Leavenworth penitentiary.

The confederation is most concerned in freeing by the pressure of a boycott against American goods political prisoners in Texas jails. They include Rangel, Cline, Mendoza and others of a party who set out for Mexico in 1911 when Madero revolted against Diaz. They were bound, fully armed, to aid Madero in his supposed "social revolution," when they were intercepted near the border by an armed sheriff's party. Exchange of shots followed and several of the expedition and one sheriff were killed. The others were shut in a Texas jail ever since, found guilty on charges of murder and violation of neutrality. Cline is not a Mexican.

The Millers' union of Nixtawal in the autonomous federal district has issued an appeal to all independent unions to defend the Obregon government.

Among the reasons cited for issuing this appeal to its fellow independent unions it cites the danger to which Huerta has exposed the country of further Yankee intervention of being "Plattized" as was Cuba (this refers to the Platt amendment forced into the Cuban constitution) or of sharing the fate of Haiti, Santo Domingo, Nicaragua and other countries that the United States have "pacified."

Farmers' 'Friend' Goes on Ocean Joy Ride With "Cal"

(By The Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON. — When Senator Lynn Frazier of North Dakota, who has been classified with all that is abhorrent to Wall Street, goes on a weekend cruise down the Potomac on the presidential yacht Mayflower, the political dope writers here begin to quote those lines from the "Landing of the Pilgrims:"

What sought they thus afar—
Bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas? The spoils of war?
They sought a faith's pure shrine.

Senator Frazier says that they did not talk politics, and State Chairman Frazier of the North Dakota Republican committee, who was likewise in the party on the yacht, denies that he has received positive assurance that he is to be made collector of internal revenue at Fargo.

Senator Ladd of North Dakota, who visited the white house just before the boat sailed, was quoted as having declared for Coolidge, in the name of the farmers and the Republicans of North Dakota.

He now says that he was misquoted. He asserts that he emphasized his belief that La Follette would get the Republican delegation from North Dakota if he entered the race, but that as between Coolidge and Hiram Johnson, the farmers would be for Coolidge, before the final campaign. He denies that he predicted that Coolidge would get North Dakota's electoral vote in November.

Senator Frazier's lamp, just over his desk, now carries a small photograph of Coolidge.

Unique Plan is Used to Finance Ruthenberg Plea

"Ruthenberg Appeal Coupons!" The Labor Defense Council is issuing them in thousands. By this novel method is it expected to meet the extraordinary expenses in connection with the appeal of C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, whose case is to come up for review before the Michigan Supreme Court during the Spring session.

The coupons are printed in perforated sections, illustrated with a striking drawing by Fred Ellis, well known labor artist and cartoonist. They sell for 10c, 25c, 50c and $1.

Comrades who have taken sheets of these coupons to sell, say it is extremely easy to dispose of them, and that the way in which workers all over the country are responding shows a tendency to GET BEHIND THE RUTHENBERG APPEAL and help it to victory.

Again Postpone Ruthenberg Case

ST. JOSEPH, Mich.—Postponement to Feb. 1 of the case of C. E. Ruthenberg now on appeal before the Michigan supreme court is due to agreement by attorneys on both sides, according to Prosecutor Charles E. Gore of Berrien county. Ruthenberg was convicted last spring under the state criminal syndicalism law after an indictment charging him with unlawful assembly with unnamed persons at the Bridgman convention of the former Communist party in August, 1922. In an earlier case with Wm. Z. Foster as the defendant the jury disagreed.

Neither Foster nor the 75 remaining defendants will be tried until the Ruthenberg appeal has been finally disposed of, in the opinion of Gorg, who expects that the defence will carry the case to the U. S. Supreme court if disappointed in the forthcoming Michigan decision.

Local comment indicates that the proceedings will drag on a long time.

Germany in Favor of Russian Recognition

By LAURENCE TODD
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Beneath the historic fact that President Washington and his cabinet of advisers, in 1793, received the first minister from France known as the Committee of Public Safety, after a few hours of discussion, stands the fact that England delayed such recognition for 12 years, only to regret bitterly her hesitation. Senator Borah, in the senate, in a speech answering Lodge's attack on the Russian government; that American recognition would be given some day to the present Russian government. He hoped that we would not stupidly repeat the mistake made by England with regard to revolutionary France.

When Lodge had presented a tabulation and documents of historic interest, attempting to show that the Communist party is in control of the Russian government, and of the Third International, he quoted the Searles "red peril" articles and Samuel Gompers' attacks on the idea of recognition and concluded that the crime has not yet arrived to recognize the government of Russia as it at present exists."

Borah began by pointing out that six years of refusal to recognize the Russian governments found that government firmly in power, recognized by 16 nations and about to be recognized by Britain and Italy. Coolidge had demanded that Russia show a disposition to recognize the claims of Americans for confiscated property and the debts incurred by the Kerensky government, and that she abate any hostile propaganda. He quoted Chicherin's pledge of willingness to recognize the claims and debts, and the suggestions of immediate negotiations to settle those items. As for hostile propaganda, there had been none on the part of the Russian government for the past three years. The department of justice had confessed that there was no evidence at its disposal which would warrant the indictment of anyone in this country on this score.

"There is evidence enough for the basis of a foreign policy, but, not enough on which to base a prosecution," was Borah's summing up of the propaganda situation.

Alluding to the Searles and Gompers opinions, Borah said that in the offices of many senators may still be found a basketful of printed matter, signed by able lawyers for business clients, in which the United Mine Workers are charged with every class of offense against life and property rights which the Mine Workers' leader has charged against Zinoviev. He thought the miners' is on the increase thruout the country. The Idaho senator quoted at length from former Governor Goodrich of Indiana, Dr. Charles Rashall, of Madison, Dr. Stanley Hall, Herald Howe, Irving T. Bush, and other American visitors to Russia, who reported that the government at Moscow is supported by the mass of the people, that its policy is profoundly affected by the views of the peasants, and that its desire is to be on friendly terms with the people of the United States.

All claims that the present government is an unwelcome tyranny are to be discounted he said, in view of the results of the tests of public sentiment in Russia conducted by Denken, Yudenitch, Kolchak and Wrangel. Four attempts to overthrow the Soviet government by mercenaries provisioned and financed by foreign governments had failed. No alternative to the Soviet government exists, and if we refuse recognition we shall merely have to retrace our steps later.

JOBLESS ARMY STILL GROWS IN EUROPE; FEW NATIONS ESCAPE

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The latest advices received by the Department of Labor indicate that the growth in unemployment continues in most European countries.

Denmark's number of unemployed increased in the last month by about 10,000 persons or from 20,754 to 30,800.

In the Breslau district of Germany labor conditions are becoming increasingly unfavorable. The number seeking employment was 87,000; unemployed persons number 63,000, an increase of 9,000 over the previous week; vacant places fell to 1,700, which was 700 less than those available during the week before.

In Frankfort conditions are even more desperate. Forty-five thousand persons are totally without means of support and at least double this number are in dire need of relief. Ten thousand calls for public service occur daily.

Despite the improved conditions in the watch-making and textile industries in Switzerland, unemployment in the increase thruout the country.

CANUCK FARMERS HOLD BALANCE OF POWER AT OTTAWA

Swing to Free Trade May Be Result

By JOHN ROBLIN
Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press

OTTAWA.—There is a possibility that the Canadian government may move somewhat away from its old standpat-protectionist attitude at the coming session of parliament which is to open next month. The occasion of the talk, which is of general here of new trade policies is the retirement because of illness from active membership in the cabinet of two protectionists, Sir Lomer Gouin and W. S. Fielding. Gouin has been head and front of the protectionist forces and also of the section of the government which is opposed to government ownership of railways. Fielding has been minister of finance. Although he was one of the chief authors of the ill-fated reciprocity agreement with the United States in 1911, he has lauded a stable tariff to the skies.

Another influence also tending towards a more liberal policy is the fact that the King government is now in a minority of four in the house of commons and is, therefore, badly in need of support from the Progressive or Farmers' party. The government's small majority of last session was wiped out by by-elections in the interval since. These by-elections were won by the Conservatives, who will try to force an election as soon as possible.

In this state of affairs Premier King can only look to the Progressives for support and the Progressives are strong for tariff reduction. The Canadian west as a whole is deeply imbued with the same views, and any movement in that direction is likewise dictated by a desire of the government to get western backing, which it has almost none at present.

It seems difficult to believe that there will be any radical changes in the Canadian tariff policy at any short notice, but it is possible that a short step in that direction may be taken with a view to secure the needful votes in parliament for the government to carry on

ARMENIAN WORKERS' UNITY THRU THE PARTY

Effort Made to Remedy Mistakes of Groups

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has issued a letter to the Armenian workers' societies, calling on them to unite behind the Workers Party and the Communist International. The manifesto reviews the situation that has existed between the Armenian Workers Party and the Social Democratic Hunchakist Party and points out the mistakes of both groups saying that there is only one basis on which they can unite, as a language federation within the Workers Party, under a transition period. The Manifesto follows:

Armenian Workers! Rally to the Support of the Workers Party and the Communist International!

To the members of the former Armenian Workers Party and the Hunchakist Social-Democratic Party:

Comrades: The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has had called to its attention the situation now existing among the former members of the two organizations to whom this statement is addressed and wishes to present the facts clearly so that every member will understand the situation and the position of the Workers Party and the Communist International.

At the Convention of the Armenian Social-Democratic Hunchakist Party held in Boston last summer, negotiations to unite the Armenian Workers Party and the Armenian Social-Democratic Hunchakist Party and to affiliate the united organization with the Workers Party were carried on. A representative of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party participated in these negotiations on behalf of the Party and thru his efforts the following agreement was arrived at:

Transition Period Necessary

1. The Armenian Workers Party and the Armenian Social-Democratic Hunchakist Party were united and affiliated with the Workers Party on the basis of a Central Executive Committee of the combined organizations being elected with five representatives for each of the two former groups.

2. It was agreed that the name of the combined organization be the Armenian Federation of the Workers Party—Social Democratic Hunchakist Party, until further action was taken by a new Convention of the combined organization.

3. It was agreed that the name of the official organ of the combined Federation should remain "Young Armenia" until further decision by the C. E. C. of the Workers Party.

These decisions were determined by the view of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party that it was necessary that there be a transition period between the time of affiliation with the Workers Party and the final organization of the revolutionary Armenian workers as a section of the Workers Party, during which the members of the Social-Democratic Hunchakist Party would become familiar with the program and purposes of the Workers Party and the Communist International.

Educational Work Needed

It was the view of the Central Executive Committee that for a period of a year at least it was necessary to carry on an educational campaign among the workers of both groups so that the best elements in both groups could be consolidated into a real section of the Communist Party of this country, the Workers Party of America.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party felt that to immediately abolish the name, Social-Democratic Hunchakist Party, which had been the name of this group for over a quarter of a century, would mean the loss of a large number of members of this organization and is therefore agreed to the transition period in which the name was retained as part of the name of the Federation, and the name of the paper also to remain "Young Armenia."

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party does not believe and would not permit any organization to be part of the Workers Party of America which permanently retained a distinctive name such as that of the Armenian Federation at the present time. The Central Executive of the Workers Party believes that the Armenian workers are just as ready and will be just as proud to be known as Communists and members of the Workers Party as are the Russian, Jewish, South Slavic, German, Hungarian and other language sections of the Workers Party.

Maintain Discipline

It seems, however, that some of the members of the former Armenian Workers Party (which was, however, not affiliated with the Workers Party prior to the unity) have refused to accept the decisions of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party. This group seems to think that it can achieve at once the goal which the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party is striving for in the policy it is following among the revolutionary Armenian workers. They desire to change the name of the Federation and the name of the paper at once, and declare that if the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party will not accept its views, then it will split the Armenian Section of the Workers Party and leave the Workers Party. In other words, the attitude of these mistaken workers is: "We are Communists if we can have our own way; if we can not have our own way, then we are not Communists and we will not be part of the Communist Party of America, the Workers Party."

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party cannot make any compromises with such "communists." If the rebelling section of the Armenian Federation are real Communists they will accept the decision of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, for discipline is now one of the first principles of a Communist organization.

Central Committee Acts

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party has declared that those members of the former Armenian Workers Party who refuse to accept the decisions of the Central Executive Committee in regard to the Armenian question thereby exclude themselves from the membership of America and from the right to call themselves members of the Communist International.

It falls upon all members of the Armenian section who are loyal to the Communist organization in this country and to the Communist International to at once return to the Armenian section and to take up the work of consolidating and organizing the former members of the Armenian Workers Party and the Social-Democratic Hunchakist Party as a solidly organized section of the Workers Party of America; it declares further that the question of the name of this organization and the name of the paper it publishes will be taken up at the next Convention of the Armenian Section and that this Convention will be held as soon as the former branches of the two organizations are officially reorganized and functioning as a section of the Workers Party.

Armenian workers do not let a few unthinking, hasty individuals mislead you into destroying the unity of your organization. Rally to the support of the Armenian Section of the Workers Party. Help to create a strong organization of Armenian workers in support of the Communist movement as represented by the Workers Party and in support of the Communist International.

THE PARTY AT WORK

More Applications for New Charters

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

The Organization Drive started by the Party some time ago continues to bring results. Fifty-four charters have been issued by the National Office to newly organized branches in various parts of the country since December first.

According to language the new branches are divided as follows: Italian, 12; English, 11; etc. as the total number; Armenian, 7; South Slavic, 6; Polish, 5; Russian, 4; including a new branch organized in Providence, R. I.; Jewish, 3; Ukrainian, 3; Finnish, 1; French, 1; Greek, 1; Czecho-Slovak, 1. Several of the English branches are in the agrarian districts. In addition to this a charter was issued to a newly organized City Central Committee in Nanticoke, Pa. Out of the 54 charters 21 were issued during the first 10 days of January, after the Third National Convention. This is a record for our party. It is a most encouraging fact and should serve as stimulus to all party members to double their efforts and help make the party grow.

The fact that more and more branches of the party are being organized all over the country brings to light two important factors. It shows that the objective conditions in America are becoming more and more favorable for communist organization. The coming of an industrial depression and unemployment, the attacks of the government against the foreign born workers, who comprise the bulk of the workers engaged in the basic industries, the campaign of the open shoppers against organized labor, the ever growing bankruptcy of the farmers, the continuous betrayals of the workers on the part of the reactionary officialdom of the American Federation of Labor and the Socialist Party must drive the workers towards the communist position. On the other hand, the correct policies followed by the Workers Party during the last year made its influence continuously grow in the American labor movement. Even our enemies must admit that the Workers Party is at present the only revolutionary political organization in this country whose influence is seriously felt both by the capitalist class and by the reactionary labor leaders.

The Party is only now beginning to take full advantage of the possibilities created during the last year. The fifty-four charters are the best proof of this. A well known comrade once pointed out that a communist who is unable during the year to get at least fifteen new members into the party and influence at least one hundred and fifty workers is a poor communist.

Let us take this remark seriously and redouble our efforts to get into the party the best thousand new members as set forth by the Central Executive Committee a few months ago.

ANTI-RED LIARS TWIST THE NEWS ABOUT RUSSIA

Try to Give Riga Dope Moscow Flavor

Riga has now taken the place occupied by Helsingfors during the famine as the principal European lie factory. It is near enough to Moscow to give the lies amazing "authenticity," Russian capital a Russian flavor and sufficiently far removed to give the liars reasonable security.

The Chicago Tribune notorious for news perversion has recently featured articles to the effect that a serious crisis was raging in Russia with Trotsky, the Red Army and the Cheka lined up on one side and on the other the Central committee of the Russian Communist Party. Trotsky, by the way is an important member of this committee.

Where there is some smoke there is generally more or less fire, and there is plenty of fire in Russia, plenty of life. The Diplomatic correspondent of the London Daily Herald, who is not a Communist, explains that the innocent cause of the flood of lies that have appeared recently in the capitalist press of the world is a heated discussion that is taking place within the Communist Party of Russia.

Live on Hope

The White Guard elements who never lose hope that the good old days may yet return placing the parasite in control of Russia, see in this controversy, a sign that Soviet control is cracking. But as the Daily Herald correspondent says, this is not a sign of decay but of exuberant vitality.

The Riga messages are not mere fakes; they are perversions of the truth. The Daily Herald correspondent continues:

There is a tremendous controversy raging in the Russian Communist Party—a controversy carried on with much hard hitting and with no mincing of words. The question at issue is the relaxation of the iron discipline and the rigid central control of the revolutionary years. But behind it is that perennial fight of the "Young Guard" against the "Old Guard," that rages in every healthy living organization.

"The younger generation is knocking at the doors" of the Kremlin. And the noise of their knocking echoes across Europe. "Listen," say the gentlemen of the "Times," "Listen to the noise. The walls must be falling."

Certainly if in any Western bourgeois party there was such fierce public discussion that party would be near to breakdown. For the custom and the instinct of those parties is to hush up all internal squabbles as long and as closely as possible.

Russian Psychology

But the Russian Communists are neither Western nor bourgeois. Working-class Parties are apt to be more frank and less repressed in their manner of controversy. Their language is more direct.

And the Russian Communists are also Russian. They have all the Russian love of a good verbal row and have all the Russian indifference to publicity. Our proverb about "washing dirty linen" does not appeal to the Slav. He thinks that the open air is the most healthy place for such laundering operations.

They are enjoying themselves thoroughly—both Young Guard and Old Guard. But if the gentleman of the "Times" thinks that all this combat means a splitting of the Party and "war to the knife" between two factions, they are as mistaken as a visitor from some strange land who, watching a Rugby match, concluded that the two fifteens were mortal enemies each of the other.

The Coming Congress

The dispute will go on until and during the Party congress next month. The "Young Guard" will win some concessions. There will be a modification of central control, an increase of democratic self-expression for the rank and file.

And the decision of the Congress will be loyally accepted by both sides. There will be no split.

And at the least sign of trouble from without, dissensions would cease and the ranks be closed solidly.

WESTERN MINERS WAGES SUFFICIENT ONLY FOR UPKEEP OF CONVICT

Statistics made public in West Virginia indicate that the standard of living of the state's coal miners is not much higher than the standard of living of the criminals in the state prison at Moundsville.

The average miner earns $1044.05 per year for each prisoner. This does not include administrative costs.

I. W. W. Make Test Case

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—The first conviction under the Busick anti-I. W. W. injunction has been secured in the sentencing of R. Wood to $250 fine or 250 days for "contempt of court" in that he was a member of the I. W. W. Attempts to make the injunction effectual in Los Angeles having failed, the war was carried to Sacramento, where it originated, and to the court of Judge Busick himself. Wood was arrested on a vagrancy charge and then sentenced under the terms of the injunction.

As a test case, this will be appealed, if necessary to the supreme court of the United States.

POTOFSKY TELLS HOW AMERICANS HELP RUSSIANS

Sees "Daily Worker" Power for Recognition

By JACOB S. POTOFSKY
Sec'y-Treas. R. A. I. C.

I am glad to send a line to THE DAILY WORKER. I am interested specially in the outright position your paper promises to take for the recognition of Soviet Russia and the publication of the facts concerning the real conditions in that country.

The Russian-American Industrial Corporation, a labor corporation dedicated to the task of rendering economic aid to the workers of Russia, bespeaks the interest and active support of all "Worker" readers in its efforts for the industrial reconstruction of Russia.

The R. A. I. C. needs the help of every American worker who believes in the recognition of Soviet Russia. For recognition without practical and material help to Russia's reviving industries would be empty and meaningless. With or without de jure recognition, however, the R. A. I. C. way of helping Russia is workable. The needle trade unionists in Petrograd, Moscow, Nijhni Novgorod, Kazan, Kharkow, deeply appreciate the assistance we have given and will continue to give so long as they stand in need of industrial credits.

The clothing shops of Russia, are efficient working units and their production during the past year has been a surprise even to the most friendly and sanguine observers. Thanks to their competent organization and the equipment they have been able to purchase with the credits we have sent the average quality of the work done by the Russian workers is now equal and even superior to that done in any other continental factories. The real wages of the workers are steadily rising.

American workers who have been searching for an ideal and effective medium through which to express their friendship for the New Russia should not lose sight of the opportunities opened by R. A. I. C. To become a partner in Soviet Russia's industrial recovery by investing $10 or more is a privilege which no worker friendly to Russia can afford to pass by.

The lines of communication between American and Russia are more and more direct; the road is opening. We are proud to have participated in the job of making real and substantial the relations between one group of Russian workers and their comrades in the factories and on the farms of America.

May The Daily Worker be a sharp sword, cutting asunder the armor of deceit and hypocrisy by which the exploiting class conceals its robbery of the workers.

(Signed)
JAMES H. DOLSEN.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

CHICAGO YOUNG WORKERS ELECT NEW COMMITTEE

Issue Leaflets for the Working Youth

The singing of the "International" marked the opening of the 4th semi-annual convention of the Young Workers' League of Chicago. Fifty regular delegates and several fraternal delegates from the Independent Young Peoples' Socialist League and Workers' Party of America attended. Manuel Gomez, represented Local Chicago of the Workers' Party.

The reporter for the Junior Section of the Y. W. L., Rose Cohen, went into a thoro discussion of its activities showing how, in some schools, they were successful in combating the religious propaganda which is fed to the little tots. Since the organization of the Junior Sections last May 1923, they have been able to publish a fine monthly organ, "The Young Comrade."

Martin Abern, National Secretary of the Y. W. L. of America discussed at length the campaigns which lie ahead of the Y. W. L. and the necessary tactics to derive the greatest benefit from these campaigns, among them being Child Labor, organization of the League along shop unit form and the unionization of Youth Labor.

The Industrial Organizer described the efforts of the Y. W. L. towards organizing itself along shop model lines. The League in Chicago has been quite successful in this task. Already two shop nuclei and one school nuclei has been established.

The Educational Director called the attention of the delegates to the success of the plan of education which would build our league on a firm foundation. In his outline of the work, he encouraged members to speak before branches on subjects which affect the young workers.

Then followed reports on Literature, Research, Sports, Press, Children, Finances, Social and other activities which demonstrates that the Chicago Y. W. L. has made real progress toward the organization of the working youth of Chicago.

Resolutions dealing with the following matter were passed by the convention: Calling upon National Propaganda Committees to be located in the same city of the N. E. C., and urging the N. E. C. and C. E. C. of the Y. W. L. to issue leaflets regularly dealing with the problems of the working youth.

An Executive Committee of 15 were elected for the coming six months as follows: John Harvey, Peter Herd, Chas. Erickson, Al Schasp, Frankelstein, Augusta Sungail, Albert Harris, Lydia Beidel, Frank Buckley, Natalie Gomez, Newhoff, Vera Friedman, Charlotte Malamud, Emma Blechschmidt and one member of the C. E. C. of the Workers' Party.

South American Follows U. S. Plan

The South American Republics are beginning to spend millions for armaments—ships for mass slaughter—much like the American war plan which already counts off eighty-three cents of every dollar of taxes even before paid.

One of the South American "republics" voted $100,000,000 for war purposes!—Who is behind this move? Is it the United States, in order to protect its favored position in these exploited republics? Or is it England endeavoring to wrest these favorable markets from the U. S? Whatever, the answer, this move presages intensified military training for a large section of the South American youth, particularly in the Argentine nd Brazil.

There are small Young Communist Leagues in both these countries and we can count on them to realize the danger to the working youth of those countries in the contemplated arming and act accordingly. We here, too, have a big military problem to quires and enemy—real or supposed; and we must begin to fraternize with the workers of the "enemy" long before the battle.

SUPPRESSED IN GERMANY, BUT IT REAPPEARS IN VIENNA

After an interruption of some weeks caused by the suppression of the Communist Party and its press in Germany, Inprecorr (International Press Correspondence) is now published in Vienna.

When Inprecorr ceased publication, the loss was felt keenly because it is impossible to keep in touch with the international movement without Inprecorr, which is the most valuable source of international information. Without Inprecorr we were practically cut off. It is fortunate that it has resumed publication.

The new address is:
Inprecorr,
Postamt 64, Schliessfach 29,
Vienna, VIII,
Austria.

(Telegrams: Inprecorr, Vienna.)

Subscription rates to the Inprecorr remain as heretofore, i. e.: For the United States, 3 dollars for six months; British Isles, 12 shillings for six months; other countries, 3 dollars or the equivalent in local currency.

Comrades should subscribe to Inprecorr because without it they cannot hope to keep abreast of the international Communist movement, of events in general. The best writers of the International write for Inprecorr. It is impossible to subscribe either for the English edition, the German or the French edition; however, the contents of all three is about the same. Inprecorr appears twice a week, with many special numbers in addition. Comrades should grasp at the opportunity offered by its reappearance in Vienna.

PETITIONS URGE AMNESTY FOR 54 NEGRO SOLDIERS

110,000 Signatures Are Already Listed

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

NEW YORK.—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have announced that 110,000 signatures have been gathered for a petition to be submitted to President Coolidge, demanding a pardon for the 54 members of the 24th U. S. infantry, still imprisoned in Leavenworth penitentiary for their implication in the Houston, Texas, riot of 1917.

The petition reminds the president that 13 of the Negroes charged with a share in that riot were hanged without a review of their cases. It is remembered that the riot was precipitated after the colored soldiers had been made the victims of insults and violence., Warden W. I. Biddle declares that the men have been exemplary members of the Leavenworth colony and indorses the efforts being made to secure their liberation.

America's annual toll of race riots and lynching bees is summed up in a report issued by the association. Serious race clashes occurred in five towns during the year, it is stated, the most bitter conflict being enacted in Rosewood, Fla., where five Negroes and two whites were killed in the encounter. Other riots occurred in Los Angeles, Blanford, Ind., Braddock and Philadelphia, Penn.

HOUSEWIVES FIGHT MILK COMPANIES BY HOUSEWIVES' BOYCOTT

BERKELEY, Cal.—The Alameda County Housewives league is organizing a milk boycott in an effort to defeat an increase in price to 11 cents a quart. The distributing companies claim that the increase of 1 cent a quart is necessary to meet a monthly wage increase from $130 to $170 (average) to drivers.

Mrs. W. T. Cleverdon, league president, points out that while the increase permits the companies to pay each driver $20 or more without interfering with present profits it puts $70 in additional profits into the coffers of the companies for each driver employed.

Turning Point in Labor History

The appearance of The Daily Worker may be regarded as the turning-point in the history of the American proletariat. Step by step the reactionaries of America are advancing upon the working-class. The capitalists of America are like the capitalists the world over; they never let the workers raise a voice in the so-called free press.

We congratulate the birth of THE DAILY WORKER, where every class-concious worker will have a voice and it will lead them into a calmer, happier world. A world which is real, sane, and bright.

Yours for Comradeship,

A Vicious Proposal

Secretary of Labor Davis, the imported Welshmen and ex-puddler, who by diligence as a capitalist lackey worked his way up from a steel mill slave, and later on a hawker-of membership cards in a fraternal organization, to his present position in the Coolidge administration, has proposed a selective immigration law under which workers will be examined in European countries as to their fitness to enter the United States. Under the terms of Mr. Davis' proposed law European labor would be brought here under contract to work for certain industries and foreign-born workers' fingerprints registered and photographed like criminals.

Mr. Davis spent several weeks in Europe last year gathering information that would assist him in putting the scheme across. Among the important personages whose views he considered of value was that of Dictator Mussolini, the Italian Fascist chief. Mr. Davis had the backing of the big American manufacturers. President Coolidge, the famous strike-breaker of Massachusetts, in his message to Congress, gave his approval to this plan.

For over half a century the employing classes of this country have encouraged mass immigration. Europe was overrun with glib agents picturing in the rosiest colors the conditions under which the workers of America lived. Moving pictures were introduced showing laborers receiving fat pay checks from their employers. Industrial organizations needed a large supply of cheap labor and foreign-born workers had not yet learned to make a common cause with the native workers and fight for a higher standard of living.

So long as the noonday menu of the foreign-born wage slave was a pail of water, a loaf of bread and a raw onion he was a model worker and virtue oozed from his every pore. But when he began to request the addition of a pork chop or two and an occasional visit to the movies, he lost all his purity in the eyes of the capitalists and he became a menace to our "institutions."

The present attack on the foreign-born workers is a serious threat aimed at the entire American labor movement. Many of our largest unions are composed of foreign-born workers. With the great majority of the members of the United Mine Workers of America subjected to finger printing, registration and constant surveillance and with the threat of deportation hanging over their heads, should they participate actively in strikes, it is quite obvious that the existence of the union would be seriously threatened and its effectiveness reduced to zero.

If the bosses can bring in workers from foreign countries under the protection of the United States Army to break strikes, any effort on the part of the American workers to raise their living standards will be defeated before it starts. This law must not pass.

The time for action is now. This vicious labor hating proposal may come up for consideration in congress at any moment. The Workers Party of America has proposed the formation of Councils for the protection of the foreign-born workers. This selective immigration law presents a serious danger to all American workers, native and foreign. Join hands and defeat it. Crush the effort of the capitalists to finger-print, photograph and register workers. Crush the attempt of the industrial bosses to revive the slave trade through the importation of contract labor.

Count Ludwig Salm Van Hoogstraten had nothing left but a name at the end of which dangled a rusty title when he met Millicent Rogers, Standard Oil heiress, to the tune of $40,000,000. He succeeded in selling his title to Miss Rogers. Among those who envy the count his good fortune are the former Mrs. Hoogstraten and the many other applicants for the $40,000,000 via Miss Rogers. Of course the slaves who rolled up the Standard Oil millions are not thinking much about it. "Their's not to reason why; their's but to do and die."

Harry K. Thaw's family recently settled a suit brought against the murderer of Stanford White by a Kansas City boy for a whipping inflicted on him in a New York hotel in 1917. The settlement involved a sum in the vicinity of $100,000. Mr. Thaw's ability to pay such a large sum is a tribute to the ease with which lunatics can prosper under this capitalist system while sane men cannot make ends meet.

The Fiume question has been settled by the Soviest battalion. Italy gets it. So, D'Annunzio has not fumed in vain.

A Labor Leader's Funeral

When the body of Thomas S. Kearney, former president of the Chicago Building Trades Council was laid to rest, five judges, scores of prominent capitalists, several reactionary labor leaders and at least one priest accompanied the last remains of the man "who never double-crossed a friend" to his last resting place.

Thomas S. Kearney was a "typical" labor leader. He was as "bonafide" as could be. If two ideas ever fought for supremacy in his brain at the same time it is a safe bet that their goal was nothing higher than how to get more of this world's wealth for Tom Kearney.

The capitalists liked him. He stood like the Rock of Gibraltar for the sacredness of a contract between master and slave. He supported the Landis Award which was the entering wedge of the open shoppers in the building industry of Chicago. So in spite of the number of indictments he figured in and the many murder cases in which his name was mentioned, despite his association with "Big Tim" Murphy, Fred Mader and the other leeches who prey on the organized workers of Chicago and at the same time, act as agents for the capitalists, Kearney was held in high esteem by the capitalist press. He was a loyal henchman of capitalism in general and of capitalists in particular.

Therefore it is not surprising that when he died, not alone were "Umbrella Mike" Boyle and Fred Mader, notorious labor grafters, among the prominent mourners but also capitalists and their judges and political lackeys. How these political harpies show their hypocrisy! They rend the heavens with denunciations of "force and violence" and yet they support in life and honor in death that type of labor gangster who holds his position with a gat and uses the labor movement for his own material interests.

Capitalists, capitalist judges, capitalist politicians and capitalist labor leaders were there when Kearney's body was lowered into the grave. He was their own and they recognized him as such. So did the servant of God who officiated. And there was nothing strikingly spiritual in the words that Father John McCarthy uttered. "Tom Kearney . . . always stood by his principles and was a man of stout heart. If more of the disputes between labor and capital were settled on pricipie, the results would be fairer and the world needs more men of stout hearts." Thus the eulogy was brought up by a representative of the air forces of capitalism.

The Kearney type of labor leader in Europe is as extinct as the dodo. Here he still flourishes. The organized workers of America have a duty to perform in ridding their ranks of this menace. There is only one way of doing it and that is to educate the rank and file of the workers.

Capitalist Flunkey Rebuked

John L. Lewis and Gompers are working overtime trying to secure the indictment of radicals who endeavor to cleanse the labor movement of the grafters and capitalist agents who mainly lead it. They are the chief aids of Mr. Hughes in resisting public opinion in favor of the recognition of Soviet Russia. The labor lickspittles of the Gompers type have for their stock argument the fact that revolutionary Russia used force in crushing the enemies of the workers. But they do not say that this force was used legally by the Russian government. It was legalized by the revolution which established the government that used it.

Senator Borah delivered a well merited rebuke to the labor faker who heads the United Mine Workers of America, when the senator delivered his speech in reply to Lodge's attack on Russia. Borah said, "In the offices of many senators may still be found a basketful of printed matter, signed by able lawyers for business clients in which the United Mine Workers are charged with every class of offense against life and property rights which the Mine Worker leader has charged against Zinoviev."

The American labor fakers are not only crooked, but cowardly. They fight the capitalists with their mouths but they are actually on the best of terms with them. The ranting of the labor leaders and the capitalists against Communists on the ground that the latter advocate "force and violence" is the sheerest hypocrisy. Lewis uses gunmen to keep himself in power, the capitalists use gunmen to break strikes, prevent the formation of unions and assist the reactionaries in keeping the progress-ives out of office. The Communists do not believe in individual acts of violence or terrorism and have never advocated it. They believe in the exercise of the mass power of the workers, the majority of the people, for the purpose of establishing the rule of the useful elements of society and abolishing the system of robbery and terrorism which now prevails.

That is the kind of force that the Russian workers use. Not for the enjoyment of devenerate sex perverts and cowards who are employed by the capitalists to crush the unions and kill the radicals, not the parasitic convicts who are employed by the millionaire class fakers to terrorize their members into voting for them. When Senator Wheeler of Montana stated at the recent [illegible] Conference for Progressive Political Action in Cleveland that many western bankers were more progressive than some eastern labor leaders he stated an undoubted truth. The labor reactionaries who now dominate the American labor movement are now the chief enemies of the workers and must be mercilessly exposed until they are driven into open alliance with the capitalists whom they now serve secretly.

The First Issue off the Press

He Surely Finds It Interesting.

The Farmers and the Banks

By ALFRED KNUTSON.

The capitalist press does not say much about the present conditions of the banks, the farmers' debts and the operation of the mortgage system today.

It is to be hoped that the "Daily Worker" will endeavor to get the facts regularly in regard to banking in the United States, especially in its relation to the farmer, because this will make very interesting and instructive reading.

A few outstanding, significant facts are the following:

1. The total debt on the backs of the American farmer today is at least fifteen billion dollars.

2. The net value, to the farmers, of all the crops now raised in the entire country, is not sufficient to pay the interest they owe on all their debts.

3. The farmers at the present time are making very little on their farming operations. During 1923 I have talked to thousands of farmers in Minnesota, South Dakota, North Dakota and Montana, and not a single one of them has told me that he was earning any money on his farming operations.

Here is a concrete story from South Dakota, of how capitalism soaks the farmer: The First National Bank of Wessington Springs, Jerauld county, has closed its doors because the farmer is no longer able to keep up his interest payments. The bank owes the Federal Reserve Bank $426,000, Hanover National Bank of New York City $190,000 and from the Indian Allotments it has received $80,000. Unsecured debts amount to $100,000. The total deposits, checking and saving, is $320,000.

Now comes the interesting and significant part of it. The $426,000 received from the Federal Reserve Bank, represents loans to the farmers in the vicinity of Wessington Springs, and these loans are now being foreclosed on, and the farmers find themselves without farms. Between now and March 1st, 1924, there will be one foreclosure every day, on one of these farmers, and so far twenty-five of them have been foreclosed on and lost their land.

There are many such graphic tales of how the capitalist system "gets" the farmer, and the result of it is that the farmers are gradually beginning to rid themselves of the illusion that the capitalist system is the best in the world, and that they are living in the greatest democracy under the sun.

Old Man Gompers At Work

By D. PETROVSKY
(Head of Soviet Military Schools.)

Samuel Gompers is considered a "Labor Leader". The word "leader" is supposed to convey the idea of a man guiding and directing the labor masses in their struggle. The American "labor leaders", however, are not of this type. It is only in the first days of their career that they participate in the struggle of the proletarians and, even then, they display more interest in the trade union officials of higher rank than in the sympathies of the labor masses and their needs.

The higher the rank of a trade union official, the farther he is from the laboring masses and accordingly, the nearer to the politicians holding the reins of power in the "old" democracy of the new continent.

Sam Gompers is at the top. He possesses the gold pen presented to him by Wilson. The halls of all the "big men" connected with political machinery are open to him.

The American politicians are not orators with fine phraseology. They are men of deeds. They would not open their halls and would not, without reckoning, present anyone with their pens. They demand compensation. A "labor leader" is of value to them only in the event of his fooling the laboring masses and doing that dirty work which the politicians themselves consider not beboowed, or unable to go in their own name.

Sam Gompers has been doing his work, struggling against immigration, at the direction of the American barons of coal and iron. The leader of laborers, whose entire strength is based on the international solidarity of the toilers, has turned into a fighter against the admittance of [illegible] against the immigrants of [illegible] who have been driven by poverty and are, in vain, knocking at the doors of America. At present Sam Gompers is at the head of the office which is carrying on a dirty campaign against the only Republic of Labor.

This "leader" is trying everything to please his "chiefs" and, in his role of a "subservient waiter", is rendering at times the "services of a bear" (services of an opposite nature) to his bosses, who have enough sense and are fully aware of the fact that the great Amalgamated Federation of the Soviet Republics is existing and will exist, despite of their will to the contrary.

As regards America, a new era is also approaching there and is marked by the ever and ever-growing and strengthening of that party—the Workers Party—which is heading and uniting laborers not with a view of serving the interests of capital but for the protection of the interests of the laboring masses.

To the organ of this party—the Daily Worker—our warm welcome. The "Daily Worker" will find means to dethrone the leaders—servants of capital, irrespective of their rank and age. The "Daily Worker" will assist the labor movement to choose honest leaders and to do away with the Gompers system.

William English Walling, another of Samuel's lifelings regrets that the British Labor Party is led by intellectuals who do not or cannot understand the labor movement. What the devil is Walling, doing as a trade union guide? We admit of course that he qualifies as a dumbell but where are his overalls?

MENTIONING THE MOVIES

By PROJECTOR.

"To the Ladies"—A Seventh Wonder.

When a regular big-company film tells as many unpleasant truths about the capitalist system in such a pleasant fashion as does "To the Ladies" the workers should begin to make the box-office talk in favor of more of the same kind. The picture, based on a big Broadway stage success, is not intended for labor propaganda, but is it? Listen—

Three poor white-collar slaves cast longing eyes at the recently vacated office of manager of a two by four piano company in a small American town. They are as polite and as super-efficient as the small boy three days before Christmas. They are just about ready to cut each others throats and to eat crow to get it.

And the lucky one gets his start by setting the plant afire—so the boss can see him put it out. As a reward for this outburst of heroism the boss and his wife arrange to make their first social call upon C. Bebe, the candidate. To properly receive the boss, Mrs. Beebe must run over to borrow a clean collar from a rival candidate for the job. She comes back with the collar—and the rival. Then comes the installment man to grab the piano, hocked to buy a fake "Florida Orange Grove". Both would-be managers can scrape up only $3.22 between them, so the boss pays. There follows a salesman's banquet, two candidates who learn the same after-dinner speech out of the same book—and then an honest-to-goodness clever wife who turns the trick for her swell-headed boob of a husband. The only fault you can find with the picture is that they did not make the wife manager.

The story is true to life and the types are 100% human beings. James Crane, who made "The Covered Wagon", has hit the bulls-eye again this shot. A reasonably intelligent man can make a decent picture of a bye-gone age but to go it with his own day and time—hats off to the man who can hid the picture moguls into letting him do it.

This picture is pie to the whole family but especially to the growing boy who is sure that all he has to do to get ahead in the world is to work hard and open the office door for the boss' wife. Don't let on you want him to see it—just tell him the truth, that it's the funniest comedy in six months and let nature take its course.

The northward migration of southern Negroes is given as the reason for the decrease in the number of lynchings during 1923 as compared with 1922. Negroes were lynched for reasons ranging from "being in an automobile accident" to "frightening white children by walking along a country road," and "mistaken identity," according to Tuskegee Institute.

Sidelights on American History

"The Federal Government was not by intention a democratic government. In plan and in structure it had been meant to check the sweep and power of popular majorities . . . It had in fact been organized upon the initiative, and primarily in the interest, of the mercantile and wealthy classes."
Woodrow Wilson in "Division and Reunion."

AS WE SEE IT

The Chicago Newsboys' Union, local 17600, slipped one over on Cahan, editor of the Jewish Daily Forward when it forced the purveyors of yellow socialism and anti-Soviet lies to eat his intention of forcing the newsboys to pay a higher price for the paper than they had been hitherto paying. Cahan is a typical "white the agent" when it comes to paying out money. He is quite generous with his attacks on Soviet Russia and liberal with his standardized anti-communist falsehoods. Cahan published lying stories recently about communist attacks on the unions. But Cahan is now exposed as a practical strikebreaker on the same footing with the capitalist publishers.

The Chinese are threatening to come here and clean us up. The threat was contained in a letter received by the General Defense Committee of San Francisco. The "backward" Chinese are surprised that men are held in California jails for being members of a labor union. "We of the Chinese Seamens' Union," say the letter "have always looked upon the United States as a free and desirable country and we are very sorry to hear it alleged that our fell' workingmen in the United States are subjected to such persecution unparalelled even in the history of China." And that is saying a mouthful.

Capital and labor are coming together with a vengeance. In the balmy breezes of Florida, President Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America and the coal operators will meet to settle the differences between the miners, workers and employers. Meanwhile the miners will dodge gas, explosions, fire and water in their underground caves.

A headline in the New York Times informs us that the public snapped up the $10,000,000 block of stock offered by the Brotherhood Investment Company, which is controlled by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Among the public are, Otto H. Kahn, Frank A. Vanderlip, Fred Ecker, Edward D. Duffield, General Goethals, Irving T. Bush, Arthur L. Humpreys, S. M. Brown, James Speyer and several presidents of railroad corporations. We have seen the "public" pictured in many guises, but never as a millionaire. We took the poor fellow for "the third party" or "the innocent bystander" but here he shows himself as a bloated capitalist while we were under the fears of pity in his behalf. By the way capital and labor are sure making up. Our labor leaders may yet solve the social problem by emancipating the workers, peacefully and bloodlessly, one at a time.

Samuel Gompers is now on a mid-winter inspection tour of Panama. He took time from his strenuous duties to denounce the British Labor Party for their impudence in repudiating his "non-partisan" policy and insisting on independent political action. According to Sam they are almost as bad as the communists. They have the dreadful intention, he declares in a statement to the capitalist press of aiming to coerce France, relegate America to the back seat and ignore the League of Nations. One ofttimes wonders whether after all, Gompers is not a direct lineal descendant of King Tut's tomb and not the president of a labor organization.

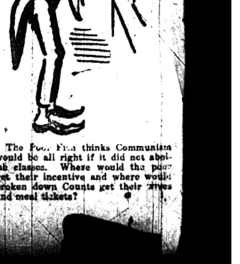
A United Press correspondent inquired of Attorney General Daugherty recently whether he was going to prosecute those communists against whom he claimed to have "abundant evidence" to substantiate the Hughes charge of engaging in illegal activities against the government. Daugherty was peeved that anybody should ask such a foolish question. If he prosecuted them, a lot of silly people would begin to stage free speech parades and demonstrations. He elderly eyed the reporter and said, "If you are in sympathy with those people you are a nut. That is the official department of justice opinion of you." Which is about what we expected from a man with the attorney general's physiognomy.



The Fox Trot thinks Communism would be all right if it did not abolish classes. Where would the people get their incentive and where would broken down Counts get their dress and meal tickets?

Battle for Life of French Franc in Paris as King Faces Labor Government in London

George V Talks of U. S. Ban as Rule of Tories Totters in Citadel of English Imperialism

Labor Wins First Parliamentary Clash

LONDON.—Labor was victorious in the first clash in the Commons when the new house, with labor represented by 190 members occupying the front benches, symbolic of the official opposition, entered upon the business of forming committees, Stanley Baldwin proposed James Hope for the chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee.

J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor Party, was on his feet immediately. Declaring that the House had met "under exceptional circumstances," he said he believed it would be "a profound pity" if the House voted on Baldwin's motion. Whereupon the Premier withdrew his proposal.

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

LONDON.—The fateful session of Parliament, which may see ascension to power within a week of Great Britain's first labor government, was opened in state today by King George, who delivered a speech from the throne at noon.

As His Majesty's address was read to the assembled houses, there were crowded at the bar of the House of Lords, whither the Commoners are summoned for such occasion, nearly 200 Labor M. P's, who expect this time next week to be occupying front benches with Ramsay MacDonald as Prime Minister.

Elbow to elbow with them were the more familiar figures of Parliament, former Prime Ministers Lloyd George and H. H. Asquith, leaders of the Liberal Party, and their followers, and Stanley Baldwin and Robert Horne and the conservatives whose day in power has just about run.

There was a tendency to listen attentively to the King's words; it is an approval of the speech that the vote of confidence in Baldwin's government will be taken.

Among the foreign affairs touched upon in the speech from the throne, King George declared:

"My ministers, together with the Dominion representatives, have been anxious to remove the difficulty regarding illicit importation of liquor into the United States and have made proposals for an agreement which is on the eve of conclusion. This should further strengthen the happy relations prevailing between the two countries and people."

French Currency Toboggans as Financiers Withdraw Support from the Poincare Government

Up and Down, Goes French Franc

PARIS.—The French franc reacted today in anticipation of desperate Government measures and gained a bit, being quoted at 22.42 to the dollar, compared with its close Monday at 22.76.

Bankers, among whom alarm spread swiftly as the bourse saw near-panic scenes and there seemed no limit to the franc's drop, expect that the depreciated exchange may continue to gain slowly, if the Government's measures prove effective. If not, it is believed the slump will be resumed.

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

PARIS.—All taxes in France are to be raised 20 per cent and the severest measures of economy in public services put into effect, as part of the cabinet's program of financial adjustment to bolster up the franc.

The program, which also includes adjournments of all such projects as pensions and bonuses, will be introduced in the Chamber of Deputies Thursday.

The sensational fall of the franc marks the collapse of Premier Poincare's efforts to dominate Europe and single handedly crush the Germans. The pyramid of power in Paris is tottering. France is face to face with a bankrupt's realities.

Business Loses Confidence in Politicians.

The suddenness of the crisis is due to loss of confidence in the Poincare ministry by French business men and financiers. They are selling their domestic securities and are investing in dollars, anticipating the deluge. Their mad scramble to get from under has had an artificial effect in depreciating the franc before its time.

Premier Poincare hoped to stave off the debacle until after the French elections next spring to safeguard his political future. The panic now under way, however, may get entirely out of hand and compel a ministerial change almost overnight.

The signs in Paris are the same as they were in Berlin at the beginning of the collapse of the mark. France has begun to arrest foreign speculators as Germany did; there are hurried meetings of financial officials; closing of exchanges is threatened; market quotations are beginning to be withheld. All these activities are meant to create an impression that conspirators are at work artificially to drive the franc down.

As a matter of fact, only one cause can depreciate any nation's currency. It is the same cause that destroys an individual's credit. It consists of paying out more money than is being taken in. The French government is not paying its way. Taxation is not sufficient to meet expenses. The deficit for the coming year is estimated at twelve billion francs. Yet, in the face of this poverty-stricken sign, France has just loaned 300,000,000 francs to Czecho-Slovakia and 400,000,000 francs to Poland to bind those countries to her as military allies. This is the Poincare policy of matching empty coffers with preparations for another war.

The Collapse Was Inevitable.

Collapse has been inevitable from the first, for Premier Poincare is like a merchant who has added a story to his building to equal each year's deficit.

By some temporary juggling, it is barely possible the French government may arrest for the moment the franc's fall. But whatever device to be taken can only have a temporary effect. There is no permanent cure for France except to increase taxation and reduce the war indemnity to a sum Germany can pay. The longer this is delayed the worse will be the eventual catastrophe.

The best sign that it may not be long delayed is the desperate effort of French capital to get out of the country as German capital fled from Germany at the sign of the tottering mark. French financiers realize the inevitable is upon them and the politicians must soon take notice. For in the background is M. Clemeneeau, who predicted it as it is happening.

The French Chamber of Deputies gave Premier Poincare's government a vote of confidence this afternoon. 388 to 189, on the question of drastic government measures to arrest the fall of the franc.

Oil Refinery Blows Up.

Pointers on the Mellon Tax Scheme

If Congress should adopt the Mellon tax scheme the Secretary of the Treasury himself would save about $2,000,000 by it.

There are 162 taxpayers who pay on small incomes of $300,000 to $500,000 totalling all told $31,859,630. There are 63 who have annual incomes ranging from half a million to a million dollars, amounting all together to $25,112,090. Twenty-one persons pay taxes on incomes of more than $1,000,000 a year.

To these 246 taxpayers representing the most powerful bankers and manufacturers in the country and paying $58,391,446 in taxes the Mellon plan will mean an annual saving of $45,000,000.

If the Mellon plan is adopted by Congress it will mean a saving of about $150,000 to each of these big capitalists.

"Are we for the Mellon plan? YES!"—says the chorus of Wall Street financial and industrial kings!

"Am I for the Mellon plan? Of Course!" says President Coolidge, the Chief Executive link between the White House and the Stock Exchange.

ILLINOIS MINERS PREPARING FOR BIG CONVENTION

Preliminary Meet Held at St. Louis, Ill.

(Special to The Daily Worker.)

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill.—Miners' delegates from many sections of Illinois assembled at Carpenters Hall here, for the purpose of formulating plans for the National Convention of the United Mine Workers of America, which convenes at Indianapolis January 22nd. All indications point to the fact that this year's gathering will be the most important convention ever held.

Those who attended the meeting, here, and some of them traveled far, had a definite understanding of the problems affecting the United Mine Workers of America. The issues raised by the Progressive Miners Committee were discussed and many of the delegates reported that resolutions dealing with the important subjects had met with the unanimous approval of their respective local unions.

As is customary in such gatherings, the inevitable wag was present with a joke. One of the delegates announced that his local passed a resolution calling upon the United Mine Workers of America to increase the size of the Mine Workers' Journal. This astounding proposal almost threw the meeting into an uproar. They evidently feared that, considering the ability of Mr. Ellis Searles, to make of the journal a dumping ground for all the pro-capitalist rubbish he can pick up or purchase, if it were increased in size the opportunities for harm would be much greater.

But as the delegate read the resolution, anger turned to laughter. "We object to the Journal," read the resolution, "in its present size and want it enlarged so that we can make better dummies out of it."

The chief use of the Miners' Journal has been for the making of "dummies" and for the benefit of those who do not understand the parlance of the mine I will say, that the name "Dummie" is used when referring to the packing that is necessary to prepare for a shot or blast. The "Journal" is very useful for this kind of work.

Boost Daily Herald as British Labor Climbs to Power

"A million Readers for The Daily Herald," is the slogan raised by British Labor Party on the eve of taking power.

Much assistance has been given The Daily Herald since the last meeting of the Trades Union Congress, most of it of a financial nature. The present campaign proposes an intensive canvass of the members of the British Labor movement with the object of making every duespaying member a reader of the official organ.

Commenting on the need for an enormous circulation, The Daily Herald says:

"The dangers of misrepresentation multiply as we increase our strength. The nearer we get to the seat of power, the more insistent and unscrupulous will our opponents become. Their most powerful weapon is the press and we can remedy this condition only if our supporters will buy our own paper.

"Help us get the million circulation and we will supply, not one paper, but several."

FALL GETS SICK IN FACE OF OIL LAND DEAL PROBE

Declines to Discuss Sinclair's Favors

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—Ex-Secretary of the Interior A. B. Fall said that the only reason he was not appeared before a senate committee investigating the leasing by the department of the interior of public oil lands is that he is sick. Fall is registered at his hotel under another name.

He declined to say where he got the money with which to buy a $35,000 ranch in New Mexico at a time when he was known to be in hard straits financially. He also refused to comment on his "purchase" of live stock from Harry Sinclair, the oil magnate. It was brought out at the senate committee hearings that Fall bought from Sinclair a lot of breed stock for $1,200, and that the freight Sinclair paid amounted to $1,100.

Mr. Fall recently made a trip to Soviet Russia in the interests of Sinclair, it is understood.

GRABLE, DEPOSED FAKER, PROPOSED FOR LABOR BOARD

Senate Radicals Fight Board, Nominations.

WASHINGTON.—A new progressive effort to force down freight rates on farm products was begun in the Senate today.

Senator La Follette, progressive leader, demanded in a resolution that the Interstate Commerce Commission be ordered to cut rates on all farm products to pre-war levels.

The resolution was referred to the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate of which Senator Smith, democrat, is chairman.

The first tilt between progressives and the regulars in the committee, came over nominations sent by President Coolidge for places on the Railroad Labor Board and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Progressives want the board abolished and they resented the appointments proposed by the administration for continuing its powers. But they permitted the Labor Board nominations to slip thru the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

Favorable action was taken on the nomination of E. F. Grable, Michigan who betrayed the Maintenance of Way strike; Horace Baker, Ohio, and Edwin P. Morrow, Kentucky, to be members of the board.

One of the first legislative steps of the new committee undoubtedly will be repeal of the Pullman Baggage and Transportation Surcharge rates. No less than six amendments have been put before the committee on this subject.

NEEDLE WORKERS IN NEW YORK FIGHT FOR AGREEMENT

Quit Work for Eleven Obstinate Bosses

(By The Federated Press.)

NEW YORK.—Garment workers employed by eleven New York firms have downed their needles and shears in strike to enforce existing agreements. Negotiations for a settlement have been opened but an understanding has not yet been reached.

Commenting upon this conflict, The Advance, official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, states that most of the employers involved in this dispute "seem unable to learn from experience that an agreement is effective for the entire period for which it is written and that the mere opening of a new season does not mean a new agreement."

The Joint Board is determined this time to make it unmistakable to both to manufacturers and contractors that the program for enforcing the agreement in the market and safeguarding the public thru the maintenance of union conditions in the shop is going to be carried out to the letter.

It is stated at union headquarters that the employers' offensive is due to a desire to exploit the present abnormal unemployment. An attempt to lower wages and working standards at a moment when jobs are at a premium is believed by the employers to stand an excellent chance of success. The Union differs with this assumption and is now struggling to defeat the employers' campaign.

WHITE WASH STANDARD OIL IN PEKIN BLAST

Expect Coroner's Jury to Favor Rockefeller

By TOM TIPPETT
(Special to "The Daily Worker")

PEKIN, ILL.—In a report that comes within washes the company "white" blamer for the fatal explosion in the dry starch works of the Corn Products Refining Plant here, Jan. 8, the investigation into the cause of the disaster is a hot box in a motor, that someone had failed to oil for a long spell of time."

With two additional deaths on Jan. 15, the number killed now is 42 with 17 remaining victims horribly burned in hospitals. Some of these will die, others will be blind, and otherwise crippled for life. All but one body has been recovered from the wreckage. Whether it will ever be found is a matter of conjecture here. The missing number 16.

The investigation into the cause of the catastrophe was conducted by Harold J. Brice, engineer in charge of the testing laboratories of the U. S. Bureau of Chemistry, Department of Agriculture, and John C. Gamber, state fire marshal. The word negligence is not mentioned in their report altho it is obvious, even from their own conclusions, that failure to keep motors oiled to the extent that one of them burnt out, in the presence of inflammable fumes and dust, is in itself criminal.

The over heated motor, according to the report, "apparently" caused an explosion in the grinding room, the force of which was impeded because of accomodating construction of the glass walled building. The sparks set up ignition, the report continues, when the flames shot thru the conveyor to the dry starch building from the grinding room and set off the dust that completely demolished the building and killed the twelve employes there. This version is exactly as was reported in The Daily Worker, Jan. 6, except that no account was given for the original spark.

This disaster, according to the report, has taught much on the subject of explosions. In the future, it says, all buildings in which explosions are liable to occur, must be built remote from the safer portions of the plant. These buildings must have walls and roofs of glass so that explosions easily break them and spend their force on the outside instead of demolishing the plant as was done here.

No mention is made in the report of suction fans to eliminate the explosive dust and fumes, to prevent explosions altogether. It is pointed out by the workers at the plant, that explosions—even in properly constructed buildings, that blow out glass walls and tear off roofs, at the same time kills working men, even tho the plant is saved from destruction.

Plans will be installed in the new building, however, it is understood here. No mention is made of them for obvious reasons. In all the reams of material that have been printed on the explosion here, not a line appears regarding suction fans altho their absence is the first thing mentioned when workers are interviewed.

The coroner's jury, comprised of three anti-labor newspaper representatives, two retired farmers and a banker will held their inquest after the remaining dead man has been taken out of the wreckage or when hopes of discovering his bits of flesh have been abandoned.

The investigators, in their report, "appreciate the co-operation they received in their work from the officials of the company." The Corn Products Refining Company is a subsidiary of Standard Oil.

RAILWAY TELEGRAPHERS ON C. M. AND ST. P. IN STRIKE REFERENDUM

Telegraphers on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad, members of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, affiliated with the Railway department of the American Federation of Labor, have taken a strike vote on the application of the decision of the railway board granting the members of the organization an increase of two cents per hour.

The contention of the union is that the two cent increase was a minimum and that in many instances the decision of the board granted considerably more than that amount to certain classes of workers.

The strike vote followed the failure of a committee of the union to adjust the matter and the result will be known in a few days.

Mistake in Greeting of Amalgamated Local No. 39.

In the greeting of Local No. 39, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, to the Daily Worker, appearing in yesterday's issue, the signatures should have been those of A. Beck, president, and Jacob Gossman, secretary, instead of the signature of Hyman Blumfield, former president of this local of the Amalgamated.

The Gold Dust Twins of Politics

[illegible]

On the Republican National Committee there are 19 bankers; 8 bankers & capitalists; 4 professional political bureaucrats; 4 who call the world their own; six farmers, but who are in reality, wealthy corn & cotton growers; 2 manufacturers; 2 newspaper publishers; 1 public utilities director; 1 lumber man; and one each in the chemical, sugar and mining industries. Here we have a hundred per cent control of the Republican Party by business, especially Wall Street.

The situation with the Democratic National Committee is precisely the same. Here the lawyers number 36; bankers 9; publishers 2; contractors 2; capitalists 4; professional politicians 4; farmers 2; lumber operators 2; capitalists 2; and bankers, lawyers & lumber operators, oil magnates, and dealers one each. Again we have not a single worker or poor farmer on the controlling committee of this Party.

These facts and figures establish beyond any doubt the fact that the Republican and Democratic Parties are the Gold Dust Twins of the country's politics.

American Workers to Open Soup Kitchen in Germany

Three years ago when the worst drought known in the history of Russia unleashed the dogs of famine upon a year-torn country, the German workers, like the American, came to the immediate assistance of their Russian brothers.

Now the situation is reversed.

Russia has been steadily building up, while Germany has been steadily running into decline, until the workers are faced with a threatened unprecedented famine.

True to their spirit of international solidarity with the workers of other lands, the Russians are coming to the assistance of the Germans. Not in the spirit of charity. But in the spirit of solidarity with their comrades who are suffering gas a result of a decaying capitalist order which makes it possible for the rich to eat and the poor to starve.

The International Arbeiter Hilfe Komitee which mobilized the workers of the world in behalf of the Russians, has now called upon the workers of the world again, in behalf of the starving German workers.

The Friends of Soviet Russia, which is the American branch of this Committee, has therefore organized itself into the Committee for International Workers' Aid, and as Friends of Workers' Germany has called upon all its affiliations to enter a drive for relief of German workers, their wives and children.

In response to this call, Boston, Chicago, New York, Cleveland, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Superior, Youngstown and Milwaukee have already replied definitely.

In each of these cities conferences have been called, inviting all German trade unions and fraternal organizations, as well as all other sympathetic bodies to send delegates. Tag days, house to house canvasses, bazaars, socials, moving picture shows and mass drives will be pointed to help open an American Soup Kitchen in Germany.

There is no time to lose. We must all put our shoulder to the wheel and work as we did during the Russian famine. We raised $930,000 plus $250,000 worth of clothing and medicine for the Russians. We can do at least half as well for the Germans.

OPEN THE AMERICAN SOUP KITCHEN BY FEBRUARY FIRST!

An initial outlay of $500 for equipment and a pledge of $2,000 monthly for maintenance will do it.

Christ's Disciples Ineligible Under Immigration Law

(By Crusader Service.)

NEW YORK.—The efforts of the Anglo-saxon advocates of Nordic domination in the United States to discourage immigration from the countries of Southern Europe through the Johnson Immigration Bill, now before the House, came in for denunciation on the part of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise at the Metropolitan Auditorium.

Rabbi Wise denounced the Ku Klux Klan and the other advocates of the bill and demanded fair legislation on the matter of immigration restriction.

He said hat the proposed measure would have excluded Christ and the Twelve Apostles.

GERMAN COMMUNIST PARTY HAS STRICTER MEASURES

"Only one who works in a factory or has been discharged from a factory as an unemployed can from now on become a member of the Communist Party of Germany. He must name as recommendations two trustworthy comrades who have been members of the Party at least two years. Whoever turns traitor to the Party or even steals into the ranks of the Party as a spy has forfeited his life and is subject to the revolutionary Party justice." From the regulations of the Communist Party of Germany.

FARMER LABOR FLAYS HEALTH HEAD BUNDESEN

Charge Bundesen Aided the Milk Trust.

That the Health Department aided the Milk Trust in the strike which was settled on a compromise basis was the statement made by Frank H. Fowler, of the Farmer Labor Party, in a speech at Lake County Park.

"This strike taught the farmers of Lake County a valuable lesson," declared Mr. Fowler. "It was the first time they were engaged in such a battle and they never before realized the value of co-operation. On the eve of the settlement they were fighting with more determination than ever and the supply of milk to Chicago was practically stopped."

Message to Chicago Labor.

Milk distributors were driven to the extreme of carrying empty milk cans to their plants in order to fool the farmers into believing that they were getting enough milk to supply their customers.

In a special statement to workers of Chicago thru the Daily Worker, Mr. Fowler said:

"The milk producers had the entire co-operation of the Chicago consumers in this fight. The latter knew that the producer had expended millions on his barns and herds to satisfy the requirements of the Chicago Health Department, yet in spite of this the health department, in the possession of a card showing the condition of every one of our milk producing premises as a result of individual inspection, permitted milk to come to Chicago from barns which were never visited by a Chicago health inspector.

Our investigators reported that the conditions of some of these plants which supplied milk to this city during the dairy strike were unlawfully certain. Thus was the loyalty of the producers in the Chicago milk district to the consumers of this city rewarded by a health official.

We appreciate the hand of fellowship extended to us by the Chicago Federation of Labor and the other bodies and labor publications which did everything in their power to assist us in the fight.

The milk producers have been brought into closer association with the city workers than ever before, and furthermore they had an experience in the necessity for organization which will stand them in good stead in the future. The Milk Producers Association has come out of this fight much stronger than it went into it, retaining the complete confidence of its own members to the end.

The strike was settled at $2.67½ a hundred pounds, a compromise between the $2.75 asked by the producers, and the $2.60 offered by the distributors.

Frank H. Kullman, vice-president of the Bowman Dairy Company, was loud in his praise of the fairness of Dr. Bundesen. He had good reason to be, according to the leaders of the milk producers.

In this fight the milk farmers learned that they cannot expect any support from capitalist politicians, but that they must throw in their lot with the city workers who are exploited by the same interests.

RAILWAY UNIONS TRY SETTLEMENT WITHOUT BOARD

General Conference to Meet in Chicago

Wage negotiations are still going on between officials of the railroads west of Chicago and the train service brotherhoods looking to the settlement of a new wage scale and working agreement. The brotherhoods are still working under the terms of an agreement that expired last October. If an increase in wages is won it is expected it will be retroactive.

Both sides seem anxious to settle their differences without the intervention of the railroad labor board.

L. E. Sheppard, head of the Order of Railway Conductors, hopes to be able to arrange a general parley in Chicago soon. "I have every reason to hope that there will be a conference soon." But he has no idea when it will take place.

The United States Railroad Labor Board said that it had no information that such a conference is being arranged. We have no reason to believe such a conference is being arranged.

WINITSKY HEARS OF PARDON ACTION TWO DAYS LATER

Gets Copy of "Freiheit" by Accident

NEW YORK.—Harry Winitsky general manager of the New York daily, "Freiheit," who was pardoned from a 5 to 10 year prison sentence for "criminal syndicalism" this week, received news of his pardon in a strange manner.

Winitsky happened to be in Philadelphia, attending a conference. When he casually picked up a two-day-old copy of the "Freiheit" and read that Governor Smith had granted Winitsky and others complete restoration of civil rights. He paused, rubbed his eyes and concluded that the "Freiheit" must have fallen victim to a hoax. Nevertheless, he stepped to the telephone and called the Philadelphia "Bulletin." He was connected with the local city editor.

"I'm interested in the case of this man, Winitsky," he told the editor. "Can you tell me anything about this gossip that he's been pardoned by the governor?"

"Why, sure," was the reply. It's all over our front page. Of course, it's true."

Winitsky is celebrating tonight by turning the tables on the world. At a ball given by the National Defense Committee of the Labor Defense Council, there will be a good-natured farce in which Winitsky will play the role of judge Bitlow, former cell-mate of Winitsky at Dannemore state prison, will be sergeant of police Winitsky spend the evening sentencing his comrades to 20 and 30 cent fines for dancing with another man's wife—or with themselves. Proceeds of the court procedure at the ball will be devoted to the political prisoners' fund.

Winitsky was convicted in April, 1920 on charges based upon his writings and activities in the communist movement. For two years he submitted to the harshes treatment that could be concoted by the Department of Justice "Americanda. He was beaten repeatedly and brutally, treatened with confinement in an insane asylum and "framed" on false charges of attempted murder made by an embittered prison warden at the Department of Justice's instigation.

Two weeks ago the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court flatly refused his plea for a new trial. Meanwhile, his attorneys submitted a petition for pardon. Winitsky himself declined to seek that escape. In granting an unreserved pardon, Governor Smith established a precedent in this state in releasing a convicted man who is at liberty. Winitsky was freed from Sing Sing in May, 1922, on $5,000 bond offered by the American Civil Liberties Union.

N. Y. Pressman President Flays 'Monarch' Berry

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

NEW YORK CITY.—"The constitution forced upon the membership by an unscrupulous union machine has established a real monarchy in our union," is how Philip Umstaedter, president of the Printing Pressman's Union No. 51, chapter, issued yesterday the result of the nominations in the International Printing Pressmen's Union, the consequences of which were proclaimed from Tennessee by "Major" George L. Berry.

"It is shameless the way it suits Berry to declare now that the results of the nominations are an approval by the membership of his administration in office which distinguished itself by strike-breaking," Umstaedter himself. The opponents of Berry nominated three candidates. But as a result of provisions in the statutes none of these candidates could get the support of a sufficient number of local unions. These statutes can only be changed by the Convention which convenes in autumn. But as the elections of delegates and the composition of the convention are dependent upon the same statutes a change is of course impossible. Our situation can be compared only with that under an autocratic monarchy, with George L. Berry at the head."

CONCERT TO AID SIGMAN VICTIMS CONTINUE FIGHT

Blacklist Used Against Needle trades Militants

The Progressive members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in Chicago who have been expelled from the union by President Sigman, are now through the alliance of the union chief with the bosses, barred from employment in shops under the jurisdiction of the I. L. G. W. U.

With a viciousness heretofore unknown to the American labor movement a campaign of slugging, fines, and expulsions has been carried out against the most active builders of the union. Taken from the job, many of them with wives and families depending on them, they are still determined to continue the fight against the bureaucrats.

Meyer Perlsten, Sigman's tool in Chicago, has the union treasury at his disposal to carry out his campaign of disruption. Tens of thousands of dollars that should be used in organizing work have been squandered in this way.

The workers who are making this fight for progressivism in the needle trades are in need of funds to continue the fight. The Needle Trades Section of the T. U. E. of Chicago has arranged for a mass meeting and concert to raise funds for continuing the struggle.

All needle trades workers opposed to Sigman-Peristein blacklist unionism should come to the assistance of these workers. Their side of the story has to be told in leaflet. This costs money.

The mass meeting and concert will be held in the Ashland Auditorium February 10th. The price of admission is 25 cents. The speakers and program to be announced later.

NEGROES HARD HIT AS JOBLESS CRISIS GROWS DEEPER

Thousand Asked Aid in Chicago in December

The reports of charity organizations indicate that unemployment is on the increase. Edwin C. Jones of the United Charities of Chicago said: "Unemployment first makes itself felt in the Legal Aid department. People who are thrown out of work are unable to collect back wages and small sums owing to them and they appeal to the Legal Aid.

It is not until they are unemployed for some time that they appeal for charitable help. During December 571 new appeals were received by the United Charities as compared with 578 in 1922. Of these appeals help was asked because of unemployment in 98 cases as compared with 78 such appeals last year. That is an increase of about 25 per cent.

Unemployment is affecting Negroes first, the report indicates. Often aid is asked because of unemployment where it is not the primary cause, as in the case of desertions and imprisonment of the family bread-winner. Over 1,000 persons asked for legal aid December as compared with 743 the year previous. Of these 331 were for the collection of wages as compared with 187 the year before. Only 56 persons asked help in collecting small debts a year ago December as against 208 this December.

"HERO" OF HERRIN RAIDS KEEPS "45" ON ROOM TABLE

While "Daily Worker" Interviews Him.

Klan Young who headed an army of 100 race hatred Americans-Ku Klux Klansmen in raids on hundreds of homes in Williamson county, (Ill.), where 23 people were murdered with burning the homes of foreign-born workers, was interviewed by Daily Worker at the Congress Hotel.

Young ignored questions directed to him about the alleged burning of homes by his "army."

"I got all the best elements of the community behind me and we cleaned up," he proudly boasted.

Young received the Daily Worker reporter in his room at the Congress Hotel trying to look real hardboiled. On a table lay a large 45-caliber Colts automatic pistol.

Young had a habit of keeping silent until a question was asked and then talking about anything but the subject of the question.

His chin seemed to need continual shoving out to support the illusion he tried to create of being hardboiled.

"Some fool called the troops in. It was a big mistake." That was the answer to the question "Are you a Klansman?"

"Down in Williamson County we had all our enemies on the run. We have shown those people their places and we will keep them there."

"I intend to go back to Herrin tonight."

CONGRESS HEARS FROM BIG UNION OF FARM-LABOR

Spokesmen from Three States in Capitol

(By Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Committees and members of both houses of congress have been heartened during the past week, from the leaders of the newest and perhaps most significant of all the farm organizations in the United States—the Farm Union of America.

State presidents of the organization from Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas have come here, and patiently have explained to the lawmakers that something more than the farmers and farm workers in the south and west have joined the Farmer-Labor union since it was formed three years ago in an obscure Texas town, and that this represents the largest and most important development in a grass roots in the hisory of agrarian movements.

Feel Solves Just Workers.

For the is a league of farmers who consider themselves ordinary workingmen, like the men who follow other trades. They say their land, or their leases, and their livestock and other equipment is just their kits of tools for carrying on their trade. They want a living wage, and they propose to affiliate with the other organized workers for mutual protection.

During the railway shopmen's strike of last year, the locals of the Farmer-Labor union in the southwest furnished supplies to the strikers and saw to it that no strikebreakers were recruited in their territory. After the cotton crop ripened, the strikers, went out to the farms and picked cotton, free for their union friends.

Want U. S. Labor Rate

Political action is one of the main objects of the union, and it is in support of the Norris-Sinclair foreign marketing bill that they have come to Washington at his time. Meanwhile they are using a system of pooling and marketing their crop through their own expert and bonded sales agents.

"The day when organized farmers can be used to combat the organized workers of the towns is rapidly vanishing," said President Thompson of the Arkansas branch. "Our farmers are applauding what the British Labor Party is doing, and we think the American people are fundamentally capable of as good a job."

NORRIS BLAST BARES BANKS' FARMER WAR

Chambers of Commerce Boycotted by Co-Ops

BY LAURENCE TODD

Special Correspondent of the Federated Press

WASHINGTON, — Triumph of truth over propaganda concerning the robbery of grain farmers in the Northwest was proclaimed in the Senate by Senator Norris, chairman, committee on agriculture. He declared that the report and order issued "after fair investigation and quasi trial" by the federal trade commission against the Minneapolis chamber bears out everything the farmers of North Dakota and Minnesota have been saying for ten years past concerning this monopoly.

This report and order, Norris said, ought to be printed by the Senate as a public document, since there would be a great demand for it from the farmers. Senator Smoot, for the administration, objected and so blocked its printing. Norris promised to read it into the Congressional Record, later, if necessary, in order that enough copies might be had.

Following Administration Favors.

Coming just after the attempt of the Coolidge campaign managers to kidnap the North Dakota delegation to the Republican convention, through favors to Senators Ladd and Frazier, this official proof of the justice of the farmers' struggle on the one hand and of the administration's essential anti-farmer and pro-monopoly policy on the other, had a clarifying effect on the political situation. It gave new courage to the group who had sat up nearly all night with Ladd and Frazier, protesting against the indorsement of Coolidge, which had been voted by the North Dakota Republican state committee, and demanding that they get actively into the fight to instruct the North Dakota delegation for LaFollette.

The federal trade commission has found: "By means of boycott the ... chamber and the members thereof conspired and agreed among themselves and with others to induce its members to refuse to buy from, sell to or otherwise deal with, the Equity Cooperative exchange, its stockholders or the members of the St. Paul Grain exchange. The said respondents have for more than ten years last past been engaged in a conspiracy and agreement among themselves and with others to annoy, embarrass and destroy the business of the said Equity Cooperative exchange, its stockholders and the St. Paul Grain exchange and its members, with the purpose and intent to monopolize and maintain for said chamber and its members a monopoly of the grain trade at Minneapolis, Minn., and within a hundred miles thereof."

The Equity has 17,500 members, in Minnesota, the Dakotas, Montana and Wisconsin, about 90% of its stock being owned by grain farmers. The commission finds that among the unfair methods used by the Minneapolis chamber against it were (a) publication of false statements concerning the financial standing and business methods of the cooperative exchanges; (b) instituting vexatious or unfounded litigation against the cooperative exchanges to injure their credit or reputation; (c) compelling members of the chamber to refuse to deal with members or customers of the cooperative exchanges because of the patronage dividend plan of the cooperatives; (d) preventing telegraph companies from furnishing price quotations on grain to the cooperatives. False and misleading statements concerning the financial affairs of the Equity were published in the Fargo Forum, Fargo Courier News, the Cooperative Manager and Farmer, and the National Grain Grower and Equity News, at the instance of the Minneapolis chamber. The Cooperative Manager and Farmer, controlled by the Secretary of the Minneapolis chamber, was the worst offender in this campaign of malicious lying concerning the cooperatives.

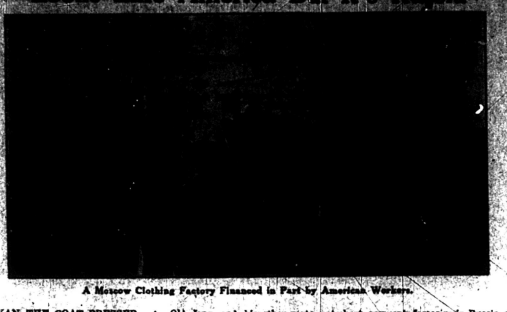
Looks Like America But It's Russia



A Moscow Clothing Factory Financed in Part by American Workers.

IVAN THE COAT PRESSER

BY ROBERT W. DUNN

(For The Federated Press)

MOSCOW.—Ivan Pavlovitch is an old timer among Russian clothing workers. Ivan worked in Russian garment shops in the days of czardom, in fact he has been handling a pressing iron since 1890 when he was apprenticed on a 14-hour day, some times 16 hours, to one of the Presnia district of Moscow. (Ivan is the man with the beard facing the camera.)

Old Ivan was asked by The Federated Press correspondent what he thought of present conditions as compared with the old days before the revolution, the trade union and the shop committee. The old coat presser answered quickly: "A thousand times better now, a thousand times." He pointed around to the well and windows of his room and told of the days when he worked in a dark hole of a shop instead of in this well lighted, airy building.

Old Ivan and his other mates at the bench and the ironing table tell us that in their shop as in the other Russian clothing shops employment is steady and continuous. Even those who have worked in America and in England for better wages than they are now receiving appreciate the regular and steady employment.

Ivan and his friends work in the Optimo Technichiskaya factory in Moscow, one of the model plants of the All-Russian Cothing syndicate. This plant as well as the syndicate itself is directed by a former Baltimore tailor, B. Bograchov one of the "red directors" who are learning in the Russian industries better than any capitalist expert of the old order.

The clothing industry with its organizing talent trained in American shops and its capital raised in part by Americans, workers through The Russian American Industrial corporation, has during the last year made an enviable record of progress. The best garment factories in Russia are included in the All-Russian Clothing syndicate, a state trading organization comprising the unified and nationalized factories of seven Russian cities.

This syndicate in which over 500 American workers have invested and from which they have already received a dividend, comprises 24 factories and 18,000 workers. The sales during the 15 months from July 1, 1922, to Oct. 1, 1923, amounted to $14,350,000. The sales during the first nine months of 1923 averaged $1,150,000 per month. The profits of the syndicate amounted to more than 10 per cent on the invested capital. A part of this profit has been paid to the American stockholders.

The machines in Ivan's factory including the gas iron that he swings were sent to Russia through the Russian-American Industrial Corporation, which was organized in 1922 by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

MANY IDLE IN CHICAGO IN NEEDLE TRADES

Amalgamated Plans to Meet "Quiet Crisis"

These "quiet periods" in the clothing industry in Chicago, The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America are trying to meet by new plans. The clothing industry under the present system of individual manufacturers in competition with each other, works in spurts and starts. Big profits at first with a view to satisfying the needs of the people, no real relief can be provided.

But in the meantime temporary measures must be undertaken, to enable the workers to exist during the slack periods such as the one which now prevails in the clothing industry.

Workers Need Relief.

The Chicago office of the Amalgamated is besieged with demands for relief. Recently the union appropriated $25,000 for the relief of unemployed members. That sum was gone in three weeks. Approximately 800 clothing workers received help.

Many members were under the impression that under the terms of the unemployment insurance agreement entered into between the union and the clothing manufacturers, unemployment benefits would be paid at once. Dr. Leo Wolfman, who is in charge of this department for the Amalgamated assures the members that payments will begin in about two months.

Bosses Seek Reductions.

The manufacturers are also coming around looking for "relief" in the form of reductions in prices. But they now have a union to deal with, not like the old days when they dealt individually with the tailors and could do very much as they pleased. There will be no wage reductions.

The Amalgamated employment office, a free clearing house for jobs for members of the union. Work is apportioned according to seniority rights. Those can work in any shop under the jurisdiction of the Amalgamated without a union card.

Workers Discuss Problems.

Shop meetings are held daily where the workers discuss their problems. These meetings are addressed by experienced organizers and members of economics who know that the present crisis in the industry is quite natural under capitalism and are seeking ways to avoid them.

The Amalgamated has a fine library for the use of the members at 328 S. Halsted St. Here the union members can learn history and economics and every branch of knowledge that is necessary to understand their position in life.

LA FOLLETTE ASKS CONGRESS FREE THE PHILIPPINES

Workers and Farmers of U. S. Back Demand

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Senator LaFollette has introduced a bill in Congress to give complete independence to the Philippine Islands.

Freedom for the Filipino people would be welcome by every worker and farmer in this country. The broad masses of workers and farmers have no interest in being partners to the exploitation and oppression of the eleven million Filipinos. The workingmen of this country are not overanxious to get into another war to save the imperial possessions and spheres of influence of our capitalists.

But we are ready to bet dollars against doughnuts that in the welter of legislative nonsense and quack remedies—all together more than three thousand in number—now before Congress—there isn't a chance in three thousand that the proposal will ever come out of the committee room, let alone get to the floor of Congress for action. Of course, we are not foolhardy enough to expect Coolidge to allow the bill to pass when his Secretary of War Weeks is himself tied up with big financial interests having huge investments there.

There is only one way in which the Filipino people can ever win freedom from their American imperialistic exploiters. The workingmen and farmers of the Philippines must get together with their American brothers and drive out their common oppressors. The trade unions and the political organizations of the workers and farmers should lose no time in uniting together in an immediate big campaign to free the Philippines from Wall Street domination.

LENSKY HERE TO PLEAD CAUSE OF POLISH WORKERS

Shows Polish Mark at 5,000,000 to Dollar

Poland has the most reactionary government in Europe today. As the vassal of France she has outdone all her neighbors in persecutions of workers and radicals. Poland feels that she is absolutely dependent on France, therefore the reaction of the Polish politicians. The Polish politicians do not consider themselves the representatives of the Polish people but the servant of French Capitalism.

Four years of the rule of the servants of French imperialism has pushed down the value of the Polish mark from 10 for a dollar to 5,000,000 for a dollar.

Relief for Terror Victims.

Those are the outstanding facts of the Polish situation as seen by J. Lensky, who is now in this country representing the workers of Poland and trying to organize a campaign for the relief of the victims of Polish reaction.

"From the beginning the Polish republic has been militaristic. Under the protection of France, who was willing to furnish her arms, she spent 45 per cent of her income for militarism. Is it any wonder her industries could not develop?

"The government was forced to give subsidies to industry. The capitalists used the money thus received to speculate, thus decreasing the value of the mark.

"Because of the dependency of industry on the government and the attitude of the government toward the workers, all struggles become political struggles. The capitalists and manufacturers as individuals are not to blame, it all goes back to the servants of French imperialism, the government. When the workers strike and receive a raise the value of the mark decreases and they are worse off than before.

"The workers are taking a larger part in the struggle for political power by electing Communists to office in their labor unions. They are appealing to the 'REDS' more and more for guidance.

"For instance, at the Congress of the Trade Unions of the Textile workers, all offices were filled by Communists.

"The Communist Party as a political organization is outlawed. Yet membership in the Communist Party of people are sent to prison for eight and ten years. The prisons are full of political opponents of the present government of Poland.

"The only program the government has for the workers is to set one nationality against another. The so-called minority nationalities are persecuted in many ways.

"Land belonging to Ukrainians and Ruthenians is given to ex-soldiers. In this way the government avoids infringing on the rights of the big land owners and creates hatred among workers."

CZARISTS IN 'FRISCO FIND SOVIET POLICE BAR PATH TO FAME

BY CARL BRANNIN

Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press

SAN FRANCISCO.—Gen. Apollo Levantovuyev, former brigade commander in the czar's army, has established headquarters, in this city and is training forces for active service.

Instead, however, of harboring designs against the Bolshevik government, the general's military ambition is confined to "cleaning up" on the terrain of the Emporium department store.

He is commander-in-chief of the mop and broom squad, which is composed of several members of his old brigade. It is reported that these ex-privates are quite punctilious in the observance of military etiquette and always give the Chief his proper salute.

"Count" Baronov has a plan which beats mopping floors. He leaped into the local limelight with the statement on the front page of the San Francisco Chronicle, archreactionary daily, that he had organized a company in this city, consisting of 33,000 soldiers and 1000 officers to spring at Siberia on short notice for the purpose of restoring the line of Czar Nicholas to the Russian throne, wherever that is.

The "count" claims that he has found friendly ears in diplomatic and business circles in the United States and that he would have jumped long before this had it not been for the strong patrol of soviet troops on the Siberian border. He says that he is surely going to plunge within six months' time. Other daily papers made no mention of this new monarchist hope.

Perhaps he has already secured enough publicity to establish connections with Rotary clubs and such like for lectures on the advantages of royalist rule.

Jacob Task Urges Friends at Party to Boost the Daily

Special to "The Daily Worker"

BOSTON.—Jacob Task, one of the active comrades in the Workers Party branch did his bit in the Daily Worker campaign. Comrade Task is also a member of Branch No. 18, of the Independent Workmen's Circle.

Dec. 16th, his friends gave a surprise birthday party in his honor. It was his 80th birthday. Comrade Task in his experience in the labor movement has learned that the press is an important instrument in the everyday struggles of the workers. He urged those present to buy shares and subs for the only real working class daily. Many of those present subscribed to the Daily Worker. Good boy, Jacob! That's the spirit!

"Let 'Em Die, the Company Is Insured"

BY LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Go tell them in Pekin, Ill. that for the five years ending Dec. 31, 1923, the profits of Corn Products Refining Co. have averaged 18.15 a share for the owners of the common stock. And add that the total profits from operation during this period will reach $90,000,00.

For, on Jan. 3, 1924, in the Pekin plant of this branch of Standard Oil, the lives of 40 wage earners were sacrificed to the demand of the oil dynasty for greater profits. In the interest of petty economy and the open shop ordinary recognition were abolished. The explosion of Jan. 3 was the direct result.

Now, when the bodies of the victims are scarcely buried, President Bedford and the directors will continue counting their undiminished profits and discussing the coming 25 per cent stock dividend. The par value of the common stock will also be reduced to $25 to conceal the magnitude of profits. In other words each common stockholder is going to get five shares for every share he now holds.

Forty wage earners were just 40 machines to this great corporation. Like the rest of the plant the company had insured them. In fact insurance of plant and men relieved the company of real interest in precautions against such atrocities of industry. To quote the Wall Street Journal: "Plant was fully covered by fire insurance, it is stated at the New York office, and the company is amply protected by employers' liability insurance gainst suits for loss of life and injuries to workers."

Note also that this disaster to the employes will not affect the business of the corporation. An idle plant in Kansas City will begin to grind and will thus enable the company to continue normal operations. Needless to say the 750 employes who survived the explosion will suffer from unemployment until the Pekin plant has been repaired.

One further point in the financial gossip about this company touches the welfare of the Pekin wage earners and of labor in general. According to the year-end statement, "prospects for larger earnings next year are bright" because the company will open a new, modern grinding plant in Germany in 1924.

Get that.

Corn Products Refining is going to utilize cheap German labor in competition with its American workers. In Germany labor works long hours for very low wages because the military victory of the allies made the German nation a conquered people. So this Standard Oil concern is going to ship corn to Germany and carry on its production for foreign markets with German labor. This will mean less work and eventually longer hours and lower wages in Pekin, Ill., and in other parts of America.

All of which indicates that under the present system a wage earner is just an easily replaced insurable commodity to be purchased wherever the great corporations can find the cheapest supply.

WALSH CALLS FOR AID TO STARVING GERMAN LABOR

He Will Speak at Big N. Y. Mass Meeting

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

NEW YORK CITY.—Frank P. Walsh, noted liberal attorney for the organized workers, whose services in the packing house and railroad strikes, and whose famous exposes of the brutal exploitation of the Standard Oil Company and more recently his services on behalf of the Communists in the Michigan cases, have made him well known as a friend of labor, has now appealed for aid to the workers of Germany.

Mr. Walsh's statement made to the Friends of Soviet Russia reads: "The workers of Germany, with their wives and helpless children, have been slowly dying of starvation since the close of the war, with all the horrors that such death agonies imply. With cruel indifference the world has looked on. Subconsciously, perhaps, our own country, always generous to suffering humanity, may have visioned them as an enemy people. No one could be so base today as to have such a conscious, deliberate thought.

"With millions of honest working people, peace loving and industrious, upon the brink of death in Germany, it is my hope that the workers of America, roused to action, will pour their aid into Germany so promptly, and in such generous fashion, as to surpass every previous outburst of generosity."

Signed: Frank P. Walsh.

The mass meeting at Cooper Union, Sunday afternoon, Jan. 20th, is the opening event in the campaign being conducted by the Friends of Soviet Russia (American Committee, International Workers Aid). A conference of all workers' organizations to plan wide-spread relief, will be held Sunday afternoon, Jan. 27th, at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th St. All workers should see that their organizations are represented at this conference, and that they give this matter their energetic support.

THE PARTY AT WORK

Workers Party Fights Bosses' Attack on the Foreign-Born

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party today issued a statement calling upon native born workers throughout the country to unite to fight legislation against foreign-born workers and the wholesale deportation of foreign-born workers, known as "Selective Immigration."

These proposed laws, the Workers Party declares, are part of a new attack on the labor movement of this country. They threaten an army of foreign-born workers who will be afraid to organize or strike, because threatened with deportation, the employers hope to smash the unions, establish the open shop, and cut down the wages of the workers of this country.

The statement calls upon native born and foreign-born workers to unite in organizing Councils for Protection of Foreign Born Workers to fight the proposed laws. Mass meetings, literature distribution are proposed as means of arousing the workers. The Councils for Protection of the Foreign Born are to carry on campaigns for organization of all workers in unions and for a Farmer-Labor Party as part of the struggles against the employers.

The statement follows:

FIGHT THE REGISTRATION OF FOREIGN BORN WORKERS

Laws before Congress propose to enslave Foreign Born Workers to aid employers in fighting unions and reducing wages.

The employers of this country are trying to forge a new weapon to aid them in destroying the unions, establishing the open shop and cutting down the standard of living of the workers.

There are pending in Congress, two laws which propose, through "selective immigration" and registration of foreign born workers, to create for the capitalist employers an army of serfs who cannot organize or strike. These laws are backed by the big employers of this country. . . Through them the employers hope to smash the unions, and reduce the standard of living of native and foreign born workers alike.

The Registration of Foreign Born Workers

President Coolidge, in his message to Congress, recommended that every foreign born worker in the country be registered. Others have proposed photographing and finger printing of foreign born workers, like criminals, as part of the registration. House Bill No. 691, by Representative Rosenbloom, now pending in Congress, is designed to carry out the President's recommendation.

"Selective Immigration"

House Bills No. 2900, by Representative Kelly, also pending in Congress, goes further in endeavoring to provide the employers with a slave army of workers. Under this law foreign workers desiring to come to this country are to be inspected by agents of the government in their home countries before being allowed to come. This means that every worker who shows the slightest sign of readiness to fight against the employers for the right to organize in unions, for better wages and shorter hours, will be refused entry into this country. Only the meek and submissive slaves will be allowed to enter.

To make sure that these meek and submissive slaves will remain so, they are to be registered and threatened with deportation should they show the slightest sign of rebellion.

Menace to Native Born and Foreign Born Alike

The proposed laws are a menace to native and foreign born workers alike. The carefully selected, registered, photographed, finger printed foreign born workers are to be the club through which the big employers hope to beat down the standard of living of all the workers of this country.

If the big employers are permitted to create an army of workers, such as these laws will bring into existence, they will have the weapon through which they can smash the unions, establish the open shop, beat down wages and cre e worse conditions of work for every worker in this country.

The registered, finger printed, photographed foreign-born workers will be afraid to join the unions, the employers believe. They are certain these workers will be afraid to participate in strikes. Over their heads, if they dare organize, if they dare strike, the big employers will hold the club of deportation.

Even the American Federation of Labor has recognized the menace of these laws to organized labor. The Portland Convention adopted resolutions denouncing them as measures in the interest of the bosses.

Fight Registration and "Selective Immigration"

But resolutions are not enough for the fight against these laws. The only way Congress can be prevented from enacting these laws for the bosses is through a mighty mass protest by native born and foreign born workers alike. The whole working class of this country must raise its voice against this attempt to enslave it. The workers must sent such a mighty protest to Washington, that even the tools of the bosses who sit in Congress will not dare pass these slave laws.

Organize Councils for Protection of Foreign Born Workers

The way to unite the workers for through the organization of Councils the fight against these slave laws is for the Protection of Foreign Born Workers in every city of the land. Native born and foreign born workers should unite in these councils. A temporary committee should be created in each city to organize a conference through which the Council for Protection of the Foreign Born can be set up.

Every trade union, every labor political body, every fraternal organization of labor and every organization of foreign born workers should send delegates to these conferences.

How to Fight the Slave Laws

The Councils for Protection of Foreign Born Workers must through mass meetings and distribution of literature arouse all the workers of this country to the danger which is menacing them in these proposed slave laws.

The slogan of the Council for Protection of the Foreign Born Workers must be: DOWN WITH THE REGISTRATION, PHOTOGRAPHING AND FINGER-PRINTING LAWS.

The Councils for Protection of Foreign Born Workers should demand FREE IMMIGRATION, so far as capitalist laws are concerned. The only limitation upon immigration should be through a LABOR CONTROL COMMITTEE which should be created by an International Conference of Labor Organizations. This committee should be empowered to control the flow of labor from one country to another in the interest of labor and not in the interest of the capitalists.

The Councils for Protection of Foreign Born Workers should endeavor to rouse the unorganized workers to the need of joining the unions in order to fight against the capitalist bosses. They should carry on campaigns in favor of the Farmer-Labor Party, through which labor, native and foreign, can fight their political battles against the capitalist bosses.

The Workers Party Calls Upon All Workers to Unite Against Slave Laws

The Workers Party of America, calls upon native and foreign born workers to enter into the struggle against these slave laws. It pledges the support of its members and of its organization as a whole to fight to prevent the fulfillment of this part of the whole working class of this country through these laws.

DOWN WITH REGISTRATION, FINGER-PRINTING AND PHOTOGRAPHING!

Capitalists Come To United States As Europe Totters

Roger Babson, the prophet of American business in his weekly letter to his clients tells of the flow of gold from Europe to America in the effort of the capitalists to protect their wealth from the dangers that threaten them. Russia and Germany have already collapsed for business, and the French franc is now selling below five cents on the New York market.

The capitalist being a good internationalist who loves all countries equally provided he can invest his money profitably in them, turns to America where the prospect of a revolution appears to be away beyond the horizon.

The European capitalists are busily engaged in changing their holdings to America in one form or another. This is capitalist patriotism. Their love of native land disappears as soon as that land shows inability to provide them with luxury and ease.

NO ROSES FOR POOR IN WILLIAM'S SYMPHONY AT ORCHESTRA HALL

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Music has been the most backward of the arts in reflecting the spirit of the times. The concerts of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening presented a new composition by Leonard Ellwood Smith, "Symphony in A," by R. Vaughan Williams, the English composer.

The symphony opens with a slow movement, done in descriptive style, that depicts the rural scenes of England and the pea life and work of the city is depicted. The second movement is a marvelously strong, inventive piece, full of fire and battle cries against slavery and hunger. In the third movement is the saturday night jollification in the slums of the city. It is a sordid sort of merriment, with suffering in it, and revolt, and deep brutish animal hatred. The last movement is the sullen inexorable Hunger March of the starving. Vaughan Williams holds out no promise of victory for them in his music, only grotesque and gaunt despair. The Thames, the ever flowing, century old river is brought back, absorbing the hungers and sufferings of men thru its ages of solemn wait thru time.

Another British composer, Granville Bantock, was represented on the program with his symphonic picture, "The Pierrot of the Minute". This is a light, fantastical work, picturing in sound the momentary erotic dream of figures of air.

The soloist was the American pianist, Arthur Shattuck, a tall, thin man with long, carefully marcelled hair, after the style of Percy Grainger. He played the Saint-Saens nfth concerto.

Now it is proverbial among composers that a concerto, being a technical work, shall not contain much music, but shall contains much show of technical brilliance. So it is that most concertos are exceedingly burdsome to all who hear them with the possible exception of the type of musician who concerns himself with the technique of music, rather than the end results of the art in the human soul.

Camille Saint-Saens was sometimes great enough, in writing a concerto, to forget this rule and create some real music here and there. This he did in the second movement of the fifth piano concerto. The movement is a mysterious, shadowy, nocturnal sort of thing, and in it is incorporated the sheer beauty of an Egyptian folksong.

Brilliance and sprightly cleverness, with a certain sentimental quality, characterizes Dvorak's "Scherzo Capriccioso," which closed the program.

Next week Cecilia Hansen, the violinist, will make her second appearance with the orchestra this season, playing Saint-Saens third violin concerto. The orchestra plays a symphony by Enesco, and short works by Weber and Dvorak.

Puncture Fictions Circulated About 'Dying Petrograd'

Note: In view of the present famine in Russia, the following article by Jessica Smith, who has been in Russia for the past year, is of special interest. Miss Smith is a member of the Workers Party and is now engaged in organizing Russian Relief work. She is also a contributor to the Labor Herald.—Editor Daily Worker.

BY JESSICA SMITH.

MOSCOW.—This week I had a talk with Comrade Bricker, who represents the Textile Syndicate Trust, one of the five major trusts embraced in the All-Russian Council of Trusts. I sought him on a business trip to Moscow, where he had come to talk over with Bogdanov, head of the Textile Syndicate, the question of the substantial orders for apparel that are now coming in from Syndicates from every corner of the Soviet Republic.

The Petrograd Trust, Bricker tells me, sells 90% of its goods through the Syndicate, and has delivered of the bulk of its trading operations, it is able to concentrate its whole attention on its production. The Trust, at present, comprises five factories employing 5,500 workers. Formerly there were 12 factories, most of them military, but with the reduction in military work and the general policy of economic concentration on the most efficient factories, the Trust has been working three large factories and two small er ones. Most of the work up till last spring was military, but now fully 80% of the output of the Petrograd clothing shops is for civil and industrial use.

"Our main problem at the present time," said Bricker, "is to create an effective credit system which will enable the industrial workers of Russia to obtain the clothing they need. The Petrograd clothing industry was the first to introduce the system of extending credit to the workers, and I have been specializing on the development of that end of the trade. At present we are making contracts with the management of many industrial enterprises to clothe all the workers in a given establishment. The management guarantees the payment for the bulk lot and we allow the workers six months' credit. In some cases, they pay 25 per cent down and the remainder in installments over the six months' period. More often we simply divide the sum into twelve parts, and require bi-monthly payments. This arrangement applies, of course, only to civil clothing. Special industrial clothing is paid for by the industry itself, and where necessary we allow the industry credit on such orders".

The average basic wage in Petrograd is now 50 forzats (goods) roubles per month, to which must be added 25 per cent or more which the workers get each month on piece work over a certain minimum. This is slightly lower than the Moscow wage, but the cost of living is somewhat lower in Petrograd. Considering the cultural and educational opportunities open to the workers through the trade unions, the medical care, cheap living accommodations cooperative purchasing and so on, these real wages actually amount to considerably more than those of clothing workers before the war.

The production per man has greatly improved in the last few years and a suit can now be made in just half the time it took before the war. However, the output of the Petrograd plants has not yet reached quite the standard of the Moscow factories for they have not had the advantage of the large supplies of machinery and equipment the latter have received from America.

Bricker is now working out a plan to divide the work among the Petrograd clothing factores so that each will have its specialty—one to make women's wear exclusively, and one men's suits and overcoats; one military uniforms, etc. A start has already been made in this specialization. One of the great prides of the Petrograd Trust is a factory for dyeing furs. Formerly they used German chemicals but since the revolution, they have learned to make their own dyes and are doing excellent work. Their greatest need just now is for more raw material and machinery in order to carry their specialization still further. To buy more equipment, they need more capital from America, from their big American investors, the Russian-American Industrial Corpoiation.

Chicago Printers Busy

Inspection of the traveling cards deposited with Typographical Union No. 16 reveals about 100 out-of-town union printers who headed for Chicago within the past month. The typos came from Boston, New York, Newark, several Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, Memphis, Dallas, Los Angeles, Portland (Ore.), Omaha, Minneapolis, Madison, Milwaukee, and some smaller towns. One card from the Scottish printers' union was deposited.

"All our members are busy," Fred E. A. Palmer says, "the number coming from out of town is about balanced by those leaving Chicago. Our situation is in keeping with the avocation operators up to about $60 a week. Without our organization they would be working for a minimum of $40."

The Land for the Hungry

Resist Attacks on the Foreign-Born

By ABRAM JAKIRA.

At a meeting of leaders of the Language Federations of the Workers Party held Thursday January 10, plans were outlined for an extensive campaign for the protection of the foreign born workers of America. Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg made a detailed report on the policies of the Party on this question, which is now becoming one of life and death to the millions of foreign born workers living in this country. He gave a review of the various new bills introduced in Congress for the establishment of a system of registration and finger printing. Even Calvin Coolidge in his message to congress did not dare to go as far as is now proposed by the reactionaries of the American Government.

Comrade Ruthenberg also gave a vivid picture of the true meaning of the "Selective Immigration" bills now before Congress. These bills, if passed, will make thousands of workers, direct slaves of the Gurleys and Rockefellers of this "land of the free." Both these and the "Registration" bills are a menace not only to the foreign born, but to the entire working class of this country and must be combatted.

The plan of action proposed by the Party is to be found elsewhere in this issue of the paper.

The Lithuanian comrades pointed out that last year they were confronted with a similar problem. The Lithuanian government proceeded to register all the Lithuanians living in this country. Under the leadership of the Lithuanian Federation of the Workers Party a vigorous campaign was organized against this step of the Lithuanian government. This campaign has aroused all the Lithuanian workers of America and the Lithuanian authorities were compelled quietly to withdraw their plans.

The federations pledged themselves to get to work at once, putting into motion all their press and organization machinery to combat these efforts. They are to keep in close touch with the National Office of the Party. Each Federation is to submit to the National Office copies of the publicity matter used in the campaign. The National Office will supply the Federation with copies of the most important "Anti-Foreign Born" bills now before Congress.

The conference of the Federation leaders also considered the question of intensifying the campaign for new members, recognition of Soviet Russia and Labor Party.

MENTIONING THE MOVIES

By PROJECTOR.

The fourteen month's boneymoon voyage of [illegible] in the ninety-foot yacht "Speejacks" has been recorded in a really fine film of that kind. The photography is superb and the pictures of the outlandish places visited are interesting as well as instructive. The titling is just a little too well done—so well that one can see the mechanism at work. For instance savages are labelled "head hunters" and "cannibals" without any pictorial evidence to support the charge and the way a lay-up to clean the propeller and a group of blacks running toward the beach is hashed up as an attack by cannibals is really a little too raw. The blacks are running away from the camera and toward the beach. Probably they came back and ate the camera man for dessert.

That such "non-theatrical" pictures are being taken up by the big distributors and shown in the biggest theatres is a big compliment to the gradually developing refinement of the movie goers. Truth telling pictures of every kind should be supported while the hoakum peddlers and anti-labor propagandists should be soaked in the only place where they have any feeling, at the box office.

Greeting Out of Germany

(We print below the translation of a letter of greeting to The Daily Worker by August Thalheimer, the intellectual leader of the German Communist Party. We will print his article which is mentioned in the letter at a later issue of our paper. In the midst of the terrific strain of tryin revolutionary activity this Communist leader does not forget us and o Daily Worker".)

Berlin, Germany, Dec. 13, 1923.

To the Editors of the "Daily Worker"

Dear Comrades: We are glad at your success which enables you t issue the "Daily Worker". We wish that success for your work which wi make the American Party one of the biggest and best sections of the Communist International.

The tempo of the German revolution has slackened somewhat. However, the exaggerated overestimation of the moment for the seizure o power has not given place to any hopelessness. We are making extra ordinary advances. The hour of reckoning of the German working cla with their Garys, Fords and Morgans will not keep us waiting long, an this reckoning will be a thoro one.

Enclosed you will please find an article for your paper "The Situatio in Germany and the Communist Party of Germany".

Will you please send us regularly several copies of your paper.

With Communist Greeting,
AUGUST THALHEIMER.

MYERSCOUGH ON STRUGGLE IN U. M. W. A.

Progressive Forces Mobilize For Indianapolis Convention

BY THOMAS MYERSCOUGH
Rock'y Progressive Miners' Committee

Every miner who has been elected as a delegate to the convention of the United Mine Workers of America, which convenes at Indianapolis, Ind., on January 22nd, can consider himself a lucky man indeed. This because he will be a part of what promises to be the most important convention ever held by the Miners or any other union.

The men of the mines are going to this gathering with a determination to put an end to the system of things in the organization, that has allowed them to drift into the present deplorable condition of servitude through the method of intermittent employment and subsequent near-starvation. This convention will be treated to many flashes between the forces of the administration and the young, but steadily growing, Progressive group. In past conventions it has been the custom of the "machine," as the administration forces are best known, to isolate the grievances of the rank and file from the real issues. This is invariably accomplished by the use of convention strategy, by political intrigue or any other accomplishment of their ulterior method, considered necessary to the purposes.

Progressives a Factor

Nearly every convention of the miners' union in the past has witnessed a rebellious group from some section of its jurisdiction who have come with the hope of getting consideration at the hands of the delegation assembled, only to find that the men knew nothing of their troubles, or if they did, it was from information received from the scheming administration who could not afford to allow a presentation of the facts on the convention floor. The result usually is that such delegations went their weary way home at the end of the convention, dismayed, disillusioned and often with the determination to take things as they come in the future and in this manner become useless to the organization, except, from a dues-paying viewpoint.

They return to their local unions and truthfully tell their respective constituencies that "we never had a chance." However, a new hope has been instilled in these forward looking elements by the formation of the "Progressive Committee." This committee, composed of the real union men from all sections of the country and Canada have also served to throw a new fear into the hearts of the officials and "discharge artists" because of the manner in which they have conducted themselves.

This is demonstrated by the fact that immediately after the June 2-3, 1923, conference in Pittsburgh, Pa., the National Executive Board issued a circular letter to the entire labor movement, to the effect that we were a Dual Union, and that wherever we presented ourselves we should be treated as such. The results obtained by this letter were also proof of our strength, because in nearly every union to which it was sent the workers voted it into the waste basket.

Will Not Be Led Astray

We are going to the convention to wage a real battle for our class, and the men who now rule with an iron hand, and who, incidentally, are the ones who led the fight for the expulsion of "Bill" Dunne from the Portland A. F. of L. convention, will find that there are a lot of potentia. "Bill Dunne's in the U. M. W. of A. and that they can not be found, coaxed, bribed or browbeaten into submission. They will find that the Progressives understand a few things about the labor movement and also that they understand the present rotten economic structure of society and will not be led astray by any of the methods usually employed.

We are going to raise issues that concern the membership and we will be prepared to fight every inch of the way for such things as the "Restoration of Membership and Autonomy" for the Kansas and Nova Scotia miners respectively, for the participation of our union in the building of a real "Labor Party," for "Nationalization of the Mines" and for ten other very important issues. We have "13" such issues and we are not one bit superstitious, in fact we are not built that way. In addition we have the miners on their toes ready to fight for necessary constitutional changes which will make our organization the fighting, working-class body it was intended to be by those who founded it, and change it from its status as a wealth providing pleasure vehicle, for the dynasty who now rule, and who have run it to the very verge of ruin.

At the convention we will provide every delegate with the facts concerning the U. M. W. of A., and a copy of "The Progressive Miner" (special convention number) will also be given to each delegate, and when the smoke of battle has cleared away we are expecting to return with some of the scalps attached to our belts, or to at least show them that we made a good fight.

MOBILIZE YOUR WORKERS

The Youth of Soviet Russia Not Here

This is the first of a series of three articles on the Youth movement of Russia and what the American workers' movement can learn from it. The other articles will be published in early issues of THE DAILY WORKER. Watch for them.

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE.

If you want to get a kick out of life just consider for a minute the young people of the youngest great nation on earth, the youth of Soviet Russia! Youth is always inspiring. Young, supple, forward-looking, even lastingly active, forever seeking new things to do and new ways of doing them.

The present rulers of Russia had a tremendous handicap to overcome in their heritage of the past. Theirs was the task of bringing the light of a new day into a far-flung land for ages called "Darkest Russia." The sons of oppression had left a deep mark on the human material out of which the new order was to be built. The grown-ups of the older generation was indelibly branded with the marks of its life in slavery —lethargic in personal habits, primitive in industry, and dully exhaustive in matters of politics and religion.

But with the youth it was a different story. For them Time and Life began in November, 1917. While Bolshevik theory and tactics was laid down by men whose party record ran back twenty years many thousands of "beardless boys" swelled the ranks of the Red Guard, there to see years of service and hardship that trained and tempered them for the posts of responsibility they now hold.

The Communists (in Russia at least) fully recognize that a virile, active youth movement is a proletarian political movement, is the only conceivable guarantee of final success. Youth plays a most important part in any severe struggle, hence a primary requirement of the Communists is that they help their youth to mobilize the young masses on the workers' side of the class line. Particularly in a country like the United States, where the combined propaganda of school, motion picture, newspaper, workplace and church exercise a tremendous anti-labor influence upon our young. The Communist movement cannot afford to leave the slightest possible help ungiven in the strengthening and encouragement of the youth movement.

Many factors favor our youth in the campaign to win over their fellows. Youth is naturally receptive to new ideas, especially when presented by its own kind, in its own language, in pugnacious opposition to the hated hoary authoritarianism of schoolmaster or workmaster. The returns to the Party from energy and money spent on youth work are manifestly greater than can be expected from any other field. Through workshop, school, sport, educational or social club many avenues extend toward the confidence of the young mass, and these roads are not so beset by obstacle of economic fear, ingrown prejudice or mental and physical exhaustion as is the case with the older worker. Finally, when the young convert is won, not only is his "expectancy" of party life much longer but he throws into the work of the movement a much larger quantum of free time and energy, and, being less responsibility bound, he dares tasks and assumes sacrifices often beyond the power of his elders.

Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

Want to Organize 500,000 Youths.

Because in every land that he visited there is "unmistakable signs of social and intellectual unrest," and because "organized labor and the youth movement of Europe are increasingly rising in protest against the recurring war," the right reverend Sheridan Eddy, Associate General Secretary of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, thinks there should be in this country a youth movement to offset the possibilities of the youth demand for revolutionary. This was all brought out in a speech by this sky-pilot recently delivered at Indianapolis, Ind., before nearly 8,000 theological student-delegates in conference.

The plan proposed by the Y. M. C. A. leader is expected to embrace 500,000 young men and women between the ages of 14 and 21—just the age when the Young Workers League of America is concentrating on. Here we have the initiation of a counter-revolutionary youth movement based on the knowledge that there is a class struggle, and that the best way to fight unrest and discontent is to organize against it—especially the youth.

When it is remembered that the Y. M. C. A. was in the forefront in spreading war hysteria that it did everything it could to intensify hatred in the interest of the American capitalist, it is worse than hypocrisy to see the leaders of this army-auxiliary (the Y. M. C. A.) talk about the necessity for organizing the youth on the basis of peace and the love of God.

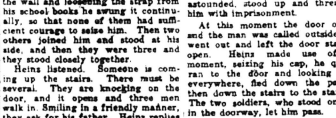
Ahern Speaks at Cleveland

Liebknecht Day will be celebrated by the Young Workers League of Cleveland, Ohio, at a meeting in Pocket Temple, 2534 Euclid avenue, Sunday evening, Jan. 20th. Martin Ahern, national secretary of the Young Workers League, will be the main speaker. After the speeches there will be a dance.

Kruse Speaks for Y. W. L.

The Englewood Young Workers League will hold its regular educational meeting, Wednesday, Jan. 16, at Carpenters Hall, 6414 S. Halsted St., with William F. Kruse as the speaker. The subject will be "The Bolshevik Youth."

Amalgamation means strength.



A YOUNG SPARTACIST

It was during the revolutionary struggles in Berlin in January, 1919, and the nine-year-old Heins was alone in the house. His mother had gone out to market. He had not seen his father for two weeks. Heins knew that the police were looking for him. They wanted to put him into prison because he is a Spartacist.

But the police won't find him, the silly devils, they don't know at all, what a Spartacist is. If they knew what fine stories his father told when he was at home they wouldn't say that the Spartacists were criminals, destroyers, robbers, vagabonds. Heins knows also what the Spartacists want. That the gluttons and the big bellied, the fine ladies and gentlemen should work and that the workers should receive enough wages to live and eat well. That is why the rich hate the Spartacists.

But his school comrades do not know this. He is the only Spartacist in his class. Yesterday they wanted to beat him, but backed up against the wall and becoming the story from his school books he swung it continually, so that none of them had sufficient courage to seize him. Then two others joined him and stood at his side, and then they were three and they stood closely together.

Heins listened. Someone is coming up the stairs. There must be several. They are knocking on the door, and it opens and three men walk in. Smiling in a friendly manner, they ask for his father. Heins replies that his father has gone away. "Where to?" That he didn't know. Then they tell him that they are policemen, and that they have to look them where his father was they would take him with them and put him in prison. Heins stood firm. They took him with them. Below at the house door they ask him again. Heins says nothing. They make him get into their automobile which started off at a whirling speed thru the streets.

It is dark when the car stops before a gloomy looking building and Heins is forced to get out. They lead him up a wide flight of stairs into a well lighted room in which there is a large, broad shouldered man. The man asked him his name in a very friendly manner how old he was, whether he liked going to school and if he was hungry. Heins answered yes to the last question, he had, indeed, eaten nothing since his poor breakfast of ham, telephoned, and almost immediately afterwards a soldier came with some bread and sausage and coffee. Heins started it and became quite talkative, and the big man laughed and asked him all possible questions.

After Heinz had eaten, the big man put a packet of chocolate before him on the table, and as Heinz was busy with that he asked him where his father was. Heinz was frightened and drew his hand back. The big man said all sorts of flattering things to him and promised him all sorts of beautiful things. Angrily Heins jumped from the chair and said "as a young Spartacist doesn't betray his father!" The big man, astounded, stood up and threatened him with imprisonment.

At this moment the door opened and the man was called outside. He went out and left the door standing open. Heinz made use of this moment, seizing his cap, he quickly ran to the door and looking round everywhere, fled down the passage, then down the stairs to the staircase. The two soldiers, who stood on duty in the doorway, let him pass.

On the street, he ran as fast as he could toward home. In the middle of the night, he arrived home. His mother was quite startled and happy that her Heins was once again with her. Excitedly he told her all and said, "But it is true, Mother, isn't it? A young Spartacist doesn't betray his father!"

MESSAGE FROM MARTY, WHO LED FRENCH MUTINY

Greets U. S. Workers Thru "The Daily"

Andre Marty, the leader of the mutiny of French sailors of the Black Sea, in 1919, writes a letter to "The Daily Worker," Thru the Daily Worker he speaks to the American workers.

French sailors refused to fight against Soviet Russia, refused to crush the First Workers' Republic, refused to fire upon workers who had emancipated themselves from the rule of capitalism.

They hoisted the red flag on the proud battleships of imperialist France, they sang the International, they mutinied. And for this, punishment was meted out to them. But the combined protest of French workers freed them.

It was well enough to shoot down mutineers in 1917 in the great mutiny which broke out during the war in the French army, but the workers were awakened in 1919, and it was not so easy to carry out mass executions, especially as these mutineers had acted in the cause of the liberation of the world's workers.

The people of Paris showed by their votes that they wanted Marty freed. The people of Paris elected him on three occasions, as a token of their solidarity until the government no longer dared to keep Andre Marty in prison. The article which follows tells its own story:

Perpignan,
Saturday, Dec. 22, 1923.

Dear Comrades:—

I am sending you an article with my photo for the "Daily Worker."

I hope that it will reach you in time for the first number.

You will give me great pleasure by sending me the number in which it will appear.

Be assured dear comrades of my best and sincerest wishes.

ANDRE MARTY.

Perpignan (Pyrenees Orientales)
France, Dec. 21, 1923.

Dear Comrades:—

I learn with joy that on Jan. 13, you will launch the "Daily Worker", and I am happy to send you my wishes for success to the organ which will defend the American working class under the direction of the Workers Party.

I know how hard will be your task. In free America King Dollar reigns as absolute a master as the monarchs of our old Europe. Nowhere in the world do the money powers display more cunning and ferocity in their fight against the workers. But nowhere are the workers more ardent and more tenacious in the fight. Against the formidable trusts they oppose enormous masses and the memory of those colossal strikes of miners and railwaymen, those strikes which lasted for months is still vivid in my mind, we are pretty small, we Europeans, beside these formidable movements. The "Daily Worker" will serve as a link and as an inspiration to thousands of wage workers who perish, who waste away, for the greater good of capitalist combines. I have no doubt of its rapid expansion, or of the enormous importance of the doctrine which it will spread. It will grow up quickly I am sure, and the spectre of social revolution will soon haunt your selfish and pleasure seeking exploiters.

Ah yes, I know. Against you are all the forces of finance, of darkness, of police, you will vanquish them, and you will be victorious under the magnificent symbol of the sickle and hammer surmounting the red flag.

Five and a half years have already passed since the time that thousands and thousands of us, soldiers and sailors, were distributed all along the whole Russian coast of the Black Sea and along the Roumanian border. Without any intercommunication, almost without any connection with France, we were told terrible stories about the Bolsheviki, and they wanted to make us crush this magnificent proletariat whose disarming was awaited by the White Terror assassins behind us so that its fighting spirit could be drowned in rivers of blood. But we had read the proclamations "French soldier! French sailor! You are a worker or a peasant! You have before you workers or peasants! Before shooting look and think!" And the French soldiers did look and think, and did not shoot. Like their American comrades at Archangel, the regiments which had mutinied had to be quickly led back to the rear and had to be sent back home. And it was then that the sailors saw along the whole coast, on all the buildings, the red pennant, almost colored anew with blood by the workers; and the sailors understood. On April 20, 1919, the day after my arrest, at 9 o'clock in the morning, on Easter Day, the sailors of the dreadnaughts "Jean Bart" and "France" solemnly hoisted at the fore-mast the red pennant, and with bare heads, and motionless, they sang the "International." That was a decisive signal, and everywhere, at the sight of the red emblem, the crews mutinied!

We had against us military authority, force unprecedented for its brutality, the formidable organization of the capitalist state; and nevertheless, despite our total lack of coordination, without any other support than our revolutionary faith, we forced the devouring government of miserable Clemenceau to let go of his prey, so that the workers and peasants of Russia might be allowed to constitute the first proletarian government of the world.

Comrades, in spite of the dark forces which crush you, I am sure that you will take up again with success the final fight for your emancipation. I am sure that, nationalists as you are, you will easily strike down the capitalist state of King Dollar, to replace it by the "free organization of the labering masses", as our comrade Lenin so well said at the First Congress of the Communist International.

And it is to wish you, not good luck, but quick success, that I have asked the "Daily Worker" to receive my fraternal letter in its columns, being certain that it will give pleasure to the American workers. In showing them that from a secluded spot in the Pyrenees the comrades of the French Section of the Communist Party think of them with all their soul and with all their might.

ANDRE MARTY, mechanician, sentenced to twenty years of hard labor, freed from the prison of the French Republic on July 17 1923.

Get unity thru the Labor Party!

Special Music for Kruse Film

In addition to bringing back with him motion picture film that recorded every stage of his journey, William F. Kruse, pictorial editor of the Friends of Soviet Russia, brought back a collection of the latest Russian songs, comprising everything written or adopted since the revolution.

Rudolph Liebich, one of the foremost composers in America, is arranging orchestrations of these selections, and they will be used as musical accompaniment of the new film to be routed by the Friends of Soviet Russia for the benefit of the German Workers Relief Campaign.

Any locals desiring dates for this film should immediately communicate with the National Office, Friends of Soviet Russia, 32 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

The German Relief Drive is On

By MOSS L. ANSHELM.

When the conditions of the German workers grew to such terrible proportions, that the Communist Party could no longer stand by and see the workers starve, it appealed to the workers of the world for help. Soviet Russia was the first to respond. Other countries are also helping.

Norway sends one ship of flour, Holland sends food, Czecho-Slovakia is sending wheat, France supports a kitchen.

The Friends of Soviet Russia, which has declared itself also for German relief, Germany, has opened a nation-wide campaign under the auspices of Committee for International Workers' Aid for the opening of an American Soup Kitchen in Germany.

Toward this end it is necessary to raise $500 for initial outlay and to pledge $5,000 a month for the support of the kitchen.

In response to a call sent to all FSR Locals, Boston, New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Superior, Cleveland, Milwaukee and Flint, Michigan, $1,000 was arranged for German Relief.

A stamp coupon book has been sent to 50,000 individuals and organizers. Results are beginning to come in and encouraging words come daily to the national office.

During the Russian famine $900,000 in cash and $250,000 worth of old clothes and medicines were raised by the FSR. They expect to do at least as well for the German workers and their families.

Williams Takes up Duties as Official of West Va. Mines

(Special to "The Daily Worker")

BARRACKVILLE, W. Va.—R. M. Williams has entered upon his duties here as Vice-President of District 17, United Mine Workers of America. Williams was elected at a special election Dec. 11, 1923, over William Petry, the vice-president at that time, and Nick Aiello, former President of Sub-District 4, of District 17 (Fairmont field).

This election was ordered at a Special District Convention convened Sept. 4, 1923, thru the efforts of Williams, who claimed his name had been improperly erased from the ballot at the regular election in 1922. It is generally understood that the Administration was opposed to Williams.

The election of Williams is significant in that he has repeatedly declared against the policy of intolerance for the Progressive Miners and the Communists and in favor of free speech for these or any other groups of union members who may have honest differences of opinion from the Administration or the majority of the union membership.

Rockefeller Welfare Work

Wide publicity is given to the philanthropic enterprises of John D. Rockefeller and the welfare work carried on in the Standard Oil concerns is heralded by the publicists of capitalism as the solution for the capital-labor problem.

When, as in the plant of the Corn Products Refining Co., in Pekin, Ill., 25 or 40 workers are killed and as many more horribly injured, through criminal neglect on the part of the company of the most elementary safety precautions, the capitalist press suppresses the fact that the Corn Products Refining Co. is a Rockefeller enterprise. A few years ago this fact would have been the feature of the story carried by the daily press.

Why the change?

The explanation is found in an article by a former newspaper man of national reputation recently published by one of the leading liberal magazines. In this article he shows how several years ago the Standard Oil Co. entered upon a nation-wide advertising campaign featuring the dozens of by-products it secures from the refining of crude oil. Laxatives, hair tonics, soaps, toilet articles and special brands of gasoline are a few of the sidelines boosted by this campaign, and, needless to say, these advertising contracts are, in the parlance of the trade, "juicy."

No longer are caricatures of "John D." used to frighten recalcitrant children. The horrors of Ludlow have been forgotten and with one eye on the business office, editors now write of Rockefeller charities instead of Rockefeller corruption and cruelty. Arthur Brisbane chants the praises of this American plutocratic dynasty every other day, young John D. gets his picture taken at a Baptist Sunday school convention and the murder and plundering of workers is carried on under the most pleasant and profitable conditions imaginable.

The Pekin disaster is proof, however, that the Ludlow tradition is still alive. It is not the Rockefeller policy that has changed, but only that on the books of Standard Oil concerns is carried now a charge for "advertising."

We submit this question for our readers to ponder over. Has the Standard Oil ever made a better investment?

Another question: Can the workers make an investment that will pay bigger dividends than the money spent in support of a fighting paper that already has the distinction in one day of existence of being the only Chicago daily which connects the Pekin disaster with company unions and "welfare work" under Standard Oil control?

The Real Reason

Now that the smoke of Senator Lodge's $0,000 word barrage against the Soviet Government has disappeared, it is daily becoming clearer that the United States Government has a totally different objection to recognizing the Soviet Republic than it has ever admitted publicly.

Well-informed observers in Washington have never taken seriously the Hughes-Daugherty "red" scares. The real reason for the refusal of the administration to resume commercial and diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia was recently given to the writer by a Senator who visited Russia last summer. This Senator who is far from being a progressive said in part:

> When our State Department refuses to enter into amicable relations with the Soviet Government, it does so for one reason only; and that reason is that the government fears the effect of Russian recognition on our labor movement.

The Senator hit the nail on the head. One of the most powerful influences against the restoration of normal relations between the Soviet Republic and the United States is Samuel Gompers and his American Federation of Labor machine. If Russia were recognized, thus giving the American workers and farmers first hand evidence of the constructive character of the Russian revolution, Mr. Gompers would be deprived of his principal issue. The bureaucratic officialdom in the American Federation of Labor has, in the past four years, not thrown out a single slogan, a single call to action against the employing class. It has busied itself with fighting "reds" and disrupting the various attempts on the part of militant workers to make our unions effective fighting organizations in the struggle against the exploiters.

We are sorry for Mr. Gompers. Russian recognition is drawing near. Nothing has helped Russian recognition more than the last asinine sally of Messrs. Hughes and Daugherty supported by Mr. Gompers. It is high time that the "Grand Old Man" of the American labor movement get himself and his ruling clique a new "issue."

Another Coolidge

Among the many Christmas gifts handed out by the Strikebreaker President Coolidge, the outstanding one is the loan of the Strikebreaker-Brigadier General Smedley D. Butler, of the Marine Corps, to the business men's mayor of Kenrick of Philadelphia.

The strong-armed new Director of Public Safety in the Quaker City has been given a leave of absence for one year to clean up Philadelphia, to drive out all gamblers and undesirables.

When a wave of almost unbelievable graft engulfs a section of the country, even the Quaker Philadelphia, we usually don't take it seriously and dismiss it as a joke. However, this time the situation is really serious. We are indebted to General Butler for frank talk. As a matter of fact General Butler was so frank in his talk the first few days that he has already been called down sharply by some newspapers. Addressing the Bureau Chiefs, the military Director of Public Safety let the cat out of the bag and told what sort of a clean-up Philadelphia would really be subjected to. Said General Butler:

"I hear there is a union in the police. That must be wiped out, too. The federation of firemen, which, I understand, exists in the fire-bureau, also must go."

The Brigadier General went on to put his case over with a bang and indicated that he would enforce this phase of his clean-up policy by forming a special secret squad of 300 men to check up on the doings of the policemen.

Here we have a strikebreaking campaign with a vengeance. Union-smashing is not a new profession to the government of Pennsylvania at the head of which is the liberal, progressive, moral Governor Gifford Pinchot. In Pittsburgh, the Director of Public Safety, McCandless, and Judge Macfarlane broke up the Firemen's Protective Association. But this Philadelphia incident illustrates our contention that the government is today a strikebreaking agency in the hands of the employing class in a rather picturesque fashion. Coolidge became the President thru his breaking the Boston Police Strike and by grace of the accidental death of Harding. Now the Strikebreaker-President who kept the Puritan City of Boston straight by smashing the policemen's union is helping the Quaker town, Philadelphia, to keep straight and clean up by lending the Pennsylvanians a Brigadier General to act as a strikebreaker and smasher of the Philadelphia policemen's organization.

Diversified Hardships

The wealthy bankers and big manufacturers have been vieing with each other in the lavishness of their generosity towards the poor farmers. One of their best bets for getting the farmer out of the hole in which they have put him is "diversified" farming.

Gallons of ink have spilled advising the wheat farmer to milk cows when he loses on his wheat. Acres of newsprint paper have been stuffed with propaganda to encourage the farmer to engage in diversified production.

A dirt farmer writing in the Nebraska Daily Press has blasted this propaganda in the most effective manner that has yet come to our attention. Every farmer and worker should clip his answer which we reproduce, paste this item in his hat and throw it into the teeth of the first advocate of the panacea of diversified farming that meets him.

> Everybody's advising the farmer to raise dairy cows—to engage in diversified farming. Evidently the Town Farmers, as the press sometimes calls them, think a cow manicures and massages herself, milks herself and delivers the product to the creamery without profane urging.
> I wonder if any of these Town Farmers who are trying to tell us how to conduct a cow hotel have ever arisen at four a. m., groped their way through a littered farm yard to a cow stable, played the reveille to a flock of bovines and milked ten or twelve of them when the thermometer stood at 15 below zero.

Perhaps Messrs. Coolidge and Hoover and their agents in the Farm Bureau Federation would do well to get a glimpse, in practice, of this great remedy of theirs—diversified farming.

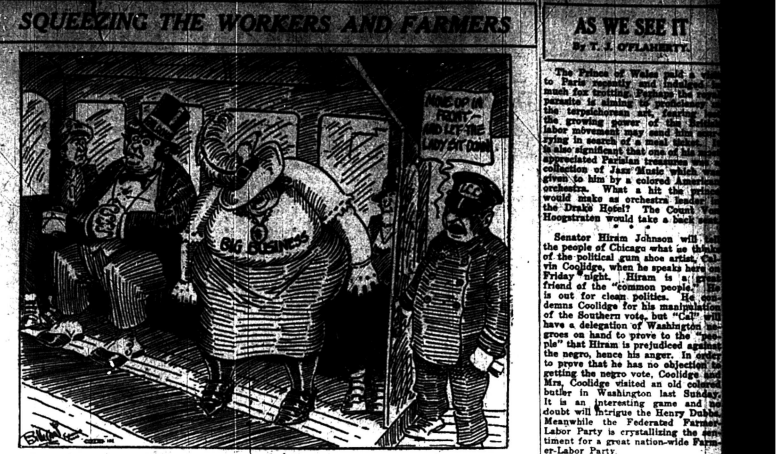
The Daily Herald

The Daily Worker is glad to note that the attempts made by reactionary influences in the British labor movement to strangle the Daily Herald have failed. A resolution adopted at a joint meeting of the General Council of the Trades Union Congress and the National Executive of the Labor Party, congratulates the paper on its splendid services in the recent election and declares: "The Joint Meeting learns with the greatest satisfaction that the present position of the paper is such as to inspire confidence in its future and permanent continuance."

The resolution also urges the rank and file to give their hearty support to the labor daily.

When the announcement was made last fall that the Daily Herald stood in danger of suspension at the end of that year, the Communist Party of Great Britain realizing the value of even a moderate labor paper to the working class of that country carried on an intense propaganda among the rank and file of organized labor to save the Daily Herald. This campaign had its effect and the British workers are now assured that they will not have to depend on the capitalist press for their news. Tho the Daily Herald is not a Communist paper. The Daily Worker, the only Communist paper in the English language, greets the daily organ of the British working class. We await the day when there will be an English-language Communist Daily in London, the metropolis of British imperialism.

SQUEEZING THE WORKERS AND FARMERS



The British "Pilgrims and Jumpers"

By JOHN PEPPER.

The Labor Party in Great Britain is on the threshold of government.

The capitalist class in Great Britain and in many other countries as well is discussing with fear the possibility of a labor government.

Ramsay MacDonald the leader of the British Labor Party is trying to pacify the capitalists. In his Royal Albert Hall speech he made the declaration "We are not going to jump to our goal, we are on a pilgrimage." True, the capitalists are pleased with his promises, but they don't exactly have faith in him. The Evening News compares MacDonald to Kerensky and says: "He might be surprised, if he were to divide his party into pilgrims and jumpers, at the strength of the latter, and numbers apart, it is the jumpers who have the punch." The New York Times reports from London, that the English capitalist press is greatly pleased with MacDonald's policy of moderation, but the British Daily Mail says, it is all very true, MacDonald is "sincere and earnest", but the big trouble with him is that "he serves only as a mask behind which actual revolutionaries are preparing their campaign to take possession of this great country."

We see the English bourgeoisie hesitating between fear and love at the possibility of the Labor Party's taking over the government. The capitalists of Great Britain would prefer the Baldwin or Asquith or Lloyd George as the guardians of the ruling economic system; but as they are realizing, if there is no help for it, they will be content with MacDonald just as well. The capitalists are aware of what George Bernard Shaw the "enfant terrible" of the British Labor Party has said with his usual sharpness and frankness: "The advantage of the Labor Party in such troubled times as these is that it stands between the country and the possibility of revolution."

What is the real significance of the acquisition of power by the British Labor Party?

It is a tremendous event of universal significance. It means the breaking of the old English two-party system. It will be the proof of the gigantic growth of the political power of the British working class. It will prove that the English capitalists can no longer master the acute problems of decaying British industry, increasing unemployment and political world crisis.

But it would be foolish to think for a moment that the rule of the British Labor Party means the rule of the British working class. MacDonald and the Labor Party do not mean the rule of the working class at all, and they have betrayed even the immediate demands of the working class already before they have come into power. MacDonald receives the power from the hands of the king, and not from the hands of the victorious revolution. The Labor Party was the Opposition of His Majesty, and it will be the Government of His Majesty. The Labor Party will take over power as a minority in Parliament, but in such a way that it will not have at its disposal even the resources of power of a parliamentary majority. The Labor Party can only go as far as the liberal parties will suffer it to go. MacDonald will be nothing more than the rubber stamp of Asquith and Lloyd George. The Liberal Party will be in a position to drive him out of power by combining its vote with those of the Conservatives, the very first moment that MacDonald shows the slightest inclination to turn from a "Pilgrim" into a "Jumper."

In his last speech MacDonald already forgot two measures of the Labor Party, the capital levy and nationalisation of mines and railroads. And the Labor Party will betray its program on the solution of the tremendous unemployment and of the terrible housing situation. The Labor Party will bring about the recognition of Soviet Russia; but it will not have the revolutionary courage for inaugurating a new foreign policy in Europe. The Labor Party will bring some relief in the German situation, but will not have the courage to tear up the infamous Treaty of Versailles. The Labor Party will utter a few pious and sentimental phrases to the colonies in Egypt and India, but it will not have the revolutionary courage to burst the British empire. The Labor Party will receive the power from the hands of the king, and will not abolish the House of Lords and will rule with the old bureaucracy of the capitalist state power.

The coming to power of the British Labor Party will not mean the rule of the British proletariat, but merely the illusion of the rule of the working class.

But exactly for this very reason, the coming to power by the British Labor Party will start a tremendous revolutionary process in England.

Capitalist papers have likened MacDonald to Kerensky. The comparison is partly right, but partly wrong. It is incorrect, because the petty bourgeois Kerensky revolution in which the working class and poor farmers were the driving force acquired mastery after the bourgeoisie had been defeated, after the apparatus of power of old Russia had been destroyed. Kerensky went down before the onslaught of the Russian proletariat which always wanted more and more power. But MacDonald will be Kerensky who must reckon with two factors: the unbroken might of the capitalist class and the ever stronger will of the working class. Kerensky meant the survival of the last democratic illusions of the working class in a society in which the capitalists were disarmed while the workers and poor farmers had not only weapons, but also power. MacDonald will mean the sway of the parliamentary democratic illusions of the working class in a society in which the capitalists have the majority in Parliament, where they have the king, the House of Lords, the whole apparatus of state power, while the working class has neither weapons nor Soviets.

But in one respect MacDonald will resemble Kerensky completely. Whether he wishes or not, he will contribute greatly to the radicalization of the English working class. The workers will have only the illusion of power, but this very illusion will impel them to demand more and still more power. MacDonald will be forced either to yield and help the workers to real power—in that case the capitalist majority of Parliament will drive him out immediately. Or on the other hand, and that is much more likely, he will protect the capitalists against the onslaughts of the workers—and he will thereby give rise to a mighty left wing in his own party.

It is no accident, but rather profoundly symbolic, that at the very same time that the Labor Party comes into power, a nation-wide strike of railway workers is threatening. The railway workers helped to elect MacDonald the labor leader to protect their interests against capitalism; and to their great surprise, they will find against them Ramsay MacDonald the prime minister, the protector of the capitalist state. The capitalist press of Great Britain to the right, MacDonald is harmless, but behind him stands the revolution. The workers will not follow MacDonald long on his "pilgrimage", but will go over to the "Jumpers", to the Communists. After Kerensky came—Lenin. After MacDonald—the conditions of Great Britain of 1924 are not as ripe as those of Russia of 1917—there will come at least the basic prerequisite of the revolution, a Communist mass party.

Introducing the Gentleman from South Carolina

BY JAY LOVESTONE

Unless all the rules of the game of politics as it is played today are thrown overboard, we will soon be treated to a rousing celebration of the great "progressive" victory in the Senate. Many a so-called progressive journal, from "Battling Bob" La Follette's Magazine in Wisconsin to the dreary organs of the staid old organ of Gompers and Brothers, the American Federationist, will soon greet with acclamation the election of the Democratic Senator, Ellison D. Smith of South Carolina to the Chairmanship of the Interstate Commerce Committee.

Who is this gentleman, Smith? What has he ever done to win the distinguished service cross from the capitalist class?

Senator Smith hails from the textile-baron ridden South Carolina, where thousands of children are exploited and denied the opportunity to receive even the most elementary education.

Senator Smith is a native son of a State where thousands of women employed in the textile mills are subject to the most despicable working conditions, starvation wages, 10 per cent getting less than $12 a week, and long hours destroying their vitality.

Smith, Reactionary Nonentity.

This representative of the powerful textile interests of South Carolina in the United States is a reactionary nonentity. He has now been in the Senate for about fourteen years. During this period he has not put forth a single measure that smacks even of the palest progressivism. His record in the Senate is distinctly bad. It is marked by many hostile votes to the workingmen and farmers on the major issues confronting the country.

Feb. 27, 1912 while the 62nd Congress was in session, a bill was proposed to investigate the conditions in the textile industry in the United States. Senator Smith helped to defeat the bill by voting on this question.

When the final passage of the Eight Hour Law for railway workers was before the Senate, Mr. Smith likewise found it convenient to avoid voting.

In Sixty-Third Congress Senator Smith joined with the reactionaries to pass the vicious Bacon amendment to the Seaman's Act proposed by Mr. LaFollette, who has now thrust greatness upon him by making him chairman of the most important Senatorial committee. When the Clayton anti-trust act was before the Senate for final disposition, Mr. Smith made it his business to abstain from voting. The gentleman from South Carolina did not even have the courage of his reactionary convictions.

For Child Labor.

But in the Sixty-Fourth Congress Senator Smith picked up sufficient courage to come out openly as an enemy of the working masses. On August 8, 1916, the South Carolina solon, speaking on behalf of the textile magnates whom he served in Washington, spoke and voted against the Federal Child Labor Bill.

In the next Congress Mr. Smith fought against a bill providing for an appropriation to help run the Employment Bureau of the Department of Labor. When the war was on full swing and a motion was made in the Senate to strike out the "Work or Fight" amendment from the draft bill, Mr. Smith did not take a position.

At the close of 1918 a bill was presented to the Senate to tax those products in interstate commerce which were produced by child labor. The Honorable Smith again came up to the scratch as a loyal servant of the Southern textile interests and made a vigorous fight against the enactment even of this half-hearted attempt at limiting the employment of children.

Against Woman Suffrage.

When the bill to give the vote to women was presented to the 65th Congress in 1918, Senator Smith fought for the great boon to defeat the measure.

And even on the railroad question Senator Smith's record is punctuated with the same straddling weakness, and an occasional open fight against progressive or near-progressive measures. It is true Senator Smith has not voted for the Esch-Cummins Railway Act. But he waged no real fight against its enactment. What is true of him on other occasions shown distinct friendship for the railroad interests. When a motion was made in the Senate on Dec. 20, 1919 to extend the period of Federal control of railroads for two years, Senator Smith fought against the measure in order to hasten the government's granting a bonus of hundreds of millions of dollars to the railway corporations for their having allowed the country to use the roads while at war.

Safe and Regular.

The new chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee which will handle the railway question, one of the most important problems before Congress, is safe and regular. Senator Smith has proved himself a tried and true war horse in the service of the capitalists of this country. When LaFollette and his squad of insurgents voted for Smith they did not help by an iota to repeal the vicious bonus to the multimillionaire railway owners. After it was announced that Smith was elected to this key position in the Senate the railway stocks in the Wall Street market soared very favorably. The big bankers and manufacturers controlling the activities of the nation, likewise heaved a sigh of relief. LaFollette's campaign of attrition had ended. They could now turn down to business and forget about Congressional interference with their dividends. The progressives had made their entry and the capitalists had the full dividends.

Watch the "Daily Worker" for the next installment of "Work or Fight" by Comrade Lovestone. It will tear away the mask from the face of the leaders of the American Federation of Labor and will show their role in the present situation.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

The Prince of Wales paid a visit to Paris recently. He was received much the same as the Prince of Wales would be received in the United States. The temperamental Frenchmen are growing weary of the labor leadership of Samuel Gompers, crying in search of a new idol. It is also significant that one of the Prince's gifts to the Parisians was a collection of Jazz Music which was given to him by a colored American orchestra. What a hit this would make as orchestra leader at the Drake Hotel? The Count Hoogstraten would take a back seat.

Senator Hiram Johnson will tell the people of Chicago what ails them of the political gum shoe artist, Calvin Coolidge, when he speaks here on Friday night. Hiram is a great friend of the "common people" and is out for clean politics. He condemns Coolidge for his manipulations of the Southern vote, but "Cal" will have a delegation of Washington negroes on hand to prove to the "people" that Hiram is prejudiced against the negro, hence his anger. In order to prove that he has no objection to getting the negro vote, Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge visited an old colored butler in Washington last Sunday. It is an interesting game and no doubt will intrigue the Henry Dubbs. Meanwhile the Federated Farmer-Labor Party is crystallizing the sentiment for a great nation-wide Farmer-Labor Party.

The Egyptian nationalists won a tremendous victory in the recent elections held in that country. Without the full returns being in, it is announced that the Zaghloulists have 190 seats, leaving 24 to the combined opposition parties.

The capitalist newspapers are again gorging themselves with the details of the latest murder mystery. An Aurora harlot has confessed to having killed his wife after she had killed her brother. The revolting details of this horrible crime are spread over the pages of the capitalist dailies. Sex perversion, murder, crime is served up to the public by the journalistic profit-gluttons who profess to be so much concerned about public decency. The readers of the capitalistic press have gotten the "crime habit." They are trained to look for sensational slush, and they get plenty of it.

Frank B. Kellog, American ambassador to the Court of St. James, presented his credentials to King George at Buckingham Palace a few days ago. The new ambassador and his gassy staff, drove to the palace and returned in the gorgeous, gilded royal coaches reserved for occasions of state. The ambassador also misses the Harvey knee breeches and the palatial mansion donated by J. P. Morgan is yet unfinished.

President Frank L. Carey of the Chicago Board of Trade, does not like "blocs." They are the cause of most political evils in his opinion. Oh, this confounded class struggle! "We find," says Carey, "our legislature divided into cliques and blocs and our national congress split into definite groups, due to further class interest. We find new political movements developing from class feeling with the deliberate intent to excite public attention, but failing to do a single constructive thing in behalf of the nation. Keep the blocs system out of the grain exchange," he perorated. Carey wants only one bloc, the capitalist bloc.

Multi-Millionaires Won't Fight Over Tax Reductions

MELLON SAYS DETROITER IS BAD EXAMPLE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon will ignore the challenge he got from Senator Jim Couzens that they, two of the country's wealthiest men, stage a public debate on tax reduction.

Replying today to Couzen's recent letter, Mellon hrusquely, denied many of Couzens' arguments but said nothing about the proposed debate.

Mellon in Blow at Couzens

Mellon pointed to the case of Couzens himself to illustrate the contention that surtaxes on big incomes should be lowered.

Mellon said that all of Cauzens' capital, by his own admission, was invested in tax exempt securities.

If, however, Mellon argued, the surtaxes had not been so high when Cousens retired and invested his capital, he would for the sake of placing it in safety diversified investments have placed some of it in taxable securities.

Mellon said that there is particular public need for lowered surtaxes in the cases of railroads and building.

Pities the Poor Investors

With the present high surtaxes he said investors were practically shut off from investment in railroads or construction.

With lower surtaxes proposed in the Mellon bill he said capital now in exempt securities would be attracted to them.

Couzens in his challenge to a debate said that when he got out of the Ford Motor Company and converted his holdings into securities he "paid the taxes in the price of the securities."

Shows Millionaires Exempt

"To what government did you make payment?" Mellon asked him.

Summing up in one sentence his reply to Couzens' criticism of the Mellon program Mellon said

"Must a system of taxation which permits a man with an income of over $1,000,000 a year to pay not one cent to the support of his government remain unaltered"

MARCH OF 3,000 FARMER PICKETS BALKED BY FRAUD

Hearst Papers Aid in Double Cross

Three thousand enraged dairy farmers, members of the Milk Producers Association from the Elgin, Ill., district and northern Wisconsin points, were induced to abandon their march upon the plant of the Bowman Dairy Company at Wauconda, Ill., by news of a fake settlement.

The alleged settlement, news of which was flashed by the Hearst papers, and which resulted in the 3,000 pickets returning to their homes, was actually a proposal by which the milk producers were to receive one-half cent less than they are receiving at the present time. The joker in the agreement of the Bowman Dairy Company, "to meet the farmers half way," is in the fact that simultaneously with the pledge to raise the price of a hundred pounds of milk from $2.60 to $2.67½, the Bowman Dairy Company cancelled a premium of 8 cents per pound on milk produced within fifty miles of Chicago.

Over one-third of the striking milk producers are affected by this provision of which they had no knowledge when Health Commissioner Bundesen announced the "settlement" and the Hearst press strained every effort to get the news to the marching pickets. Armed with copies of the Hearst papers containing the story of the fake settlement, the deputies of Sheriff Ahlstrom of Lake county intercepted the farmers, who, in groups of a dozen and more, were rapidly converging on the Bowman bottling plant.

The bare-faced fraud, practiced apparently with the connivance of the Chicago Health Department, extremely unfair to the milk producers all thru the trouble, has given the farmers new determination. The strike is on again with renewed bitterness.

A conference was called yesterday by Health Commissioner Bundesen at which Frank Holt, president of the Milk Producers' Association was present. "The premium must be restored," said Holt on his way to the conference. "The strike is on and will stay on until the premium is restored."

Threatened renewal of Chicago's milk strike was averted here early today.

After a hasty conference Chicago distributors agreed to pay striking producers a bonus of 8 cents per hundred weight in addition to the price of $2.67½ agreed upon yesterday.

Acting as arbiter for the second time, Health Commissioner Bundesen brought the opposing factions together and presented the new demands of the producers.

The distributors relinquished after bitter debate. The producers holding they had been "tricked" into compromising on a discriminate price.

Chicago's milk supply, spokesmen for both factions said, will be restored to normal today. Producers in Wisconsin, Michigan and Illinois will resume shipments to Chicago without delay, they said.

New Orleans Cotton to Russia

NEW ORLEANS.—New Orleans is to begin shipment of large quantities of cotton to Russia for use in the textile mills there. A Russian commission has purchased 10,000 bales of cotton of which 1,000 bales are ready for shipment, according to J. H. Walsh, general manager of the dock board. New Orleans will be a concentration point for all cotton destined for Russia. The commission is now in Texas.

INDIANAPOLIS.—The National Executive Committee of the American Legion today announced that the 1924 National Convention will be held in St. Paul, Minn., the third week in September.

Vote Soon on Confidence in Baldwin's Reign in England

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON.—Leaders of the Conservative, Liberal and Labor parties agreed tonight that the vote on a motion of lack of confidence in the Baldwin government shall be taken at eleven o'clock, Monday night, according to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

The Baldwin government, slated for defeat and resignation Monday, gave evidence in Commons this afternoon it intends to go out fighting.

Ronald McNeill, under-secretary of state for foreign affairs, in a lengthy speech, defended the government's foreign policy. He pointed out that the late premier, Andrew Bonar Law, and Premier Baldwin had taken up many of the problems which the Lloyd George government bequeathed them.

"Whoever is Foreign-Secretary in the Labor Government will be quickly disillusioned," he predicted.

If Ramsay MacDonald goes to the Foreign Office with a broad foot, intending to stamp upon Premier Poincare with the object of establishing peace throuot Europe, I am afraid he will encounter a tremendous disillusionment," McNeill continued.

He denied Lloyd George's allegation that the Baldwin government neglected to co-operate with the United States in the proposed international committee to study the reparation situation.

"The proposal of Secretary Hughes never was communicated officially to Great Britain," McNeill declared.

"For a whole year we lost no opportunity of enlisting in any possible way the assistance of the United States." At this juncture David Lloyd George rose from his seat on the back benches and interposed a question.

What, he asked, was the government's position towards the separatist movement in Germany?

McNeill replied that the government would not sanction any separation, amounting to declaration of independence, of any of the German Rhineland states, but would not interfere with establishment of autonomous states within Germany, if the inhabitants wished them.

Separatism, thru French and Belgian influence has been declared everything except in the Palatinate, where a British representative is investigating, he said.

'Jail for Striking Farmers'

In 1921 the West Virginia miners, 11,000 strong, marched on the stronghold of the steel trust gun men in Logan county in a desperate effort to free themselves from the political and industrial tyranny enforced upon them by sixshooters, rifles and machine-guns, in the hands of a mercenary army maintained by the mining corporations.

In 1924 the dairy farmers of Illinois and Wisconsin, 3,000 strong, march on the bottling plant of the Bowman Dairy Company, the head and front of the opposition to the farmers' strike for a decent price for their product. Miners, according to the capitalist press, are known to be violent persons and there is, therefore, only anger and not surprise on the part of the press when they resent brutal oppression.

But Farmers!

Worse than that, dairy farmers—the most peaceable of all human beings!

Surrounded by the gentle, milk-giving bovines, whom they tend, they are supposed to have acquired much of the bovine temperament; so much so that they are as easy prey for the dairy and commision-houses as their worn-out milk cows for the packing-houses.

The appearance of 3,000 farmer pickets upon the scene during the recent strike of the milk producers forces a revision of this traditional view of the American farmer and the capitalist press is screaming itself hoarse, editorially, in denunciation of this unsuspected bucolic pugnacious trait.

The Chicago Journal of Commerce publishes an editorial so bitter and venomous that one can easily visualize the writer occasionally pausing to wipe the foam from his lips as he pounds his typewriter. The farmers are accused of attempted murder and the demand is made that they be tried and convicted.

"We quote verbatim:

> In an agricultural county, striking farmer's believe they have a divine right to keep other farmers from selling their milk to whosoever they please and under any terms they see fit. The striking farmers commit violence. It is absurd to hope that law officers will make serious efforts to arrest them.
> But they ought to be arrested, and they ought to be tried and convicted. Now that the strike is over, there is no danger of murder being committed; but until the peace was signed, murder was on the horizon.

We have an idea that the Journal of Commerce feels toward these farmers as did an aristocratic lady in Spokane, Wash., who, while several members of the Industrial Workers of the World were being tried for criminal syndicalism, said she guessed she would run down to the courthouse "to see the Wobblies being convicted."

All of which goes to prove that whether it be farmer or wage-earner in a challenge to the profit-mongers of America the record of previous docility counts for nothing. Trained to idolize by the pundits of capitalism when they accepted it as the Alpha and Omega of social systems, the farmers are discovering very rapidly that independent thinking—independent of capitalist conventions—is the next to the last thing that the chamber of commerce friends of the independent farmer want him to do.

The last thing is action with his exploited fellow farmer and the industrial workers against the growing tyranny of the American capitalist class. Expressed either by a class party of the farmer and wage-earners or by the march of striking farmer-pickets in mass with the same objective, Bolshevism from the plunderbund and their governmental tools.

Ku Klux Big Issue in the Louisiana State Elections

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Returns from Tuesday's Louisiana primary today indicated a second "run off" primary would be necessary to determine the choice for governor.

Huey P. Long has apparently been eliminated by reason of his balloting, but a "run off" will be necessary between Henry L. Fuqua, who his opponents claimed is favored by the Ku Klux Klan and Hewitt Bouanchaud openly anti-Klan. Neither Fuqua or Bouanchaud received a majority of all votes cast on the basis of earlier returns.

DISEASE RIFE IN SWEATSHOP HELLS OF NEW YORK CITY

Dresses Made for $1.00, Sell for $49.50

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK.—If the state of New York wants to end home industries where women and children work long hours for small pay it will make these home workers dependent on charity for a living, it was testified at hearings before the state Child Welfare Commission here.

Children two and three years old are working on artificial flowers in New York. Beaded dresses and clocked silk hose which are later sold for high prices in the most expensive shops are worked on in homes often by people with communicable diseases, it was said.

Children who work at home always go to sleep in school and have sores and cuts on their hands, one witness testified.

"Wages are deplorable. Dresses which sell for $49.50 are finished for $1. Disease is prevalent," said another witness, who seemed more concerned with the possibility that people who bought the dresses might get sick than with the conditions of the workers.

Some of the prices paid are, for making roses, 20 cents a dozen; clocking silk hosiery, $3.50 a dozen; cutting lace, 25 cents a hundred yards. By hard work it is possible for a child to cut 50 yards of lace an hour.

CAPITOL MEET IS ATTEMPT TO HALT F. L. P. MOVEMENT

Mahoney of St. Paul to Fight Reactionaries

Delegates from eastern political, labor and progressive organizations will meet in the Hamilton Hotel, Washington, D. C. Thursday morning to define their attitude towards the May 30th farmer-labor convention at St. Paul.

The conference was called by William V. Mahoney of Washington, D. C., and its sponsors are antagonistic to the Farmer-Labor Party movement supported by the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and its affiliations.

William Mahoney of St. Paul, who must not be confused with Mr. Mahoney of Washington and Professor Shopper of Minneapolis, will attend the Washington conference in an effort to swing it in line in support of the May 30th convention called by the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party in co-operation with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and other groups.

Many of the elements which will be represented in the Washington conference are tied up with the Conference for Progressive Political Action which the May 30th conference endorses.

Enemies of the May 30th conference have been openly spreading the falsehood that while the Federated Farmer-Labor Party was invited to send delegates to the conference the Socialist Party and the old Farmer-Labor Party were not invited.

William Mahoney of St. Paul will explode this falsehood at the Washington conference and point out that all labor, political and economic groups will be invited to send delegates to the May 30th conference.
